FIRST DAY

MORNING MEETING

The opening session of the Conference convened Friday morning, April 5, at 10 o'clock.

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., First Counselor in the First Presidency, who presided, announced that the music for this session of the Conference would be furnished by the Brigham Young University Chorus, under the joint direction of Dr. Franklin W. Madsen and Dr. Florence Jepperson Madsen, with Dr. Frank W. Asper at the organ.

The opening song was by the congregation and Chorus, "Now Let Us Rejoice in the Day of Salvation."

Elder George T. Hyde, President of the Portneuf Stake, offered the invocation.

The Brigham Young University Chorus sang "Send Forth Thy Spirit" (Schuetky).

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

The following telegram from President Grant was read by President J. Reuben Clark, Jr.:

Los Angeles, California
April 5, 1940

Presidents J. Reuben Clark, Jr. and David O. McKay,
Salt Lake City, Utah,

To the Saints in Conference assembled: I sincerely regret that I am not present with you at this opening meeting of our Conference. I know of the spiritual uplift that will come to you. Through the years I have always counted it a great blessing to participate with my brethren and sisters in General Conference.

ACTIVITIES IN CALIFORNIA FOLLOWED BY SICKNESS

I left home on the 26th of January and attended the dedication of the Mormon Battalion Monument at San Diego, and was one of the speakers, experiencing much liberty in my talk. I enjoyed the meetings. They were a great tribute to the achievement of our people. I was pleased with the talk of Brother Andrew Jenson. I then attended the conference of Inglewood Stake. In the morning I did not feel well enough to speak, but spoke in the afternoon for about forty minutes with perfect liberty. That night I was feeling poorly and the next morning was removed to the hospital for medical attention and treatment. The treatment there was successful. I was very glad I had Brother McKay call on me in the hospital and give me a blessing, and I am grateful beyond expression for the faith and prayers of the Saints. I know of a certainty that your prayers have been heard and answered in my behalf.

I am very grateful that I now can be around working at times, but mostly resting, exercising, and taking care of myself, to the end that I may realize a full recovery.

About the middle of March I moved from the hospital to the home of my grandnephew, Del Grant, where I have been comfortably located, and have been improving in my health every day making really astonishing advancement, according to the doctors. I had hoped at least to speak to the Conference by radio, but the doctors feel it unwise to subject myself to that great strain. They feel too that it would be better to regain my strength before making an attempt to return home. Therefore I shall remain here for a few weeks more. The doctors feel it a matter of wisdom for me to stay here another few weeks, even though there would be little danger if I were to return home now.

BLESSING AND COMMENDATION

I send my love and blessings to all the Saints, and pray that you may have a time of rejoicing during Conference. I have been made happy by the new Stakes that have been formed of late, and the reorganization of our General Boards. I earnestly pray for the success of the new officers in the Stakes and on the several Boards. Truly Zion is growing.

AN APPEAL TO THE YOUNG

I sympathize with our young people because of the temptations that beset them. I urge them, as I always have, to live the Gospel of Jesus Christ fully. In that way they will have health and happiness, and will meet with success in this life and will have an eternity of joy in store for them in the life to come. I bless them with courage to meet the problems that lie ahead.

A TESTIMONY

It is a joy to me to bear again my testimony of my absolute knowledge of the divinity of the work in which we are engaged, and of the divinity of the Savior, and of the divine work of the Prophet Joseph Smith.

AN EXPRESSION OF SYMPATHY

I was grieved to hear of the passing of Elder Harold G. Reynolds who has been in charge of the transportation in our missionary system. He was a true Latter-day Saint. May our Heavenly Father bless and sustain his wife and children.

PRAYER AND BLESSING

I most earnestly pray for all the General and local officers, both in the Priesthood and the Auxiliary organizations, and for the advancement of the work of God, and I send my love and blessings to the Saints at home and abroad. Amen.

(Signed) HEBER J. GRANT.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

My brethren and sisters: We are all thrilled with this message from President Grant. I saw him personally, as did Brother McKay. He is recovering; he is well on his way to full recovery. I know that every true Latter-day Saint in Zion is praying for his speedy and complete restoration to health and strength. We should like to send him now the greetings of this great Conference, and assure him that he has our faith and prayers for his early recovery.

REPORT OF THE CHURCH AUDITING COMMITTEE

Elder Harold H. Bennett read the Report of the Church Auditing Committee as follows:

The First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 47 East South Temple Street,
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Dear Brethren:

We have examined the financial report of the Church for the year 1939. The records are accurately kept, and the accounting is modern and adequate.

The Church budget is in balance, and the Church is entirely free of debt.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed)

Orval W. Adams
Albert E. Bowen
George S. Spencer
H. H. Bennett
Auditing Committee.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

My brethren and sisters: I humbly pray that the time that I may stand before you may be filled with words that may be of help, counsel, and encouragement.

SIGNIFICANT FEATURES OF ANNUAL REPORT

There are two or three things that perhaps might be specially mentioned in connection with our annual report.

During the year 1939 we spent $50,000 more for missionary work than we spent in 1938. Part of that was undoubtedly due to the transportation back to the United States of the missionaries who were in Europe, of which I shall say more a little later.

While our records cannot be regarded as accurate, nevertheless it does appear that during the year 1939, from January 1st to December 31st, we took off from the Welfare system some 1,800 people. It furthermore appears that we had 2,500 fewer unemployed on December 31st, 1939, than on the same date in 1938.

As you will have noticed from the reports, there have been three new Stakes organized, nineteen new wards, and forty-five new Branches.

The birth rate has increased six-tenths of one per cent; the death rate has decreased three-tenths of one per cent; the marriage rate remains the same.

While, as indicated by the report, the Church as a whole has not yet reached the goal of one dollar per person for Fast offerings, nevertheless we made in 1939 a decided advance in the number of Fast-offering-payers as well as in the amount paid. There were 66,631 more payers of Fast offerings in 1939 than in 1938. Moreover, the voluntary Fast offerings increased in 1939 by $95,513.00. Our commodity offerings decreased, however by $27,333.00. The estimated value of clothing, bedding, canned fruits, vegetables, fuel and labor increased over 1938 by $36,125.00.

As Brother Bennett has told you, we have balanced our budget. The following will give you some idea of the larger items and the percentage of expenditure to which the tithing is devoted:

The Ward and Stake expenses are 16.6%, of the whole budget; the Church Schools 16.2%; Missionary work 15.3%; Church buildings erected, 20.7%; Welfare, 9.6%; and the General Authorities and the maintenance of the General offices of the Church, 6.3%.

When we urge tithing, brothers and sisters, it is obviously not for selfish reasons; it is that we may serve our Church needs better. Without tithing we should be extremely helpless in the things which we regard as and which the Lord has declared to be vital.

CHURCH INCOME DEPENDENT UPON FAITH AND PROSPERITY

We have felt that it was important that the Church should live within its income, not only for itself as a Church, but for an example to the community, the state, the nation, and to the individual members themselves.

Such a course of the Church involves problems which are not incident to civil administration, which is primarily dependent upon taxes that can be accurately forecast, except for income and other like special taxes which are in the nature of extra or surplus revenues. Therefore there are in governmental activities few occasions when an unbalanced budget—that is, when more is spent than is taken in—is not created by some deliberate act.

With the Church the matter is wholly different. Over the last four years approximately 87% of the total Church income has been the tithing. This being a purely voluntary contribution, its amount cannot be accurately forecast. Its volume depends wholly upon the faithfulness of the people. Thus, where the governmental agencies have relative certainty in income, the Church has uncertainty.

Furthermore, governmental agencies, knowing their fixed income, can plan their expenditures with certainty, they can so fix their expenditures as to fall within their income. The Church, not knowing its income, cannot so definitely fix its outgo as certainly to come within its revenue. Its only guide on these matters is to be spelled out from the experiences of the past.

Again, while income taxes and analogous governmental taxes—state, county, and municipal—depend upon the prosperity of the people, yet the great bulk of the taxes levied by such governmental agencies are on real and personal properties under terms which are fixed by the taxing power and rarely vary with the prosperity of the people. These taxes are paid whether your business or farms pay or do not pay.

On the other hand, the Church income depends wholly upon the prosperity of the people. If crops are short, if prices are low, if business is poor, the Church revenues suffer proportionately, for it is the annual income that is tithed.

So not only your faithfulness is involved, but granting you full faithfulness, there is still the uncertainty of weather, crops, business, and other elements that no one can forecast.

TITHING A TRUST FUND

These things are pointed out so that no one can be under the delusion that the Church has a pile of gold to which it may go for any amount of money that it wishes. The only money the Church has is what has been saved out of the tithing you have given it in the past and the tithing you are now giving it, and approximately 87% of the total annual income, as I have already stated, comes from you from year to year.

We, the Authorities of the Church must therefore be extremely careful as to our commitments, else we shall find ourselves, as we have occasionally in the past, spending more than our income.

When you Bishops and Presidents of Stakes, and Mission Presidents, and Temple Presidents, and Auxiliary Officers and School-men, and Welfare agencies, and people in distress, come to the Presiding Bishopric and meet a "No" and then come to the Presidency and get a louder "No," please do not believe that we are unfeeling or unsympathetic, or harsh, or cruel, or lack understanding or appreciation, or love for our brethren. We are merely trying to administer the Lord's money, not our money, not your money, as wisely and justly as the Lord gives us wisdom to exercise. We are not infallible in our judgment, and we err, but our constant prayer is that the Lord will guide us in our decisions, and we are trying so to live that our minds will be open to His inspiration.

CHURCH FREE FROM DEBT

Perhaps I may say here that the Church itself, (I am not now speaking of Wards and Stakes) does not owe a dollar in the world to any person or to any institution. All its property is free from encumbrance of any sort; its credit was never higher. There are idle and silly rumors running about to the contrary, but, brothers and sisters, I am stating to you the sober facts.

The First Presidency will do all in their power to keep the Church in this condition.

So much for our Church finances, which, while far from being the most important element in the Church, are nevertheless a very important factor in our organization if we are to carry forth the work we have begun and which the Lord has revealed He expects us to do. Indeed, we cannot do this work without your contributions. The work is, in the full sense, in your hands.

The First Presidency would like to urge every member of the Church to follow the example set by the Church and to live within his income.

Anyone who lives beyond his income is inviting disaster. Borrowed money is not income. Borrowing on capital account, within your reasonable capacity to pay, may be sound, depending upon circumstances. But borrowing to live on is unsound, whether it be an outright loan or installment buying. We urge the members to be frugal, thrifty, industrious, temperate, saving, and to live righteously.

THE WELFARE PROGRAM

Now, a few words about the Welfare work. The great wisdom of our leaders, past and present, up to the beginning of the World depression, is nowhere better shown than in their continued policy of having the Church live within its income and of putting a little aside each year for a rainy day. If they had not done this, but instead had used up year by year all the tithing you paid in, we would have entered this depression with no assets but our current income, with no reserves, with a diminished revenue, and with no course open to us but drastically to reduce our regular vital activities in order to extend help to the needy. But as it was, we were able to increase the Church proportion in our building program, so as to help the needy unemployed. We were able for a couple of years to spend more than our revenue so as to carry on our Welfare work, and yet to leave ourselves completely solvent and with unimpaired credit against a day of greater need. This was done without borrowing a dollar.

I say to you again, the Church does not owe a dollar to any person, firm or institution in the world beyond the regular current monthly bills, which are settled at the end of each month; it has no mortgage on any of its property.

The report already read shows the amount expended on Welfare work by the Church during the last calendar year. But thousands of dollars of produce has been raised and distributed of which we have no accurate account.

In addition, there has been the neighbor to neighbor help—a very considerable sum—and Priesthood quorum and other activities of which we have no accurate record.

May I pause here and say that I hope that every member attending Conference will take occasion to go down to the Bishop's Storehouse and visit that wonderful exhibit. Do this between meetings, and before meetings, and after meetings. You will get a thrill there such as you have rarely experienced, where each Stake's work is portrayed by an exhibition of the actual products which they have produced. Do not fail, brothers and sisters, and particularly you who are engaged in Welfare work, to visit and inspect that wonderful exhibition. I told the brethren this morning that this work continuing to grow, one of these days they would be forced to attempt to secure the State Fair buildings down near the river, to give their exhibit in.

Furthermore, the reports which you have heard read from time to time in this Conference regarding Welfare expenditures, cover only what has been actually given out to the people. No account has heretofore been taken of the physical assets—fixed assets, real estate, personal property—which have been devoted to the Welfare work,—part of the funds coming from you brethren and sisters out in the regions, part of it coming from the general funds of the Church. But during the four years in which the Welfare program has been functioning, we have accumulated approximately a half million dollars of physical assets, buildings, and equipment, and these are all employed in the Welfare work.

WHEAT TO BE STORED

We are now building, as you know, a large grain elevator which will store approximately 300,000 bushels of grain. We did have in storage approximately 190,000 bushels of wheat, which we are now replacing. In that connection I would like to read you just a part of a letter dated August 26th, 1918, signed by the First Presidency under Joseph F. Smith, by the Presiding Bishopric under C. W. Nibley, and by the Relief Society under Emmeline B. Wells, concerning the re-investing of the Relief Society Wheat Fund.

After calling attention to the sale of the wheat to the Government at that time, the letter closes with these two paragraphs:

The money received for the wheat the government has taken must be kept in the banks and draw interest. In no case should it be loaned out or used for any purposes whatsoever other than the purchase of wheat, as it is a sacred trust fund which can be used only for the purpose for which it is donated.

When the time comes to again invest this money in the purchase of wheat you will be advised of it by the Presiding Bishopric and the General Board of Relief Society.

We are, my brethren and sisters, in accordance with that determination which was then made, re-investing the wheat money back into wheat, and we aim to keep it re-invested in that way as a part of the Church Welfare Plan. This move has the whole-hearted and complete approval of the Relief Society sisters to whom as a matter of fact the fund belongs.

WORK YET TO BE DONE

I shall not take time to tell you of the various activities of the Welfare Program, but I would like to say that I am firmly convinced that we are now sufficiently organized and have now enough experience, so that if we shall bend our whole energies to it we shall be able to feed, clothe, and house ourselves. I think there is no doubt of that.

Two other things we still have left to do. One, we must bend our energies towards finding work for those people to do who need assistance. I shall touch on that again in just a moment. Next, if we find labor for them to do we shall then be well on our way towards rehabilitating them in their spiritual and civic lives. This is the second and in a sense, the most important work we have to do.

Lastly, I wish to urge upon you Welfare workers, you Presidents of Stakes, you Bishops, Presidents of Branches, local Relief Societies and all other agencies, that you do not wait to be told from headquarters about every detail of what you should do. You know the local problem better than we do. Meet the problem which arises in your various places in accordance with its needs. Regimentation is a threatening blight upon all Church activities.

ECONOMY IN ERECTION OF BUILDINGS

One of the greatest problems of the Church is providing the necessary buildings for carrying on our numerous and exacting activities.

We have a tendency I think to make our buildings just a little bit too elaborate and too ornate.

There is an ever-present necessity, which comes with increasing frequency, to subdivide Wards and Stakes. Not unusually the new Ward or new Stake wants a little better home than the one they are giving up. This is like a young man marrying and expecting the new home for himself and bride to be better than the one that each of them left. This is fine provided the new groom can make the grade by himself; otherwise not.

Where the old Ward home is elaborate and ample, arrangements should be made for joint occupancy by the parent Ward and the new Ward. We are trying this out in several places and find it a workable and suitable plan, provided the people practice the Christian virtues of unselfishness, patience, charity, give and take—particularly give.

Our constantly increasing needs, increasing by greater proportion than our revenues, make this sort of arrangement year by year more important and necessary.

Amusement halls should be made to serve as large units as possible. While in sparsely settled communities, Ward amusement halls may be frequently desirable, in more thickly settled areas effort should be made to have for the young people larger association than a Ward provides.

Speaking of a new Ward and a new meeting house for it, I should like publicly to commend the example just set by the Tremonton First and Second Wards in erecting a building for the new Ward. Other Wards of the Church have followed a similar plan. The old Ward—Tremonton First—said to the new Ward: "We will pay half of the cost to the Ward of its new meeting house, and the new Ward can pay the other half." Accordingly, the old Ward raised $12,000 to help build the new home for their old friends and associates, and the Bishop of the old Ward and his people report feeling better about this effort than about anything else the Ward has ever done. I commend this example to all dividing Wards.

BEAUTIFICATION PLAN APPROVED

I would like to approve of the plan that lies close to Bishop Ashton's heart, that of beautifying our towns, our meeting houses, our homes. There is much to be done; but just paint by itself is a wonderful beautifier. There is an old ranch saying that "Fat is a pretty color." Paint is fat for barns, fences, and homes.

I have already spoken of the problem of supplying labor to those who need assistance. Bishops, get the Welfare man some paint. Let him paint his own house; fix up his own fence; plant some trees in his own yard, or some grass; clean up his yard. If you will do this, half your work of human repair is done, and the hardest half, too.

Paint your meeting houses, your town hall, repair your sidewalks, keep your park or public grounds looking neat, keep up your fences.

AUXILIARY ORGANIZATIONS TO HELP THE HOMES

The call of these troubled times comes most insistently to the ears of the officers of the Auxiliary associations. They are reconsidering their whole field with a view to see what may be done by them to meet the needs of the times. They are undertaking more clearly to define their fields of activity, to cut out duplications, and overlapping—to eliminate the increasing waste in effort, time, and funds.

One of their chief concerns will be the easing of the burdens on the Bishops and Presidents of Stakes, a relieving of the people from as much financial burden as possible, a cutting down of general excess activities, and helping the home to assume its normal functions in shaping the lives of the young. For when all is said and done that can be said or done, if the home is not sound, the bulk of the youth will fall into forbidden paths. The problem here is not primarily the children, but the parents who have been encouraged—unwittingly encouraged, if we be charitable—to turn over the training of the youth to the schools, the Auxiliaries, and other instrumentalities. This plan will never succeed. Fathers and mothers must know that they are responsible for the existence of their children, and having assumed that responsibility, they cannot in the eyes of God shirk, or shift, or ignore the responsibility of rightly training them, except they shall bring themselves under condemnation.

One of the principal, if not the main, purpose of the Auxiliaries must be to help the parents to help their children, and this can be effectively worked out through the home.

CHURCH EDUCATION

We are trying the experiment in education of studying the Gospel by a semi-scientific method. We are floundering a bit, not yet have we got our true bearings. So far as I know, no other Church is attempting to do just what we are trying. In some churches members are told not to trouble themselves about doctrines, but to do what their leaders tell them. The Latter-day Saints are required by divine command to learn all they can about the Gospel.

Critics—higher and lower—are applying scientific methods to the study of Religion, with somewhat disastrous results to many sectarian dogmas. But we are applying the system to the Gospel plan of life and salvation as revealed in the latter days. We could surely not survive this experiment except we had the truth.

But we are going forward, and generally speaking the faith of our young people is increasing. Wherever this is not true, it is largely the fault of the instruction given. Earnest effort is being made to make sure that sectarianism does not become a part of our educational instruction, and that the Gospel truths are taught in their simplicity. Those in charge of our educational system are strenuously striving to this end.

We could not justify spending the tithing of the poor, the widow's mite,—and the great bulk of our tithing is of this sort,—for any other kind of Church doctrine education, than that which taught the Gospel and its restoration in its greatest simplicity, unmixed with any man-made views.

WITHDRAWAL OF EUROPEAN MISSIONARIES

I would like to say just a few words about the withdrawal of the missionaries from Europe. On August 24, 1939, it becoming increasingly apparent that our missionaries were not welcome either in the belligerent or neutral countries of western Europe, the European Mission Presidents were requested to send to America all missionaries, except a very few who would remain temporarily to man the various Mission headquarters.

We were blessed in having in Europe at the time Elder Joseph Fielding Smith and Sister Smith to counsel with the various Mission Presidents and take general direction of the situation. There were in our Missions at the time, including the wives and children of the Presidents, 697 persons, of whom 611 were young men and 63 young women missionaries, the other 23 were Mission Presidents, their wives and children.

The first missionary group from Europe landed in New York September 7, and the last group, accompanied by Elder Joseph Fielding Smith, and Sister Smith, landed on November 6th, 1939.

These returning missionaries were received by President Frank Evans and Sister Evans at the Eastern States Mission headquarters in New York. The missionaries returned in 23 ships, each of which had to be met and the missionaries transported to their temporary quarters. The heavy baggage handled exceeded 1,500 pieces; there were more than 10,000 letters and other mailed parcels. Each of these 674 missionaries had to be housed and cared for. Many landed without funds, and funds had to be advanced to them—some 146 small loans were made, all repaid except one small item. The money received from parents had to be distributed, there were telegrams and cablegrams to handle, and office supplies to furnish and numerous other acts of helpfulness.

Furthermore, as the bulk of these missionaries had not filled a full term mission they had to be reassigned upon arrival to new fields of labor. President John H. Taylor of the First Council of Seventy was sent to New York to direct this work. Of the 674 missionaries, 414 Elders and 32 lady missionaries were reassigned, the rest were released.

President and Sister Evans had charge also of getting these 446 reassigned missionaries off to their new fields of labor, and the 228 released off to their homes.

The total cost of this service by President Evans, in handling all these missionaries and Mission Presidents and families—a total of 697 persons—was only $2,271.47, or $3.26 per person, for landing, housing, feeding, and transportation from ships to headquarters and from headquarters to train.

President Taylor assisted President Evans in all of this work. This is truly a great work. The whole group was moved from the disturbed areas in Europe to the United States, and thence either to their new fields of labor or to their homes, without one accident or one case of sickness other than one chronic illness. The entire group was evacuated from Europe in three months, at a time when tens of thousands of Americans were besieging the ticket offices of the great steamship companies for passage, and the Elders had no reservations. Every time a group was ready to embark there was available the necessary space, even though efforts to reserve space a few hours before had failed.

The European Mission Presidents were directed to place their Missions in the hands of the local brethren. When this was done they were also directed to return home. The first left on December 1, 1939, and the last landed in New York on March 4, 1940.

During the European tour of President Grant three years ago the Saints were time and time again urged to appreciate and assume their full responsibilities as Church members and bearers of the Priesthood. They were urged to cease placing so much reliance upon the Elders. The present situation gives point to that counsel.

Truly the blessings of the Lord attended this great enterprise.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE PRIESTHOOD

For our purposes today we may say that the Priesthood is the authority of God bestowed upon men to represent Him in certain relationships between and among men and between men and God. This is an awesome responsibility. It imposes certain obligations upon the Priesthood bearers as between themselves, and also as between them and the members at large, and between them and Deity.

Quorum membership is something more than a name. The Lord has made it abundantly clear by repeated commandments that upon the Priesthood in its organized form, and not merely upon individuals bearing it, rests the responsibility of instructing, encouraging, and admonishing the people. The Lord has designated specifically the duties of the Priesthood in this regard, grade by grade. He has given no authority to the Priesthood to relieve itself of this responsibility, of instructing, encouraging, and admonishing, by delegating to someone else this duty, individually or by class. The Lord will therefore hold the Priesthood as such responsible for a due and proper instruction of Church membership in the way of life and salvation.

The Priesthood must not either forget or shirk this great responsibility. The Church may provide aids and helps through Auxiliary organizations, schools, and otherwise for the doing of this work, but the Church cannot and does not seek or aim to relieve the Priesthood from the obligations of this divine command, nor to authorize it to shirk it or dodge it. You bearers of the Priesthood, bend your backs, and take on this God-placed burden. The Almighty expects, indeed commands this. Your failure to do so will bring woe to the people, and condemnation upon yourselves.

WORLD CONDITIONS

We may return to our Heavenly Father our devout thanks that His spirit of peace yet broods over this land, and that war has not to this point cursed us with its woes and miseries.

I should like to incorporate by reference all that I said last October about the war, its causes and its iniquities.

THE WOMEN OF THE CHURCH

I should like to say a word to the women of the Church, the "first aid" to the Priesthood in their trials and tribulations. I marvel that our wives are willing to live with us, with all of our grumblings, failings, and shortcomings.

From the beginning the women of the Christian church have shown their surpassing faith and devotion. Only one Apostle stood near the Cross while the Christ was crucified, but Mary, the mother, was there, and Mary Magdalene, and Mary, the mother of James and Joses, and the mother of Zebedee's children, and the women that followed Him from Galilee. It was Mary Magdalene who was first at the tomb when the Sabbath had ended, and to her Christ vouchsafed the first view to mortals of His resurrected body.

From that time until now woman has comforted and nursed the Church. She has borne more than half the burdens, she has made more than half the sacrifices, she has suffered the most of the heartaches and sorrows.

In the modern Church hers has been the abiding, unquestioning faith, the pure knowledge, that has enheartened the Priesthood and kept it going forward against all odds. Her loving trust, her loyal devotion were the faithful anchor that held when storms were fiercest.

For all this we are more grateful than we can say. We humbly ask the Lord to help you sisters in the future as in the past. We Priesthood need your courage, your steadfastness, your faith, your knowledge, your testimony, to cheer us on, to keep us in the way.

Sisters of the Church, the chastity of the youth of the Church is largely in your hands. You must enthrone virtue in its sovereign place; you must bring back modesty, must let the beauty of chaste blushes still adorn your cheeks.

Mothers in Israel, teach your sons to honor and revere, to protect to the last, pure womanhood; teach your daughters that their most priceless jewel is a clean, undefiled body; teach both sons and daughters that chastity is worth more than life itself. These are the duties which the Priesthood looks to you primarily to carry to, and to maintain in, that cradle of all virtues,—the righteous home. We Priesthood shall help as best our natures permit, but the burden for that task is now and always has been, in the greatest part, yours. Unless you shall do this, the whole world will sink into a welter of sin and corruption. May God help you in your task!

TO THE YOUTH OF CHURCH

May I say again to the youth of the Church, and first to you daughters: That man or youth who demands without marriage as the price of his favor or love the enjoyment of your body, has in fact nothing but sorrow and degradation to give you in return; and next, to you sons: That woman who offers to you her body outside wedlock, invites you to a feast that brings disease and corruption that will pollute you until death. And any man or woman who demands as the price of his favor or friendship a surrender of any of your righteous standards of living, is offering to you nothing worth buying. What it brings to you is false as Evil itself.

I say all this in soberness, and in such solemnity as I command, knowing as I know that I live that I speak the truth.

THE ORGANIZATIONS COMMENDED

I want to thank all of the organizations of the Church for their great help in carrying on the work of the Church. Perhaps I ought not to say help, perhaps I ought to say for carrying the work on, for we brethren here at the top would be powerless if it were not for the sterling faithfulness of you brethren and sisters. I know that the great bulk are trying to live righteously and to do right, and I know that the Lord will bless them in their efforts.

LOYALTY BRINGS BLESSINGS

The Lord is pleased with your loyalty to those in authority, in Ward, Stake, and Church. The work cannot go on growing without this loyalty, and this loyalty is not to be thought of as loyalty to the individuals, but as loyalty to the work, to the office, to the authority which the individual represents. It is loyalty to the Priesthood of Almighty God. The individual himself is submerged in the divine authority he possesses. David sought forgiveness for raising his hand against the Lord's anointed, even though the anointed one sought David's life. This is the true principle of loyalty applied in almost the last extremity.

From Cain until now, failure to follow God's authority has brought only condemnation. Aaron, Miriam, Korah and his followers, the whole camp of Israel suffered when they complained or rebelled against Moses. Likewise through the whole human history of God's dealings with men.

From the earliest days of this Church, malcontents, apostates, "sore-heads," have railed out with slander, falsehood, derision, against those whom God called to lead the people. They so treated the Prophet, and Brother Brigham, and to a lesser degree, every President who has followed. But the Lord has always prospered the Church as it followed their leadership. The detractors have gone down to the oblivion they deserved. So it will always be. The Prophet of the Lord has stood above and beyond the carpings of those unrighteous critics. He has always lived, as our leader lives today, in the kindly light of the Lord's approval, the recipient of the Lord's choicest blessings, manifested openly to those who will but look.

May the Lord continue His Spirit to be with us at all times. May He be with us during the remainder of this Conference; particularly may He bless and restore President Grant to complete health and strength, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

An Anthem, "My Soul is Athirst for God," (Dr. Florence Jepsen Madsen), was sung by the Brigham Young University Chorus. Soloist: Edward Sandgren.

ELDER SYLVESTER Q. CANNON

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I am very grateful, my brethren and sisters, for the opportunity I have to be present with you this morning. The statesmanlike expression of the growth of the Church, of the progress of every activity of the Church, and the faith of the people, as expressed by President Clark and those who have spoken, has impressed me and affected me very greatly. I appreciate the fact that this work is progressing effectively and under the influence of the Holy Spirit the Lord is blessing His people and enabling them to accomplish the work which is before them.

I regret with you very greatly the fact that President Grant is unable to be present with us this morning; yet I rejoice in great measure that his health is improving; that he is on the road to recovery; and that the blessings of God are with him.

I rejoice in the mission of peace which is manifest among the Latter-day Saints and among many other people, and in all that has been said regarding this important quality and characteristic. I was impressed with the testimony and prayer of Brother George T. Hyde, imploring the Lord for peace and the way to overcome conditions which prevail throughout the world today, particularly in the Eastern Hemisphere.

WARS AND RUMORS OF WAR

The ways of God are the ways of peace. Yet, in spite of His efforts to promote peace on earth, it is still a fact that among many millions of people, particularly in the Eastern Hemisphere, wars and rumors of war are largely prevalent. Threats of war are heard almost constantly in the other half of the world. In this western continent the larger part of the peoples are in the enjoyment of peace. We are grateful for the fact that, for a period at least, the Western Hemisphere has not, to a large extent, in any way been embroiled in all the turmoil, which will lead we know not where.

There are those, who, both here at home, and particularly abroad, would like to see this great nation become involved in these struggles abroad. So far, fortunately, the majority of the people of the United States, and, to a very considerable extent, the people of other western nations, have been able to keep their heads and their common sense, and to follow the wise and ancient counsels of the Father of our country, to beware of entangling alliances with the foreign nations of the old world, and not to ally ourselves for war with any of these countries.

The Latter-day Saints believe firmly in peace. We consider that wars are largely foolish and unnecessary, and that the present warring conditions are entirely without justification or necessity. With the present measure of intelligence among men, if those engaged in strife, were free from selfishness, greed and ambition, peace would prevail. The Prince of Peace came on earth in His mortal life nearly two thousand years ago, but due to the hatred and prejudices among men He was unable to carry out His peaceful desires fully and, as He himself stated, He "came not to send peace on earth, but a sword." (Matt. 10:34) During the twenty centuries that have elapsed since His coming, there have been wars and rumors of wars prevailing largely. As His mortal ministry was about to be finished, He said to his disciples:

These things I have spoken unto you that in me ye might have peace.
In the world ye shall have tribulation.

QUOTATION FROM BRITISH THINKER

Recently, I noticed an article in the Contemporary Review written by a prominent British ecclesiast regarding the present war conditions, and discussing the question of universal peace. The statement is entitled, "Ruling and Overruling." I quote a few brief extracts therefrom as follows:

The war raises again the grave problem of the relationship of God to the world, and of His activities in the affairs of men. Many are asking—Why did not God intervene to prevent this dread calamity, to spare mankind this tremendous ordeal? Is God inactive in His universe, and His very existence problematic? If not, what is the method in which His sovereignty is expressed, and what is the end it seeks to achieve? Surely, peace in its essential meaning demands catholicity, the commonwealth of mankind, and the community of a truly human fellowship. Is the structure of human society at present sufficiently strong and righteous to rear and sustain this weighty and glorious edifice? Obviously, it is not. Should not the war, therefore, be regarded as, in part, the Divine judgment upon us? If so, mercy is at its heart."

FREE AGENCY GIVEN TO MEN

As indicated by the writer of this article, many people raise the question as to why God did not intervene to prevent the great calamity that has come upon the earth and to spare mankind this tremendous ordeal. In my judgment the questions asked and the issues raised do not agree with the fundamental principles under which the Almighty operates, and by which He accomplishes His purposes. Men and women, who inhabit this earth, inherently enjoy the right of free agency, or the right of choice, in their actions. Though God does earnestly desire and strive for the acceptance of His purposes by mankind, He will not exert compulsory means to bring to pass His designs. As the Lord declared to Cain when the latter was angered with his brother Abel:

If thou doest well, thou shalt be accepted. And if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door, and Satan desireth to have thee. (Writings of Moses.)

Though many men under the influence of justice and righteousness are led toward peace and good will, those who are influenced by selfishness and personal ambition will act contrary thereto. The Prophet Nephi declares:

Wherefore, men are free according to the flesh; and all things are given them which are expedient unto man. And they are free to choose liberty and eternal life, through the great mediation of all men, or to choose captivity and death, according to the captivity and power of the devil; for he seeketh that all men might be miserable like unto himself. (II Nephi 2:27.)

Every individual has the right of choice. And just as everyone has the right of free agency, so everyone will be held accountable for his or her choices. For all have the intelligence, and must render an accounting of their actions. This is clearly portrayed in the Pearl of Great Price, writings of Moses, Chapter 4, Verses 1 to 4, as follows:

That Satan, whom thou hast commanded in the name of mine Only Begotten, is the same which was from the beginning, and he came before me, saying—Behold, here am I, send me, I will be thy son, and I will redeem all mankind, that one soul shall not be lost, and surely I will do it; wherefore give me thine honor.

But, behold, my Beloved Son, which was my Beloved, and Chosen from the beginning, said unto me—Father, thy will be done, and the glory be thine forever.

Wherefore, because that Satan rebelled against me, and sought to destroy the agency of man, which I, the Lord God, had given him, and also, that I should give unto him mine own power; by the power of mine Only Begotten, I caused that he should be cast down;

And he became Satan, yea, even the devil, the father of all lies, to deceive and to blind men, and to lead them captive at his will, even as many as would not hearken unto my voice.

These statements make clear the fact that, because of the domination of men, in bringing about war, the Lord did not intervene, even though He has steadfastly sought to win mankind to peace and union and righteousness. As already stated, due to the agency of mankind to make their choices as to their ways of life, they will necessarily have to render an accounting of their acts in this life. As was revealed to the Apostle John, (Rev. 20:12) regarding the accountability of all mankind for their acts:

And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.

JOY COMES THROUGH SERVING GOD

The relationship of God to the world, and His interest in the affairs of men, is greatly misunderstood by many of the people of the various nations. They conclude, apparently, that He is actuated by arbitrary or dictatorial attitudes, instead of being the embodiment of justice and righteousness, love and mercy, particularly toward those who seek to know and strive to do His will. He is love. He desires greatly the progress and happiness of mankind. He realizes that the greatest peace and joy come to men who seek to harmonize their wishes with His will: "Men are that they might have joy," and joy comes to those who undertake to keep His commandments. But, if mankind choose to follow the influence of the adversary, to be guided by domineering or dictatorial leaders, with the accompanying destructive results, they must take the unfortunate consequences.

THE SOVEREIGNTY OF GOD

The question—"Is God inactive in His universe, and His very existence problematic? If not, what is the method in which His sovereignty is expressed, and what is the end it seeks to achieve?"—indicates a lack of faith in and understanding of the great personages who constitute the matchless governing and supreme power over all things, by whom all things were created, whether visible or invisible, whether in heaven, on earth, in the earth, under the earth or throughout the immensity of space. The work and the glory of God is to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man. Respecting the method in which His sovereignty is expressed and the end it seeks to achieve, the Lord has revealed the following:

Hearken, O ye people, and open your hearts and give ear from afar; and listen, you that call yourselves the people of the Lord, and hear the word of the Lord and His will concerning you.

Yea, verily, I say, hear the word of Him, whose anger is kindled against the wicked and rebellious,

Who willeth to take even them whom He will take, and preserveth in life them whom He will preserve;

Who buildeth up at His own will and pleasure; and destroyeth when He pleases; and is able to cast the soul down to hell.

Behold, I, the Lord, utter my voice, and it shall be obeyed.

Wherefore, verily I say, let the wicked take heed, and let the rebellious fear and tremble; let the unbelieving hold their lips, for the day of wrath shall come upon them as a whirlwind, and all flesh shall know that I am God.

The sovereignty of God, as expressed herein, is in perfect accord with all that God has revealed in the Scriptures on this subject.

In the revelations of the Apostle John (Rev. 4:11) the Elders, representing the Church declare:

Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.

God's sovereignty is absolute, but the exaltation and happiness of His children are His glory. His absolutism is that of a loving Father who knows of no greater happiness than the promotion of the welfare of His family. How sovereignty in God can be exercised upon free agents may be difficult to explain, but the yielding of obedience fully does not interfere with free agency. There is no inconsistency in the doctrine of God's sovereignty and men's freedom.

THE GOSPEL BRINGS PEACE

Peace on earth depends upon the harmonizing of men's hearts and the cultivation of good will, justice and righteousness. It involves the overcoming of selfishness, unfairness and mistrust among mankind. There have been many failures throughout the world in the endeavors to maintain peace. Yet the effort toward the increase of good will and kindliness is so much worthwhile and is of such great moment to the welfare of the human race that it justifies continuous effort in every direction. It is especially incumbent on the Latter-day Saints, who are disciples of the Prince of Peace, and are seeking to live in harmony with His established Gospel, which is the way to peace. The Lord has revealed again in these latter days the charge to His followers to—"Renounce war, and proclaim peace". To endeavor in every proper way, through example and influence, to promote peace everywhere, that the way may be prepared so that "nations shall not lift up the sword against nations" but be prepared for the coming of the reign of the Lord, that peace and good will toward men shall prevail everywhere. This, we are confident, will eventually occur.

I pray our Heavenly Father that His blessings may attend all of us in all of our actions, that we may endeavor constantly to live the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, for that is the way to peace and prosperity, and I ask it in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER HUGH B. BROWN

Former President of the British Mission

Sometimes it is better to go "over the top" without notice, than to sit in awful expectation of the zero hour. Humbly I pray for guidance and help.

I bring to you, my brothers and sisters, greetings from the Saints of the British Mission. They are attempting to carry on under very trying circumstances. Men and women have assumed responsibilities of leadership, and in all the branches and districts an effort is being made to maintain the organizations of the Church and to carry on under the light of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

The spirit of the British Saints is admirable indeed. The attitude of the British people commands respect and admiration. They are taking a stand in defense of democracy, are fighting a war which was not of their choosing but which I am sure they will prosecute until the aggressor nations change their policy and decide to live at peace with their neighbors and respect the rights of individuals, of groups, of races and nationalities.

We who remained a few months after the war was declared have some little appreciation of the seriousness of the situation as it affects our people there. While we are assembled here in a great Conference of the Church, in a peaceful land, surrounded with comparative plenty, enjoying the comforts and in many instances luxuries of life, let us not be unmindful of the conditions that obtain in those European countries which are at war. May we remember them, not only in our prayers to our Heavenly Father, but I suggest that those of us who are acquainted, as many of us are through our sons and daughters who have labored there, with members of the Church in those countries, that we write them occasionally, encouraging them to carry on.

Your sons and daughters who have been laboring there have given a good account of themselves. We who were laboring with them found real joy and satisfaction in attempting to help them to get a vision of the great missionary work of the Church. The spirit of the Missions of the Church is the spirit of selfless service. I am sure that the reason so many of your sons and daughters, upon returning home, declare that the time spent in the mission field was the most enjoyable of their lives, is that they have found, while there, that there is more joy in giving than in getting.

Sometimes, when they first arrive, they wonder just what they are going to get out of their mission, and as long as they are thus disturbed they are not very effective. Very soon after arriving, however, most of them begin to look around them for ways whereby they may serve their fellow men, and when they are impressed by this spirit they begin to unfold and to develop, under the light of the spirit of the Gospel of Christ, and they become effective.

It is regrettable that in some instances, upon returning home, they find difficulty in making the adjustment that is necessary where they find it incumbent upon them to spend part, at least, of their time in establishing themselves economically. I trust that as time goes on we may find ways and means of meeting this situation.

I trust that the Lord will help us to serve Him and keep His commandments, and show our love for Him by our willingness to serve our fellow men at home, when so much of our time is necessarily given to so-called worldly matters. I hope the time may come when the spirit of the Mission may dominate the Wards and the Stakes at home, even more than it does today. I trust that we may catch the vision of the work which was undertaken and so effectively completed by the Master Himself; that we may come to see in others the good that is there to be found; that we may emulate His example, and put out of our hearts envy and contention and jealousy and strife; that we may become sympathetic, one with another; that we may realize that real religion is service; that we must convert conviction into action.

I trust that we, as members of the Church of Christ, may be able so to live the Gospel that others, seeing our works, may be attracted to it and receive of the blessings which are in store for those who will observe it.

I read this morning, before leaving home, a work which I should like to read to you, indicative of the thinking of some of the leaders in other lands today.

Religion, in the past, has always spent a large proportion of its force on doings that were apart from the real business of life, on sacrificing, on endless prayers, on traveling to Mecca, Jerusalem or Rome, on kissing sacred stones, bathing in sacred rivers, climbing sacred stairs, and a thousand things that had at best only an indirect bearing on the practical social relations between men and their fellows.

I thought of this paragraph as President Clark was giving us his masterful address, and as I listened to the reports that were read here. I think there is no group in the world which is giving so unselfishly for the uplift of the human family as is the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. There is less show and pomp and ceremony, but it seems to me that we are attempting to harness the great spiritual power of the Church to the problems of human suffering and human need. For these things humbly I thank God.

I should like to bear witness to you, my brethren and sisters, upon returning again from the mission field, that God has blessed me with a testimony of the truth. I thank Him humbly for that, as it is the prized possession of my life. I bear witness that the Prophet Joseph Smith had a vision, that he saw and talked with God. I know this from the very core of my heart, and I thank Him for that knowledge.

I bear witness that they who have succeeded him were likewise so inspired and led; that President Heber J. Grant is a prophet of God. It was my privilege to travel with him some two years ago in Europe. I wish you could have been present in Heidelberg when, as we were passing through the station, where we could not stop, a group of faithful German Latter-day Saints, standing on the platform, as he put his head out of the car window, sang in a language we could not understand, but with a spirit that I have seldom witnessed, "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet." Today I echo that sentiment, and say to you that throughout the world faithful Latter-day Saints esteem him and his associates as such.

I bear witness to the truth, and bring to you from those nations this message: Carry on, regardless of the difficulties that may confront you. God made of one blood all nations of men, and there is no room in the heart of a Latter-day Saint for hate.

Let us then, remember them today in those countries, and let us plead with God our Father to bring speedily the end to war. May we, as we enjoy the peaceful surroundings of our great land, be not unmindful of the fact that they are our brothers and sisters, and that He is interested in them. Let us love one another. Let us emulate His example, for He exposed each individual to the X-ray of His penetrating vision, and revealed to him his hidden possibilities, not his defects. Let us keep that in mind as we think of these warring nations, and expel from our hearts anything of hate, and in love serve our fellow men. I pray God that He will help us so to do, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Brigham Young University Chorus sang an anthem, "Grant Us Peace, O Lord," (Evan Stephens).

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.First Counselor in the First Presidency*

My brethren and sisters, I would like to urge all of you to drive carefully. Let us see if it be not possible to go through one General Conference without an automobile accident.

Elder Albert Choules, President of the Teton Stake, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2 p. m.

FIRST DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference reconvened at 2 o'clock p. m., Friday, April 5.

The music for this session of the Conference was furnished by the Brigham Young University Chorus, Dr. Franklin W. Madsen and Dr. Florence Jepperson Madsen, directors, Dr. Frank W. Asper at the organ.

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., who presided, announced that the Congregation and Chorus would sing, as the opening number, "High on the Mountain Top" (Beesley).

After the singing of the opening song, the invocation was offered by Elder J. Berkeley Larsen, President of the Shelley Stake.

An anthem, "Fierce Raged the Tempest" (T. F. H. Candlyn), was sung by the Brigham Young University Chorus.

ELDER GEORGE F. RICHARDSOf the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

I believe, my brethren and sisters, you who were present at this morning's session of Conference felt as I felt, that it was a wonderful session. The Spirit of the Lord was with us. It seems to me there never was so much reported in evidence of faithfulness on the part of the Latter-day Saints, at any one session of a General Conference as at this particular session referred to, and so much instruction of a definite, wide-spread character. I cheerfully bear testimony to the things which we heard this morning. I was led to feel grateful for my membership in this Church, to be identified with the Latter-day Saints who are so faithful in living their religion, and in carrying on the work of the Lord.

AN APPEAL TO THE INDIFFERENT

I cannot help however but realize that while there is evidence of faithfulness in the Church, on the part of the membership thereof, that there is a great deal of lukewarmness. A great many members of our Church do not seem to appreciate the Gospel as fully as we would like that they should. In our preaching and teaching, naturally, while we commend the faithful Saints for their faithfulness and accomplishments, we try to appeal to those who are not doing their share in carrying on this great latter-day work, with the hope that they may be made to realize their opportunities, and to take advantage of them, realizing that we are here upon the earth to work out our salvation according to the Gospel of Jesus Christ, which has been restored to earth anew in these last days.

As a people I believe we are pretty well taught, so well taught, and our knowledge is so thorough, that if we would live up to the Gospel teachings and live as we know we ought to live, there would be little question as to our receiving a salvation. We have need of being impressed, therefore, with the necessity of doing the things that we know we ought to do, and also in refraining from doing the things which we know we ought not to do.

THE SAVIOR'S MISSION

We read in the scriptures how in the councils of heaven there was a rebellion, and Christ our Lord and Savior, the first-born of the Father in the spirit, came forth with a declaration of principles, brief but comprehensive: "Father, thy will be done, and the glory be thine forever." On the other hand, Lucifer sought to take away from our Father in heaven His honor and His glory, and from man the agency that he there exercised. That the matters under consideration pertained to this earth life is apparent. When the Savior came upon the earth He made the declaration repeatedly that He came because the Father sent Him; that He came to do the will of the Father.

After His death, His resurrection and ascension to heaven, He visited the remnants of the Nephites on this American continent. In preaching to them, as recorded in the twenty-seventh chapter of Third Nephi, He made the declaration that He came here to the earth to do the will of the Father, and then asked those present: "What manner of men ought ye to be?" He answered it for Himself: "Verily I say unto you, even as I am." My interpretation is that as the Savior came to earth to do the will of His Father, so we came to earth to do His will, and all of the commandments that the Lord has given are but an expression of His will concerning us.

THE WORD OF WISDOM

We are told in the scriptures that we should live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God. We are spending a lot of time and effort in trying to persuade the members of the Church, particularly our young people, to refrain from the use of tobacco and intoxicating drinks. The Lord says expressly that it is

His will that we do refrain from the use of those things. Are we quite consistent, brethren and sisters of the Church, when we use those things which the Lord has expressed, by revelation as His will that we do not use?

TITHES AND OFFERINGS

The Lord has given to us a plan, a financial plan, by which, if the Latter-day Saints were all to observe it, I am sure there would be an abundance of means in the hands of those in authority, by which, if there were any needy among us, their needs would be amply supplied—the law of the tithe and of the offerings. They are not a new doctrine and responsibility. We read in the Old Testament, in the Book of Malachi, how that the Lord charged ancient Israel with robbing Him in their tithes and their offerings. We have the responsibility here to give our Fast offerings, an equivalent of what we would save by abstaining from food two meals on the Fast Day, one day each month. That I regard as the minimum that we can give and be justified before the Lord. Anything less than that, would certainly not be justified, but there is an opportunity to give all that we feel able to give, and according to the generosity of our hearts. Brethren and sisters, there are some that I know who give many times more than what they save by Fasting, but a great many others give no Fast offerings, and the results are there is not enough in the hands of the Bishops to take care of those who are in need.

If all the Bishops had carried out the instructions, and the people had complied with those instructions, I repeat what I have said before, there would have been funds in the hands of the Authorities of this Church that would have taken good care of the people who were in need. Not only that, they would have had a surplus that would have taken care of those in need in times of financial distress such as the people have been going through for the last few years.

The finance plan, the tithe—if the tithing had been paid by all the members of this Church since that law was given, we would have had means in the Church, by which we could build the tabernacles and meeting houses and gymnasiums and play centers of the Wards and Stakes in Zion without calling upon the people. The willing horse has to carry the load in this case, because so many of us have not done our duty.

This morning we heard of wonderful accomplishments from the use of the tithing in the Church. I felt and feel now, brethren and sisters, that where I have paid a full tithing, I have assisted in all these splendid works for which tithing is used in the Church. I don't see how those who are not paying any tithing can claim any credit for what has been done and accomplished in the Church by the use of the tithing.

CHOSEN ONES

We read in the Book of Abraham, in the Pearl of Great Price, how that Abraham was shown the intelligences that were before the world was. He was told that among them were many of the Lord's noble and great ones, whom He had chosen to be His rulers, and that he, Abraham, was one of them. Joseph Smith was one of them, and those who succeeded him in presiding over this Church and directing its affairs no doubt were among the noble ones.

And there stood one among them that was like unto God, and He said unto those who were with Him: We will go down, for there is space there, and we will take of these materials, and we will make an earth whereon these may dwell;

And we will prove them herewith, to see if they will do all things whatsoever the Lord their God shall command them.

In other words, to see whether they would keep all His commandments.

A HIGHER LAW INTRODUCED

Brethren and sisters, we are being weighed in the balance, and some of us, I fear, will be found wanting in respect to the tithes and the offerings.

In ancient Israel, because of a lack of faith, Moses and the Higher Priesthood were taken from them, and they were given the law of the carnal commandments, but they were given the law of the tithe. This law of carnal commandments was as a schoolmaster, to bring them up to a standard where they could receive the higher law of the Gospel. When the Savior came He said He did not come to destroy, but to fulfil the law, and He introduced the higher law of the Gospel, the spirit of which was to return good for evil. If a man smite you on one cheek, turn the other. Love your enemies. Bless them that curse you. Do good to them that hate you, and pray for those who despitefully use you and persecute you.

This is the spirit of the Christ, the higher law of the Gospel, and if this spirit were enjoyed by the Latter-day Saints, there would be no difficulty about their keeping the commandments of the Lord with respect to the tithes and the offerings, and the Word of Wisdom, and every other requirement.

THE MEANING OF A HYMN

We are commanded to love the Lord our God with all our heart, soul and mind, and our neighbor as ourself. If we were loving the Lord with all our hearts, there is no requirement He could make of us that we would not gladly and willingly comply with. We sing that beautiful song:

We thank Thee O God for a Prophet,
To guide us in these latter days;

We thank Thee for sending the Gospel,
To lighten our minds with its rays.
We thank Thee for every blessing
Bestowed by Thy bounteous hand.
We feel it a pleasure to serve Thee,
And love to obey Thy commands.

I wonder how many of us think of that sentiment when we are singing it, and we sing it frequently. Are we thankful for a prophet to guide us in these latter days? If so, we will follow his lead, will we not? If we were following the lead of the President of this Church as a prophet of God to us, and to the world, there would be no trouble about our keeping the Word of Wisdom, about our paying our tithing, and meeting the other obligations that rest upon us as members of the Church.

Do we really feel it a pleasure to serve the Lord in His appointed way, which means, of course, sacrifice and self-denial? Do we love to obey His commands, to keep His commandments? Brethren and sisters, are we wholly consistent? Do we think of these things seriously? They are the weightier matters, things that pertain to eternity. If we obtain an exaltation, for which we are candidates, it will be not for believing in these principles: It will be for living them, as the Lord designed that we should.

JOY IN DOING RIGHT

We are told in the Book of Mormon that "Adam fell that men might be, and men are that they might have joy". It is my testimony to you, brethren and sisters, so far as my experience goes, that when I have met my religious obligations, the payment of my tithes honestly, and my offerings generously, keeping the Word of Wisdom, answering the calls that come upon me in the Church, my conscience is clear, and I have real joy. I want to tell you, brethren and sisters, that we rob ourselves of much of the joy we might have in this life, through a guilty conscience, a consciousness that our course of life is not approved of the Lord.

May the Lord bless you, brethren and sisters, and reward those abundantly who are making such sacrifices for the accomplishment of the Lord's purposes, looking to the saving of the souls of His children, the living and the dead. And may He help those of us who are indifferent to our own interests and the interests and welfare of the work of the Lord, that our faith may be renewed and revived, and that we may prove our faith by devotion to the work of the Lord, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER JOHN A. WIDTSOE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My dear brethren and sisters: I rejoice in being again in attendance at one of our great General Conferences. They are refreshing periods to all of us who believe in the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

A TRIBUTE TO PRESIDENT GRANT

We regret that President Grant is not here. But we all rejoice to know that he is improving in health. I want to say that President Grant is not only the President of the Church, and our leader in that sense, but that the prophetic mantle of this day rests upon him. He is a prophet of God, and we shall do well to follow his example, listen to his teachings, and be worthy of his blessings. During the years that I have been permitted to labor among the General Authorities of the Church I have had the privilege on many occasions to witness the prophetic power that accompanies President Grant, and I bear testimony today, solemnly and soberly, that he is a prophet of the living God.

A STANDARD TO THE WORLD

In thinking about this Conference my mind has wandered rather far and wide. Probably the thought that has come to me most often has been as to the place and purpose of the Church in this war-torn world, this world of strife and unhappiness. What is our mission to the world? I have turned to the scriptures to get the answer, and have found the answer, both in ancient and modern scriptures. It is that the Church of Christ at all times must be as a standard to the nations, a standard to which all nations, all people, all men may turn as they seek safety, peace, and happiness.

It is our great mission, brethren and sisters, to be a standard to all the world, and we say without hesitation that those who obey and comply with that standard will find that which men most desire in life. It is a bold declaration, tremendously bold, that a small people in the valleys of these mountains, misunderstood, often harassed by persecution, may become the standard by which all mankind may be led to peace and happiness; but so it is. I am not saying it. It is the word of the Lord, both in ancient and modern days. If this standard would be accepted by the world the things we pray and hope for would soon come.

INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY

Let me say that the Church of itself cannot be this standard. Since the Church is made up of individuals, it becomes an individual responsibility to make the Church a standard for the nations. I must be a standard in my life. I must so conduct myself that I may be a standard worthy of being followed by those who seek the greater joy in life.

The question as to individual responsibility for the welfare of the Church was asked in the early days by members of the Church. Several of the men who labored with the Prophet Joseph Smith came to him in those early days and said: "What shall we do?" They might have said: "What shall we do to be saved?" The Lord in every instance gave an answer. We have a series of short revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants, which are the answers to that question. I find in every one a significant statement, worded almost identically in all of these revelations, to Hyrum Smith, David Whitmer, Oliver Cowdery, and others of less fame in the Church: "Keep my commandments, and seek to bring forth and establish the cause of Zion." That is our business, the business of the Latter-day Saints.

From one point of view, it is selfish enough, perhaps, to keep the commandments that I may be blessed, but it is something even greater to keep the commandments that Zion may be established. As the foundation of His great cause the Lord gave the law of sacrifice. Unless we give of ourselves we cannot build Zion, or anything else worthy of the great cause that the Lord has given us. The law of sacrifice, from the day of Adam to the present day, in one form or another, is the basic principle of life among the communities of Saints.

So we need, in this Church and Kingdom, for our own and the world's welfare a group of men and women in their individual lives who shall be as a light to the nations, and really standards for the world to follow. Such a people must be different from the world as it now is. There is no opportunity for Latter-day Saints to say we shall be as the world is, unless the world has the same aim that we have. We are here to build Zion to Almighty God, for the blessing of all the world. In that aim we are unique and different from all other peoples. We must respect that obligation, and not be afraid of it. We cannot walk as other men, or talk as other men, or do as other men, for we have a different destiny, obligation, and responsibility placed upon us, and we must fit ourselves for that great destiny and obligation.

JESUS' PRAYER FOR HIS DISCIPLES

I remember the wonderful prayer offered by the Savior in Gethsemane just before His crucifixion, when He talked to His Father—perhaps the most sublime prayer known to us—in which He said: "I pray not that thou shouldst take them"—He spake of His disciples—"out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from evil. They are not of the world."

Just now, perhaps, as never before, we need to remember that this Church and Kingdom, and the members thereof are not to be out of the world, but they must not be of the world. There is a vast difference between those two conditions—the difference between light and darkness. We are a peculiar people and ever shall be and ever must be a peculiar people.

Let us remember the obligation that rests upon the Latter-day Saints to build Zion. It is not so difficult to carry out, for the Lord is our helper, and He will be with us and assist us and instruct us and make us able to do the work that lies before us, if only we have a sincere desire to be the Lord's helpers.

Let us remember one of the best known statements in our Latter-day scripture—the Book of Mormon—in which Nephi's faith is evidenced by this statement: "For I know that the Lord giveth no commandments unto the children of men, save he shall prepare a way for them that they may accomplish the thing which He commandeth them."

We must be unique, separate in ideals from most of the world. We have the greatest mission in all the world. But let us not be afraid. The Lord has called us to His Kingdom and His service. He will make it possible for us to do the work He would like us to do.

THE COMMANDMENTS OF THE LORD HAVE SPIRITUAL MEANING

That brings me to the final thought that has been moving through my mind the last few days, that all these things, all the commandments, all the wonderful statistics that were read this forenoon, which made us grateful, all the achievements of the Church, have great spiritual significance. We of the Kingdom of God cannot walk merely on earth; we must walk in heaven as we walk on earth.

The Lord has told us so in modern revelation, in another well-known and much-loved message to the Prophet Joseph Smith:

Wherefore, verily I say unto you that all things unto me are spiritual, and not at any time have I given unto you a law which was temporal; neither any man, nor the children of men; neither Adam, your father, whom I created.

At no time has God given His children a commandment which does not have a spiritual significance. Often I fear we fail in our obedience, because we look upon God's commandments with temporal eyes, and fail to understand their spiritual meaning. Let me call your attention to three or four commandments which have a deep spiritual meaning.

THE WORD OF WISDOM HELPS IN SELF-MASTERY

The Word of Wisdom is one of the best known of all the laws given to His people in these latter days. It was given in the year 1833, and has been preached by every President and leader of the Church. Every father and mother should be preaching and teaching the Word of Wisdom—a protection to the body against ill health. The observance of the Word of Wisdom does give us sound bodies, lengthens out our lives here on earth, gives us clear minds, wisdom and understanding; but it has even a greater meaning than that, a spiritual meaning. For if I am able to observe the Word of Wisdom, refrain from the things forbidden in the Word of Wisdom, do the things there advised, I thereby become master of my appetites. I can look my appetites, as it were, in the face, and say: "Get thee behind me." I am master, not subject to an appetite. The cigarette is not my master, I am the master. This glass of liquor is not my master, I am the master. Can the Lord build Zion, can He establish the cause of Zion, can He make us a standard for all the nations to follow unless we are masters of ourselves? If we are but slaves to an appetite, what can the Lord do with us? Great as He is the work shall fail.

TITHING IN A SPIRITUAL SENSE

Take another law that has been talked about several times here today, the law of tithing. It has built meeting houses, sent men and women on missions, maintained our Temples, and the many activities that President Clark reported in his stirring address this morning. The spiritual value of tithing is that if I obey the law of tithing sincerely I separate myself from the love of earthly things, and become strong enough to love the things of heaven better than the things of earth. No man can rise very high who lives by earthly things alone. The things of earth drag us down unless spiritually made alive. I must look upon things of the earth merely as helps in my temporal life, no more than that.

I believe that until mankind is able to divorce itself from its love of earthly things we shall not be able to build God's kingdom or be a standard for the nations to follow.

Another principle spoken of here today—missionary work—has a distinct spiritual equivalent. In it lies a spiritual principle. I create and develop within myself, when I give of my time and means and talents to the preaching of the Gospel a love for my fellow men, brotherly love. God is love. Without love we can do nothing in the building of His Kingdom.

WORK FOR THE DEAD DEVELOPS SPIRITUALITY

And fourth and last—although many might be dealt with in this fashion—is the work that will be celebrated here tonight in the Tabernacle. One hundred years ago the first baptisms for the dead were performed. Since then we have done a tremendous amount of work for the dead. We have built Temples and spent time and money in gathering genealogies. We spend days and days in the Temples serving the dead. The spiritual principle back of that activity is the development of a more perfect love, a more complete unselfishness. It is well enough to preach to those who are living. They may become my friends and neighbors, my helpers, I may see the fruits of my labors, but it is quite different to spend my strength and time and money for those long since dead, who are to me only names. By giving myself in the spirit of true helpfulness to those that have gone before me, I develop within myself, within my heart and soul, an abounding love very near to that of God Himself. Then the selfishness of the world fades away, and upon the conquest of selfishness hinges all human welfare.

ZION TO BE BUILT BY OVERCOMING SELFISHNESS

I want to call the attention of the Latter-day Saints to the fact that there are always two sides to Gospel principles, the one pertaining to this earth for our guide and help here, and the other dealing with the eternal spiritual realities, the eternal principles of the Gospel by which men touch the unseen world. What a standard to all the world we would be if we all were masters of ourselves, of our appetites, if we could set aside earthly joys for spiritual welfare! If we really loved our fellowmen, if we were really impelled by unselfishness in all that we do, then we would be a standard to the nations, the power of the Lord would be ours, and Zion would be built through our efforts.

God bless us in all that we do in behalf of this great work. I bear testimony to the truth of the restored Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, its prophetic power and service, from Joseph Smith to our present leader, and I do it in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER RULON S. WELLS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

All the days of my life—and they are now many—I have been brought up under the influence of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. My heart is full of gratitude that I have a membership in this Church. I remember from my very youth many of the testimonies that have come to me by reason of that membership. Many, many times has the Lord manifested unto me the truth of His everlasting Gospel as it has been restored to the earth through the instrumentality of Joseph Smith, the Prophet, in the day and age in which we live.

A TESTIMONY AT AN EARLY AGE

It was only, very likely, a few days or weeks after my baptism, which occurred shortly after I was eight years of age, that I received a testimony. I did not then know definitely just what it was; I hardly appreciated what it meant, but the Lord manifested to me the truth of this work in my boyhood. I recollect very well a remarkable incident which occurred as I was coming home from school one day (the school being located across the street eastward from the present location of the West High School, in the building then known as the Union Academy, under the tutorship of Doctor Doremus), returning by my usual route up North Temple Street, then known as Jordan Street, on the south bank of City Creek, which was a winding, deep canyon stream going down Jordan Street until it entered into the Jordan River. City Creek was bounded on either side by wild rose bushes and willows. As I was wandering home after school I came to a place immediately north of where the Temple now stands—"The Temple not built, but scattered 'round in native rock upon the ground"). As I went down close to the edge of the creek and then arose to a higher elevation it seemed to me that I was almost lifted to heaven. I felt the power of the Spirit of the Lord upon me. I did not then know what it was, but I was made happy and full of joy and gladness, even to overflowing. A boy, a lad of nine years of age, to receive such a deep impression that to this day it has remained with me, vivid in my memory, even to the smallest details!

I learned to recognize what this feeling was when in later years I traveled as a missionary and the Spirit of the Lord came to me and manifested its power by giving me words of utterance in setting forth the principles of eternal life. And, I said to myself, "that is just exactly the same feeling that I had as a boy when I stood upon the bank of City Creek north of where the Temple now stands. The Lord poured out His Spirit upon me and I felt it in every fiber of my being. And now here as I am called abroad to proclaim this everlasting Gospel, comes this same testimony, and I know that it came from God."

A PRAYER IN THE CANYON

That is only one of the many testimonies that I have had. I do not mind now telling one or two, for I have had many of them in the course of my experiences, but they have been for me. When I went upon my first mission I was blessed by President Brigham Young. He laid his hands upon my head on the twenty-second day of October, 1875, and blessed me and ordained me a Seventy and set me apart for my first mission, which was in Switzerland and Germany. I went upon my mission, but prior to my departure I had been working at my father's saw-mills in Big Cottonwood Canyon. I hardly knew that Conference was in session in October, 1875. One day a strange feeling came over me as I stood upon the top of a large pile of lumber, filling orders that had come from Salt Lake City to my father's lumber mill. And an impulse came to me to "get down from this pile of lumber and go up to the office" which was a lumber shanty serving the three-fold purpose of my bedroom, store and office, where I kept the accounts of the men that were employed around the mill. I also had the task of measuring the logs as they came to the mill, and the lumber as it came from the mill. These loggers indulged in a great deal of profanity and when we remonstrated with them they claimed the oxen understood no other language. I mention this so you will understand the environment in which I then found myself. Without knowing why I followed that impulse, I descended from the tall pile of lumber and went into the office, and as soon as I did so I closed the door, and approaching the middle of the room (there was nothing to lean upon at all) I fell down upon my knees and prayed unto God that He would send me where He wanted me to go. I did not know why I said that; I was not aware of the Conference then being held, nor had I any intimation whatever of receiving a missionary call, but at that very time (I do not know that it was the identical minute, but it is quite possible the Conference was in session, and my name was being called with many others to go upon a mission.) the Lord compelled me to get upon my knees and ask for this blessed privilege of being the bearer of glad tidings in the days of my young manhood, to go out into the world. What was this manifestation? Surely it must have been that same Spirit that took possession of me in my boyhood days.

The following day my mother rode on horseback up to the saw-mill to let me know that I had been called upon my mission.

Let me here say that at this time I was occasionally associated with people entertaining non-Mormon views, some of them being infidels and atheists, but in every discussion I found myself defending the existence of God. I may have been somewhat neglectful of my duties, although I was always more or less of a religious turn of mind, and had been reading some books that probably were not as wholesome as they might have been—Ingersoll and other infidels—and my mind had become a little bit disturbed.

A REMARKABLE DREAM

While on my way to my mission field, crossing the ocean on the Steamship Dakota, I went down into the salon of the ship one day, and lay upon one of the cushioned benches surrounding the eating tables, where I fell asleep. While asleep the Lord appeared to me in a dream and I saw Him standing before me; and by His side was William W. Taylor, one of the other missionaries, a son of President John Taylor, a boy like myself going upon his first mission. He stood by the side of the Savior, and the Savior extended His hand to me and grasping my hand, holding it tight, looked at me in the face and said: "Will you ever doubt again?" Brother Taylor, who stood beside Him said: "I believe that is enough for him." With that, the Lord let go of my hand and I awoke.

That is only another instance of how the Lord has been training and preparing me for my life's ministry, and I know that this is His work. I could recite many other experiences that I have had in my long life, many wonderful testimonies given to me. I have not published them; I have not given them out in public meetings; I do not remember ever having done so before. I hope that I may be pardoned if I ask of you now, my brothers and sisters, to accept of this testimony one hundred percent, for I know that this is the work of the Lord and that He has commissioned His servants to carry the Gospel to the nations of the earth, for it is to be preached as a witness unto all nations before the end shall come.

ADMIRATION FOR LEADERS

I bear testimony that this is the work of the Lord and I uphold and sustain this work and the men who have been chosen to stand at the head. How I have admired their administration, and how I do admire President Grant and his counselors and our file leaders who are now leading the affairs of this Church! How I do admire the wonderful work that is being carried on by these men of God! I do more than admire them; I love them with a love unfeigned, and I know that they are true servants of God. May the Lord help us all and bless us according to our needs, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

Supplement to Elder Rulon S. Wells' Sermon

AN ASSURANCE OF THE LORD'S APPROVAL

I have in mind another very extremely interesting experience which preceded my call to the First Council of the Seventy. I told a personal friend of mine who was commenting on my Conference address of this experience, and she remarked that I should have included it also in my talk, so I am taking the liberty now of relating it although it was not delivered in my Conference Talk!

April 6th, 1892, the capstone of the Temple (Salt Lake) was laid, and during the year that followed a campaign to secure sufficient money to finish the Temple was inaugurated and carried to a successful conclusion, and, as well known, the Temple was dedicated April 6, 1893, just forty years after the laying of the corner stone in 1853. Like many others I took part in this campaign and assisted in making the collection from members of our Ward, I being one of the workers in the 18th Ward. Also like others I had a strong desire to put myself in a proper condition for entering the Temple at the time of its dedication. I wanted to receive another manifestation of the Lord's approval of me, and I prayed to Him earnestly that I might receive the assurance that I was approved of Him. I did not ask that I might see an angel or hear a voice from heaven, I only wanted to know that I had His approval of me as a member of His Church, worthy of attending the dedication of the Temple. I knew nothing of the vacancy existing in the First Council of the Seventy until I was notified in a note received from Brother George Reynolds, who was then private secretary of the First Presidency, who notified me that I had been selected to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Jacob Gates as one of the First Seven Presidents of Seventies. This notification was received on April 5, 1893, and my name was presented at the Conference held that day, and I was set apart the same day. On April 6 I sat with my brethren of the First Seven Presidents of Seventies on the stand and while sitting there I commented to myself: "Well, I have heard no voice, and I have seen no angel, but here I am, and I feel I have been accepted and approved of God."

ELDER JOSEPH F. MERRILL

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

To say that these are troublous times characterized by strenuous struggles for goods, position and power is to say something trite. It is equally trite to say these times are also characterized by religious indifference and doubts, moral delinquencies and a worship of mammon. So no one questions the need of reforms or of helpful admonition relative to many things.

We who are gathered here are deeply concerned, of course, with the faith and practices of our people. Partaking of the spirit of the times there is more or less questioning among us relative to these things. Conditions are different and are continually changing. Should not some of our practices likewise change is a question frequently asked. In view of all this some even of our devout members ask for advice touching matters of our faith and practice.

COMMANDMENTS REGARDING THE SABBATH

A question in the minds of many, particularly of our young people, asks what is a proper observance of the Sabbath day—what may we do and may not do on Sunday? And in view of what they see this is a reasonable question to ask. They are familiar with the injunctions given to ancient Israel:

Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.

Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work;

But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work, thou nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates. (Exodus 20:8-11.)

This quotation is made of course from the Ten Commandments. But concerning the Sabbath we may further read that the Lord spoke to Moses, commanding him thus:

Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, verily my Sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you.

Ye shall keep the Sabbath therefore; for it is holy. * * *

Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, to observe the Sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant. It is a sign between me and the children of Israel forever. (Exodus 31:13-17.)

A violation of this law of the Sabbath by ancient Israel was a matter so serious that the Lord commanded the offender should be put to death.

In the course of Israelitish history we read that successive prophets rebuked the people for neglect or profanation of the Sabbath. Nehemiah ascribed the affliction of the nation to the forfeiture of divine protection through Sabbath violation (Neh. 13:

15-22). Through Ezekiel the Lord reaffirmed the significance of the Sabbath as a mark of His covenant with Israel, and sternly upbraided those who observed not the day. (Ezek. 20:12-24)

Yes, our moderns say, ancient Israel was taught that the Sabbath day was holy and its profanation was a very serious offense. But conditions then were vastly different from those of today. We agree.

TEACHINGS OF MODERN SCRIPTURES

But for guidance in matters of faith and practice, Latter-day Saints are not wholly dependent upon the Bible and ancient prophets. Fortunately we have modern scriptures and modern prophets—invaluable possessions. The Lord has spoken in this dispensation as well as in dispensations of biblical times.

What do these scriptures and prophets teach in our day relative to Sabbath observance and other religious duties? Let us see.

As early as August, 1831, only sixteen months after the Church was organized, the Lord gave a very beautiful revelation through the Prophet Joseph Smith, reaffirming the biblical code of a religious life acceptable to Him.

I quote from Section 59 of the Doctrine and Covenants:

5. Wherefore, I give unto them a commandment, saying thus: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy might, mind, and strength; and in the name of Jesus Christ thou shalt serve Him.

6. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Thou shalt not steal; neither commit adultery, nor kill, nor do anything like unto it.

7. Thou shalt thank the Lord thy God in all things.

8. Thou shalt offer a sacrifice unto the Lord thy God in righteousness, even that of a broken heart and a contrite spirit.

9. And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day;

10. For verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High;

11. Nevertheless thy vows shall be offered up in righteousness on all days and at all times;

12. But remember that on this, the Lord's day, thou shalt offer thine oblations and thy sacraments unto the Most High, confessing thy sins unto thy brethren, and before the Lord.

13. And on this day thou shalt do none other thing, only let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart that thy fasting may be perfect, or, in other words, that thy joy may be full.

14. Verily, this is fasting and prayer, or in other words, rejoicing and prayer.

15. And inasmuch as ye do these things with thanksgiving, with cheerful hearts and countenances, not with much laughter, for this is sin, but with a glad heart and a cheerful countenance—

16. Verily I say, that inasmuch as ye do this, the fulness of the earth is yours, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air, and that which climbeth upon the trees and walketh upon the earth;

17. Yea, and the herb, and the good things which come of the earth, whether for food or for raiment, or for houses, or for barns, or for orchards, or for gardens, or for vineyards;

18. Yea, all things which come of the earth, in the season thereof, are made for the benefit and use of man, both to please the eye and to gladden the heart;

19. Yea, for food and for raiment, for taste and for smell, to strengthen the body and to enliven the soul.

20. And it pleaseth God that He hath given all these things unto man; for unto this end were they made to be used, with judgment, not to excess, neither by extortion.

21. And in nothing doth man offend God, or against none is His wrath kindled, save those who confess not His hand in all things, and obey not His commandments.

22. Behold, this is according to the law and the prophets; wherefore, trouble me no more concerning this matter.

23. But learn that he who doeth the works of righteousness shall receive his reward, even peace in this world, and eternal life in the world to come.

24. I, the Lord, have spoken it, and the Spirit beareth record. Amen. (Doctrine and Covenants 59:5-24.)

PRESIDENT JOSEPH F. SMITH'S ADVICE

But the critic who wants a free Sunday may say this revelation was given a hundred years ago when conditions were also vastly different from those today. In reply I call attention to the fact that the Church has today a divinely inspired leadership as it had then. What do these leaders say? Let me quote some of the words of President Joseph F. Smith as found in "Gospel Doctrine," as follows:

The Sabbath is a day of rest and worship designated and set apart by special commandment of the Lord to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and we should honor and keep it holy. We should also teach our children this principle.

True, Sunday is a day of rest, a change from the ordinary occupations of the week, but it is more than that. It is a day of worship, a day in which the spiritual life of man may be enriched. A day of indolence, a day of physical recuperation is too often a very different thing from the God-ordained day of rest. Physical exhaustion and indolence are incompatible with a spirit of worship. A proper observance of the duties and devotions of the Sabbath day will, by its change and its spiritual life, give the best rest that men can enjoy on the Sabbath day.

What shall we do on the Sabbath day? * * * Honor the Sabbath day and keep it holy, just as the Lord has commanded us to do. Go to the house of prayer. Listen to instructions. Bear testimony to the truth. * * * When we go home, get the family together. Let us sing a few songs, read a chapter or two from the Bible, Book of Mormon, or Doctrine and Covenants, and discuss principles pertaining to advancement in divine knowledge. * * *

It is imperatively necessary at all times, and especially so when our associations do not afford us the moral and spiritual support which we require for our advancement, that we go to the house of the Lord to worship and mingle with the Saints, that their moral and spiritual influence may help to correct our false impressions and restore us to that life which the duties and obligations of our conscience and true religion impose upon us."

The reason for this required course upon the Sabbath day is plainly stated in the revelations. It is that one may more fully keep himself unspotted from the world; and to this end, also, the Saints are required to go to the house of prayer and offer up their sacraments on the Sabbath day.

Now, what is the promise to the Saints who observe the Sabbath?

He then read from the revelation given in Section 59 of the Doctrine and Covenants the words of the Lord that I have already recited and proceeded to remark:

All these blessings are promised to those who keep the commandments, among which is the important one, to observe properly the Sabbath day. The Lord is not pleased with people who know these things and do them not.

He went on to say:

Men are not resting from their labors when they plow, and plant and haul and dig. They are not resting when they linger around the home all day on Sunday, doing odd jobs that they have been too busy to do on other days.

Men are not showing zeal and ardor in their religious faith and duty when they bustle off early Sunday morning in automobiles to the canyons, the resorts or places of amusement with their wives and children. Not in seeking pleasure and recreation do they offer their time and attention in the worship of the Lord; nor can they thus rejoice in the spirit of forgiveness and worship that comes with partaking of the holy sacrament.

People are not keeping holy the Sabbath day, when they spend the day loafing around the village ice cream stand or restaurant, playing games or in riding, fishing, shooting, or engaged in physical sports, excursions and outings. Such is not the course that will keep them unspotted from the world, but rather one that will deprive them of the rich promises of the Lord, giving them sorrow instead of joy, and unrest and anxiety instead of the peace that comes with works of righteousness.

I shall end my reading from President Smith with these words:

Let us play and take recreation to our hearts' content during other days, but on the Sabbath let us rest, worship, go to the house of prayer, partake of the sacrament, eat our food with singleness of heart, and pay our devotions to God, that the fulness of the earth may be ours, and that we may have peace in this world and eternal life in the world to come. (Gospel Doctrine pages 304-309.)

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY'S APPEAL

And now I give you a statement of the views of President Grant's administration relative to Sabbath observance. A few years ago the First Presidency published an editorial on this topic in the Deseret News. It was entitled "Sunday and The Home" and is as follows:

The Lord's day is a holy day—not a holiday. It has been set apart as a day of rest and worship. A sacred Sabbath begets reverence for God. It is not pleasing in His sight that the day be given over to pleasure seeking in places of amusement or elsewhere.

Sunday Schools and meetings have been so arranged as to meet the convenience of the people and leave a considerable portion of the Sabbath day without Church appointments. We earnestly appeal to the people to keep their meeting appointments faithfully and to utilize that portion of Sunday not appointed for meetings in promoting family association in the home, with the purpose of stimulating and establishing greater home fealty, a closer companionship among parents and children, and more intimate relations among all kindred.

We believe that it is unnecessary for families to go beyond their own homes or those of their kindred for the relaxation and association which are proper for the Sabbath day, and we therefore discourage more traveling than is necessary for this purpose and attendance upon appointed meetings.

Let all unnecessary labor be suspended and let no encouragement be given by the attendance of members of the Church at places of amusement and recreation on the Sabbath day. If Sunday is spent in our meetings and in our homes great blessings will come to our families and communities.

HEBER J. GRANT,
ANTHONY W. IVINS,
CHARLES W. NIBLEY,
First Presidency.

SABBATH OBSERVANCE A BLESSING

Thus, if we please the Lord, among other things we must do is to keep holy the Sabbath day. And the way to do this has not essentially changed from the days of Moses and ancient Israel down through the ages to the present moment.

But sad as it is to see, the modern Christian world has almost forgotten the sanctity of the Sabbath. With the vast majority the day has ceased to be holy. Instead it is a holiday, a day of amusements and pleasure-seeking, of all kinds of activities foreign to worship and holiness.

I speak of these things because some of our own people are becoming worldly minded with respect to the Sabbath. This is certainly displeasing to the Lord who will certainly withhold blessings otherwise obtainable.

We read in the Doctrine and Covenants these words:

"There is a law, irrevocably decreed in heaven before the foundations of this world, upon which all blessings are predicated. And when we obtain any blessing from God, it is by obedience to that law upon which it is predicated." (Doc. and Cov. 130:20-21.)

This is a law of the universe, governing things material, as all scientists know. Through the Prophet Joseph Smith we learn that it also applies to things spiritual.

The blessings divinely promised for keeping holy the Lord's Sabbath are invaluable, as the scriptures indicate. Hence let no Latter-day Saint sacrifice these blessings by going fishing, deer hunting, golfing, amusement seeking, joy riding, to sports, movies and games, or engaging in other Sabbath-breaking activities.

Brethren and sisters, let us show our confidence in the Lord and in the divinity of this Church by abstaining from participation in the sinful practices of Babylon, so common on every hand. In any case, as surely as the night follows the day we shall finally reap as we have sown. The Lord help us to sow wisely and well I pray in the name of Christ our Lord, Amen.

ELDER THOMAS E. MCKAY

Former President of the Swiss Mission

Brothers and sisters, I sense keenly the responsibility resting upon me at this time. I confess I am a little frightened because of that responsibility. I pray humbly that I may be directed by the Spirit of God in what I say. I remember just before my farewell party, when I was leaving for my first mission, I was very much worried as to what I should say, and I thought—"how thankful and happy I will be after this mission is over, so that I will not be so frightened and worry so much when I am called upon to speak." That was forty years ago, I am now returning from my third mission, and I confess I am just as frightened, and I have worried as much, or more, I believe, than I did then.

I remember also a few lines of poetry that were written on the fly-leaf of a little book that was given to me at that time, a book of views of beautiful Ogden Canyon; I appreciated them so much that I memorized them. I appreciate them even more today, after spending about nine years in the mission field in Europe, than I did then. They are as follows:

There is a land of every land the pride, beloved of Heaven o'er all the earth beside.

There is a spot of earth supremely blest,
A dearer, sweeter spot than all the rest.

Where is that land, that spot of earth to find?

Art thou a man, a patriot? Look around

And O thou shalt find, where'er thy footsteps roam,
That land, thy country, and that spot thy home.

I am more grateful today than ever before for my country and for my home. I appreciate and love them more. I love and appreciate my wife and children, my parentage, my brothers and sisters and friends, more than ever before. We are glad to be home again. Of course, we have enjoyed our mission. We have enjoyed our association with your sons, the finest missionaries in the world. We wish to thank you parents for sending such sons into the mission field. It has been a great inspiration to us to associate with such choice young men. Some of them are sons of missionaries with whom we labored when presiding over the Swiss-German Mission before.

And by the way, tomorrow, Saturday, the 6th of April, will be just twenty-eight years since I reported my return from presiding over the Swiss and German Mission; at that time, as I recall, President Joseph F. Smith presided. The music was furnished by the Brigham Young University choir, conducted by Professor Lund. Apostle Hyrum Smith was the first speaker. Many changes have taken place since that time. A number of changes have taken place since we left a little over thirty months ago. We miss some very dear faces here on the stand.

It has been a wonderful experience, brothers and sisters, to be in the mission field for the third time. The Lord said, through the Savior:

If ye do the work ye shall know. My doctrine is not mine, but His that sent me. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.

I have seen the fulfilment of that promise. People that I met on my first mission, forty years ago, have sons now in the mission field, or they have been. Babies that I blessed on that first mission are now leaders, one of them presiding over the West German Mission. Many of the parents, who were Sunday School children at that time, have had sons in the mission field. All of the missionaries in the Swiss Mission, except two, have been born since that mission twenty-eight years ago. The large majority of these missionaries are sons of either parents or grandparents born in Switzerland, and I want to tell you parents that they are a credit to you and a credit to the Church, and their strong testimonies, as well as those of their parents, are a practical demonstration of the promise, "if ye will do the work, ye shall know."

The Swiss and German Mission twenty-eight years ago comprised all of Germany, Austria, Hungary, Switzerland and France. Today there are five Missions in these countries. They are doing well. Of course, they are handicapped because of the evacuation of all our missionaries and Mission presidents, but I am pleased to report that the local people are carrying on. Quite a number of those people who are now in charge of the work have been born in the Church; they understand the Gospel and are well qualified to carry on; they have faith; they are not discouraged because, as they say, they have the Gospel.

Some of our Branches have had to be closed, but in the main they are all functioning. Two Branches which we have had to close—very fine Branches too, one of which I think had the best record in tithe-paying in the Church—were located in Strassbourg and Muehlhausen, France. These cities were evacuated when war was declared. The people, our members among them, had to leave over night, with only a bundle of clothing to take with them. For weeks we didn't know just where they were. Finally we were able to get some letters through, and they were located. As soon as arrangements could be made with the French and Swiss authorities for permission to cross the border, one of our brethren was sent to visit them, taking a considerable sum of money with him to help make them as comfortable as possible.

We had learned, just for an example, that thirty-five thousand people were being taken care of in a city of thirty thousand population. You can imagine what that would mean, with the limited accommodations. Some members, we learned, were sleeping in bath-rooms; others sleeping in the halls. So we sent considerable money with this good brother, a local brother, to buy bed springs, bedding, curtains, and other things. By sending some telegrams, and telephoning, he succeeded in getting most of them together. They held a testimony meeting.

When this brother came back he said: "President McKay, you sent me there to give them spiritual uplift and to encourage them, but I received much more help spiritually from them than I was able to give them." Those people, although they didn't know whether they would ever see an Elder again, an authority of the Church, had put away their tithing as usual. They had received work—some of them—and they had been blessed. This local brother brought back nearly as much money as we had sent to help them. They said: "You express our thankfulness to President McKay for the help that he has sent us, and tell him that we are all right, and are not discouraged, because we have the Gospel." That is the faith of those people over there, brothers and sisters. They are keeping the commandments of the Lord and are doing the will of the Father.

It is difficult to keep all the Branches organized. We get them organized, then our brethren are taken into the army. About six hundred of our brethren are in the army in Germany. Seven of them have lost their lives—not in battle, however. They are praying that they will not have to fight. They are peace-loving, those members. They have no hate in their hearts, but a love for all mankind, the love of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. We have committees appointed, so that as soon as a vacancy occurs, another man is called to take his place. We have called sisters on missions, to take charge of the office work, and they are getting along very nicely. They are keeping busy and are trying to do the will of the Father.

They know, as I know, that God lives; that He is our Father; that we are all His children; that He loves us, and because He loves us He has given us the Gospel. Every commandment He has given is for our progress and happiness in this life, as well as our life hereafter. Our members know this as I know it, and they are keeping the commandments. They keep the Word of Wisdom, are paying their tithing, their Fast offerings, and they are being blessed for it.

I was delighted to hear this morning in the report—I don't know whether you noticed it or not, but I did—that the Swiss Mission is leading in Fast offerings, per capita; that is, outside of the smaller Missions.

They know, too, as I know, that Jesus is the Christ, that He is our head, that this is the Church of Jesus Christ. They know, too, as I know, that Joseph Smith was and is a prophet, and that his successors are prophets of the Lord, including our beloved President Heber J. Grant. Oh, how we do love and appreciate President Grant. It is remarkable; it is a miracle what he has accomplished in establishing just this one point I will mention—better public relations between the Church and the rest of the world.

We have had occasion to visit our Consuls and Consul Generals, representing the United States, quite often we made it a point to call on them and get acquainted as soon as we entered a city. I remember calling on the Consul General in Zurich: I gave him my card, the Temple card. He looked at it and said: "It is a beautiful card." I said: "You may keep it, if you wish to." He said: "Thank you, but I have something I prize a great deal more than this Temple card." He reached in his desk and brought out a book presented to him by President Grant, autographed by President Grant. That was one of his prizes, and he took a great deal of pride in showing it to me.

God bless President Grant. The people there love him. We all love him. He is our leader, chosen of the Lord. God bless these brethren on the stand. President Clark also is known by many of these representatives of our Government. They have been in very deed friends to us during our rather exciting and worrying experiences because of war conditions. They have arranged for us to telephone, when it was impossible for private people to telephone. We appreciate them. I wish to express our appreciation here publicly for what they have done.

Brethren and sisters, I am grateful, more grateful than I can express, for the testimony I have that this is the Church of God. May He help us always to do His will, and thereby retain this testimony that we have, I humbly pray in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER WALLACE F. TORONTO

Former President of the Czecho-Slovakian Mission

Brethren and sisters: You cannot know the thrill which goes through my being today in beholding again, for the first time in five years, this glorious sight, a Conference of the members of the Church. I pray for the inspiration of the Lord in that which I might say today, for I feel that my responsibility is great, and I am keenly aware that those things should be emphasized which will be of profit and benefit to this congregation.

I bring you the greetings, brethren and sisters, of a small band of people, Czecho-Slovaks, who know that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is indeed the most priceless possession which they have ever had. They are living in a war-torn country which has been ravaged, robbed and plundered. They are existing under the most adverse of conditions, but none-the-less they live the Gospel to such an extent as would put many of us to shame. Perhaps we need adversity, in order to fully appreciate the commandments and the blessings coming from the Gospel which we have.

I want to say a word, too, about the splendid missionaries which you have sent us during the past three and a half years. We have had the finest men upon the face of the earth, to carry these glad tidings to thousands upon thousands of people residing in that nation. The work has not been easy. Programs have been projected and plans have been brought into being, only to meet with disappointment because of incidents and situations beyond the power of men to control.

These Elders have evacuated twice. They have come back more determined than ever to see that the Gospel should not perish in Czecho-Slovakia. They have done a mighty work. I bear testimony to you today, brothers and sisters, that these young men whom you have sent out into the field abroad, have been willing to go the limit in bringing the Gospel of peace, joy and happiness to a war-torn Europe. My heart goes out in praise and gratitude to my Heavenly Father for the opportunities which these young men have had, as well as for the opportunities which they, through their work, have been able to afford those much less fortunate than you and I.

Members of the Church in Central Europe have learned to know the deep meaning of the Gospel. They have learned to know that its core and essence is to be found in the admonition of Jesus: "Love thy neighbor even as thyself."

A short time after almost two million German troops had marched across the borders of Czecho-Slovakia—during that time of tension and terror, which inevitably resulted—a young German officer, a fine, straight, clean-looking fellow, walked through the door of our meeting hall in Prague. We thought: Certainly, this is the end for us. The Secret Police have probably sent some one here to close the Mission. Coming up he said: "My name is Brother R. (for obvious reasons it is felt unwise to give his name.) I am an officer in the German Army. As soon as I had completed my official duties here in Prague, the first thing I set out to do was to find this Branch of the Church in Czecho-Slovakia." With your permission, I would like to say just a word to this congregation. I replied: "Certainly, Brother R., we shall be happy to hear from you."

He stood up, and in a language which most of the people of Czecho-Slovakia detested, German, he had this to say to the members of the Church and to the friends who were present:

Brothers and sisters, I come here not on an appointment of my own choosing. I come here as a servant of my government. I know we have brought you considerable distress and dismay. We have caused already much suffering. Nevertheless, you and I have something in common, something which oversteps the boundaries of race, language, and color. You and I have the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Despite the fact that I speak German and you Czech, yet because of the Gospel we still speak in common terms. The time is coming when we shall know this better than ever before.

I wish I had time to tell you all he said. Tears streamed down the faces of those Czecho-Slovakian people. As he walked down the aisle they stood up and put their arms around him and wept upon his shoulder. Every available Sunday—he believed in keeping the Sabbath—he was at the Branch hall, doing his best to make the Gospel of Jesus Christ a living thing among a subjugated people.

That is what the Gospel of Jesus Christ does for a man. When it touches him it changes him, and he knows, as President Hugh B. Brown has already said, that all mankind come of common blood, and that we are brothers and sisters in the Gospel of Jesus Christ, all having but one Father. These are momentous things, brothers and sisters. They are truths which cannot be equalled any place in the world, outside the plan of the Gospel.

We regretted having to leave our members in Czecho-Slovakia. Had we been able to leave them in the hands of a successor, we should have felt good about coming home, but conditions would not permit that. Nevertheless it is my testimony to you that some thirty thousand members of the Church who have been left in Europe, who are now carrying on for themselves—despite the fact that they must suffer, and perhaps have want of the necessities of life—are being protected by the hand of the Lord.

If I may have just a moment or two I should like to relate a story, one of several within our experience, which to me is an evidence of the truthfulness of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and of the protecting power and goodness of God.

A young Ukrainian, Tarnawskyj by name, who had been studying for the ministry in the Greek Catholic Church, was on his way from Warsaw, Poland, to New York City, there to attend a graduate school for the ministry of that church. He came by the way of the city of Prague. As he was going down the street he saw the sign, "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints." He noticed that we were holding a meeting at that time. He thought to himself: "I have learned of those people in my studies. I am curious. I think I will go in and see what they have to say."

He entered, dressed in his black robe and white collar, and sat in the back. He was a young man about twenty-eight or thirty years of age. Two of our missionaries stood up and explained some of the principles of the Gospel. They bore their testimonies. Since he spoke Ukrainian, which is kindred to Czech, he understood them. After the meeting he came up and asked: "When do you hold the rest of your services?" We enumerated the meetings of the week and he came to all of them, even including the Relief Society. In a few weeks he made this request: "Brother Toronto, I would like to be baptized into this Church."

"Now, Brother Tarnawskyj, you know you can't make your living in this Church. Our missionaries sustain themselves, either from their own savings or through the sustenance which their folks send them."

"Oh, Brother Toronto," he replied, "I know all about that. Your missionaries have been teaching me the Gospel." Continuing, he said: "I have found the most priceless thing in all the world. I want the Gospel of Jesus Christ. I have been seeking it for years in the universities and the divinity schools of many lands, and I have never found anything that can equal this."

I said: "All right. As soon as we instruct you a little more fully in the Gospel we shall be happy to have you as a member of the Church." He was subsequently baptized. Upon accepting baptism a great characteristic of truth took hold of him, that of wanting to tell somebody else about it. Of course, those he thought of first were his loved ones back in Poland. He wrote them a long letter, in which he declared: "I have found the greatest thing in life. I want to tell you something of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, that you, too, might enjoy the blessings which flow from it."

I met him a few days later. He wore a long face and was very dejected. "What on earth has happened to you, Brother Tarnawskyj?" "I just received a letter from my folks in Poland. They tell me here: 'Dear Son and Brother: If you do not immediately renounce this thing you call Mormonism we shall cease to send you one penny of support, which you know is your only means of livelihood; and furthermore, we shall disown you as a son and a brother!'"

"What is your answer, Brother Tarnawskyj? You are at the cross-roads. You have a grave decision to make."

"Oh, Brother Toronto, you know what my answer is: 'Dear loved ones, I cannot renounce the thing I hold dearest in life, the Gospel of Jesus Christ. I pray God that you, too, at some future time, through my efforts or the efforts of others, might also come into this Church.'"

From that day until this, so far as I know, he has not received one penny or one word from his people. He found himself in Czecho-Slovakia, a foreigner, unable to secure employment.

During these troublesome times the subtle political forces in Central Europe had operated to break down the Czecho-Slovakian Republic, so that Slovakia gained its freedom, as well as the little province of Ruthenia or Sub-Carpathian Russia, far to the east, hardly larger than the County of Salt Lake. Brother Tarnawskyj finally proposed: "Brother Toronto, many of my countrymen are out there in Ruthenia, a large group of Ukrainians among whom I could work. Since I am an educated man, I think I could get a position as an Inspector in the Ministry of Education. Can you help me get there? I want to become a self-sustaining citizen." "All right. We will help you get to Ruthenia, if you think you can succeed."

Upon his arrival in this new autonomous state, he filed his application for a position in the ministry. It went through the various hands and much red tape through which such things have to pass, and finally reached the Minister himself. Up to this point all went well. When it reached the Minister there was great delay. Finally our brother wrote me a letter and said: "Brother Toronto, I don't know what the trouble down here is. I am qualified for the position, and I have pulled every string I know. And I have prayed. The Lord God knows I am hungry. He knows I need a place to rest my head. I have tried to live the Gospel since I joined the Church. From the earnings on little jobs I have secured here and there I have set aside my tithing, and as soon as the mails go through I will send it on to you. Why, oh why does the Lord persecute me like this?" But in conclusion he added: (I wish I had the letter here to read to you:) "Perhaps it is all for the best."

A card came a few days later: "I am going to take a job out in the little town of Perecyn as a humble school teacher, where I can make enough to at least buy me a few crusts of bread."

He was employed there for three days, when that tiny state of Central Europe, Sub-Carpathian Russia, was drenched in blood by the Hungarian hordes which swept over it. Men, women and children by the hundreds were left dying in the streets. He and nine of his Ukrainian companions were routed out of bed at five o'clock one morning and thrown into prison. After twenty-four hours of intense suffering they were called before a military court consisting of one man in the uniform of a Hungarian officer. He had the sole right to say, "You live," or "You die." The ten men came before him. They were asked two questions: "How long have you been in this country?" and "What is your religious affiliation?"

Our brother led the others. To the first question he replied that he had been there so and so many weeks. "What is your religious affiliation?"

"I am a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Sometimes they call us 'Mormons.'"

"Mormons? Mormons? I have heard of you folks. I have read of you in the newspapers of Budapest. I hear your people have done some good in this world." A tense moment of hesitation and then, "You go free."

His nine companions came up after him. They were asked the identical questions. Being no more guilty than he himself, they were nevertheless condemned to death, and shot down in cold blood before the sun went down that day.

This brother finally got out of the country, and wrote me another letter. "Brother Toronto," he said, "I know the Lord does move in a mysterious way His wonders to perform. The Gospel is the most priceless thing I have in the world. I know the Lord has preserved my life, that I may be a beacon light to my fellow men. He has not only preserved my life, in the way I have described to you, but He has also protected me, for had I received the position of Inspector in the Ministry of Education I today would have been sitting in the concentration camps of Hungary, subjected to some of the most terrible torture known to humankind. I owe all I have to the Gospel of Jesus Christ."

Our faithful members will be protected, brothers and sisters. Were this the only incident I might be skeptical in thinking that it was perhaps a chance occurrence. But we have seen many cases of providential care and protection. Some of the Jewish members of our Church, despite the anti-Semitic programs, have been preserved, and we have seen it. The Gospel of Jesus Christ means everything to them.* Does it mean everything to you?

Go home tonight. Get down on your knees. Thank the Lord your God that you live in a "land choice above all others," in this land of freedom and happiness. And thank the Lord again that you have been privileged to accept the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Covenant anew that you will keep the commandments of the Lord as never before.

I know that God lives and it has been a testimony to me to live among these people who placed their trust in Him. I know that Joseph Smith is a prophet of the Lord, even as they know it. I give you this testimony in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I should like to thank the Brigham Young University Chorus for the wonderful music they have given us today. I think it may be truthfully said that there is no college in the United States, of any size, that has better music than the Brigham Young University.

The Brigham Young University Chorus sang, as the closing number, "Oft in Danger, Oft in Woe, Onward Christian, Onward Go," (Harry R. Shelly).

Elder Horace Raymond Pond, President of the Benson Stake, offered the benediction.

Conference adjourned until 10 o'clock Saturday morning, April 6th.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

The third session of the Conference was held Saturday morning, April 6, at 10 o'clock, with President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. presiding.

The music for this meeting was furnished by the Ricks College Choir, under the direction of John M. Anderson, Alexander Schrein-er was at the organ.

President Clark announced that the congregation and the Ricks College Choir would sing, as the opening selection, "Glory to God on High."

After the singing of this hymn, Elder Charles S. Hansen, President of the Gunnison Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The Ricks College Choir sang an anthem, "God So Loved The World," (Stainer).

PRESIDENT RUDGER CLAWSONOf the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

My brethren and sisters, I am wonderfully impressed by the attendance at the Conference this morning. The house is filled. Every seat, so far as I can see, is taken. We had a splendid day yesterday. There was only one regret, and that was that President Grant could not be with us. He has wisely decided to rest a few weeks in California since coming out of the hospital. We are all very happy indeed, I am sure, that we have President McKay with us and President Clark to direct the proceedings of this great Conference.

The meeting of the Church Welfare plan held this morning in the Assembly Hall was indeed most thrilling. The spirit of that work is taking hold of the Latter-day Saints. That it will be successful I think no one could be in doubt.

And now the Conference is in progress again. I want to commend these wonderful singers, the choir from Idaho, and the work that they are doing.

AN INSPIRING HYMN

I feel prompted this morning, brethren and sisters, to read a few lines of one of our sacred hymns taken from the Deseret Sunday School Union Song Book. The title of this song is "Count Your Blessings." This is a very opportune time to count our blessings, but of course we cannot mention all of them in a short sermon; that would be impossible, but we might read the hymn and point to several important blessings:

When upon life's billows you are tempest tossed,
When you are discouraged thinking all is lost,
Count your many blessings, name them one by one,
And it will surprise you what the Lord hath done.

Are you ever burdened with a load of care?
Does the cross seem heavy you are called to bear?
Count your many blessings ev'ry doubt will fly,
And you will be singing as the days go by.

When you look at others with their lands and gold,
Think that Christ has promised you His wealth untold,
Count your many blessings, money cannot buy,
Your reward in heaven, nor your home on high.

So, amid the conflict, whether great or small,
Do not be discouraged, God is over all;
Count your many blessings, angels will attend,
Help and comfort give you to your journey's end.

A wonderfully appropriate song. It is uplifting in spirit; it is well that we should take time now and then to ponder seriously upon our blessings.

WORKS OF THE ANCIENT PROPHETS

Truly, in the time of the Prophets of old it was a day of inspiration, revelation and miracles. In the days of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and of Moses, Isaiah, Ezekiel, Elijah and Elisha, the prophets, surely that was a day of miracles. Wonderful works were performed in those early ages. If I mistake not, Amos, the Prophet, spoke of this matter and said that the Lord doeth nothing save He first reveal it to His servants the prophets. Marvelous things happened in those ancient times. The prophets wrote and spoke as they were moved upon by the Holy Ghost. And he who speaks by the power of the Holy Ghost is a revelator.

As in ancient times so it was in the Meridian of Time when the Son of God was upon the earth. It was a day of inspiration, revelation and miracles, a day when there were Apostles and Prophets upon the earth, High Priests, Seventies and Elders and the lesser Priesthood. Great things were accomplished and the work of God prospered.

BLESSINGS OF THE LATTER DAYS

And so now in our day it is much the same. After eighteen hundred years the silence was broken and the voice of inspiration, revelation and miracles was heard upon the earth and the Spirit of the Lord rests down upon the people. The initial step taken in the organization of the great work of the latter days was the visitation of God the Father and Jesus Christ, His Son, to the boy Joseph Smith, which was the most memorable event, most remarkable in some respects, of anything that has ever transpired upon this earth. The Father and the Son condescended to manifest themselves in person to Joseph Smith. One said, pointing to the other, "This is my Beloved Son, hear Him." The Son spoke in answer to the boy's prayer to know which of all the churches he should join. He was told to join none of them for they were lacking in divine authority. Prophets appeared and angels from heaven were sent down after that first great vision. They gave to man divine authority.

One of these visitors from the other world was John the Baptist who had lived upon the earth in the time of the Savior. He was now a mighty angel, a messenger from on high, and he came for an express purpose. It was not to satisfy the curiosity of Joseph Smith, the young man, for he had now grown to be a young man, but he came on an important mission under the direction of Peter, James, and John, and conferred upon Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery the Aaronic Priesthood, or the lesser Priesthood, as it is sometimes called—the Priesthood of Priests, Teachers, and Deacons.

And then, later on, Peter, James, and John came down from heaven. They appeared as mighty angels, no doubt, but they had their mission and that was to confer further authority upon these, the servants of the Lord, and Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery were ordained Apostles of the Lord Jesus Christ. Thus was divine authority restored to the earth in these latter days, and those who were exercising authority that was not from heaven were under condemnation of the Lord, and especially when they knew that they were without divine authority.

And so, brethren and sisters, I testify that this matter of divine authority is of tremendous importance, and that the success of this work so far has been accomplished under divine authority and could not have been realized in any other way. It is one of the foundation principles of the Gospel.

THE WORK IN THE TEMPLES

And that was not all. Let me call your attention to another superior blessing, a blessing that is always to be found among the people of God, the true worshippers of the meek and lowly Nazarene, and that is the blessing of the Temple of the Lord. Wherever the people of God are found, there you will find also a Temple, or House of the Lord, where He can come and dispense blessings to His people, blessings that cannot be measured in value by money, but are the free gift of God. The blessings of the Temple are so great that we can hardly comprehend their importance and value. People are free to donate when they go to the Temple for these blessings—the blessings of the endowment, the sealing blessings at the altar. Husband and wife may be sealed together for time and all eternity. I am sure that none of us can comprehend the extent and power and importance of these blessings that are dispensed from the Temple. The rich are entitled to them, if they are worthy; the poor can have them also if they are worthy. Certainly we should count our blessings. We should remember that every blessing we receive is from the Lord.

MISSIONARY SERVICE

Let me mention briefly the missionary work. I want to say to you, brethren and sisters, that there is nothing like it in all the world. The missionaries of the Christian churches, so-called, are sent to preach the gospel to the heathens. Our special duty at the present time is not to carry the Gospel to the heathens but to preach the Gospel and offer its blessings to those who are considered civilized far above the heathens. It is a wonderful movement wherein the young men of Zion may be called into service and is a part of the blessings of the Latter-day Saints. They are set apart under divine authority to preach this Gospel, to baptize and give the Holy Ghost. Young women are also sent out as missionaries to preach the Gospel.

And so, I think I may safely say that this is a day of inspiration, of revelation and miracles. If all the miracles that have been and are being performed by this people were written into a book it would be a very, very large volume. Many who were sick have been healed, and many have been delivered from accidents and trouble and anxiety through our missionary cause.

That is about as far as I am entitled to go this morning in mentioning these important matters—the blessings of revelation, of inspiration, of divine authority, Temple work and Missionary work. There is just about enough there to take our whole attention throughout life, and yet there are many other desirable and important blessings in the hands of the Lord which He will give to His faithful people. The Lord is willing to pour out these blessings upon the people just as fast as the people make themselves worthy to receive them.

THE SEALED PORTION OF THE BOOK OF MORMON

I am wondering if you will permit me to say this closing word. I am wondering about the sealed portion of the record appertaining to the Book of Mormon. When will it come to the people of the Church? I am of the opinion that if we were perfectly prepared and followed carefully the revelations and instructions we have already received in the Church possibly that sealed portion could be brought to the people through faith and good works.

My brethren and sisters, I pray God in heaven to bless you and help you and help us all to serve Him in righteousness. I humbly ask this in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ANTOINE R. IVINS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

It is a very great inspiration, my brethren and sisters, to stand in this position and look into the faces of so many wonderful people, but it gives one a great sense of responsibility to stand in an important position of leadership at the head of this wonderful group of people. It is indeed a responsible position.

A DESIRE TO BE HELPFUL

I pray constantly as I look around upon you and as I minister with the Seventies of the Church and the Church at large, that God will inspire every word that I utter and everything that I do. My one desire is that in all these things I might please Him and help you. And if He will inspire me, with your aid, on this occasion to say just one little thing that may be helpful to you I shall be infinitely happy. One wonders what that may be, and it is very difficult at times to make a choice among the many things that might be said.

I am happy for the membership I have in the Church and for the fact that God has made it possible for me to help in this great work. When I was a young man I wondered how I would respond if I were asked to fill a mission, if I were asked to do this, or that, or the other responsible thing in the Church, and I still wonder whether I am going to be able to render the type of service that I should to the end of my years, and only pray that I may.

THE WORD OF THE LORD

In the Doctrine and Covenants we are told in four or five sections, "the will of the Lord" as expressed through the Prophet Joseph Smith to certain of the men who were interested in this work in its inception in our dispensation. Several members wanted to know what they might do to their best advantage in this work, and the Lord spoke to each of them, "the thing which will be of the most worth unto you will be to declare repentance unto this people."

I would that I knew how to do that in a way that it might appeal to those who needed it most. The great difficulty is that as we stand before you we realize that we are talking to faithful people, and the message that we would deliver perhaps never reaches the ears that we would like it to strike. That makes it necessary for each one of you to constitute yourself a missionary to carry to your friends the message of this Conference.

We have men all around us who could well repent of their actions. Repentance is a thing that all of us need. I am no more immune than anybody else from the need of repentance, and I have that constantly confronting me in my consciousness, but to get that message over to the people we must depend upon you because we cannot make personal contact with all, and so we speak to the faithful members of the Church.

THE GOSPEL FOR BOTH RICH AND POOR

The Gospel of Jesus Christ is universal in its scope. There is no man or woman that it cannot benefit and bless, if only that man and woman will yield obedience to it. Christ gave His Twelve Apostles a charge to preach the Gospel to every creature, with the promise that those who would respond would be saved. We have been doing that all these generations; that is, we have been preaching the Gospel to the people. Many of them have never heard it, however. The other day, in my hearing, a returned missionary made a remark which ran something like this: Since the institution of the Welfare work we have had to change our methods. The question was asked, in what respect?

"Well," he said, "we are going to a better type of people now than we ever did before in our Missions. We find that the Welfare work makes such an appeal to a certain class of people that our ranks would be flooded with those who desire to be benefitted by that factor rather than any other if we would let them in. That field being closed to us we have had to preach to people of a little better standing, who are not quite so poor."

Now Christ, when John the Baptist sent to ask Him if He was really the Christ, said: "Take back to John the message that the blind see, the lame walk, the sick are healed, and the Gospel is preached to the poor." I wonder if in that day it was only the rich and the elite that felt like they were members of the Church of God, and that the preaching of the Gospel to the poor was a novelty in the time of Christ. It may be that that was what brought forth that remark. However, in our age we have become accustomed to the fact that the rank and file of our converts are likely to come out of the ranks of the poor.

This missionary was talking to one of the Twelve, who said: "If they had followed those tactics in my day I would never have come into the Church, for I have known what it means to be hungry."

We must teach the poor always the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and in all the missionary fields in which it has been my experience to travel that has been customary. But I often wonder if there is not a field among the upper class people to which we might devote our attention with profit. I believe that in all the time I have been connected with the Mexican people there has never been a conscious effort to take the Gospel to what might be there called the better class of people. When the Gospel was taken to people in Hawaii it was so popular among them that the very rulers of that country accepted it. There is there little distinction between rich and poor, all mingling freely together, but there were kings and queens among them. It has been my pleasure to see a man who had been a chamberlain to the king act at the door as a Deacon in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and become one of the Elders in the Church.

So I wonder if there is not a field that we might look into among that class of people.

The misuse of riches is the only curse that comes from the possession of ample means, and there must be many fine people among the rich, many of them are our neighbors, but we pay little attention to them. They are all around us.

OUR RESPONSIBILITY TOWARDS OUR NEIGHBORS

One day I said to a friend of mine, speaking of a neighbor who had lived across the hall from my wife and me for quite a while, expressing sympathy for him in the passing of his wife, "That friend of ours is a fine man and his wife was a fine woman."

He said: "Yes, I would like to see somebody make an effort to get him into the Church, but you know I am so close to him that I dare not try."

I wonder if that might not be the best opportunity. My wife and I lived across the hall from them, and one day the woman became rather ill, more ill than usual, she was always afflicted, and to our great surprise we learned that she had asked to be prayed for in the Temple. That was faith; though she was not a member of the Church and though her husband was not, she had faith that there might be virtue in a prayer for her uttered in our Temple.

There are many people like that, without any doubt, all around us, and the Gospel is for them, and if we do not take the message to them I wonder whose fault it will be if they do not accept it. It is a universal Gospel that we have, and it is a universal responsibility that rests upon our shoulders to teach the Truth. We have heard during this Conference how it appeals to different nationalities, all the way from Czecho-Slovakia through Europe and into our country, and if we cared to, Brother Hardy and some of the others and I could tell you how it goes on down in Polynesia, clear down to the Antipodes. It makes of us all a common people, and if we could so introduce it to these nations as to make its adoption general and its principles apply in the lives of men, these struggles that we are confronted with now in actuality would not exist.

CHRISTIAN PRINCIPLES NOT APPLIED IN THE WORLD

It was once my privilege to read an interview given by a prominent Jewish rabbi in Great Britain. He was asked what his reaction to Christianity was? He said it had been the greatest difficulty that the Jews had had to meet, and that it had been a failure in the world, that the principles of Christ had never been adopted and applied.

I wonder if there ever has been an honest effort on the part of so-called Christian nations to apply the principles of the Christ. Did you ever hear of a peace treaty being offered to a vanquished people that had as its main purpose the rehabilitation of the vanquished? I think in all struggles that we have entered into the principles of the Christ have not been dominant, though some of these conflicts have been carried forth in the name of Christ. But greed and avarice and many such motives were back of them. If the time ever comes that the principles of Christianity can be applied to the lives of men peace will be brought about upon the earth.

My wish would be that though we are a small people in the world we might eventually exercise such an influence as to spread this heaven, the Gospel of Jesus Christ, throughout the whole world to such an extent that peace may some day prevail. We have faith in that thing. We have faith that perhaps through the instrumentality of this government of which we are a part we may be able to reach those ends, and I pray that we may sense our responsibility to the nations, and above all to the Church, that we may realize the significance of the charge which Christ has given to us to preach the Gospel to every creature so that he and she may be left without excuse, and not only be left without excuse, but be given the wonderful opportunities of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, I ask in His name, Amen.

ELDER JOSEPH E. EVANSFormer President of the French Mission*

My brethren and sisters: What is now the French Mission was one of the earliest fields for missionary work in the Church. So much of commendation could be said of that Mission that it is difficult to know what to say in the few minutes allotted. At the end of last October when we came away from France, Elder Gaston Chappuis, of Salt Lake City, was left in charge of the French Mission. He had come to Paris on his second mission about two days before war was declared. He is a native of Switzerland, a second-generation member. And so is his wife, who was born in Belgium. They are well trained and qualified to do their work. Together they are publishing the Mission's monthly magazine, translating and mailing out lessons to the Branches in Belgium, French Switzerland and France, and generally endeavoring to encourage the members in their faith and to stimulate activity and keep the Mission organization intact.

Notwithstanding the inroads of war and these times of trial and trouble, our members are holding fast to that better life to which they have dedicated themselves. In spite of popular misconceptions concerning Mormonism, our members have the moral support of multitudes of friends. Although their problems are extremely difficult they are never insoluble, because in an effort to harmonize their lives with God's teachings, they gain a renewed sense of values and are blessed with wisdom and great courage. Their experiences in the Church have taught them to think clearly and for themselves. Nothing else has ever offered them the same opportunity for intellectual enrichment and spiritual happiness. Fortunately they are living in countries where up to now their churches have not been destroyed and where the word of God is not forbidden. That is true in Belgium, Switzerland and France.

A week ago I received a heart-warming letter from the President of the Belgian District, who is a native of Liège, Belgium. Twenty-five years ago—during the first world war—his father shepherded our Church members and with God's protecting care brought them through the severe trials of that conflict. Today this son is following in his father's footsteps, while three of his brothers, all active members of the Church, are in the Belgian army. He is an intelligent, wide-awake leader. On three occasions he has been decorated by the King of Belgium. His work is outstanding, as the work of so many of our members over there is. In his letter he says that meetings are being held in all Branches in Belgium, and that a District Conference is being planned for May. Even though income has shrunk and living costs have mounted, the members of one of the Branches in this District are slowly accumulating a fund to be used for the purchase of a site for a meeting house. And so, amid the hideous discords of war and at a time when they are tortured in spirit, these people are giving their time and energies to maintaining the work of the Church, which is no mean achievement. Their faith and devotion have proved an inspiration to me. The influence of our Church throughout the French Mission is impossible to calculate. Everywhere it exerts a powerful force for building better men, for regenerating mankind. Its strict adherence to the high standards set by the Savior makes its stupendous progress no accident.

For more than a century the Church has made an earnest effort to spread the Gospel in Europe, but never, I believe, with more determined zeal than within the past few years. At least that is so in Belgium, France and Switzerland, although the apparent results achieved may not compare too favorably with those of other European Missions. I am reminded of the nine tons of ore necessary to produce one gram of radium. But when produced that one gram of radium is worth $25,000! The analogy is not perfect, but it does appear to me that it takes a great deal of work and effort to "extract," as it were, one precious soul from the world. The results are perhaps at this moment obscured by the impact of war. What has gone on over there during the past two years is without parallel in history, and it is occasion for marvel that we have accomplished as much as we have under such great handicaps.

Our missionaries have given good account of the stewardship intrusted to them, despite expressions of intense disappointment and a feeling that their efforts culminated in frustration because of the war. I am sure that before God their work has not come amiss. To their everlasting credit it should be said that during the never-to-be-forgotten complex happenings of last September and October they were strong and of good courage. President Toronto of the Czech Mission spoke of his missionaries as being the best young men to walk the earth. I ate and slept with mine, walked and talked with them, shared their successes and disappointments, and at the risk of making a comparison I should like to say they were even better than President Toronto's missionaries.

In Belgium, France and Switzerland, comparative freedom has been vouchsafed to our missionaries to promulgate the principles of the Gospel. Effort has been made to correlate their work with conditions as we found them, with emphasis on the importance of learning to speak the French language correctly and fluently. I feel certain that such preparation presages greater success. Everywhere we have found a friendly spirit of inquiry. Never have we felt that our obligation to the honest investigator was discharged simply by leaving Mormon literature with him. We have sought to persuade him to employ critical reasoning and serious thought to the Gospel, for in it we are confident he will find the only true answer to his problems and aspirations, as well as those inner satisfactions that are deeper and more enduring than anything else in life, and equally as well also, opportunities for furthering well-being and happiness.

Missionaries to Europe obtain an international interest and point of view, particularly in the cultural affairs of life. They acquire a broad range of facts on which to formulate and base sound judgments. Mormon missionaries generally, in my opinion, influence the spiritual life of the world, because their efforts are instrumental in opening up to the communities in which they proselyte, new and fresh opportunities for serving God, for crystallizing hopes into action, for working out salvation.

Sister Evans and I have strong testimonies of the truth of the Gospel, testimonies which come from God. We shall never forget the golden memories of the French Mission, which become, as time passes, more and more pleasant, uplifting and inspirational. With all our hearts we want to respond to every call that may be made of us and if and when conditions warrant to return to complete our missions.

May the Lord bless and prosper this work throughout the world is my prayer, and I ask it humbly in the name of His Son Jesus Christ, Amen.

An athem, "O Savior of the World," (Goss), was sung by the Ricks College Choir.

ELDER ALBERT E. BOWEN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I want to talk to you today about the abundant life. The expression belongs to the sayings of Jesus. I quote him.

THE SAVIOR'S WORDS

I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture.

The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. (John 10:9-10.)

THE MEANING CHANGED

That fine phrase, coined and employed by the Master, has in recent times been so violently wrenched from the noble setting in which He put it and has been made to assume a significance so widely variant from the one He gave it that, having regard to its original sense, one now shrinks from using it at all.

Without, I believe, the customary acknowledgement of its origin, it has been dragged down from its high spiritual plane to the ordinary level of every day materialism. More often than not now-a-days "the abundant life" is made the synonym for a full stomach, or a modernized home, or coveted apparel, or a new model automobile. And these mere things are held up to view as if they constituted the goal of ultimate desire, which, is symptomatic of present day measures of value.

A HIGHER INTERPRETATION

But it is abundantly clear that that is not at all what was in the mind of Jesus when He used the expression. It follows immediately upon His declaration that it was by Him that man shall be saved. Salvation meant to Him something far different than the mere physical comfort or even preservation of the mortal body, or the gratification of the physical senses, or the invention of new excitements to relieve us of our artificially created boredom.

He was always concerned with eternal spiritual values, never with mere things, as His utterances so fully show. When He talked about life He always embraced within His meaning something far transcending the satisfying powers of mere things.

PARABLE OF THE RICH MAN

Let us take an example:

And He said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

And He spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully:

And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?

And he said, This will I do: I will put down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods.

And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee; then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?

So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.

And He said unto His disciples, Therefore, I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat; neither for the body, what ye shall put on.

The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment. (Luke 12:15-23.)

There you have it crystal clear. "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." And "The life is more than meat and the body is more than raiment."

CARE OF THE BODY ESSENTIAL

Now I would not have you suppose that I am trying to say to you that your physical needs may be ignored or even neglected. The body is the physical instrumentality through which we work in this physical world. It requires physical food and material shelter to perpetuate it in being. Its perpetuation is essential to the accomplishment of the purposes of this earth life.

Within limits the meeting of the requirements of the physical body is essential to the successful spiritual and mental progress of mortal man. This we have always recognized. But when we with the single purpose of amassing to ourselves a multiplication of things with which to augment our individual power, selfishly try to gather to ourselves alone, to the exclusion of our fellow men, then we are losing our sense of proportion and are exalting the incidentals of life over the essence of life itself.

Perhaps between the material and the spiritual, properly coordinated, there is no sharp line of separation, but the material must always be servant of the spiritual, its proper sovereign.

PRESIDENT YOUNG'S PRACTICAL TEACHING

President Brigham Young gave us some sound teaching in this respect. Said he:

Our preaching to you from Sabbath to Sabbath, sending the Gospel to the nations, gathering the people, opening farms, making needed improvements, and building cities, all pertain to salvation. The Gospel is designed to gather a people that will be of one heart and of one mind. Let every individual in this city feel the same interest for the public good as he does for his own, and you will at once see this community still more prosperous, and still more rapidly increasing in wealth, influence, and power. But where each one seeks to benefit himself or herself alone, and does not cherish a feeling for the prosperity and benefit of the whole, that people will be disorderly, unhappy, and poverty-stricken, and distress, animosity and strife will reign.

Efforts to accumulate property in the correct channel are far from being an injury to any community, on the contrary they are highly beneficial, provided individuals, with all that they have, always hold themselves in readiness to advance the interests of the Kingdom of God on the earth. Let every man and woman be industrious, prudent, and economical in their acts and feelings, and while gathering to themselves, let each one strive to identify his or her interests with the interests of this community with those of their neighbor and neighborhood, let them seek their happiness and welfare in that of all, and we will be blessed and prospered. (Journal of Discourses, Vol. 3, page 330.)

ULTIMATE PURPOSE OF LIFE

Mortality is not the ultimate destiny of man. The things essential to mortal life are in life and of life, but they are not life itself; they are mere incidentals. Life itself has some other purpose than feeding and clothing and sheltering the body. It is the realization of that purpose that Jesus was concerned about. Therein is to be found the abundant life.

To the inquiring rich young man He said, "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." (Matt. 19:17)

This seems to say that moving, animated, sentient human beings, howsoever well fed or clothed or sheltered, or entertained or amused have not even seen life, or tasted of it, or entered into it, unless they have brought themselves into a rational understanding of its ultimate purpose. Enlarging upon His terse answer to the young man Jesus said:

Thou shalt do no murder. Thou shalt not commit adultery. Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not bear false witness.

Honor thy father and thy mother: and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

You will notice that here again the woof of the life that He has in mind consists in those soul qualities which when woven into the warp of a man lift him high above the level of gross materialism into the rarefied atmosphere of the spirit.

Jesus was concerned about preparing men to live the spiritual law and to fit them for life in His kingdom where that law shall reign. There is the abode of those who attain the fulness of the abundant life. To that end the burden of His teaching was that men should keep the commandments. He spent much of His time training disciples to carry on the teaching after He himself should be gone. He told them to go out and teach all men everywhere. That was the commission. The promise was that they who believed should be saved. There is no promise to any other.

ACCEPTANCE OF GOSPEL TEACHINGS NECESSARY

It is true that certain things were to be done by those who believed. But He knew that belief must precede the doing of them. He knew, too, that they would surely follow from sincere belief, hence the preeminent importance of belief. It is the crying need of the world today. If men would but believe and translate their belief into living practices, how different a place to live in this earth would be.

The commandments emanated from Jesus himself. Before it could be expected that men would accept them, they must accept Him. Thus He became the central figure about which all the teachings revolved.

To the multitude who crowded about Him the day after He had fed them He said:

Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves and were filled.

Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth to everlasting life, which the Son of Man shall give unto you.

They reminded Him that their fathers in the desert were fed by manna from heaven and demanded of Him that He shew them His works that they might believe. He in turn reminded them that their fathers who had eaten manna in the wilderness, were all dead. Then He said:

Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life.

I am that bread of life.

This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof and not die.

From that time—says the record pathetically—many of His disciples went back, and walked no more with Him.

If you will search the record you will find that at no time did He make any promise of ease, or comfort, or freedom from distress or from sorrow or suffering, or of exemption from privation or want or sacrifice. None of these was an element in the abundant life. All of them He endured Himself.

THE TEMPTER OVERCOME

Preparatory to entering upon His ministry He went into the desert alone. When He was weakened from long vigils and fasting the tempter bade Him, in proof of His Sonship, to command that the stones be turned into bread, that His hunger might be appeased. Resisting this He was shown from the top of a high mountain all the kingdoms of the world which, with all the glory of them, were offered Him if He would but bow in worship to the Tempter. Rising to heights befitting the majesty of the Son of God He issued the stern command, "Get thee hence Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve." At the same time He promulgated that other profound truth. "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." He could have fed His hunger, and accepted the dominion of the kingdoms of the world, and their glory, and escaped Golgotha. His refusal led straight to that dolorous hill and the apparent end of it all. But Golgotha, not bread or dominion or glory, was the way of the abundant life. It brought Him swiftly to the dawn of that triumphant morning at the end of the Sabbath on the first day of the week when Mary Magdalene and the other Mary came to the sepulchre and were greeted by the angel who, seated on the stone at the door said:

Fear not ye; for I know that ye seek Jesus which was crucified.
He is not here; for He is risen, as He said. Come see the place where the Lord lay.
And go quickly and tell His disciples that He is risen from the dead; and behold, He goeth before you into Galilee; there ye shall see Him.

Thus came the great crowning achievement of His life.

You will have observed that I am making no argument for the authenticity of the words of Jesus nor of the records which preserve them. I accept them, which is what all believing Christians must do. Very persuasive arguments could be and have been made, but neither the limits of time nor the nature of the occasion admit of them here. We accept Jesus as the Son of God, the Author of our being and our ultimate Savior.

ETERNAL LIFE THE GREATEST PRIZE

To that faith we cling because it concerns life itself which is man's most cherished possession—the thing which he prizes above all else. Howsoever many things a man may have gathered about him, he normally would give all of them when life is threatened if by the exchange he could procure an extension of it. Life he soon comes to sense is all there is of him. Without that he is but a lump of clay, and all these other things without meaning and useless. In very truth the projection of it beyond the grave, the assuring it there of endless duration—eternal life—is the greatest gift of God to man.

The alternative is oblivion. The sinking with death into nothingness—the end. Extinction. The irremediable severance of all the fond associations of a life time. The abrupt cutting off and non-revivable termination, so far as concerns the individual, of all the fine intelligence and acquisitions of knowledge born of a lifetime of industry, toil and struggle and yearning and soul-striving. The smothering in the black darkness of unending night of all the hopes and aspirations which have guided man in his struggle upward to higher planes. The withering up by the blight of death of the qualities of kindliness, gentleness, forbearance, mercy, tenderness and love which have grown and flowered in him through his practice of those virtues in association with his fellows.

No one, I suspect, likes to contemplate for himself so uninviting and uninspiring and wasteful an exit from life. Rather do we turn to the bright hope held out to us in the promise of Jesus:

There is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children for the Kingdom of God's sake, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting.

In the way to that goal lies the abundant life. I pray God we may all attain it, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

Last night I reported to President Grant by telephone the first day of the Conference. He was delighted, of course, to know that we had had such a wonderful time together, and was keenly desirous that we should continue to enjoy the blessings of the Lord.

EXPLANATION OF MANNER OF VOTING

We shall now present for your sustaining vote the General Authorities, and certain Church-wide groups of officers, of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

For the benefit of the strangers who may be meeting here with us or listening on the air, a few words of explanation may be given.

To speak in terms of political science, this assembly here today, this Annual Conference, of the Priesthood and membership of the Church will, for the purpose of sustaining the Authorities of the Church, act as a constituent assembly. Every General Authority of the Church, as well as other Church officers, comes before such an assembly twice each year.

Again speaking in terms of political science, in the Church the nominating power rests in a group, the General Authorities, but the sustaining or electing power rests in the body of the Church, which under no circumstances nominates officers, the function of the Church body being solely to sustain or to elect. In fact, as will be seen, the General Authority or other officer is proposed to the body of the Church for their sustaining vote.

The sole function of this constituent assembly today, is, as already stated, to accept or reject the General Authority or other officers proposed to them. This assembly may not propose others to be voted upon.

Saturday, April 6

Furthermore, the actual procedure for voting is normally by the uplifted hand of those present. No electioneering, no speech-making, no stating of objections, no proposing of candidates, no vocal demonstration of any kind is in order. Anyone seeking to do any of these things would not only be out of order as a matter of procedure, but would be likewise breaking the peace of the State by interrupting and disturbing a public assembly, would be subject to arrest as a disturber of the peace, and if necessary, would have to be so dealt with as a matter of public order. This assembly might be called the "voting booth" of the Church. This will be clear to all our listeners.

It is obvious that only members of the Church are entitled to vote, and an excommunicant is not a member.

Anyone not desiring to sustain anyone proposed may not only indicate his dissent here but he may, if he wishes, present his objections to the proper authority of the Church, and will be given an appropriate hearing. This is the rule and order of the Church.

CHURCH OFFICES NOT SOUGHT

The result of this system is that there has never been any politics in the Church. Church-men do not seek Church office. The best evidence that a man is unfit for Church office is the fact that he wants it.

The principle behind the system is set forth in the fifth of the Articles of Faith,—the equivalent of the creed of other churches. It reads—

We believe that a man must be called of God, by prophecy, and by the laying on of hands, by those who are in authority to preach the Gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof.

REVELATIONS REGARDING THE PRESIDENT OF THE CHURCH

That the matter may be better understood, it should be said that the President of the Church is "the Presiding High Priest over the High Priesthood of the Church."

The revealed rule on this is as follows:

Then comes the High Priesthood which is the greatest of all.

Wherefore, it must needs be that one be appointed of the High Priesthood to preside over the Priesthood, and he shall be called President of the High Priesthood of the Church;

Or in other words, the Presiding High Priest over the High Priesthood of the Church. (Doctrine and Covenants 107:64-66.)

Again:

The President of the Church...is appointed by revelation and acknowledged in his administration by the voice of the Church. (Doctrine and Covenants 102:9.)

As to the duties and functions of the President of the Church, the revealed rule provides:

And again, the duty of the President of the office of the High Priesthood is to preside over the whole Church, and to be like unto Moses—

Behold, here is wisdom; yea, to be a seer, a revelator, a translator, and a prophet, having all the gifts of God which he bestows upon the head of the Church. (Doctrine and Covenants 107:91, 92.)

DUTIES OF THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

To the First Presidency in the Prophet Joseph's time, the Lord said:

And now, verily I say unto you, I give unto you a commandment that you continue in the ministry and presidency. * * *

And set in order the churches, and study and learn, and become acquainted with all good books, and with languages, tongues, and people.

And this shall be your business and mission in all your lives, to preside in council, and set in order all the affairs of this Church and Kingdom. (Doctrine and Covenants 90:12, 15, 16.)

Other pertinent revealed rules regarding the presiding authority of the Church are:

Of the Melchizedek Priesthood, three Presiding High Priests, chosen by the body, appointed and ordained to that office, and upheld by the confidence, faith, and prayer of the Church, form a quorum of the Presidency of the Church. * * *

The Twelve are a Traveling Presiding High Council, to officiate in the name of the Lord, under the direction of the Presidency of the Church, agreeable to the institution of heaven; to build up the Church, and regulate all the affairs of the same in all nations, first unto the Gentiles and secondly unto the Jews. * * *

The Presidency of the High Priesthood, after the order of Melchizedek, have a right to officiate in all the offices in the Church. (Doctrine and Covenants 107:22, 33, 39.)

Speaking to the Presidency in 1832 the Lord said:

Unto whom I have given the keys of the Kingdom, which belong always unto the Presidency of the High Priesthood. (Doctrine and Covenants 81:2.)

RESPONSIBILITY IN VOTING

With this view of the rights, powers, and duties of the President of the High Priesthood of the Church, and also of the First Presidency, it is clear that the sustaining vote by the people is not, and is not to be regarded as, a mere matter of form, but on the contrary a matter of the last gravity. Every person is entitled to indicate whether or not he or she can sustain the officer proposed. While all the Church members vote and sustain the officer, yet the sustaining Priesthood power comes from the Priesthood itself. Your voting will result in the Church body's acknowledging the administration of the man appointed by revelation as the Presiding High Priest over the High Priesthood of the Church.

You here today will by your vote also sustain those who, in the due order of the Church, labor with and under the President's authorized direction.

It is therefore the high and solemn duty of the Priesthood of the Church to gather to this constituent assembly, this Conference of the Church, and to cast their sustaining vote for him who is appointed the Presiding High Priest, the President of the Church, and for those under him whose names shall be presented. Those who come here thus to declare their acknowledging and sustaining, as the President of the High Priesthood and as the Presiding High Priest over the High Priesthood of the Church, him whom God has called to this office, deserve the blessing they will thereby receive. They are to be commended for their attendance here today. It is to be hoped they will attend all future assemblies of this sort.

President Clark then presented for the vote of the Conference the General Authorities and General Officers of the Church, also the General Auxiliary Officers, as follows:

At the conclusion of the foregoing presentation and voting, President Clark announced that the voting, so far as he could observe, was unanimous in the affirmative. His attention was called, however, to one vote in the negative on the proposition to sustain the First Presidency.*

At the suggestion of President Clark, the congregation arose and sang the hymn, "We Thank Thee, O God for a Prophet."

ELDER M. DOUGLAS WOOD

Former President of the West German Mission

I am filled with appreciation this morning to be with you again in this wonderful Conference session. In my heart there is a prayer of gratitude to my Father in heaven; first, for the privilege of membership in this wonderful Church; next, a prayer for our homes here in this wonderful land, a land that our Father in heaven Himself has told us is choice above all others; and third, there is in my heart a prayer for those thirty thousand members of the Church in Europe who, at this time, without the missionaries and in their greatest trials,—need our faith and prayers. I feel grateful for the privilege of laboring among those fine German Saints whom we all learned to love. It was also a privilege to be able to associate with those noble missionaries in the West German Mission. I am sure that these Elders will never forget their many experiences in that country, and also in getting out of it. When times are hard you find that you are not very strong yourself and you learn to rely almost entirely upon the Lord to guide you.

If the German Missions had to be closed, if the world had to be the scene of so much trouble and care, I feel that it was indeed a privilege to be chosen to be there at that time, and to try to lighten the burdens of the Saints. Because the time is short I shall confine my talk to relating a few missionary experiences during the evacuation of the country prior to the Polish war.

On Friday, the 25th of August, my wife and I were traveling in the company of Elder Joseph Fielding Smith and Sister Smith in Northern Germany, after coming into the country from Denmark. Friday morning we received a telegram from the First Presidency, which was relayed from our office in Frankfurt to Hanover, telling us that we should immediately evacuate Germany. We were told to take our missionaries and go either to Holland or to Denmark. We were then six hours from our Mission headquarters.

I said to Brother Smith: "My wife and I should be in Frankfurt. There are so many things to do. Things are beginning to happen so fast, you see here in Hanover the women are already driving the street cars, and I have never seen so much real excitement. I am afraid we must work fast, and we should be in Frankfurt."

Saturday, April 6Second Day

I went to the hotel clerk and told him to get me reservations on the plane to fly to Frankfurt. He looked at me and said: "Those reservations, I am sure, have been gone for some time. Frankfurt is on the main European line and all reservations on that line are reserved two weeks ahead. Now with this Polish trouble I am sure that you could not buy a ticket for any consideration."

I said: "Call them up anyway. Call the airport. We must have two reservations."

He scratched his head after he called and said, "There are two left."

I said: "That is all that we need, and thank you so much."

In an hour and twenty minutes we were in Frankfurt. We flew with the last airplane over that line of passenger service. The plane was taken off at Frankfurt and sent to the Polish front. As we flew over that beautiful country we could not help but admire the beauty of the scenery of the country below and we reflected what a wonderful thing the plane was when it carried people so rapidly, and what a shame to destroy property and life with it. At home we immediately sent telegrams to all our Elders telling them to pack their trunks and take them with them that night into Holland. We had called the Dutch consul for permission to enter Holland again and had received it. We decided on Holland as it was closer to most of our missionaries. We had 85 missionaries scattered from the Danish border on the north to Vienna on the south, which is quite a big territory. Things were getting exciting. The German people couldn't say much, but the feeling of unrest and impending trouble was everywhere present.

We had never imagined the excitement would be like it was. There was none of it present the previous year when we went out of the country. Everything was tightening up all over. We had always felt that it would not be such a job to evacuate the country, especially after the "fire drill" of a year ago. We figured that we could always use the public utilities, but everybody else figured the same thing at this time. It took a little time to get the telegrams off to our Elders. We had also informed them to telegraph the office, or telephone, as they left, so that we could check on all of them.

Friday afternoon and evening we sat in the office receiving no telegrams or telephone calls at all. We wondered if the missionaries had received our messages. We tried to telephone to a few of them in order to check up on the telegrams, but were unable to get anyone on the telephone. Everyone else had the same idea, and the telephone wires were clogged. We tried to send more telegrams and were told that temporarily all the chances for sending telegrams anywhere were closed.

Early that morning, (Saturday), one of the Elders called us by telephone from the Dutch border. He said: "President Wood, we have been here on the Dutch border for six hours and the Dutch will not let us in. We haven't a dime between us. What shall we do?" A person cannot leave Germany with any money because there is controlled currency there. The Dutch had given us permission to enter, but things had happened so fast that the consul in Frankfurt did not know of the new arrangements until we told him. The Dutch remembered the last war and the lack of food in their country, and they were determined to have no foreigners there at all.

I said, "Brother, if you will have faith, I will see that we get some money to you immediately."

We telegraphed money to those Elders, and within five minutes after we had done so the operator called us and said: "We will not be able to take any more money by telegraph; however, I think I can get this last through."

About that time a radio announcement was made by the government, that after Sunday night at midnight, August 27th, the German government would not guarantee anyone his destination on the German railways. I shall never forget our feelings at that time. We had no telegraph nor telephone facilities, and railways were not available to us. We were not able to contact our missionaries, and we knew that most of them would be heading toward Holland. We knew they would arrive there without enough money to buy tickets to Denmark, and we knew that time was against us, with the railroads all being used for troop transportation. If ever we knew that we could do nothing of ourselves we were sure of it then. One of the girls took out our Mission history and read how the missionaries during the last war got out of the country. One of the Elders was not able to get out during the war and a few of our missionaries had to crawl on their hands and knees and make their way out behind the Russian lines. We knew these things and we knew the intense feeling of the parents at home. We knew that each one of you was relying upon us to see that your son was safe. Conditions were so unsettled there. We had seen the treatment of the Jews and we felt that we must do all in our power to see that those missionaries were safe. We also knew that we would be helped. Every mother and father in America was praying for their missionary sons, and we knew that the Lord would help us if we did all we could.

About that time a big football player came into our office, a fine Idaho boy, who weighed over 200 pounds.

I said: "Brother, did you ever carry a message to Garcia?"

He said: "No, I didn't, but I'm willing to try."

I said: "Elder, we have 31 missionaries lost somewhere between here and the Dutch border. It will be your mission to find them and see that they get out."

He set out for the Dutch border with 500 marks and tickets for Denmark and for London. We had heard that a few might be able to get into Holland if they had tickets for London. That was soon changed. After four hours on the train he arrived at Cologne, which is about half way to the Dutch border. We had told him to follow his impressions entirely as we had no idea what towns these 31 Elders would be in. Cologne was not his destination, but he felt impressed to get off the train there. It is a very large station, and was then filled with thousands of people. The call to arms had been given that day, and there were thousands of people going to the Polish border. There were many, many students returning to England, and many people returning from vacations before the train service stopped. There were so many people in the station that to find anyone there would have been next to impossible. This Elder stepped into this station and whistled our missionary whistle—"Do What is Right, Let the Consequence Follow."

Down in one corner of that station was an Elder with an old couple who were also on a mission from America. They heard that call, and made their way safely to the train and were able to get into Holland with tickets for London. These three were stranded there. They couldn't call the office, as no more calls on telephones were accepted, and they had had nothing to eat all day.

At another border station going into Holland this Elder arrived, after picking up missionaries along the way. As he rode along on the train he felt impressed at other stations to get out and whistle our call. At some stations he felt no impression at all, so he did not get out. At the border he found eight missionaries who had been locked in the station house all night. They were indeed glad to see the missionary from the office with tickets for Denmark, and money. A border officer stepped up and asked him how much money he had. He told him 500 marks.

He said to the Elder: "Give me that money."

The missionary answered: "I will over my dead body. I was sent here to relieve these missionaries, and I will not give up the money." Just at that time a man in the other corner of the station was arrested for being a spy. Now a spy on a border is really something important at war-time, and he attracted everybody's attention. The moment the officer turned, the Elders stooped down and made their way out of the station and out to the train. By this time the trains had stopped running regularly. These missionaries got on to unscheduled trains, traveled for fifteen or twenty minutes, and then they would get out at the next station. There they would stand until they felt impressed to get on another train. They had to transfer seventeen times on a route that regularly requires no more than two or three transfers before reaching Denmark.

At another station three of our Elders were walking along the street. They were fortunate enough not to be locked up. A man came up to them and stated that he had seen them before, saying that he knew that they were Mormon missionaries. He said that he had been called to the Polish front and had 50 marks which he knew he would not need and asked if they could use this money. They were without a penny, so they took it. This amount paid their way back to the little town where they had come from the day before.

One of the Elders had received his allowance from home the day before. All the other Elders had used their surplus money to buy photographic equipment which could be taken out of the country. This young man went to town but felt so bad about everything he just couldn't spend that money, so he put it into a drawer and said for his landlady to give it to the poor Saints if he did not come back. He did come back, however. The train had a ten-minute wait, and he ran up to the dwelling, got that money, and it was just enough, within a few pennies for food, to pay their way to Copenhagen, Denmark.

We arrived in Denmark early Monday morning with 21 missionaries in our group. That morning we received a telegram from President Murdock saying 14 of our group had arrived in The Hague. We now had only 17 to worry about. About two o'clock that afternoon we received a telegram from the football player saying seventeen of them were arriving that night at 7:30.

My dear brothers and sisters, these things I have told you today are true stories of our experiences in getting out of the country. They are testimonies that I am sure will remain with these missionaries all their lives. Almost every one of our Elders could tell you a real faith-stirring story about his leaving Germany. We all arrived in Denmark with our hearts filled with gratitude and humility. One of our Elders was asked if he was a bit anxious about going home on a freighter and being led out of Denmark by a German pilot through the mines.

He said: "That is child's play after the things we have been through in getting out of Germany. I don't think after all the trouble the Lord went to there that He is going to let us down in the middle of the ocean."

I am grateful for this opportunity to bear you my testimony. I know that this is the true Church of God, that Jesus is the Christ, and that today Heber J. Grant is a prophet of our Father in heaven. I am happy to have had this opportunity of working in Germany among the German people. I am happy to have had the privilege of being there during those hard times. The Lord stood at our side and never once did we want or were we unable to meet the situations at hand with His help.

We were called to go to Sweden and assist in closing the Mission there. I shall never forget the sights there. We have preached the Gospel in Europe for over 100 years, and this is the first time that all the missionaries have left. We thought that after our experiences in Germany we did not have any more tears left, our hearts were so sorrowful that we thought there was no more room for grief. One does not have to understand a language to understand those things. Those poor Swedish Saints! About 150 of them gathered at the station to say "goodbye" to their missionaries. The wonderful trained chorus developed under the direction of Brother and Sister Larsen sang to the Saints there. They placed garlands of flowers on each missionary's neck and as the train pulled out, the Saints sang back to them, "God be with You Till we Meet Again." I just cannot tell you how we all felt.

Those Saints will carry on in Europe. I ask you to please remember them in your prayers at this time. Without missionaries and in their time of greatest trouble, they need our faith and love. May we be generous in our judgments and tolerant toward all God's children, here in safety, in luxury, in our homes in the Land of the Free, is my humble prayer, and I ask it in Jesus' name, Amen.

The Ricks College Choir sang an anthem, "And the Glory of the Lord," (Handel).

Elder Walter A. Jensen, President of the Lost River Stake, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock p. m.

SECOND DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

Saturday afternoon, April 6.

As the time approached for commencing this session of the Conference, a great body of people had assembled to worship the Lord, every seat and available space in the great Tabernacle auditorium and galleries being occupied.

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., called the meeting to order promptly at 2 o'clock, and announced that the Ricks College Choir, John M. Anderson, director, would furnish the music for this meeting. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ.

The congregation and the Ricks College Choir sang the hymn, "The Spirit of God Like a Fire is Burning."

Elder Arthur V. Watkins, President of the Sharon Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The Ricks College Choir sang "Send Out Thy Light," (Gounod).

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

When I announced the voting this morning on the First Presidency I announced one dissenting vote. I am now informed that that dissenting vote was cast by an excommunicant who had no right to vote, and therefore the voting was unanimous.

ELDER GEORGE ALBERT SMITHOf the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

I trust that I may enjoy the inspiration of the Almighty in what I may say this afternoon. My soul has been stirred during the meetings of this Conference. I have rejoiced at the remarks of my brethren, the sweet singing and the tones of the great organ.

In no other place in the world can you witness a sight such as we see on this Temple Block today. The weather has been delightful, the new vegetation is coming on, the flowers are in bloom and we have a rare garden of youth at the back of us in this choir loft.

I feel as I look into the faces of the men who have been forced to return from our foreign missions (due to the unwisdom of some of our Father's children in those lands) that I am glad they are at home. We have done a great deal of missionary work in Europe during the past one hundred years. I do not know whether the Lord has now decided to have us do more of our missionary work in other places where people have not yet had an opportunity to hear the Gospel. We have had thousands of missionaries in Europe and many people have had opportunity to hear the truth, as they have in the United States of America. Our Heavenly Father has said that He will not be mocked, and there will come a time when disaster will overtake the unrepentant sinner.

BELIEF IN A GOD OF MIRACLES NECESSARY

Some time ago I had a man ask me if the Latter-day Saints believed in Jesus Christ. I probably would have been shocked, but that was not the first time I have had that question asked. Even with the radio and our modern means of transportation, there are thousands of our Father's children in the world who do not know what we believe. They do not know that we worship the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the same Heavenly Father who preserved the Children of Israel in their flight from Egypt when Pharaoh's hosts were drowned in the sea. They do not know that we pray to the same God that was worshipped by Israel while they were traveling from Egypt to the promised land. He was a God of miracles. Feeding the Children of Israel with manna was a simple operation for Him to perform. In His own way He has supplied food for His children always. He provided food for the Latter-day Saints when they came to this then wilderness and has fed us ever since, many times miraculously.

We believe in the God who counseled the people, through Moses, and led them to their destination. Upon one occasion when Moses announced a policy some of the prominent men of the camp refused to conform to his advice and rebelled. They said: "We hold the Priesthood just the same as you do." They seemed not to realize that it was the Lord's advice they were ignoring and not Moses! But the result was that while they were still defiant the earth opened and they were swallowed up in its depths.

Another group of the same camp criticized Moses for what had occurred and a plague broke out among them and thousands of them died before it was stayed by the power of the Lord.

We believe in that God who not only teaches us what we should do, but permits destruction to come upon us when we violate His laws.

I am thinking as I stand here of the experience of the three Hebrew Children who passed through the fiery furnace and lived. That was a miracle wrought by the Lord in that day, as was the preservation of Daniel when he was cast into the den of hungry lions.

You remember also the experience of those who came to America from the tower of Babel at the time of the confusion of tongues. Some of them pleaded with the Lord that they might retain their own language and they brought it with them to this country under the direction of this same Heavenly Father; and later they, because of their failure to do what they should, lost their identity upon the land and were destroyed.

The same Heavenly Father directed Lehi to bring his people to this country and marvelously preserved them, giving them an instrument called the Liahona whereby they could tell which direction they were going, and it worked only when they kept the commandments of God. That is the way the inspiration of the Almighty works with you; it is when you keep His commandments and not otherwise. If we are worthy of it He never fails to give it to us.

THE LOVE OF GOD THE SAME IN ALL AGES

Think of the things that have happened in the world during past centuries. Loving all His children our Lord has tried to have His truth so disseminated that His children would accept it and, remarkable as it may seem, those who believed in the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob and obeyed Him have become the foremost nations of the world.

In the Meridian of Time His only Begotten Son in the flesh was born. He turned water into wine and performed other miracles. He was cruelly slain, but was resurrected, and demonstrated that he still had a body of flesh and bones. He partook of fish and honeycomb with His disciples and visited them repeatedly as a resurrected being. He gave His life, making it possible for all mankind to be raised from the dead.

America has been greatly blessed. I wonder if we appreciate how much the Lord has favored us. Our Heavenly Father told the Jaredites who came here from the Tower of Babel, and later told Lehi and his people that this was a land choice above all other lands, and if they kept His commandments they should prosper upon the land. Jesus of Nazareth came to visit the Western Hemisphere after His resurrection from the dead. He taught the people many truths and His teachings were so effective that for two hundred years they who dwelt upon this land were a righteous people.

And again, even in our day, the Savior of the world and His Father appeared to the youth Joseph Smith in their immortal glorified bodies and renewed to the world the knowledge of a personal God.

We accept what the Bible teaches with reference to God the Father and Jesus Christ, His Son, and what the Book of Mormon teaches with reference to the same Godhead. We believe that in our own time they have again appeared, so that all doubts as to their existence has been removed. We believe that the Father and the Son came after they had prepared the way for the organization of the Church of Jesus Christ here in America.

Just think of the coming of the Pilgrim fathers to this land, and how the Lord preserved them and made it possible for them to extend their power when the United States was born. Think of how He blessed and raised up the very men who prepared the Constitution of the United States.

All down through the ages this same kind Father has been working with His children and in this, the fulness of times, Jesus Christ our Lord came and directed the organization of this Church and said that it should be called the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The Church was organized in 1830 and began to grow rapidly. But the adversary sought to impede its progress by falsehood, mobbing, murdering, and driving its members repeatedly. Finally the Church built the City of Nauvoo, the largest then in the State of Illinois. The organization was completed; the Temple was built; Joseph the Prophet had finished his work and been martyred. The time had come for the people to cross the Plains and establish themselves in the Rocky Mountains. It was the Lord's way. They had finished their work back there. They were driven again, this time far from so-called civilization. Our Heavenly Father preserved them. They were fed quails even as Israel was fed manna. They were led by the same God that led Israel and began the civilized settlement of this western land under His guidance.

When they came into the valley and planted crops, crickets swarmed down to devour them. Starvation threatened the faithful outcasts, but the God of Israel intervened and sent the seagulls to destroy the crickets and the harvest was saved. The people had been preserved by a miracle.

The waters in these valleys have been increased unto the people as the necessities required to mature crops, and the community has acknowledged God as the source of the gift.

Missionaries have been sent to the four corners of the earth by this Church and they have proclaimed the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Many have not had training in the great universities of the world. Their education has been largely limited to the practical experiences of life, but they have had what is more potent in inspiring the human family, the companionship of the Holy Ghost.

THE ADVERSARY OPPOSES THE LEADERS OF GOD'S WORK

All down through the centuries that are past there have been those who have opposed the leaders appointed by the Lord. They defied Moses and were destroyed. They crucified Jesus of Nazareth, and disappeared from the world, while His name illumines the pages of all history. They cried out against Joseph Smith, the Prophet, and sought his death and succeeded in destroying his mortal life, but his name will go ringing down through the ages as a man who tried to keep the commandments of God and teach His Truth, while the names of his murderers are held in derision or have been blotted out as God said they would.

President Young had many annoyances and distresses come to him. The greatest pioneer leader the United States has seen was hated by misguided people because he led the Church when Joseph was martyred. Not only did he have the wisdom of man, but the inspiration of the Almighty. There were those who sought his life and would have taken it if they had had opportunity. He was charged with evil and there were those who persisted in following him and annoying him, and why? Because he was a servant of the Lord and all of the Presidents of this Church have been criticized by those who abused and hated them. The adversary of all righteousness is not satisfied to let the man who stands at the head of a great dispensation go unscathed. He works with men, not men who have unusual intelligence, but ordinary men, exceedingly ordinary men in most cases, and he puts evil into their hearts and into their minds.

Think of the way they abused President Joseph F. Smith. Our daily newspapers here at one time were full of scurrilous articles, falsehoods. He was charged with things that were absolutely untrue. Why? Because he was the representative of God upon the earth.

THE LORD'S WAYS ARE DIFFERENT FROM MAN'S

And so it has been down to our day. There are among us today some misguided men. I have no anger in my heart for them. I pity them because they do not know better. They are finding fault with the leadership of the Church, particularly the President of the Church. And I stand here to say that no President that we have had has been more loyal to the Gospel of Jesus Christ than President Heber J. Grant. No President that we have had has been more willing to give his all that the Truth might be known among the nations of the earth, and yet there are those who are influenced by the adversary of all righteousness, who would belittle him and destroy his influence. I say unto you that his name will continue to be held in honor as a servant of the living God, while those who traduce him and misrepresent him will disappear from the earth, and the Lord has said their sins will be visited upon their children unless they repent.

Today when I saw by uplifted hands of this great congregation the unanimous vote sustaining the President of the Church I was thrilled. You will see nothing like it in the world; no other organization functions as this does. Why? Because this is the Lord's Church. It is carried on in the Lord's way; it is different from the work of man. It is not our Church—it is the Church of Jesus Christ.

How beautiful it is to sit here in this great house, apart from the distresses that afflict mankind, and wait upon Him who is our Heavenly Father, the Father of our spirits. We come into His presence in this house that has been sanctified by the devotion of some of the greatest men and women who have ever lived, who have stood in this stand and proclaimed the Truth. The Church continues to grow and strengthen. The adversary will deceive some of those who are members of the Church. He has done it from the beginning. They have so far misinterpreted what our Heavenly Father desires that they array themselves not against His servants only but against the Lord Himself and thus impede the progress of His work, for which they will suffer the penalty.

SAFETY IN KEEPING GOD'S COMMANDMENTS

Today we have heard reports from the mission fields of the earth, mission fields that have been closed, because many of the people who live in those lands have refused to keep the commandments of God, and the adversary has put into their hearts to do the thing that has brought war into the world. Our own nation may not be free. The only hope for continued peace and prosperity in America will be if our people retain their senses. When I say our people I mean American men and women who live upon this land that God said should only be recognized as His favored land when people kept His commandments. God the Eternal Father is our King; He is our Law-giver. President Grant is but the humble instrument in His hands, but he is the instrument, humble though he may be, with power to tell us what to do, and it is well for those who desire a place in the Celestial Kingdom to follow his leadership of the Church. I want to say that just as long as our Heavenly Father has sustained the Presidents of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints since its organization, those who have followed their leadership have been blessed and those who have apostatized and transgressed the law have lost their opportunity and their privilege and in many cases it passed away never to return.

GRATITUDE FOR BLESSINGS

I stand here within a few hundred yards of where I was born. I have seen the towers of the Temple rise. I was here when this building was decorated with festoons of paper flowers by the people. I was here when the organ was completed. I have lived here in this city to see it grow from a village to one of the most notable cities in the world. And I want to say that every man and every woman who has lived here and has kept the commandments of God has had an assurance that this is our Father's work which bears the name of His Beloved Son.

And so today ought I not to be grateful, as I look at these fine young people and think of the opportunities that have come to them in our northern State, Idaho, and elsewhere, and realize that there are thousands of others who are being similarly trained and blessed? My heart is filled with gratitude to God that I was born in this age, that my loved ones have had opportunity to partake of these blessings that come only from the Father of us all, and they will be eternal if we will be faithful.

I pray that the Spirit of the Lord may be in your hearts and in your homes. Attend to your prayers. Pray to Him who is the Author of your being. Do not be misled by the sophistries of men and the foolishness of those that imagine things that are vain, but know this, that it is your privilege, it is within your power to know not only today and tomorrow, but every day, that God is God, and that Jesus is the Christ, that Joseph was a prophet, and that the leader of this Church is the representative of God upon the earth. You will know that only when you are keeping the commandments of our Heavenly Father.

Saturday, April 6

Now let us unite together always, as we have, in prayer and thanksgiving here today. Let us appreciate the blessings of our lives and set our own homes in order so that they will be sanctuaries to our own boys and girls and those who come there as strangers. Let the light of peace and love abound with us, that every soul we contact will be richer because of us. That is our privilege.

God grant that we may continue to worship the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in honor through His beloved Son Jesus Christ, to the end that we may gain exaltation in the Celestial Kingdom when our life's labors are completed, I humbly pray in the name of His beloved Son Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER CHARLES A. CALLIS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

On Wednesday, of this week, President Heber J. Grant graciously permitted me the privilege of visiting him for a few moments. Our beloved President is rapidly mending in health. He loves his people.

A SPECIAL APPOINTMENT

A little over a month ago I was honored by the First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve with an appointment to visit the Oahu Stake and the Hawaiian Mission and the Japanese Mission in Hawaii. It was one of the finest missionary journeys I have ever had. The Islands are noted for their surpassing beauty and every island is covered with creation and life.

The Conference was blessed by the Lord. There was a very large attendance. The Presiding Bishop of the Church, LeGrand Richards, made a notable contribution to the success of that important gathering. President Ralph E. Woolley and his talented wife, Romania, are doing a splendid work in that distant outpost of the Church, and the Mission Presidents with their faithful wives are laboring with zeal to advance the work of God. It rejoiced my heart to see your sons and daughters in that Mission preaching the restored Gospel in the spirit of piety and with unwavering faith in God. They love the people—the Hawaiians, Japanese, Chinese, Portuguese, Samoans and Filipinos. The missionaries love these people with the love of Christ and verily that love is mutual.

EARLY MISSIONARY WORK IN HAWAII

In one of our great hymns there is a line like this: "Mingling with Gods he can plan for his brethren." That refers, as you well know, to the Prophet Joseph Smith. I believe with all my heart that Joseph Smith interceded with the Powers on high for the Gospel to be sent to the people of those Islands, and God sent forth His light. George Q. Cannon, Joseph F. Smith, Lorenzo Snow—these men were sent forth by the Lord and upon the lips of these soldiers of the Cross the word of God was mighty. There were other stalwarts sent forth and they did a remarkable work.

We see but half the causes of our deeds,
 Seeking them wholly in the outer life
 And heedless of the encircling spirit world
 Which, though unseen, is felt, and sows in us
 All germs of pure and world-wide purpose.

THE POWER OF JESUS CHRIST

God turned His countenance towards that people and, as their fathers were worthy to receive the Gospel of Christ, so these humble and Christ-like children of God were deemed worthy of having preached to them the restored Gospel. As I looked upon those people and preached to them, people of different nationalities, the thought came to me, some men appeal to certain people, other men to other people, but the Lord Jesus Christ appeals to all men. His voice is the authoritative voice that is sounding in the hearts of men and women today. In the pre-existent state when the sons of God shouted for joy it is my firm belief that Jesus Christ was the only one who was willing to pay the price for the redemption of the children of God. Blessed be His holy name forever.

A VISIT TO THE ISLAND OF MOLOKAI

Before I left the Islands I felt a strong urge to visit those stricken people—the lepers—on the Island of Molokai. The only way to reach that place then was by airplane. I had never been in one of these machines but my wife, who accompanied me, urged me to try the plane. I did, and I believe God took the fear out of my heart. As we were passing over the Pacific from one island to another, the pilot pointed downward and there in the blue depths of the Pacific was a school of whales disporting themselves. When we arrived on the island a delegation of those afflicted people was there to welcome us with songs. The officer said to me as I approached them "Go no closer." President Cox and his wife were with us."

We met with those afflicted people—afflicted only in body—in our meeting house. Irrespective of creed they came to the services. I spoke to them about the resurrection and of the love God had for them, and in the course of my address I quoted the immortal words of Jesus, which should ring in the hearts of every man and woman in the world: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

At the close of my remarks a brother, who was presiding over the meeting, the Justice of the Peace, himself a leper, arose and made a response which for eloquence I have never heard surpassed. It was the eloquence that comes from the heart, not from the lips. He said, "Apostle Callis, we could not go to Honolulu to attend that big Conference, but you have come to us and you have fed us; you have come to the least of your brethren, and inasmuch as you have done it unto us, you have done it unto the Lord Jesus Christ." And he continued, "We are happy. We cannot greet you with a handshake. Some of us have received the Gospel since we were on this island, and the joy and the comfort we receive from the Gospel has more than compensated us for our affliction, our infirmities. God will bless you, Brother Callis, for coming to the least of these your brethren." He closed the meeting while my tears were fast falling, and then to think though I loved this people, I had to pass through them while they withdrew to one side; could not touch them, could not shake hands with them. Oh, brethren and sisters, how blessed we are! It seems to me that God in Heaven is preparing a house for His afflicted children, a resurrected body, the glories of which have not entered into their minds to conceive.

TESTIMONY OF GOD'S GOODNESS

I humbly testify that this work is of God; that Christ is appealing unto all nations, and ere long they will receive His teachings for He is the Holy One of Israel. He is the Savior of the world. This Gospel is the power of God unto salvation. Joseph Smith, mingling with Gods, is planning for his brethren, for this people. God bless him forever.

I testify that President Grant is an Apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ. He is God's choice for President of this Church, and he is a Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, loved by his people, honored by the Lord, and one whose love cannot be shaken for his people and for his God. I so testify in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER SAMUEL O. BENNION

Of the First Council of the Seventy

This is an inspiring sight. I believe I have never been more filled with thankfulness unto the Lord for the strength of Zion than at the present time. I recognize here in this building the leaders of the Church in all parts of the country, men and women who have gathered together to get more information concerning their work to take back to the different Stakes of Zion and the world, and it is a glorious sight. I endorse the expression by some who have preceded me relative to the fine and inspirational words of welcome that came to us from President Heber J. Grant. I marvel at the strength and power of the man. I know that if God were not with him, he could not have stood the many responsibilities that have been his, and I believe with all my heart that the faith and prayers and devotion of the Latter-day Saints have kept him from being destroyed, and that the Lord has preserved his life.

AN INSPIRED LEADERSHIP

I marvel at the leadership of the Church. I am thankful that President McKay is alive and so well after such an illness, an illness which seemed to have power to strike him down but failed. I am sure that all who listened to President Clark yesterday were thrilled with the power of his message, that they could not help but say in their hearts "There is the voice of God," the leadership that the Lord inspired him to take in this Conference, covering so well the things that need to be expressed and understood by the Latter-day Saints.

It is always an inspiration for me, brothers and sisters, to attend these Conferences and hear the testimonies of the leaders of the Church as they bear witness to the truth of the restored Gospel.

When they speak as they do during these Conferences, they do so as men having authority, for they are divinely empowered to declare this restored message of latter days. They are God's representatives, bearing witness in modern times, as His ancient prophets did in their day.

WITNESSES FOR CHRIST

The Lord has declared that in the mouths of witnesses shall all things be established. This has been a rule of the Gospel in all ages. It was so in the days of Moses and Aaron, it was so in the days of the Master, and it is equally so today.

In the Meridian of Time the Apostles of the Lord became eye witnesses to the works of the Master. They accompanied Him throughout His ministry, saw His acts of kindness, and heard Him teach the multitudes which followed Him. Some of His disciples were with Him at the time of His transfiguration, and in His final suffering. They saw Him betrayed by Judas, and later crucified. They were witnesses of His burial in the tomb of Joseph of Arimathea, and finally they were eye witnesses of His resurrection. They saw Him after He came forth from the tomb, and heard His voice. Some felt Him, so that they knew He was not merely a spirit. They saw Him eat, and at last beheld Him ascend to His Father in heaven. They were in every sense of the word, witnesses of the Lord. By their experience they could testify to the world concerning Him.

When the time came for the appointment of one to succeed Judas, who betrayed the Lord, Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples and said:

Wherefore of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us * * * must one be ordained to be a witness with us of His resurrection.

And when they had drawn lots, the lot fell upon Matthias, "and he was numbered with the eleven Apostles."

I would have you note here that when Matthias was called to the Apostleship he was called to be a living witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ. This was definitely the mission the Lord had in mind for His ancient Apostles, for He said to them at one time: "Ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

As Peter bore his testimony at one time concerning the risen Lord, he declared that Jesus would come again to the earth at the time of the restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouths of all His holy prophets since the world began.

MODERN WITNESSES

We are now living in the time of the restitution of all things. The Gospel has been restored to the earth, together with the power by which its ordinances are to be administered. If all things were to be restored, then this principle of witnesses must likewise be restored, so that in our day men may receive the testimony of eye-witnesses of the Lord and His work.

We declare that this principle has been restored, and that in modern times mortal men have become eye witnesses of the Lord and His work, and that through having seen and talked with Him these men were able to give testimony similar to that borne by Peter and Paul in ancient times.

As Moses of old talked with God face to face, as the ancient Apostles saw and talked with the Lord after His resurrection, so did Joseph Smith, the modern prophet and some of his most intimate associates see the Lord, becoming eye-witnesses of Him and His work.

Concerning one of these experiences which occurred in the Kirtland Temple, Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery wrote the following:

We saw the Lord standing upon the breastwork of the pulpit, before us; and under His feet was a paved work of pure gold, in color like amber. His eyes were as a flame of fire; the hair of His head was white like the pure snow; His countenance shone above the brightness of the sun; and His voice was as the sound of the rushing of great waters, even the voice of Jehovah, saying:

I am the first and the last; I am He who liveth, I am He who was slain; I am your advocate with the Father.

Concerning another such experience, we have the following testimony:

We, Joseph Smith, Junior, and Sidney Rigdon, being in the Spirit on the sixteenth day of February in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-two—by the power of the Spirit our eyes were opened and our understandings were enlightened, so as to see and understand the things of God—even those things which were from the beginning before the world was, which were ordained of the Father through His Only Begotten Son, who was in the bosom of the Father, even from the beginning; of whom we bear record, and the record which we bear is the fulness of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, who is the Son, whom we saw and with whom we conversed in the heavenly vision.

Through other experiences also, the leaders of our Church became witnesses of the Lord, divinely empowered to testify to all the world of the restoration of the Gospel, of the fact that God lives, and that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, for they saw Him and talked with Him as did the ancient Apostles.

But these are not the only instances in which men became witnesses of the work of the Lord.

MORE THAN ONE WITNESS NECESSARY

As it is declared, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses so shall all things be established, so witnesses were chosen for other phases of the work of God in these last days.

It is a striking thing that at no time were any of the keys of the Priesthood restored in our time when only one man was present. Always there were two. Oliver Cowdery and Joseph Smith were together when John the Baptist restored the Aaronic Priesthood. Likewise they were together when the Melchizedek Priesthood was restored. When the keys of the gathering of Israel, of the dispensation of the Gospel in the days of Abraham, and the keys held by Elijah were brought again to the earth, these two men were together to receive them, so that in compliance with this law of witnesses, there would be more than one voice to declare the truth to the world, and so that being two, one would corroborate the other and thus establish the truth of what they said.

Since the coming forth of the Book of Mormon was to form such a prominent part of the restoration plan, and since it carried in and of itself such an important message to the world, the Lord saw fit to provide it with the testimony of witnesses.

Its origin was not to be declared solely upon the word of the Prophet Joseph Smith. Eleven other men were chosen to be witnesses of that book. Each one saw the plates with his own eyes, and signed a testimony to that effect.

Three of these witnesses were shown the plates by an angel who appeared to them and displayed the engraved writings before them as a voice from heaven declared the record was true, and that the translation thereof was correct.

DAVID WHITMER'S TESTIMONY

For years I resided in the middle west where also lived men and women who knew David Whitmer, one of the Three Witnesses to the Book of Mormon. I have talked with some of these people concerning him and his testimony, and although they were not members of the Church, they united in saying that David Whitmer remained faithful to his testimony to the very end.

At one time it was reported that he had denied this testimony, but when he heard of it, he published a new declaration concerning the Book of Mormon. In this new pronouncement, he affirmed positively the truth of his original testimony, saying that he had seen the angel, that he had seen the original plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated, and that his testimony as published in the Book of Mormon was true. At this time he was not a member of the Church, having been excommunicated previously.

OLIVER COWDERY AND MARTIN HARRIS

Oliver Cowdery and Martin Harris, the others who signed the testimony of the Three Witnesses, likewise remained true and faithful to their testimony concerning this book. They always affirmed, wherever they were, that they had signed their names as the Book of Mormon bears evidence. Oliver Cowdery died in Richmond, Missouri, while he was visiting with his brother-in-law, David Whitmer, for David Whitmer married his sister. He, Oliver, had joined the Church again in Omaha, or Florence, where the Saints were gathering, and took a last trip down to see his sister. There he sickened and died and did not come West. But Martin Harris came West, and affiliated with the main body of the Church.

TESTIMONY COMES THROUGH THE POWER OF THE HOLY GHOST

As the early leaders of the Church were witnesses of the restored Gospel, so we today witness that we too know of the truth of these things. Latter-day Saints throughout the world also testify that they know the restored Gospel of Christ is true. By the power of the Holy Ghost, the Lord has borne witness to their spirits that Mormonism is divine, and by the same power do we here today reaffirm our own faith in this work.

We say to all men who wish to know whether these things are true to ask of God who giveth to all men liberally, and, in the language of the Prophet Moroni, if we shall ask in faith, nothing doubting, believing in the Lord, He shall manifest the truth of it by the power of the Holy Ghost, and this is the way that all men may know the Gospel of Jesus Christ; that is, by the testimony of this great witness, the power of the Holy Ghost.

I give to the children of men in this audience and to all who may be listening, men with whom I may associate and men whom I do not know, who are listening in, I bear my testimony that this is the work of God and the same evidence that comes to me will come to you, it will come to all men who will make an investigation and will humble themselves before God. The true greatness of His power shall be made manifest and all who do it and keep the commandments of God shall, in the language of the great Nephite Prophet, be saved in the everlasting Kingdom of the Lamb of God. Amen.

ELDER JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I have greatly rejoiced in the testimonies given at this Conference. With my brethren I regret very much the absence of President Grant, and pray earnestly for his speedy return in full health and vigor. I have been extremely happy because of the nature of the remarks that have been made by those who have spoken. I feel very humble, and pray that the Spirit of the Lord will lead me this afternoon in the remarks that I may make, for I have only one desire and that is to say the things the Lord would have me say.

I am going to read from the 59th section of the Doctrine and Covenants:

Wherefore I give unto them [meaning the members of the Church] a commandment, saying thus: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy might, mind, and strength; and in the name of Jesus Christ thou shalt serve Him.

Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Thou shalt not steal; neither commit adultery, nor kill, nor do anything like unto it.

Thou shalt thank the Lord thy God in all things.

COVENANTS TO BE KEPT

Every person baptized into this Church has made a covenant with the Lord to keep His commandments, and in this commandment, reiterated in the dispensation in which we live, we are told that we are to serve the Lord with all the heart and all the mind, and with all the strength that we have, and that too in the name of Jesus Christ. Everything that we do should be done in the name of Jesus Christ.

In the waters of baptism we covenanted that we would keep these commandments; that we would serve the Lord; that we would keep this first and greatest of all the commandments, and love the Lord our God; that we would keep the next great commandment, we would love our neighbor as ourselves; and with all the might that we have, with all the strength, with all our hearts we would prove to Him that we would "live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God;" that we would be obedient and humble, diligent in his service, willing to obey, to hearken to the counsels of those who preside over us and do all things with an eye single to the glory of God.

We should not forget these things, for this commandment is binding upon us as members of the Church.

Now may I read you another commandment:

But ye (again having reference to the members of the Church) are commanded in all things to ask of God, who giveth liberally; and that which the Spirit testifies unto you even so I would that ye should do in all holiness of heart, walking uprightly before me, considering the end of your salvation, doing all things with prayer and thanksgiving, that ye may not be seduced by evil spirits, or doctrines of devils, or the commandments of men; for some are of men, and others of devils.

Wherefore, beware lest ye are deceived; and that ye may not be deceived seek ye earnestly the best gifts, always remembering for what they are given.

Now, my good brethren and sisters, if we are humble, if we are diligent in the service of the Lord, if we seek to serve Him with an eye single to the glory of our Father in heaven, keeping in mind that He has asked for that service with a full heart, with all our might, with all our mind, and with all our strength, we will not go astray, we will not be seduced by evil spirits nor by the spirits of men, but we will be led and directed by the Spirit of God.

GUIDANCE COMES THROUGH THE HOLY GHOST

Every member of the Church has had hands laid upon his head for the gift of the Holy Ghost. He has a right to receive the revelations that are expedient and necessary for his guidance individually; not for the Church, but for himself. He has a right through his obedience, through his humility, to receive light and truth as it shall be revealed through the Spirit of Truth, and he who will hearken to that Spirit and seek for the gift of the Spirit in humility and faith shall not be deceived.

Now there are some of our people who are being deceived. Why? Because they lack knowledge, because they lack understanding, and because they are not in tune with the Holy Spirit, which they have a right to receive through their faithfulness and obedience.

PRESIDENT LORENZO SNOW'S COUNSEL REGARDING TITHING

I would like briefly to call attention to a few things that have been mentioned here, and some that have not. I would like to say a word or two about tithing. It has been mentioned, and I am very grateful to know that it has. I want to read to you a few words that were uttered by President Lorenzo Snow when he was pleading with the people to be honest with the Lord. Now we are not faithful Latter-day Saints if we are dishonest with the Lord, we are not serving Him with all our hearts, with all our might, with all our strength if we are dishonest in the payment of our tithes and our offerings, and we shall stand before the Lord condemned and not entitled to the guidance of His Holy Spirit, and likely will be deceived by these spirits that lie in wait to deceive, if we are guilty of failing to keep this great commandment or any other of the commandments that the Lord has given us.

These are the words of President Snow to the Church:

Teach the children to pay tithing so that it may be properly observed. If we observe this law, no matter what our enemies may do the Lord will preserve us. Because we are His sons and daughters He loves us, and He has forgiven our forgetfulness of this holy law in the past, but He will not forgive you and me any longer, should we continue in this dilatory way of paying tithing. We shall be scattered just as the people in Jackson County were. This is true as the Lord is true. The Lord has blessed us wonderfully and preserved us in the land and yet we have refused to pay our honest debt unto Him. A great many people have not paid one cent of tithing, and yet they have gone into the temples of the Lord.

Then speaking to the officers of the Stakes and Wards he said:

How do you feel when you give a recommend to a person to come into our Temples who pays no tithing, who only pays half a tithing? How will you feel after this? You will feel that you are taking a sacred responsibility in doing that which God does not approve. He has said that the man who fails to pay his tithing shall have no place among the people of God. Yet here are these Temples erected by the sacrifice of the poor, and to give recommends to parties who pay little or no tithing, how can you feel to take this responsibility? I could not. Part of a tithing is not tithing at all in the eyes of the law that the Lord has revealed.

PRESIDENT BRIGHAM YOUNG'S ADVICE TO BISHOPS

I have another statement here from President Brigham Young, given to the Bishops of the Church:

These men and women whom you recommend must be individuals who pay their tithing from year to year; that is, those who are recommended to go to the Temple should pray and not speak against the Authorities of the Church, against the Kingdom of God, nor steal, nor lie, nor interfere with their neighbors' things, nor their neighbors' wives or husbands, but attend strictly to meetings, and prayer meetings, and those who pay due respect to their presiding officers and Bishops, and those who do not swear.

People who are guilty of these offenses, according to President Young, should not be recommended to go to the Temple to receive the ordinances of the House of the Lord.

FAST DAY REQUIREMENTS

Let me say a word or two now in regard to Fasting and Fast offerings. This morning in the meeting that was held—the Welfare meeting we had portrayed before us the gradual rise of the percentage of Fast offerings paid by the Church. Now, my good brethren and sisters, the amount that has been paid up to this present year is not by any means the amount that we ought to pay. We have not kept this commandment, for Fasting and prayer in faith and the payment of offerings are commandments of the Lord. We have been called upon to Fast. I do not know when we have heard a discourse on Fasting; not very often, am I am sure that we are not observing this law of Fasting as members of the Church as we ought to do. We have made it easy for the people, that is, easy to break this commandment because we have moved the Fast service up so high on the Fast Day that we can get all through and home again by one o'clock, or 12:30. That is a good time to eat, isn't it? And yet according to the commandment that the Lord has given to us through His servants we should abstain from food and water for one day, counting twenty-four hours, or from sunset to sunset. Now if you want to Fast from twelve o'clock noon until twelve o'clock noon I suppose it would be just as well if that is what you wish to do, but many of us are not observing the Fast Day now.

I want to say to you, my good brethren, we cannot have that guidance of the Holy Spirit as we ought to have it if we do not Fast as the Lord has required it of us; not extensive Fasts, but the Fast which has been set apart which we should do in wisdom. Now the Lord says we should do all things in wisdom, but we are not Fasting, hence we are not paying our Fast offerings; we are not praying I fear, as we should. I wonder if we are praying in our secret closets. I wonder if we are teaching our families to pray; if the spirit of prayer is among us as it ought to be.

I commend to your reading, and I shall not take time to do it, the words of an ancient prophet, found in the 34th chapter of Alma in the Book of Mormon. Amulek says that we should cry unto the Lord over our flocks, over our herds, over our goods, in our fields, and in our secret chambers, that we should do nothing but that we present the matter before the Lord and ask for His guidance and His blessing. We should go on our knees a little more and then we will have more faith. We need to be more humble in the service of the Lord. We need to spend less time in the criticism of those who preside.

JOSEPH SMITH'S TEACHINGS REGARDING PERFECTION

I am going to read to you a statement from the Prophet Joseph Smith that I think is important. I have a number of statements here that I should like to read, but I shall not take the time to do so, but this is worthy of our consideration:

We consider that God has created man with a mind capable of instruction, and a faculty which may be enlarged in proportion to the heed and diligence given to the light communicated from heaven to the intellect; and that the nearer man approaches perfection, the clearer are his views, and the greater his enjoyments, till he has overcome the evils of his life and lost every desire for sin; and like the ancients, arrives at that point of faith where he is wrapped up in the power and glory of his Maker and is caught up to dwell with Him. But we consider that this is a station to which no man ever arrived in a moment; he must have been instructed in the government and laws of that Kingdom by proper degrees, until his mind is capable in some measure of comprehending the propriety, justice, equality, and consistency of the same.

If God should speak from heaven, He would command you not to steal, not to commit adultery, not to covet, nor deceive, but be faithful over a few things. As far as we degenerate from God, we descend to the devil and lose knowledge, and without knowledge we cannot be saved, and while our hearts are filled with evil, and we are studying evil, there is no room in our hearts for good, or studying good. Is not God good? Then you be good; if He is faithful, then you be faithful. Add to your faith virtue, to virtue knowledge, and seek for every good thing.

FAITHFULNESS A PROTECTION AGAINST EVIL

The nearer we approach God, the better we endeavor to keep His commandments, the more we will search to know His will as it has been revealed, the less likely it will be for us to be led astray by every wind of doctrine, by these false spirits that lie in wait to deceive, and by the spirits of men, as the Lord has stated in the revelations which I have read to you. We will be protected, and we will have the power to understand, to segregate truth from error, we will walk in the light and we will not be deceived. Now the man who is dilatory, the man who is unfaithful, the man who is not willing to keep the commandments of the Lord in all things lays himself open to deception because the Spirit of the Lord is not with him to lead and direct him and to show him the way of truth and righteousness, and therefore some error comes along and he absorbs it because he cannot understand and realize the difference between truth and error. I want to tell you there is much error in this world that is passed off as truth, and it behooves every man of us to seek God, and, as stated by the prophet, draw near unto Him, and the nearer we draw unto Him, and the more we seek to do His will the more light we shall receive and the less shall be the danger of our deception. And so I pray in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

of the First Council of the Seventy and President of the New England Mission

New England is one of the distinct geographical sections of the United States, and is the most thickly populated part of our country. All the sectarian groups of America are naturally found among the people, who are as a rule very religious. They cherish the memory of the Pilgrim fathers, who have left us a great example of mighty courage, for they never thought of themselves as making history. Of the one hundred and one passengers on the Mayflower, over half of them died the first winter. They gave us our Mayflower Compact, a document that has influenced the form of our government more than any other with the exception of the Magna Charta.

EDUCATION IN NEW ENGLAND

The New England people sponsored education from the first, and today, metropolitan Boston boasts of twenty-seven colleges and universities. It is a section that has the oldest colleges of the United States—Harvard, Yale, Brown, Dartmouth, and many other famous universities. To these higher institutions of learning, students come from all over the world, and many of our own Utah boys and girls are studying in them. We feel that New England is a fruitful field for the Gospel because its people naturally have a high regard for culture and the principles of Christianity.

FAITH NECESSARY TO THE HIGHER LIFE

In this Conference, our brethren have emphasized the subject of faith in God and the Lord Jesus Christ. Faith is one of the principal characteristics of a soul, seeking the higher things of life. It is that something which tells us that God lives. George Santayana, who was at one time professor of Spanish and Spanish literature at Harvard College, has expressed the beauty of faith in his poem called "Columbus." It reads.

O world, thou choosest not the better part!
It is not wisdom to be only wise,
And on the inward vision close the eyes;
But it is wisdom to believe the heart.
Columbus found a world and had no chart,
Save one that faith deciphered in the skies.
To trust the soul's invincible surmise
Was all his science and his only art.
Our knowledge is a torch of smoky pine
That lights the pathway but one step ahead
Across a void of mystery and dread.
Bid, then, the tender light of faith to shine
By which alone the mortal heart is led Unto the thinking of the thought divine.

If we will direct our thoughts to the last days of Jesus Christ on earth, we will have our faith strengthened in such a manner that will give our souls a joy divine. On the night He was taken to meet His death, He said to His Disciples:

THE MESSAGE OF JESUS

"Because I live ye shall also live." The Easter Day was the vindication of what He knew. "It must needs be," He said, "that the Son of man should suffer and be put to death and rise again. Because I live, ye shall also live." We may be sure that this word of the Savior is one of the eternal truths of God. And then He left us another word: "I am not of this world," and the people said: "This man speaks with authority and not as the scribes." There are in these words something transcendent in meaning and something more beautiful than this world today can understand. There is a sureness to them; there is a something that goes deep into our hearts that all the education of the world cannot efface. To all Christian people and to all Pagan nations, Jesus also utters other words today with more power than ever: "Fear not; I am the first and the last, but am alive forevermore." Ringing down through all the centuries, this eternal message of Him who died for us gives us the renewed faith and hope as nothing else can do. You and I are citizens of the aeons of time that have created our present day. Will we forget them in our onward march in the conquest of material things?

MODERN ACCOMPLISHMENTS

The ends of the earth are brought to us at our breakfast tables. Wonders and powers have been put into our hands before which the men and women of the days of Jesus would have trembled with fear. Yet ye are not living peaceably with ourselves nor with our neighbors, nor with nations. We live on sensation rather than on divine truth. Civilization has strewn the paths of progress with the spoils of science and the fruits of invention. Distance has been conquered, bodily diseases are within our power to cure, humanity is crowned with the diadem of intellectual progress and material success, but parallel with all this growth, our hearts are swollen with pride, and we are not living buoyantly and serenely. I remember the healing word of a great physician who said one day to his invalid child: "My child, the hand that sent you to earth will give you strength forever more." This is what Jesus meant by His other words when He said: "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit."

THE STRUGGLE BETWEEN THE SPIRITUAL AND MATERIAL

The laws of the spiritual world and the laws of the material world are God's laws and are eternal. Spiritual laws are suffering at the hands of men. This is why darkness prevails and the dawn of the new day is delayed. We citizens of this great nation of the United States, have a mighty duty which we are forgetting. A duty that can only be carried out as we come into the knowledge of the Gospel of the Kingdom, which by His gracious and merciful word has again been given to man. The word must be carried to the ends of the earth, that it may be established in the hearts of men. We have three great visions of truth: First, the word of God given to Moses at Sinai: "I am the Lord thy God." Secondly, the voice of America proclaiming the liberty and equality of man; and third, the mightiest voice of all: "Because I live, ye shall also live." These are the messages that will save the world.

Our duties are fraught with portentous responsibilities. This present life must be made richer by the men of nations, states, and churches. All peoples will have to enter into more unselfish relations with the peoples of the earth; with the men and women with whom they live and serve. They will have to enter into richer relations with God, that the reign of righteousness, good-will, and brotherhood will declare once and for all "that never again shall they lift up the sword against nations, neither shall they learn war any more."

CHRISTIANITY MUST BE VITAL TO MEET PROBLEMS

The Church of which we are members has a divine message for the world, for it was founded by revelation and declares that God has spoken again. It declares that religion must affiliate itself with all the pursuits of mankind. The Holy Bible is resplendent with legislation in reference to land and wealth, and the Jewish Talmud develops in some detail the rights and privileges of all men who work, and all men should work. A living religion must grapple with living issues. While it is true that today, the social and economic problems are far more complicated than ever before in history, measures must be designed by all Christian peoples to deal with our complex problems. If Christianity is to recapture the vitality of creative religion, it must seek to follow in the footsteps of the path-finders of old. The Latter-day Saint Church is demonstrating its concern with social problems and that is why we have our Priesthood and Auxiliary organizations. Organized religion with us is playing a mighty part in bringing about social and economic reform. We shall not solve the problems for ages to come, but we may take courage from the words of an ancient sage, who declared: "Not thine to complete the work, neither art thou free to lay it down."

RELIGION AND EDUCATION

One of the largest factors for the proper teaching of the higher spiritual values of life should be our public schools and colleges. For our youth should participate in the religious life of the communities where they live. Religion should be the most constructive part of our culture, for that culture wherein religious idealism prevails, is a culture that loves beauty, truth, and goodness. The great souls who in 1776 won for us our independence and the right to have religious freedom were men and women who wanted to exercise that right. It is religion we want, but not secularism. The inhibitions written in our State laws are not against religious teaching, but against sectarian teaching. Religion and education cannot be separated. The minute education assumes an attitude that religion is for a special class of thinkers, then our schools miss that quality in human life that make for the happiness of mankind. We who advocate religious training, however, have missed the larger issue at times. We should not require credit for religious subjects, for we should think of something higher than marks. We should require something more fundamental and that is the truth that the school's responsibility should be to lay a foundation of religious principles, and this can only be done by the teachers consecrating their lives to the highest religious ideals of the Holy Bible. The consciences of teachers must be quickened and inspired with faith and courage to lift their voices against wrong and infidelity. This does not mean that teachers should adopt or accept any one rule of life or agree on any one concept of religious thoughts. "There is, however, within every soul a divine light, a divine impulse for good and truth, and when this light is developed, then life reaches its highest vision and man his greatest happiness," said the philosopher, Swedenborg. It is this light that must be made to glow in the souls of our children, for it is the light of God and immortality. Dr. James Conant, the President of Harvard College, has recently written in his report to the Board of Overseers, "Our Puritan ancestors thought of education and theology as inseparably connected. It is hard for us to recapture their point of view."

It is religion that man needs, for when all the ideals of culture find their inspiration and nourishment in the divine ideals of Jesus Christ, and take their place in the great living purpose of the world's Savior; when thought and art and literature and knowledge and life are brought into subjection, to the obedience of Christ, then mankind shall have attained the true victory, and will say: "Thou hast conquered, O Galilean."

A WRITER'S PRAYER

May we turn in solemn worship and adoration of Him who died that we might live. May the Easter spirit of a few days ago remain with us to lead us to greater heights; may we keep in mind the lovely words of John Drinkwater who wrote just before he died:

MY PRAYER

We know the paths wherein our feet should press,
Across our hearts are written Thy decrees Yet now, O Lord, be merciful to bless with more than these.

Grant us the will to fashion as we feel,
Grant us the strength to labor as we know,
Grant us the purpose, ribbed and edged with steel, to strike the blow.

Knowledge we ask not—knowledge Thou has lent,
But Lord, the will—there lies our bitter need.
Give us to build above the deep intent the deed, the deed.

God help us to walk through this world, now opened to us as through a Kingdom, with uplifted hearts and larger faith to the life more glorious, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER FRANKLIN J. MURDOCK

Former President of the Netherlands Mission

I rejoice with you, brethren and sisters, in being here in attendance at this great Conference of our Church. I have found comfort in these words:

If we work upon marble it will perish;
If we work upon brass, time will efface it;
If we rear temples they will crumble into dust;
But if we work upon immortal souls,
If we imbue them with principles, with a just fear of the Creator, a love of fellow men,
We engrave on those tablets something which will brighten all eternity.

This seems to me to be the ideal of our great missionary system, and for the past two and a half years it has been my privilege and pleasure to work as a missionary in Holland. It is a beautiful little country, just one-seventh the size of the State of Utah, and has a population sixteen times that which we have here. We have approximately three thousand members of the Church in Holland. All of our Branches are officered by capable, local people. Our Auxiliary boards are organized, and the work of our Heavenly Father is making good progress there.

Lesson material was prepared for a year in advance. They are preparing now for their Spring Conferences, and from a letter which I received last week, I learn that during the month of March they baptized ten new converts into the Church. Their Fast offerings and tithes are showing a slight increase. I have no fear that the Gospel and the members of the Church will go forward together in the land of dikes and windmills.

I shall never forget the words of President McKay as he set us apart for our Mission. He said: "President Murdock, your first concern is your missionaries." And how true that was!

I want to take this opportunity, my brethren and sisters, to thank you personally for the boys and girls you sent to the Dutch Mission. They are even better than the other Missions which we have heard from. (Laughter). To see those young men come from all walks of life, the farm, the mine, the factory, the banks, and the schools, inexperienced, not knowing one word of that foreign tongue; to see them come into the Mission office for the first time, assign them, get acquainted with them, and after a short period of time, a month perhaps, go and attend a testimony meeting with them; to sleep with them and pray with them, and Fast with them, and to see the development which they receive under the guidance of our Heavenly Father, was a marvel to me. It gave me a testimony of the truth and divinity of this work. Young men do not go seven thousand miles away from their loved ones; they do not put up with every kind of sacrifice that is necessary to perform missionary labor; they do not meet with all kinds of hardships, unless it is in God's work.

I think the remarkable thing about our missionary system is that all of these boys and girls, coming together from all over the Church, meet together and learn to know and love one another and work as a great unit, preaching the Gospel. These young men travel all day and come to their journey's end at night and then climb into bed with a boy that they have never met before in their lives, and wake up in the morning and call each other brother, and are willing to endure all kinds of hardships. These things give me an assurance that this is God's work and not man's.

I shall never forget one experience. One of our young men was taken to the hospital. It was necessary to operate upon him for appendicitis, and as the great surgeon was scrubbing his hands, making all preparations for the operation, he called me to one side and said: "President Murdock, what is there about these young men? I have never before in my life seen such clean blood, such clean flesh as you have here in this young man." And then, in a few minutes, my brethren and sisters, it was my rare privilege to present the principles of the Gospel to this great and famous surgeon.

The last days of the closing of the Mission he came to my office and said: "There is something divine about Mormonism, and I am ready to investigate it because you have something that I have not found in any other group of people in all the world."

To keep the young men and young women in our Church clean is the greatest work that we can be engaged in. That is the way we can brighten all eternity.

I want to bear witness to the great and wonderful work that was done by our beloved President Grant in his visit with us; to the great leadership of President and Sister Richard R. Lyman; and in the crisis which overtook us last fall, in the guiding hands of Apostle and Sister Joseph Fielding Smith. To have these leaders in our Mission was a great stimulation to the work. I shall never forget the closing scenes of our missionary life. As our boat was sailing away, those humble people gathered on the shore and sang in unison:

We thank Thee for sending the Gospel
To lighten our minds with its rays.

And with tear-stained faces as they left the shore and our boat went down the harbor, I could hear the strains of

Come, come, ye Saints,
No toil nor labor fear,
But with joy wend your way.

That great and brave people, the Dutch people, are a wonderful people, and they will carry on; I have no doubt of that.

Coming back home, I realize more than ever before the value of this great land and the Gospel which we have accepted, and as my closing thought let me leave this with you:

To appreciate our heritage,
The will and power to make our destiny,
To seek, to choose, to cherish, and to work,
The right to worship how and where we please,
God gave that.
Let us not shirk the task, the joy
Of carrying on this creed
To those whose strength
Must serve tomorrow's need.

That we may always be missionaries wherever we are, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

We wish to thank this wonderful choir from Ricks College. Their singing is beautiful, and behind it is a spirit and a spirituality which I find nowhere else than among our people in their songs. May God bless them in their labors.

The Ricks College Choir sang the "Hallelujah" anthem from the "Messiah," (Handel).

Elder Claudius Bowman, President of the Juarez Stake, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until Sunday morning, April 7, at 10 o'clock.

THIRD DAY

MORNING MEETING

The fifth session of the Conference was held in the Tabernacle Sunday morning, April 7 at 10 o'clock.

Almost an hour in advance of the time to begin this meeting, the great Tabernacle was crowded to capacity with people who had assembled from the various Stakes and Missions of the Church. The large Assembly Hall immediately south of the Tabernacle was also fully occupied with people, and thousands in addition assembled on the Tabernacle grounds. Those who had come together in the Assembly Hall, and also those on the Tabernacle grounds, listened to the Conference proceedings, by means of amplifiers that had been installed, as they were broadcast from the Tabernacle.

The music for this session of the Conference was furnished by the Tabernacle Choir, J. Spencer Cornwall, Director. Dr. Frank W. Asper was at the organ console.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

My brethren and sisters: It becomes increasingly apparent that we need larger quarters for our General Conferences. An hour before the time of commencement this building was filled to capacity. I am sure there is the traditional ten thousand people here this morning. I hope that all will remain as quiet as possible so that everyone may hear.

President Grant is "listening in" this morning.

The congregation and the Tabernacle Choir sang the hymn, "Praise to the Man who Communed with Jehovah."

Elder S. Taylor Farnsworth, President of the Beaver Stake, offered the opening prayer.

ELDER JOSEPH L. WIRTHLIN

Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

I sincerely trust, my brethren and sisters, that the Lord will bless me with a generous portion of His Holy Spirit during the moment or two I stand before you this morning.

I would that every member of this great congregation could have had the opportunity of attending the General Welfare meeting held yesterday morning and had visualized in picture, graph, and statistics the splendid achievements of this great movement and its possibilities for the future.

CHURCH WELFARE PROGRAM OF A PERMANENT NATURE

Some of us are inclined to believe that the Church Welfare program is of a temporary nature, but I do not hesitate in declaring that the future will hold a greater need for it than there has been in the past. In analyzing conditions in our great nation today, it is obvious that the matter of relief and unemployment is a local problem and sooner or later the Federal Government will turn it back to states, counties, cities, communities, and churches for solution.

The situation is clear. The Federal Government has before it two issues: first, as to whether or not it is able to carry the relief burden, or is the Federal income adequate to cover the huge expenditures of the past, present, and future. The present condition of the National Treasury indicates that disbursements are far in excess of receipts, which brings back to mind the truth expressed by President Clark, wherein he declared that no individual, nor private enterprise, nor even government can long exist on a sound financial basis when disbursements are greater than receipts. This local problem of relief which has and is being expanded into tremendous proportions by government agencies will come back to local units of government where it rightly belongs, or the nation faces bankruptcy.

Secondly, the Federal Government in turning the problem of relief back to states, counties, cities, communities, and churches should set in motion through these local units preparation for the caring of those in distress. Where preparation is being made to meet this problem, there will be but little difficulty. But where no preparation has been made, suffering, difficulties, and bloodshed are not remote possibilities.

STOREHOUSES TO BE BUILT

The Welfare Program is not the child of any individual's brain, but comes to us from our Heavenly Father. Your attention is directed to a revelation given to the Prophet Joseph Smith in the year 1832, as recorded in the 78th section of the Doctrine and Covenants, verse 3:

For verily I say unto you, the time has come and is now at hand; and behold, and lo, it must needs be that there be an organization of my people, in regulating and establishing the affairs of the storehouse for the poor of my people, both in this place and in the land of Zion.

In this revelation there are indicated to us two important points, probably three. First, these storehouses are to be regulated and established by an organization of the Lord's people. Secondly, a storehouse was to be set up in "this" place. What place? The place where the Saints were residing in 1832—in and about Kirtland, Ohio. Third, the Lord said to the Prophet Joseph, "and in the land of Zion."

In the wisdom of the Lord and through the power of inspiration, the Presidency of the Church some four years ago instituted this plan in greater measure than before. As a result, there have been established in the land of Zion storehouses under the direction and regulation of an organization of the Lord's people. These storehouses are found in Canada, the Northwest, California, and in every Stake of the Church. This impresses us with the fact that this is not a new plan, but rather the first one revealed to us through the instrumentality of the Prophet Joseph Smith. This is one of the Lord's ways of taking care of his people in distress.

PRAISE FOR WELFARE WORKERS

As one phase of this organization there has recently been organized in the Church the General Welfare Committee, who under mandate of the First Presidency have been and are establishing the Church Welfare Program of the Church. The efforts of this group of men are of the highest order. This Committee is composed of men from the various walks and vocations of life; some of them are professional men, others business men, others educators. For the past four years they have given most generously of their time and talents in the attempt to establish in every Ward, Stake, and Region of the Church the Lord's way of caring for His distressed people.

It is literally a day of preparation, and the members of the General Welfare Committee are exerting every effort to emphasize the necessity of being fully prepared in Priesthood quorums, Wards, Stakes, and Regions in order that this plan shall operate most efficiently in solving the problems of relief and unemployment.

Another great organization stands out in bold relief in connection with this movement, namely the Relief Society organization, which has contributed willingly, freely, and generously of its time and resources to the program. If it had not been for the Relief Society organization, in some Stakes the Welfare program would have made but little progress.

INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY

This plan anticipates not only that men and women shall be rehabilitated in their temporal affairs, but that there shall be a rejuvenation and rehabilitation in their attitude towards God, towards their Government, and towards work.

The past experiences of a great many charitable institutions and organizations prove, where assistance has been given without placing any requirements or obligation upon the recipients, it has brought about a condition of demoralization, disrespect for government, and the attitude that the world owes man a living without any mental or physical exertion on his part. In such instances, when relief is taken away, such individuals are not able through desire or training to take care of themselves. The Church Welfare Program solves the problem of demoralization by placing on every individual the responsibility of contributing of his time and talents on some worthwhile project that there may be instilled in his mind and heart the thought that what he has received is his, by right of having earned it. The Lord has placed this obligation on all. He said, "Thou shalt not be idle, for he that is idle shall not eat the bread nor wear the garments of the laborer." This is the essence and battle-cry of this great program of rehabilitation and preparation against the day of need, which will surely come.

On the other hand, those of us who are not particularly affected by the conditions of the times temporally have a most definite responsibility in that we should be susceptible to the lessons of this great program: First, the lesson of thrift, wherein through the practice of conservative and careful principles, we shall safeguard our private resources against days of future need and depression.

THE FAST OFFERING PLAN

The matter of financing this great program rests squarely upon the shoulders of members of the Church. The means and ways of such financing come from divine sources, for the Lord has indicated His desires relative to taking care of those who are in need. The Lord's method of financing the Church Welfare Program is the Fast Offering Plan, which has already been mentioned by Elder George F. Richards and Elder Joseph Fielding Smith of the Council of the Twelve. This is a plan pregnant with enriching blessings for those who observe it, the most equitable and orderly system ever given to man whereby individuals contribute according to their resources: To abstain from two meals on the first Sunday of each month, the equivalent in cash or commodities to be presented to the Bishop in order that there might be provisions in the storehouse of the Lord for any who might be hungry or cold. This plan provides a blessing for the donor. It is a physical sacrifice for the receiving of a spiritual blessing. It places the body under subjection to the will of the Lord, establishes closer relationship between man and the Holy Ghost, which assures a high degree of spirituality, a blessing so much needed in the world today. It creates a prayerful attitude and provides an opportunity, as Paul declared, for the practice of pure and undefiled religion, in visiting the fatherless and the widows, and keeping themselves unspotted from the sins of the world. By far the greatest spiritual blessing derived from the observance of this plan is the gift of testimony. No greater privilege is offered to the membership of this Church than the one afforded the first Sunday of each month to contribute of our resources to those who are in distress, to pray and fast, and to bear testimony of the goodness of the Lord unto us.

The spirit of testimony is the power of the Holy Ghost. Any individual who rises to his feet and declares that he knows that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, and that Joseph Smith is a Prophet, does so under the power and influence of the Holy Ghost. Brigham Young declared that no man could testify that Jesus was the Christ only by and through the power of the Holy Ghost.

The temporal side of the Fast offering plan is so practical, equitable, and just that it places no undue burden on any individual be he rich or poor. It is interesting to note that the Fast offering per capita for the Church in 1925 was 22 cents. In 1939 it reached the all high of 82 cents. Remarkable progress has been made. But an analysis of the observance of the Fast offering plan proves we have hardly scratched the great field of possibilities in the Fast offering plan.

Considering the Fast offering per capita of 1938 based on abstaining from 24 meals a year gives us a meal cost of  $3\frac{1}{2}$  cents. It is obvious that no meal can be served for  $3\frac{1}{2}$  cents which contains a balanced and adequate diet. The United States army meal cost for this area averages from 13 cents to 17 cents per meal. The quartermaster department of the United States army is a careful buyer. It buys the best. It buys as closely as it can, and yet meal costs average from 13 cents to 17 cents.

One of the largest hospitals in Salt Lake City serves fifteen hundred meals daily, or forty-five thousand per month at an average cost of 20 cents per meal. It is safe to assume that the average family meal should cost at least 15 cents. This cost does not pertain to the Church as a whole, as there are families where meal costs run from 30 cents to 40 cents. But for the sake of comparison, we may use a meal cost of 15 cents. If we abstained from two meals monthly at the rate of 15 cents per meal, this would make a per capita of 30 cents per month, or $3.60 per year, approximately four and one-half times as much as was contributed in 1939. Supposing the entire membership of the Church were to fully observe the Fast offering plan as revealed to us by the Lord, abstaining from two meals per month, there would be available annually a Fast offering sum of $2,880,000. On the other hand, may we assume that only 500,000 members of the Church observe the Fast offering plan, based on the cost of 15 cents per meal, two meals each month or, a per capita of $3.60 per year, this would provide an annual fund of $1,800,000. With this amount available in the Wards, Stakes, and Regions of the Church, the Welfare Program would go forward by leaps and bounds. In addition thereto, many more new work projects would be inaugurated. It would be possible to assist in the establishment of industries which would utilize the dormant resources of this state and bring into gainful employment hundreds of our brothers and sisters.

Aside from all of the possibilities of providing adequate relief and employment for our people, the finest opportunity provided for the Church is that of leadership in a world floundering and gradually burying itself in the sea of distress, poor leadership, and destruction.

LOVE FOR GOD SHOWN BY SERVICE

We declare a love for God with all our hearts, minds, and souls. We know definitely that in our hearts a love for neighbors should exist, but love of God is only genuine, heartfelt, and real when actual service is rendered to our Father's children, our neighbors. The Apostle John declared: "He that loveth not, knoweth not God, for God is love. If a man saith he loves me and hateth his brother, he is a liar, for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"

God's revealed plan for the caring of the unfortunate neither bankrupts nations, states, communities, churches nor individuals, but builds them up in faith and service to mankind. Love for God and love for neighbor will hasten the day when the King of kings shall rule and all men shall be equal.

In the 78th Section of the Doctrine and Covenants, the Lord again declares to us through the Prophet Joseph Smith:

That you may be equal in the bonds of heavenly things, yea, and earthly things also, for the obtaining of heavenly things.

For if ye are not equal in earthly things ye cannot be equal in obtaining heavenly things;

For if ye will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you.

True it is that the Lord has required baptism of us, work for the dead and all other ordinances and principles of the Gospel of Jesus Christ; but He requires above all else that we shall love Him and love His children, our neighbors, by rendering a service which will provide temporal and spiritual rehabilitation.

THE WORDS OF THE SAVIOR

May God bless and so strengthen us that when the day of accounting comes, each one of us may stand before a resurrected Savior to give an account of our stewardship; and may He say unto us, "For I was an hungered and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him saying, 'Lord when saw we Thee an hungered and took Thee in, or naked and clothed Thee; or when saw we Thee sick or in prison and came unto Thee?' And then shall the King answer and say unto them, 'Verily, I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me.'"

May the Lord bless us, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

TABERNACLE CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

During the period from 10:30 to 11:00 a. m., a program of choral and organ music was presented by the Tabernacle Choir and Organ as part of the proceedings of the General Conference, and broadcast through the courtesy and facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting Company's network, throughout the United States and Canada, and by means of short wave to other points. This broadcast originated over Station KSL, Salt Lake City. The following program was given:

"Awake the Harp,"— Creation —(Haydn) .....	Choir
"Toccata in D" (Kinder) .....	Organ
"Out of the Silence" (Jenkins).....	Choir
"O My Father" (Arranged by Asper).....	Organ
"Behold, God the Lord Passed By,"— Elijah —(Mendelssohn).....	Choir
"The Lord Bless You and Keep You" (Lutkin) .....	Male Voices

The singing of the Choir was under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall. Organ accompaniments and Organ solo presentations were played by Frank W. Asper. The spoken word was by Richard L. Evans.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

President Grant is "listening in" this morning, and we wish to assure him that this comes to him with the loyalty, trust, faith, confidence, and love of the whole Church.

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet."

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

My brethren and sisters:

APPRECIATION FOR BLESSINGS

There are few, if any persons in this congregation who are more truly appreciative than I of the privilege of attending this Conference. Until just recently it was doubtful whether I should be able to do so. This morning I stand before you practically a well man. I thank you, my brethren and sisters, and many friends, for your thoughtful solicitations, your faith and prayers.

I am deeply grateful this morning for President Grant's remarkable improvement in health. I was with him when he went from the California Mission Home to the St. Vincent's Hospital February 5, and thereafter for ten days or more visited him almost daily. I met in council with him and President Clark March 23 and noted how greatly he had improved. Truly, the Lord has answered the prayers offered in his behalf. He is a great and inspired leader; and most earnestly we pray for the prolongation of his life, and his enjoyment of health and happiness.

I have been made happy by the messages given by the General Authorities and the Mission Presidents.

With you I rejoiced in the excellent singing of choral groups of young people from the Brigham Young University and the Ricks College. I am thankful that we have these Church schools. I know their power for good.

The service rendered each week by the officers and members of the Tabernacle Choir is to the Church and the nation what the glorious sunshine this morning is to the world—it gives joy and peace to a million hearts.

INCREASE OF ACTIVITY IN THE CHURCH

It is a source of true satisfaction to note the evidences of increased activity throughout the Church—in Priesthood quorums; in Auxiliary associations; in the Church Welfare Plan; in missionary work at home and in the field; in better Ward teaching; in Temple work; in the large number of young people who are participating in Church duties, and who thereby are becoming anchored in the Truth, for it is an evidence of the truth of this work that the more service you render the happier you are. "If ye do, ye shall know" is axiomatic as it pertains to the Gospel.

Brethren and sisters, God bless every one of you for your integrity and devotion to the work of the Lord! It is an honor and a continual joy to be associated with you in the Church of Jesus Christ.

In my message to you this morning I wish to acknowledge God's kindness and mercy to His children everywhere, and to express my abiding faith in the ultimate triumph of the Gospel, and of the final victory of Right over Wrong.

EVILS OF WAR

Believing this, I am not blind to the fact that in the attitude of mankind generally, Truth seems to be "Forever on the scaffold, Wrong forever on the throne."

The world is truly in turmoil, and there are those who fear modern civilization is dangerously near destruction. The fact is that since history began strife, wickedness, and war have existed among human beings, who it seems are too selfish and ambitious to learn what is best for them. As indicative of the slow progress of the world in regard especially to the evil of war listen to these extracts taken from accounts of conquests in widely separated eras:

Shrieks and wailing, and every other species of outcry that comes from grief, terror, and despair arose from within (the palace); and such spectators as had the heart to look continuously upon the spectacle, could see wretched men running to and fro, and virgins clinging to altars for protection, and frantic mothers vainly endeavoring to find hiding places for themselves and their helpless children.

That is quoted from a description of the destruction of a city 1200 years before the Christian Era.

Now listen to this:

Bodies are not pleasant sights under any circumstances. When they are of young women, torn to pieces by bombs, sometimes without heads or arms or legs, they are horrible to behold. This was sheer horror.

Conquered men in the ruined city were executed. Men and women were driven to the public squares to watch the executions.

That is taken from accounts of eye-witnesses of the bombing of a city in September in the year of our Lord 1939!

Manifestly, there has not been much cessation of man's "inhumanity to man" in 3,000 years! Notwithstanding this, I believe that Right and Truth will eventually triumph.

COURAGE NEEDED AMIDST CONFLICT

Today as we behold nations grasping at one another's throats, the strong crushing the weak, we are prone to think that righteousness among nations is waning. In our own country, we know that the struggle is still rife between capital and labor; that enemies to our democratic institutions are becoming more blatant; we see political demagogues more seemingly successful, drunkenness and immorality still flauntingly defiant; and we wonder whether mankind is growing better or worse. In private life unemployment, disappointments, adversity, sickness, and sorrow make us discouraged and sometimes despondent.

Still I am confident that Truth will yet prevail, and in that confidence say with the Psalmist:

Be of good courage, and He shall strengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the Lord.

We may take courage in what I believe is a fact, that in the hearts of more millions of honest men and women than ever before in the history of the world, war is abhorrent. War has lost its false glamour and boasted glory. Such an attitude at least keeps alive our hope for the dawning of that day when men "shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks. Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." (Isaiah 2:4)

PEACE THROUGH JESUS CHRIST

How utterly foolish men are to quarrel, fight, and cause misery, destruction, and death when the gifts of a divine and loving Father are all around us for the asking—are already in our possession if we would but recognize them. Christ's invitation is still extended to all peoples:

Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light. (Matthew 11:28, 30.)

I am as sure as that I am speaking to you that the peace and happiness of mankind lie in the acceptance of Jesus Christ as Redeemer and Savior. As Peter declared 1900 years ago, so I testify to the world today that there is "none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

The principles of the Gospel are the surest, safest guide to mortal man. Christ is the light to humanity. In that light man sees his way clearly. When it is rejected, the soul of man stumbles in darkness. No person, no group, no nation can achieve true success without following Him who said:

I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life. (John 8:12.)

It is a sad thing when individuals and nations extinguish that light—when Christ and His Gospel are supplanted by the law of the jungle and the strength of the sword. The chief tragedy in the world at the present time is its disbelief in God's goodness, and its lack of faith in the teachings and doctrines of the Gospel.

To all who believe in a living, personal God and His divine Truth, life can be so delightful and beautiful.

THE BLESSING OF LIFE

As a matter of fact, it's glorious just to be alive. Joy, even ecstasy, can be experienced in the consciousness of existence. There is supreme satisfaction in sensing one's individual entity, and in realizing that that entity is part of God's great creative plan. There are none so poor, none so rich, sick or maimed who may not be conscious of this relationship.

I know that for not a few of us the true joy of living is overcast by trials, failures, worries, and perplexities incident to making a living and attempting to achieve success. Tear-bedimmed eyes are often blind to the beauties that surround us. Life sometimes seems a parched and barren desert, when, as a matter of fact, there is comfort even happiness within our grasp if we could or would but reach for it.

It is possible for us to learn with Stanton that—

This world o' God's is brighter than

We ever dream or know;

Its burdens' growin' lighter—

An' it's love that makes 'em so!

An' I'm thankful that I'm livin'

Where love's blessedness I see,

'Neath a Heaven that's forgivin'

Where the bells ring 'Home' to me!

The Lord has given us life, and eternal life is His greatest gift to man.

THE BLESSINGS OF FELLOWSHIP

Among life's sweetest blessings is fellowship with men and women whose ideals and aspirations are high and noble. Next to a sense of a kinship with God comes the helpfulness, encouragement, and inspiration of friends. Friendship is a sacred possession. As air, water and sunshine to flowers, trees, and verdure, so smiles, sympathy and love of friends to the daily life of man. "To live, laugh, love one's friends, and be loved by them is to bask in the sunshine of life." One of the principal reasons which the Lord had for establishing His Church is to give all persons high and low, rich and poor, strong and feeble an opportunity to associate with their fellowmen in an atmosphere of uplifting, religious fellowship. This may be found in Priesthood quorums, Auxiliaries, Sacrament meetings. He who neglects these opportunities, who fails to take advantage of them, to that extent starves his own soul. Who among you who were numbered among the more than 9,000 in attendance at the General Priesthood meeting last night did not thrill in the realization of your being one in that great brotherhood of Christ. To what spiritual heights true fellowship may lift us may be glimpsed by John the Beloved's ecstatic remark: "I know that I have passed from death unto life, because I love the brethren."

FREE AGENCY A GIFT FROM GOD

But the gift which I desire more particularly to call to your attention this morning is a principle of the Gospel too seldom emphasized, but which is a blessing co-existent with man's creation. I refer to the fundamental principle of the Gospel, Free Agency. References in the Scriptures show that this principle is (1) essential to man's salvation; and, (2) may become a measuring rod by which the actions of men, of organizations, of nations may be judged.

Therefore, cheer up your hearts, and remember that ye are free to act for yourselves—to choose the way of everlasting death or the way of eternal life. (II Nephi 10:23.)

For the earth is full, and there is enough and to spare; yea, I prepared all things, and have given unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves. (Doctrine and Covenants 104:17.)

Behold, here is the agency of man, and here is the condemnation of man; because that which was from the beginning is plainly manifest unto them, and they receive not the light. (Doctrine and Covenants 93:31.)

Therefore it is not right that any man should be in bondage one to another. And for this purpose have I established the Constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood. (Doctrine and Covenants 101:79, 80.)

Again:

My independence is sacred to me—it is a portion of that same Deity that rules in the Heavens. There is not a being upon the face of the earth who is made in the image of God, who stands erect and is organized as God is, that should be deprived of the free exercise of his agency so far as he does not infringe upon others' rights, save by good advice and a good example. (Brigham Young.)

It is true that faith is an essential principle in all progress, not spiritual progress only, but to all progress. But next to faith as an essential to man's advancement is Free Agency.

The history of the world with all its contention and strife is largely an account of man's effort to free himself from bondage and usurpation, or to protect himself in the freedom he possessed.

DANGERS SEEN IN CERTAIN TYPES OF GOVERNMENT

In the light of the principle of Free Agency, it is not difficult to distinguish between the right and the wrong system of government. It is not difficult to tell when an organization transcends its bounds, and becomes despotic. How the people's rights may be curtailed by legislation here in the United States is emphasized in a timely editorial printed in the March 15th issue of the Los Angeles Times under the caption "The March of Absolutism."

"Absolutism in politics," it says:

May be defined as "a system of government in which public power is vested in some person or persons, unchecked and uncontrolled by any law, institution, constitutional device or coordinate body." The American system, on the other hand, insists on the separation of powers, legislative, executive, and judicial, and the freedom of the individual. It demands and maintains the supremacy of the law. This means that what is done officially must conform to law, exactly as much as what is done unofficially by private individuals.

The administrative commission is a radical departure from the American system. It measurably and sometimes wholly consolidates the three separate powers of government and clothes its members with uncontrolled power to hear, to adjudicate, and to punish. In other words, it makes us subject to "some person or persons" who are free to act without the restraint of any law, guided solely by their own discretion. No one who has had any experience with an administrative commission will challenge this.

What else do we find in the totalitarian governments of Europe? There, it is simply the placing of this power in the hands of one man, a Hitler or a Stalin, the area of whose government is practically unlimited. The limitation of the area within which a given commission operates does not change the power; it is, within the designated limits, despotic, that is, absolute. Recent Federal labor practice forbids the employer's resort to the courts until a commission has determined the matter, and the disposition of the authorities is to be chary of any review by the courts. Under some circumstances the employer is even denied access to the board; he must stand aside, his business tied up, until one of the contending labor organizations invokes the board's action.

In the courts, like all other litigants, employer and employee are treated as equals. If either has infringed the rights of the other, the wronged is entitled to reparation, to be placed as near as may be in the position he had before the injury. The administrative commission is a departure from this in both principle and practice. It attempts the appraisal of what it calls social values, exalts the claims and values of labor above business and sets the interests of the labor organization above the interests of the individual workingman. It is a complete abandonment of the Anglo-American legal tradition.

FREEDOM A GLORIOUS PRIVILEGE

To live in a land in which each individual has the right to life and liberty is a glorious privilege.

If any man in this country prefers a government ruled by a dictator, he should go where the dictator rules; but here in the United States of America the people believe in a government as Abraham Lincoln declared, "of the people, by the people, and for the people."

It is well ever to keep in mind the fact that the State exists for the individual; not the individual for the State. Jesus sought to perfect society by perfecting the individual, and only by the exercising of Free Agency can the individual even approach perfection.

Man's Free Agency is an eternal principle of progress, and any form of government that curtails or inhibits its free exercise is wrong—Satan's plan in the beginning was one of coercion, and it was rejected, because he sought to destroy the agency of man which God had given him.

When a man uses this God-given right to encroach upon the rights of another, he commits a wrong. Liberty becomes license, and the man a transgressor. It is the function of the State to curtail the violator, and to protect the violated.

A WARNING TO LATTER-DAY SAINTS

Latter-day Saints should avoid affiliation with any committee, any group, any union that would, through coercion or force, deprive a person of the free exercise of his or her freedom of choice. It is understood, of course, that any person is free to join a union, when to do so favors his best interests; but no one should be compelled to join, or be deprived of any right as a citizen, including the right to honest labor, if he chooses not to become a member of a union or specially organized group.

FAITH IN GOD BRINGS PEACE

Yes, we are living in turbulent times, the most distressing phase of which is the rejection of Christ by the leaders and dictators of some European nations. But if you have faith in God you must believe as David Starr Jordan has aptly said, "in the final inevitable triumph of Truth," and I bear witness to the world in all sincerity that the Gospel of Jesus Christ as restored to the Prophet Joseph Smith is true and embraces all Truth. Paraphrasing the author just quoted, keep the principles of the Gospel as your guide, your companion, your ally and inspiration, and you will tingle with the consciousness of your kinship with the Infinite, and all petty trials, sorrows, and sufferings of life will fade away as temporary harmless visions seen in a dream.

My God give us courage to choose the right, ability to appreciate the good things of life, and power faithfully to serve Him and our fellow-men, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

ELDER REED SMOOT

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I have been wondering whether I have ever attended a Conference when the influence of the Spirit of God has been made so manifest as at this gathering.

THE POWER OF THE PRIESTHOOD

This is a wonderful Church, and as the years go by that truth will be known better in all parts of this world. At the wonderful Priesthood meeting held in this building, with nearly every seat filled, I thought to myself, what a marvelous power! With that power directed by our Heavenly Father Himself, this Church will not only grow in numbers, but will grow in influence among the people of the world.

CHARITY A CHRISTIAN VIRTUE

Charity—we believe in that grand principle, and not only believe in it but manifest our belief in action in the many ways provided for by the Gospel. Charity has been a great problem that every dispensation has had to meet in some way. God has provided the way, and this people, the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, are living closer to that law, I am quite sure, than any other people in the world. Charity of the proper kind and spirit is an essential virtue in all Christian living.

QUOTATIONS FROM SCRIPTURE

In Corinthians, chapter thirteen, I find these words:

Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. * * *

And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

Let all our things be done with charity.

Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up.

Doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil.

Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth;

Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.

I find in the third chapter of Colossians it says:

Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any; even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye.

And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness.

And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful.

Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.

And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him.

The psalm of David asks:

Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? Who shall dwell in thy holy hill?"

The answer was:

He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart.

He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor.

Lack of charity might be blamed for much that is wrong in the world today, for if all the people were tolerant of the faults and weaknesses of others, and would approach them with charity and love in their hearts, it would be much easier to solve the problems confronting this old world of ours today, and which are threatening our civilization.

THE GOSPEL A CURE FOR ILLS OF WORLD

The only solution to these perplexing questions is to be found in the teachings of the Master. He gave to the world a philosophy of life that will bring to the world the peace and happiness for which humanity has been seeking through all the ages. His was a Gospel of peace, love and charity, and we must turn to His teachings. He was the Prince of Peace, and the nations which persist in ignoring His counsel and His warnings are following the path that leads to destruction and decay. The last is a quotation.

John, in the fourth chapter of his first epistle, says:

Let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. * * *

If God so loved us, we ought also to love one another. * * *

If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?

And this commandment have we from Him, that he who loveth God love his brother also.

AARON AND MIRIAM REBUKED

When Moses married the Ethiopian woman, as related in Numbers, twelfth chapter, Miriam and Aaron complained of it and said:

Hath the Lord indeed spoken only by Moses? Hath he not spoken also by us? And the Lord heard it. * * *

And the Lord spake suddenly unto Moses, and unto Aaron, and unto Miriam: Come out ye three unto the tabernacle of the congregation. And they three came out.

And the Lord came down in the pillar of the cloud, and stood in the door of the tabernacle, and called Aaron and Miriam; and they both came forth.

And he said: Hear now my words: If there be a prophet among you, I the Lord will make myself known unto him in a vision, and will speak unto him in a dream.

My servant Moses is not so, who is faithful in all mine house.

With him will I speak mouth to mouth, even apparently, and not in dark speeches; and the similitude of the Lord shall he behold; wherefore then were ye not afraid to speak against my servant Moses?

And the anger of the Lord was kindled against them; and he departed.

And the cloud departed from off the tabernacle; and behold, Miriam became leprous, white as snow, and Aaron looked upon Miriam and, behold, she was leprous.

SAYINGS OF THE SAVIOR

In Matthew, seventh chapter, we read:

Judge not, that ye be not judged.

For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, let me pull out the mote out of thine eye; and, behold, a beam is in thine own eye?

Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.

God is love, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God.

Herein is our love made perfect, . . . because as He is, so are we in this world.

LOVE WILL FINALLY TRIUMPH

We should love and speak the truth, but only in love and kindness. Truth should ever extend the hand of love.

Who seeks for heaven alone, to save his soul,

May keep the path, but will not reach the goal;

While he who walks in love may wander far,

Yet God will bring him where the blessed are.

We should seek to obtain that love, that charity which the words of the Apostle Paul declared to be so important. Only by so doing can the ills of the world be cured. As Paul makes the assertion that "Charity beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things," he gives us to know that this heavenly attitude, charity or brotherly love, will triumph and continue, where most other things fail or cease. He assures us, in substance, that where charity rules, pride hangeth not.

May God's blessings ever be with us. May we recognize our duties not only as citizens of this country, but as members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

May God bless you all. May He bless all undertakings begun by the Authorities of this Church in carrying on His work, I humbly ask at this time, in the name of the Master, Jesus Christ, Amen.

BISHOP MARVIN O. ASHTONSecond Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric*

I do not know how well you know it, but it takes a really strong constitution to stand what some of us have stood, expecting it, but not knowing how soon it would come. I have learned this much in my experience in the Church—I learned it only a couple of hours ago—that the Spirit of the Lord does not stay in a meeting too long, especially around twelve o'clock. I would not attempt by any means to do this job all alone.

A TRIBUTE TO PRESIDENT MCKAY

I am thankful from the bottom of my heart, as are you, to hear the testimony again of President McKay. I went on a mission to the same land as did he. I know how the people in that Mission loved him and I know the people of this Church love him in the same degree as do the Scotch people. May the Lord lengthen his days that he may be an inspiration to all of us for years to come.

SUSTAINING OUR LEADERS

May the Lord bless all of our leaders. May we have the good sense always to pray for them and, better than pray for them, let us sustain them in the way we should; I ask these blessings in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

The Choir sang an anthem, "Hosanna," (Jones), after which the benediction was pronounced by Elder Henry A. Gardner, President of the Palmyra Stake.

Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock p. m.

THIRD DAY*AFTERNOON MEETING

The concluding session of the Conference was held Sunday afternoon, October 3, at 2 o'clock.

As was the condition at the morning session, the great Tabernacle was filled to capacity, and again thousands of people congregated in the Assembly Hall immediately south of the Tabernacle, and on the Tabernacle grounds, to listen to the services as they were broadcast from the Tabernacle.

The Tabernacle Choir furnished the music for this session of the Conference, J. Spencer Cornwall, Director. Alexander Schrein-er was at the organ console.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.First Counselor in the First Presidency*

My brethren and sisters, we come now to the opening of the closing session of the Conference. The building is again crowded to capacity with thousands on the outside who can not get in.

The Choir sang an anothem, "Lift Up Your Heads, O ye Gates" (Handel).

Elder Byron O. Colton, President of the Roosevelt Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The Choir sang "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" (Williams).

ELDER STEPHEN L RICHARDSOf the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

I should like to say a word in support of the beautification plan sponsored both by our Church and the Centennial Commission. I can scarcely think of anything more appropriate as a tribute to the Pioneers and their heroic struggle. They loved this land. It was at once their refuge, their home and their destiny. They called it Zion because that word most nearly characterized the utopia of safety, peace, progress and achievement which they sought to establish. And a real Zion it was to the thousands of sincere and ardent men and women who gathered here from many nations to find expression for the loftiest ideals and noblest purposes ever to be found in the human soul.

This country was beautiful when the Pioneers first came. It was virgin territory. The hills, the streams, the forests and the plains were lovely, just as nature always is until marred by the hand of man. It has taken nearly a century to demonstrate the natural beauty of the country which the Pioneers chose. It may be that they themselves did not realize that it was possessed of so many marvelous scenic attractions which have come in for appreciation in recent years. It is doubtful that the variety, the grandeur and the novelty of our natural scenery can be duplicated within equal space anywhere in the entire world.

DESCRIPTION OF NEARBY BEAUTY SPOTS

I wish you would take a short trip with me. I am a lover of nature and the great outdoors, and I have taken this trip many times. I might escort you on many other beautiful excursions in our intermountain empire. I choose this one merely as a sample. We usually begin by going to Fish Lake, then on to Bryce and the Grand Canyon, back to Cedar Breaks and down to Zion. The regard that I have for these places has grown with the years until they have become dear and sacred. I must tell you what they mean to me.

I love Fish Lake for her tranquility. She nestles in the pines and quaking aspens, cool, calm and inviting. When I row a boat over her placid waters, crystal-clear, revealing the schools of trout so sophisticated as to be unafraid and untempted, a peace and contentment come over me. I feel reconciled with life. The broken harmonies are mended. My soul is calmed.

I am passionately fond of Bryce. She is a cameo of nature—not big, but big enough to have dignity. One looks down on her, but it is literally and not figuratively, for she commands esteem as well as love. I have seen her at sunrise, at sunset, and in the moonlight; and as the light and shadows play on her jeweled spires, her cathedrals, her organ, her dainty nymphs and graces, the ethereal world seems very near, the imagination runs riot with the senses, and the soul of man is transported into a realm of exquisite beauty and loveliness.

IMPRESSION MADE ON FRIENDS

When I first saw her I could not rest until I had taken two parties of relatives and friends in quick succession to enjoy with us the spell of her supernal beauty. I once included with my guests two dear friends, lovers of art and nature, whom, were I to mention their names, you would know. I could scarcely await the opportunity of seeing them enjoy their first vision of the canyon. They approached the rim expectantly but of course not knowing, as no one who has not seen can ever know, what awaited them. I thought there would be exclamations of delight and wonder. There were not. They just looked and as they looked, tears flowed down their cheeks like drops of rain. I'm not ashamed to say my eyes filled too. There were no words, only feeling—feeling too deep for expression.

GRAND CANYON, CEDAR BREAKS AND ZION PARK

The Grand Canyon is so stupendous, so colossal and overwhelming as to defy description. Into its awful caverns could all the works of man be dumped and lost. The mighty gorge is the demonstration of nature's power in changing the face of earth. How puny and insignificant it makes the strength of man appear! Humility and meekness are the burden of the message that rises from the silver ribbon of the river in its depths, up through the mists, to the reverent pilgrims who gather at this wonder of the world.

Cedar Breaks is a masterpiece in oil, a wonderful perspective extending far out on the hearth of the setting sun. The brilliant hues of her color scheme leave little to be desired in a work of art. I enjoy the approach through the wild meadows and the pines. She is usually seen in passing but she is of more than passing worth.

After all of these I come to Zion. Zion the lofty, the majestic where you look up instead of down. In its major concept it is not a poem, although there are a thousand poems in its sequestered nooks, its lovely trees, shrubs and wild flowers, its lacy vines and clinging mosses, its mists, its mirror pool, its delicate and gorgeous colors and its myriad charms. Rather it is a sermon—inspiring, exalting, lifting man from the baser things in life to the nobler.

Like all worthy things it is well guarded. The Watchman and the Sentinel stand in the gateway and the Three Patriarchs solemnly scrutinize all who enter. When within, however, the friendly Twin Brothers and gracious Lady Mountain beckon on with hospitality and good cheer. The pilgrim is at home in the leafy valley. He may pursue his quest without hindrance or disturbance, except perhaps for the commotion of his thoughts and his feelings as he ponders this marvel of God's handiwork.

AN AWE-INSPIRING SYMBOL

I have looked diligently to find some one thing—some symbol that would epitomize the meaning of it all. I think that I found it many years ago. It is not El Gubernador,—the Great White Throne, that rears its lofty crested peak high into the blue of heaven, as many might suppose it to be. It is not Cable Mountain, nor the Ledge of the Weeping Rock, nor even Angel's Landing, significant as that may be. It is not the Temple of Sinawava, much as I love to worship in that peerless cathedral whose floor is the verdant valley with river running through, whose walls are chiseled mile-high by the Master Sculptor and whose arch is the blue of the firmament.

It is a mountain slightly more modest perhaps than some of these. I wish it might have had the name I wanted it to have—it is called Red Arch Mountain. There is an arch, it is true, and it is red. But they who named it could not have seen what made the arch or they would have proclaimed it Sinai, the Mountain of the Lord, for out of the face of this imposing cliff, a tablet of stone of vast proportions has been taken, perfectly hewn. In my fancy I have always seen that massive tablet inscribed by the finger of God, broken loose by the fierce lightning and resounding thunder and cast to the mighty Moses and by that Prophet proclaimed in sonorous and piercing voice down through all the ages of man. When I stand in awe before this portentous symbol wrought without hands in the everlasting hills I seem to hear as in their primeval freshness the great commandments of Jehovah:

Thou shalt have no other Gods before me.
 Thou shalt not steal.
 Thou shalt not commit adultery.
 Thou shalt not kill.
 Thou shalt not covet.
 Thou shalt not bear false witness.
 Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain.
 Honor thy father and thy mother, that it may go well with thee in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

IMPROVEMENTS NOTED

What a strange paradox it seems that civilization should be unbeautiful. To the lover of nature, every landscape, even the desert and waste places, has charm and attraction until man digs a hole, builds a shack, erects a telegraph pole or a smokestack. But civilization need not and should not be ugly. Man's construction can beautify rather than deface nature if there is the will, the energy and the art to make it so.

Even commercial and industrial structures and appliances can be made good looking. It is noticeable that railroad stations, once grimy and unsightly affairs, are now frequently embellished with bits of lawn, shrubs, flowers, trees and sometimes with pleasing architecture in elaborate settings. Factories, power houses and other plants, once bare and forbidding, are now covered with vines set in pleasant landscapes, with adequate exposure to light, air and sunshine. These transformations in the commercial world give warrant to the hope that some day we shall have beauty in business and that it will be a disgrace for any enterprise to be conducted in ugly surroundings.

The chief consideration and the problems, however, in this beautification program probably lie with homes, churches, schools and other public properties. In the interest of competition business institutions may be pretty well relied upon to go forward with artistic improvements, but what can be relied upon to move the home owners, the church goers and the school patrons to do their part in this worthy endeavor?

COOPERATION NECESSARY

I believe that nothing but a wholesome, individual and community pride will accomplish the task. To stimulate that pride it is necessary to understand and appreciate the real values involved. I wish I could say something to enhance that understanding and appreciation.

I revert to the first item which I mentioned,—we live in a remarkably beautiful country. Our scenery is now being exploited. It is true that in the main this is done for commercial reasons but nevertheless all the people are beneficiaries of the wide advertising and the increased tourist travel which such exploitation brings. From a purely monetary standpoint, it is the poorest kind of business to spoil the landscape that we are trying so hard to sell. Every dirty, unkept, unpainted, and shabby home; every unsightly outbuilding; every old corral and fallen fence; every scraggly dead tree; every barren and forbidding school house and church and courthouse with broken windows, curled shingles and other evidences of neglect; every littered and weedy vacant lot, street and highway is a definite liability against the credit asset of this productive tourist traffic we are striving so hard to get. Chambers of Commerce, civic clubs and other agencies engaged in its promotion need, more than anything else, cooperation in the items I have mentioned. I wish I could pledge that support for every home and community in this state and also for every home and community in which our people dwell.

Now this is the business side of the question. I want to present another aspect of equal if not superior importance. Some of you may remember an old play which was popular on the boards many years ago. It was called "Ingomar, the Barbarian." There was a scene in this play between the barbarian and Parthenia, the fair maiden whom he had come to love. The girl is picking flowers and Ingomar, wondering at her interest in them, asks her, "What is their use?" Rather startled at such a question, the maiden answers, "Why, they're beautiful! That's their use."

LOVE OF BEAUTY INNATE

I think perhaps this gives a good idea of the esthetic and pure love of the beautiful. I believe that all people are by nature endowed with something of this love in their hearts, and it needs but cultivation and encouragement to develop into one of the loveliest aspects of living. Almost all are sensitive to color, to form and symmetry, so that good architecture and good landscaping with trees, flowers, shrubs and lawns have a very appreciable effect, even though sometimes unconsciously, upon all persons.

The love of home is one of the great virtues of the race and undoubtedly the beauty of home has done much to stimulate that love. Fortunately it is not necessary to be rich or learned to have a love of beauty. Very humble folk often have true artistic appreciation. I once knew an old lady who spent many hours scrubbing a long board walk leading from her house to some outbuildings. I asked her why she did it. "Oh, I don't know," she said, "but it seems to me the outside should be as clean as the inside." It's very fortunate that it doesn't take much money to indulge esthetic tastes, particularly in the care of a home. Cleanliness and neatness are the chief requirements and personal energy, ambition and pride can supply these. The humblest cottage can be a lovely place, a haven of refuge and a constant delight if it is but kept neat and tidy and clean.

I think of all implements that make for homely beauty there is none that compares with the broom and the rake. Well swept floors and porches and well raked yards never yet failed to bring their thrill of satisfaction and pride.

Next in importance to a neat yard is a green and colorful one. Any house, great or small, attains its real attraction and beauty in a setting which nature, with a little human effort, provides. What a pity it is not to take advantage of this kindly provision of nature when it costs so little and means so much. I'm grateful that out in our country relatively few families, and especially the children, are required to live in apartments and tenement houses without surrounding grounds. As I have driven through the streets of New York and the bigger cities and seen the little tots struggling to make their play dreams come true, out on the hard, unyielding pavement, without a spear of green or a flower or a tree, I have felt that I would like to pick up every child and bring it to a cottage where it could dig its fingers and toes into mother earth, not encrusted with an impenetrable shell.

AN APPEAL FOR BEAUTIFUL HOME SURROUNDINGS

What a marvelous boon is mother earth! How abundantly she yields of her hidden chemicals and nutriments to make the verdure and the vegetation that gladdens and supports the race. My brothers and sisters,—countrymen of these mountain valleys, I fear we scarcely appreciate the inestimable privilege that we have to live on the soil. Oh, for just a little labor and not much money to make the soil that we have taken from nature's domain and enclosed around our houses, beautiful and attractive!

I have said this much about esthetic considerations in the hope of encouraging our home people to make the most of their opportunities. If every man and woman who lives in a home would embellish it to the best of his ability I should feel little concerned about public buildings and property. There would be such pride engendered by these home-loving people that they would not permit the meeting house and the school house to suffer in comparison with their homes.

Here a little cooperation will bring the desired results. The contribution of a few hours of labor with perhaps a little cash will landscape the meeting house and transform it from a bleak and barren structure into a beautiful and inviting edifice nestled among trees, shrubs and lawns. The same may be said of the school house except that the school authorities are chiefly responsible and their responsibility for an ill-kept, forbidding and ugly school house is not so much to the town or community whose civic pride is hurt, as to the children, the boys and girls, who all through their lives will carry the impressions of ugliness which their surroundings inflict upon them.

The converse of what I have said is also true, namely, that beautifully landscaped and attractive churches, schools and other public buildings will do much to stimulate better care of homes and all private property. In fact, nothing can be done to stir and encourage the esthetic sense in any aspect of our surroundings and our living without promoting generally a more beautiful world.

DUTY OF MAN TO BEAUTIFY THE EARTH

I will turn your attention to another aspect of this subject with which I will conclude. I am sure that beauty is intimately associated with pure religion. I believe that our Father in Heaven is a God of order and of beauty. I doubt if any rational being ever entertained a concept of God, that is, as a personal Being, except in surroundings of beauty and exquisite loveliness. We so envisage heaven.

We as a church believe and so declare that in the end the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisiacal glory. When this is done it will be beautiful and glorious beyond finite conception. This being our doctrine, do you think it becoming in God's children to deface the earth while we sojourn here? Being the stewards and custodians of the resources which are committed to us, have we not an obligation to use them, preserve them and return them in the best possible condition of which our circumstances will permit? I think upon reflection you will say that we have such an obligation and that it is very definitely our task to make God's footstool as beautiful as we may. For "the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof," and the righteous "and their generations shall inherit the earth from generation to generation forever and forever."

What a delightful abode for men this good earth could be if men would but make it so! If neighbors all had flower gardens and gossip centered around daffodils, lilacs and petunias, there would be far more kindness and sympathy in the world. Even the thorns of roses do not irritate men's souls.

You will find that the unfortunate young men who today fill our prisons and other houses of detention do not come from pretty cottages with vines growing over the door, carefully trained by patient, tender mothers and you will find that the proud and haughty and arrogant of the world are not the true product of the soil. It is no misstatement that "the meek shall inherit the earth," for it is only they who truly acknowledge and worship the Master Giver.

Need I say more to persuade us that every consideration,—business, esthetic and religious,—constrains our people to take the lead in this worthy cause of beautifying the land? I understand that expert advice will be made available in the laying out of grounds, in planting and in other features calculated to reach the objectives of the program. With this aid our efforts will be successful if only our interest and our energy are sufficient.

A GREAT LEADER MENTIONED

What if our great and wise pioneer leader, Brigham Young, should return on the hundredth anniversary of his entrance into this the Salt Lake Valley? How it would please him and thrill his noble soul to find the cities, the towns and villages which he planned so well and strove so diligently and courageously to found, all in the bloom of midsummer, with farms and fields laden with maturing crops, with pastures and hills dotted with flocks and herds, with factories, business blocks, public buildings, schools and churches reflecting a vast development in enterprise, culture and religion which he so earnestly advocated; and then too, most thrilling of all, if he could find thousands of contented homes, nestled in the shade of myriads of trees, growing out of lawns, shrubs and fragrant flowers, all neat and clean, the habitation of an honest, thrifty, God-loving, joyous people, and all this in the desert valleys which he first saw, now transformed and beautified by the enterprise and the idealism of the generations that followed him! Surely the cup of his gratitude would be running over.

Why may it not be so? What more worthy and fitting tribute could we offer to those patient, devoted men and women whose courage, whose intelligence and whose labor have bequeathed to us the priceless heritage we now enjoy?

God grant that our love, our gratitude and our veneration may find tangible expression in beauty—beauty of life and surroundings, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

MESSAGE FROM PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

President Clark: We are pleased and I am sure we shall be enheartened by a message which has just come from President Heber J. Grant, which I shall read:

Los Angeles, April 7, 1940

Presidents J. Reuben Clark, Jr., and David O. McKay, Care Mormon Conference, Salt Lake Tabernacle,
Salt Lake City, Utah.

I cannot adequately express the joy that came from listening in on this morning's session of Conference. It came through wonderfully clear and was a spiritual feast in which many friends here joined. I was especially pleased that President McKay was able to speak with such ease. I am looking forward with great anticipation to this afternoon's session in which I shall join with you in spirit. I am feeling fine today and improving some every day. Please convey again to the Saints my love and blessings.

HEBER J. GRANT.

BISHOP LEGRAND RICHARDS

Presiding Bishop of the Church

More than anything else this day, my brethren and sisters, I feel grateful to the Lord for membership in this great Church. It has been a wonderful privilege to associate with President Grant, President Clark, and President McKay in the weekly meetings that we have been privileged to hold with them as members of the Presiding Bishopric. To me they are indeed prophets of God. I love and respect the members of the Quorum of the Twelve likewise, and the Seven Presidents of Seventy. I am grateful to the Lord for my Counselors because they are truly men of God. I am grateful for all you who are here representing the great body of the Church, these General Boards, the Mission Presidents, Stake Presidents, and their associates, the Bishops, these Patriarchs, and all who are putting forth their energies for the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God in the earth.

THE PRESENT NEED FOR TEACHING THE WORD OF WISDOM

I was very much impressed with the charge given to the Priesthood by President Clark in the opening session of this Conference, and I thought of the words of Dr. Widtsoe when speaking of the Word of Wisdom. He said there are some in the Church who feel that we have said enough about it. I have been in private conversation, and Sunday School classes where the thought has been expressed that they wished President Grant would cease harping on the Word of Wisdom. In my heart I have felt to say, "Thank God for the leader that he is who has the courage to speak out and present to the people the things which God has revealed!" I am sure if we appreciated the Word of Wisdom and its meaning to the Church as much as Satan appreciates what it means when we can be persuaded to disregard the same, we would appreciate it more than we do today. I am grateful to my parents who taught me to observe and keep the Word of Wisdom.

I am sure that as far as our young people are concerned, the members of our Church, a disregard for the Word of Wisdom is the first step that Satan would have them take in his great effort to destroy their souls. At the time there was war in heaven and Satan and his hosts were cast out, a cry went up in heaven saying, "Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea! for the Devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time."

In our Temples we are told of the use Satan would make of the riches of the world to try to destroy the souls of men. Last night in our Priesthood assembly Brother Merrill told us that some thirty million dollars are expended each year in the United States alone in advertising tobacco and liquor in an effort to induce our young people to break the Word of Wisdom.

MANIFESTATION TO A PATRIARCH

One of the most interesting things that has occurred to me during this Conference was a visit at the Presiding Bishop's Office of one of my former associates in the Church who was recently appointed a Patriarch and set apart and ordained by Dr. Widtsoe. He told me of how he felt his inability to meet that wonderful calling until he was blessed by Brother Widtsoe, and then he told of the joy he had had in giving blessings to the young people in the Church and of the manifestations that had come to him. Among other things he said that while he was blessing one young man he saw an evil spirit standing by his side, and the impression came to him that the evil spirit was listening to what was being said so that he would know what his mission in life was, that he might try to destroy that mission. It reminded me of a picture I saw in Brussels many years ago, when I was on my first mission, of a man who shot his head off, and by his side stood two angels, one of light and one of darkness, and as he committed the deed the angel of darkness laughed with a laugh of triumph and the angel of light turned his head and wept.

EFFECTS OF BREAKING WORD OF WISDOM FAR-REACHING

I am sure, my brethren and sisters, the Evil One is doing all he can to try to destroy the lives of our boys and girls. He did it with the Prophet Joseph. You will remember the Prophet's own testimony of how he was first overcome by the power of darkness, when he went into the woods to pray. He is seeking to destroy us because we have been given the Light, and I want to say to you that when we disregard the Word of Wisdom, we not only suffer a biological ill effect upon our bodies by using things that are not good for the body, but it changes our mental attitude toward the things of God. If you brethren and sisters question this, I would ask you to inquire in your own homes or the homes of your associates. I think you will find that when boys and girls commence using tobacco or liquor they cease to pray, and in most cases they cease to attend Sunday School, the Mutual Improvement organization, and other Auxiliaries of this Church. I think an examination of the rolls would indicate that this is true in almost every case. And that is not all. The Lord has indicated to us that these bodies are tabernacles of the Holy Ghost and that the Holy Ghost will not dwell in an unholy tabernacle. Paul tells us that these bodies are not our own but God has purchased them with a price and he that defileth the body, him shall God destroy. So, when we commence to do the things we should not do, and thus we quit praying, the Lord withdraws His Spirit and we are turned over to the buffetings of Satan. It is first a cigaret; then it is a glass of beer; then it is a drinking party; and that leads to immorality; and some of us know from our experience in the Church something of what this means. I wish that in all the cities of this great country all the Latter-day Saints were keeping the Word of Wisdom. I want to tell you that the light and influence that would go forth therefrom would touch the hearts and the lives of men and women who reside in our midst who are not members of the Church, and they would be led to do likewise. As the Master said, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

From a statement made by Dr. George Thomason, M. D., F. A. C. S., regarding the effects of tobacco, I read:

Our hearts are saddened and our eyes filled with tears at the sight of the mangled and crippled human wrecks left as an aftermath of war; but these do not compare in horror with the innumerable multitudes of hereditary defectives left in the wake of the vast army of cigarets. Is it fair to make the man or woman of tomorrow—our posterity—pay the fiddler for our pleasures today?

In the Ten Commandments, the Lord has said that He will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate Him, but show mercy unto thousands of them who love Him and keep His commandments. Keeping the Word of Wisdom will free us and our posterity from these calamities.

LIQUOR AND ITS TRAIN OF EVILS

Regarding the use of liquor, I should like to quote from the words of Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army:

Drink has drained more blood, hung more crepe, sold more homes, plunged more people into bankruptcy, armed more villains, slain more children, snapped more wedding rings, defiled more innocence, blinded more eyes, twisted more limbs, dethroned more reason, wrecked more manhood, dishonored more womanhood, broken more hearts, blasted more lives, driven more to suicide, and dug more graves than any other poisoned scourge that ever swept its death-dealing waves across the world.

If we never used tobacco and liquor, we would never have any of these things to contend with. It seems to me that the Word of Wisdom might be regarded as an insurance policy; if we keep the Word of Wisdom, Satan does not get to first base with us because we are not made subject to his temptations.

OUTSTANDING EXAMPLE OF AN ACTRESS

I should like to take the liberty of reading a quotation that appeared in the "Hollywood Citizen," under date of February 15, 1940, showing what the life of a Mormon boy or girl can do and of the notoriety it brings when they stand up for the things they have been taught in their Church:

Wonders never cease and today we met in the center of Hollywood a movie actress, and a beautiful one, too, who never has tasted a cocktail nor smoked a cigaret.

Her name is Laraine Day, and lips that touch liquor shall never touch hers, and if there is any other movie star with a record like that, we'll put it in our pipe and smoke it.

We're not trying to spoof Miss Day, either. She is a member of the Church of the Latter-day Saints, she's engaged to a missionary, and we have the greatest of respect for her. Only we're a little surprised that a girl of her temperament and background is in the movies.

"But it isn't at all surprising," she insisted, "Mormons don't drink or smoke, but they have no objections to the theater, or to motion pictures. In fact, I got my first stage experience in Church plays, and here in Hollywood I'm in charge of a Little Theater group sponsored by the Church."

Miss Day, who is hazel-eyed, barely 20, and one of the brightest of M-G-M's younger stars, likes night clubs, where she drinks either soda pop or milk.

"Keeping away from liquor is no problem for me," she said, "except in the movies. A few weeks ago I was in a picture where we were supposed to be at dinner, eating trifle. This is a British dessert, which consists of macaroons and whipped cream. So the studio sent to a caterer's and got a whole barrel of trifle. It was flavored with rum. I just tasted the whipped cream on top and didn't eat a bit of it!

We suggested that a tablespoon of rum in a pudding was no more intoxicating than a spoon of vanilla extract, but Miss Day said she wasn't interested in that. It was the principle of the thing.

Currently she is playing the leading feminine role in "And One Was Beautiful," opposite Robert Cummings, and if ever there was a living example of the fact that a girl needn't be wild to succeed in Hollywood, she is it.

Then the article goes on to tell more about her, how she earns a good salary; how she pays her tithing to the Church; how she converted her young boy friend, and he is now filling a mission for the Church.

If, like Miss Day, we would never touch tobacco or liquor, because of the "principle of the thing," we would never have to quit, and we would bring great honor to the Church. And, as I say, the principle is like an insurance policy, a protection against the snares of the Evil One and the consequences that follow the disregard thereof.

IMMORALITY A MODERN CURSE

In addition to the injury to the body because of the use of tobacco and liquor as I have stated, is the injury that comes from immorality. Those of us who have read and know something of the conditions in the world today know that this is a plague that is reaching into our very communities, that we should not be unmindful of, but we ought to surround our girls and our boys with all the influence and power possible to enable them to shun this evil.

I was delighted with the plainness with which President Clark spoke on this subject. In one of our meetings with the First Presidency, President Grant told of a letter he had received from a young woman who had been untrue morally and how she wrote and said to the President, "Why don't you publish a warning in the 'Era' and the newspapers and tell it in the organizations so that young people will know what it is when they have lost their virtue?"

I hope that the fathers and mothers in Israel are training their boys and girls today as my father and mother trained me when they told me that immorality was the greatest sin a man could commit next to the shedding of innocent blood, and that they would rather lay me away in the grave innocent and clean than to know I had lost my virtue or had robbed a woman of hers. I think, my brothers and sisters, that we need to do a little more of that kind of preaching today. It seems to me that one of the evidences that there is a God is the great scourge and curse that He places upon men and women who are immoral in their lives. A few years ago we read in a Salt Lake newspaper that a young man had committed suicide, and the paper said, "because he was despondent," but his father told me that the reason he committed suicide was because his body was wasting away as the result of immoral living. I might not have understood what he meant had it not been for an experience I had in Chicago when I was on my way to my first mission as a boy. We saw there photographs of men's and women's bodies literally being eaten away by the effects of venereal disease. It made such an impression upon my mind at that time that I could not help but think it almost as bad as leprosy. I read a report in one of the Railroad stations in one of our large cities not long ago that indicated that 780,000 young men reach their majority in the United States each year, and of that number 450,000, according to statistics of the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the United States of America, suffer from venereal disease. And that, in this great land we call a Christian nation. When we know such conditions exist, my brothers and sisters, we realize more the need of teaching our young people. I feel to thank God for these teachings. In my position as a presiding officer in this Church, I have had men come to me in transgression. I have seen them shed bitter tears, and I thank God for the principle of forgiveness of sin. I have wished it were even possible, not only to forgive the sin but to blot out the memory of the sin, and then I think as they grow in experience, even if they repent and they become useful in the Church, of the scars that are still there, when they know there are women who know they have been unclean.

The Lord said to Ezekiel of old that He had placed him as a watchman on the towers of Israel and when He gave a commandment unto him and he failed to carry it to the people, then their blood would be required at his hands, but if he delivered the message, he would be free. I think it is up to the Elders in Israel and the officers of this Church, as President Clark has said, to let the people know so that we might keep ourselves free from responsibility for their sins, and help them to remain unspotted from the sins of the world. "Blessed are the pure in heart," Jesus said, "for they shall see God." God help us to be that, and our children likewise, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

The Ladies' Voices of the Tabernacle Choir sang "O Divine Redeemer" (Gounod-Cain).

ELDER RICHARD R. LYMAN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

The purpose of my remarks this afternoon is to appeal to the people to come to the support of the Church Welfare Plan.

DIRECTION OF WELFARE PLAN BY LEADERS

Our leader, the President of the Church, has directed its organization and operation. And he has appealed to the people to come to the support of this undertaking in much the same way as did Paul the Apostle when, in speaking to the Elders of the Church, he said, "Ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said, It is more blessed to give than to receive." (Acts 20:35.) And President Grant has made his appeal with much the same earnestness and feeling as did Paul when he added, "Therefore watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears." (Acts 20:31.)

And while the aims of this Church Welfare Plan are many, on this occasion I am going to mention but two. The first of these is providing employment and teaching the untrained and inefficient how to work, and the second is eliminating the suffering and the handicaps that are due to poverty.

THE IMPORTANCE OF EFFICIENCY

After projects have been created and employment has been secured, hardly anything is more important than teaching people how to work and then teaching them the importance of performing assigned tasks with reasonable speed and efficiency. There are mothers who say that because they themselves had a hard time they are going to see to it that their daughters have an easy time. And there are fathers who say because they themselves had a hard time in the days of their youth, they are going to do their utmost to see to it that their sons have an easy time.

Strong men and strong women, those who work efficiently, those whose services are always in demand, are not brought up having an easy time. Work is the only thing in the world worth while that wins. The world seems to be seeking always the services of those who work with a high degree of speed and a high degree of efficiency. Such individuals are rarely unemployed. It has been wisely said that he who can write a better book or preach a better sermon, or even make a better mouse trap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten pathway to his door.

And since it is the ability and the willingness of people to work, and the speed and the efficiency with which they toil, which creates a demand for their services, one of the outstanding purposes of the Church Welfare Plan after providing employment is to teach people to work. At the same time it should be borne in mind that there are two periods in life which ought to be free from the necessity of earning a living. One of these is childhood. No child ought to be compelled to work for his daily bread. And the other period is old age. No one who is old, especially when in poor health, ought to be compelled to work for his living.

THRIFT URGED

And if these two periods in life are to be free from the necessity of earning a living, it will be necessary for those who labor to lay something by during the laboring years of their lives in order to provide for the necessities of childhood and the necessities of age. This can be done only when and if frugal ways, frugal habits and industry are the characteristics of those who toil. These desirable conditions can be brought about only if workers during the earning period of their lives spend less than they make.

PROJECTS TO BE PLANNED

It is the aim of the Church so to train the people that they will have the character and the honor, the desire and the willingness, to give a full day of honest, efficient service for a full day's pay. The able-bodied are expected to work for their daily bread. Projects of many different kinds and descriptions are to be organized in every Stake and Ward and Mission and Branch of the Church with the hope and with the expectation that those who are able to work will be given an opportunity, on these projects, to provide themselves, by honest effort, with the necessities of life.

HUMAN BEINGS NOT ALL ALIKE

And in all this the natural weaknesses and imperfections of mankind must be taken into account. There are those in the human family whose mental make-up is such that for them to learn to lace up their own shoes is a real accomplishment. In fact the mentalities, capacities and abilities of human beings are so varied that one wise man has said: The human family may be divided into three groups with a rather high degree of accuracy. Fifteen per cent of the human family will work whether they are watched or not. Thirty-five per cent of the human family will work if well watched, and fifty per cent of the human family will not work watched or otherwise." I leave it to you to decide for yourselves whether or not this conclusion is correct.

A GOOD REPORT FROM ONE STAKE

The second aim of the Church Welfare Plan, as I have already stated, is the elimination of the suffering and the handicaps which are due to poverty. In a Stake Welfare meeting held recently the Ward Presidents of the Relief Societies of the Stake were called upon for reports. And all stated that in their respective Wards every family had been visited and every home had been carefully investigated. The visitors found that all the families were comfortably housed, no child was, nor were any of the unemployable aged, required to work for a living. There was no child bare-footed. There was no child that was hungry. All the children were well clothed. All of the aged and all of the children were reported as being well cared for and it was stated further that the children all had ample opportunity to attend school. Thus, in that particular Stake, the aim had been reached of eliminating the suffering and the handicaps which are due to poverty.

A STORY REVIEWED

The main purpose of these remarks is to appeal to you to come to the support of this Church Welfare Plan. I repeat the words of the Master Himself, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and the words of Paul, "Ye ought to support the weak." I can think of no better illustration of what I mean than the impressive lesson taught in Van Dyke's grippingly interesting religious story entitled, "The Mansion." I shall give this story briefly in almost the exact language of my close and beloved friend, that master of English literature, the late Dr. Henry Van Dyke.

John Wightman, a wealthy business man and banker, dreamed that he was sitting on a stone, not far from a broad pathway, in a strange land. The travelers in little groups or larger ones were all clothed in white. It was like some old picture. Now and then one of the travelers would smile, and beckon John Wightman a friendly greeting, so that he felt as if they would like to have him join them.

This was a vastly different world from that in which the palatial mansion of John Wightman on a great avenue of a great city, a modern metropolis, had been built. All of this looked strange to him and yet most real—as real as anything he had ever seen.

He had a faint premonition of what all this must be, but, wishing to be sure, he walked toward one of the passing groups of people. One of them turned to meet him and put out his hand. It was an old man under whose white beard and brows John Wightman saw the face of the village doctor who had cared for him when he was but a poor boy in the country.

"Welcome," said the old man, "Will you come with us?"

"Where are you going?"

"To see the heavenly city, to see our mansions there! Come join us. It will do you good. You also must have a mansion in this heavenly city waiting for you—a fine one too. Are you not looking forward to seeing it?"

"Yes," replied John Wightman, "Yes, it must be so. But I had not expected to see it so soon. I will go with you and we will talk on the way."

The doctor had little to tell of his plain, hard life in the country. It had been uneventfully spent for others. His story and that of the country village where he lived was a very simple one. A much richer story was that of John Wightman's adventures, and triumphs, full of contacts with the great events and the great personages of his time. But in that wide, heavenly moorland, in that free air of perfect peace, John Wightman did not care to speak much about his experiences.

All the people in these groups seemed to be people who, during their lifetime upon the earth, had been folks of comparatively little consideration. But John Wightman was glad that they would all find fit dwelling places prepared for them; but he thought also, with a certain pride and pleasure, of the great surprise that some of them would feel when they saw his appointed mansion. If they were so sure, each one, of finding a mansion there, could not he be far more sure? For his life had surely been more fruitful than theirs. He had been a leader, a founder, owner and manager of many new and important enterprises.

Now, before these travelers, stood the heavenly city. It was white and wonderful. Its walls were so low a child could see over them. The gate of this city was not like a gate at all. It was not barred with iron or wood; it was only a single pearl which marked the place where the wall ended and the entrance lay open.

A person standing there said, "Come in, you are at your journey's end and your mansions are ready for you."

They passed from street to street among fair and spacious dwellings adorned with an infinitely varied beauty of divine simplicity. The mansions differed in size, in shape, in charm; each seemed to have its own personal look of loveliness. As the company came one by one to the mansions prepared for them, and their guide beckoned to the happy ones to enter into and take possession, there was, on the part of all of them, a soft murmur of joy. These new and immortal dwellings were lovelier and nobler than all the earthly dreams they had had of them. One after another the travelers were led to their own mansions and went in gladly; and from within, through the open doors, came sweet voices of welcome and low laughter and happy song.

At last there was no one left with the guide but the two old friends, the village doctor and John Wightman. They were standing in front of one of the largest and fairest of the heavenly mansions whose garden glowed softly with radiant flowers. The guide, laying his hand upon the doctor's shoulder said, "This is for you. Go in. There is no more sickness here, no more death, no sorrow, no pain! The old enemies are all conquered, and all the good that you have done for others, all the help that you have given, all the comfort that you have brought, all the strength and love that you have bestowed upon the suffering, are here, and we have built all of them into this mansion for you."

The good man's face lighted with a still joy. He clasped his old friend's hand and whispered, "How wonderful all of this is! Go on, you will come to your own mansion next no doubt. It will not be far away. We shall see each other again soon, very soon."

And so the village doctor went through the garden and into the music within. The keeper of the gate then turned to John Wightman with level, quiet, searching eyes and asked gravely, "Where do you wish me to lead you now?"

"To my own mansion," answered the man with half-concealed excitement. "Is there not one here for me? I am John Wightman. I wish very much to see my mansion. I believe that you have one for me. Will you take me to it?"

The keeper of the gate drew a little book from the breast of his robe and turned over the pages.

"Certainly," he said, with a curious look at the man, "Your name is here; and you shall see your mansion if you will follow me."

It seemed as if they must have walked miles and miles through the vast city before they came into a kind of suburb where there were many small cottages. Finally they reached an open field, barren and lonely looking. In the center of the field was a tiny hut, hardly big enough for a shepherd's shelter. It looked as if it had been built of discarded things, scraps and fragments of other buildings. These, however, had been put together with great care by someone who had taken great pains to make the most of cast-off material. There was something pitiful and shameful about the hut.

"This," said the keeper of the gate, standing still and speaking with a low, distinct voice, "This, John Wightman, is yours."

An almost intolerable shock of grief, wonder and indignation choked the man for a moment so that he could not say a word. Then finally he turned his face away from the poor little hut and began to remonstrate eagerly with his companion.

"Surely, sir," he stammered, "You must be in error about this. There is something wrong—some other John Wightman—confusion of names—the book must be incorrect."

"There is no mistake," said the keeper of the gate very calmly; "Here is your name, the record of your title and of your possessions in this place."

"But how could such a house be prepared for me?" cried the man, with a resentful tremor in his voice. "Is this a suitable mansion for one so well-known and so successful in life upon the earth? Why is it so pitifully small and mean? Why have you not built it large and fair like the others?"

"That is all the material you sent to us."

"What!"

"We have used all the material that you sent us," repeated the keeper of the gate.

"I acknowledge," added the man, "that I considered my own interests too much. But surely not altogether."

Dimly, through the trouble of his mind, John Wightman began to see the seriousness of his situation.

"What is it that counts here?" he asked.

"Only that counts here," said the keeper of the gate, "which is truly given. Only those things are given consideration in this place which are done solely for the love of doing good, only those plans are given consideration in which the welfare of others is the master thought. Only those labors count here in which the sacrifice is greater than the anticipated reward. Only those gifts are given consideration in which the giver forgets himself!"

THE WORDS OF THE SAVIOR

And I will conclude this, my appeal, to you, to come to the support of the Church Welfare Plan with the following familiar words from the 25th chapter of Matthew: (verses 31-40)

When the Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory;

And before Him shall be gathered all nations; and He shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats;

Then shall the King say unto them on His right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world;

For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in;

Naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me.

Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink?

When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee?

Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee?

And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Again, in the language of Paul the Apostle, let us "Remember the words of the Lord Jesus how He said, It is more blessed to give than to receive." (Acts 20:35) And may we all be found among those worthy, unselfish and righteous ones who feed the hungry and clothe the naked, I humbly pray.

ELDER JOHN H. TAYLOR

Of the First Council of the Seventy

As a people we have been thoroughly traditionated in the thought that it is a duty as well as a privilege for all of our men, as conditions will permit, to go out and preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Tradition is a wholesome thing provided it has had its beginning in high ideals, courage, the thought that we are the servants of the Lord, and that these high ideals have been carried unchanged from the past down to the present.

ASSIGNING MISSIONARIES TO NEW FIELDS

One of the ideals of the missionary is that he is willing to go wherever the Lord requires him to do. Last night in our Priesthood Meeting we sang the song "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go, Dear Lord." Perhaps we never have had the same opportunity of witnessing a demonstration of this attitude with as large a number as we had recently when, on account of the war, missionaries were returned from Europe to America. Through the kindness of the First Presidency I was assigned to go to New York to work with President Frank Evans of the Eastern States Mission in receiving the missionaries as they arrived. Hotel accommodations and transportation were arranged for them and mission assignments were made for those who were to finish their missions in the United States and Canada. It has been indicated by President Clark the amount of work that was accomplished in handling the missionaries. May I say in addition that the short stay of the missionaries in New York was made more enjoyable because of the splendid hospitality and kindness of President and Sister Evans and the missionaries in the office.

When the missionaries were to be reassigned we expected to use the same methods that were used when they left home, that is, we thought that we would be able to interview missionaries and find out in detail concerning their attitude and their desires. After the first group or so, it became evident that because of the short time they were in New York, this would be impossible. We therefore took the attitude that most of the missionaries coming from Europe were experienced, well trained and full of faith and therefore would be willing to go wherever they might be assigned for the best interests of the work of the Lord.

I am quite sure that all of the missionaries, just as we would have felt ourselves, had some thought or desire as to where they would like to labor while in the American Missions. Most missionaries, at the time of their call, have had the experience of making mental adjustments. At home we send out missionary calls all over the Church only knowing in a small way the disappointment that sometimes comes to the missionary and the parents when they find that he has been assigned to a mission field different from the one most desired. But with good courage and faith in the work, they do not ask for a change.

I might say that we were helped in selecting new mission fields for the missionaries by the kindly instructions of the brethren at home and also by the suggestions of the Mission Presidents under whom they had labored. However, these suggestions were only few in number. The assignment of the great majority was left to me.

A meeting was held with each group. The missionaries, as they came into these meetings had, I am quite certain, a desire or wish that they might be sent to certain mission fields. We came to each meeting with a sincere prayer in our hearts that the Lord would guide us in making the most suitable assignments. When names were read out and the mission fields were designated, it was astonishing with what good spirit they were accepted. The cases were few and far between when information was brought to our attention that a missionary thought he should have been sent to some other field. I can not remember of any missionary saying that he would not go to the field assigned to him.

To me it was one of the finest expressions of faith in the work of the Lord to see them accept these appointments, even though they might not have been as agreeable to them as some other mission field. And so, these wonderful boys and girls, holding on to the high missionary ideals of the Church, went into the different American fields and made the adjustment no matter what it was.

COURAGE AND FAITH OF MISSIONARIES

Not only had each missionary the experience of being transferred from one field to another but he also had the sad experience of having to say goodby to those faithful Saints in the foreign fields. I am speaking of those men and women in Europe who have shown much true devotion to the work of the Lord. The missionaries had also come in contact with the splendid Presidents and their wives in the foreign fields. They had learned to love these men and women, had become sincerely devoted to them because of their humility and ability as leaders. Now they were to come into another field and make new contacts, to work under different circumstances and conditions, and this took considerable faith and courage on the part of all these missionaries.

The reports that have come to us from the American fields have been most favorable. You parents can certainly be very proud of these boys and girls of yours who were in Europe, because of their attitude, their love of the work, their devotion to the Cause, and their determination to make good in any field or under any condition.

If future missionaries, parents, and those in leadership could constantly keep before them this example of holding true to high missionary ideals, I am sure that we should find an increase in happiness, spirituality and usefulness on the part of missionaries as they give service to our Heavenly Father.

May this be a part of our missionary life, a part of our true tradition that has been carried forward so splendidly all these years, and may we not be found wanting as we are called into the field, I pray in Jesus' name, Amen.

ELDER RUFUS K. HARDY

of the First Council of the Seventy

My beloved brothers and sisters, I am sure that I feel, as do you on this occasion, gratitude and joy and thanksgiving in our hearts for the presence here of President McKay.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE CONFERENCE FELT AFAR OFF

Somehow or other I feel that perhaps I am not mistaken in the thought that President Grant has been here with us. You know this world and its influences move on, and some marvelous things are coming constantly. Even today we have had a message from him, and his spirit and influence have been with us. When we gather together such a great concourse of people, such a marvelous gathering of the Priesthood as was here last night, that power, that influence, that strength and might which emanate from each individual spirit are felt by other individuals, and I feel confident President Grant will have received this spirit and this influence, together with love, hope, faith, and strength from us. Therefore, he has been blessed and we have been blessed in receiving from him his blessedness, his tenderness, love, and felicitations.

I thank God for His peaceful, sweet influence which has permeated this Conference and that all of us have been filled with the testimony of Jesus Christ, and the knowledge that God is our Father.

STAKE MISSIONARY WORK

As I come to these Conferences lately I have only one thing on my mind that I should like above everything else to mention, and that is the work which is being done by the two thousand missionaries in your midst in the Stakes of Zion. I thank you sincerely for your help and I would like you to know that during the year 1939, two thousand two hundred and twenty souls have been added to this Church through the missionary labors of those in the Stakes of Zion of this Church, and that four thousand souls have been gathered into the fold who had become somewhat indifferent and inactive. Those six thousand people engaging in activity in this Church—and they are about half the size of this audience—will add mighty strength and tremendous force to the work of God going on here on the earth today.

I sincerely trust that the early days of this missionary work, recently inaugurated, are over, and that our fine and splendid Bishops—God bless them for the help they have given—won't give us Tom, Dick, or Harry, whom they never have been able to get to do anything, and so they suggest them to the President of the Stake because if he can do anything with them in the missionary field the Bishops would like to see it done.

THE TYPE OF MISSIONARIES NEEDED AT HOME

God, our Heavenly Father, chose to give to you and to me the choicest soul He had—His Only Begotten—to lead the great missionary work of the earth and be the pattern for us to follow. These men and women, our stake missionaries, are meeting up and down the highways and the byways of our own cities and towns the finer people, the better class, those who need and seek instruction, and we need that better type of missionary; not only one who is trained, but one who is willing and desires to go forth and do that which God would have him do. I am sure that our work will be made much plainer and much more happiness will result if we are given that kind of missionary.

THE WORD OF THE LORD

I want to read to you something that I have copied, and then close:

• No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the Priesthood, only by persuasion, by long-suffering, by gentleness and meekness, and by love unfeigned; * * *

Let thy bowels also be full of charity towards all men, and to the household of faith, and let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly; then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God; and the doctrine of the Priesthood shall distil upon thy soul as the dews from heaven.

I am sure that we have received great blessings, great joys, and great happiness in this Conference, and I know that when we thank God for what we possess and what we are, we can do it with a better understanding and a fuller meaning, so that God Himself will know that we do those things which we have been taught and trained to do, which have been revealed by Him. May He give to us grace, peace, courage, and above everything else a desire to do that which is right, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER RICHARD L. EVANS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I have been thrilled since the opening of this Conference with each of the statements of my brethren, as I am sure you have been, beginning with the greeting from President Grant, continuing with the broad, enlightening view of the past year, and the deep and solemn admonitions for the year to come by President Clark, and continuing down through the remainder of the speakers.

I was thrilled this morning to have with us President McKay and to hear his remarks, as I know all of you were.

RECORDS MADE BY LEADING BRETHREN

When I came to my present calling in the Church I thought perhaps I should make something of a reputation in some field or another, and I looked around to see what records might be available that could be acquired. I saw that some of my brethren had acquired, justifiably, a reputation for being authorities in the field of doctrine—some were trained in the professions—some in law, some in the sciences; and I concluded that about the only record that was left for me to strive for was that of brevity of expression, but I anticipated no such cooperation from the presiding officer in helping me to achieve this record as I have had here today. (Laughter.)

SPEECHES THAT WERE NOT DELIVERED

I think it was just about a year ago at this hour that a similar situation had arisen, and Dr. Widtsoe was called upon to speak. He advised us that he had a prepared talk in his pocket, but there was no time to deliver it and he would probably deliver it at the next Conference. I think he did not deliver it at the next Conference, however, and my curiosity, fully equal to that of a woman on this particular subject, got the better of me, and I have asked him several times since what that talk was about. He has merely smiled, and I do not know yet.

I think my retaliation at this time will be of like character. I have a talk in my pocket. It was to have been a very good one. (Laughter.) It is still a very good one, but it is not for the ears of this congregation. I am not above borrowing time from my brethren here on the stand, but there is no one left to borrow it from except the congregation, and I refuse to do that.

A TESTIMONY AS TO TITHING

I should like to say one thing more. I was happy to hear the remarks yesterday of Brother Joseph Fielding Smith concerning the subject of tithing, and the brief but forceful message given in the Priesthood meeting last night on the same subject by President Clark. I do not know what a full tithing means to you, but I know what it means to me by the teachings of my great and good mother whose presence I so sorely miss at this time. It has meant to me all the days of my life a tenth of every dollar that ever passed through my hands, whether by gift or as a reward for labor. I am grateful for that example and that teaching.

I have thought at times that I would like to put the Lord in my debt, but have found that it is impossible to do so, and I commend to all of you who have not experienced the surpassing joy of attempting to do so that you do it. No one with whom you have any business in this world or out of it will repay you so surely or so generously. That is my testimony; it has proved to be so in my own life, and I know it will in the life of every Latter-day Saint who will take this principle of the Gospel and live it and reap from it all the material and spiritual rewards that come therefrom.

I wish to leave you my testimony this day, that I know that God lives as well as I know any of the material facts of life, or anything that I can reach out and touch with my hand; that Jesus is the Christ, and that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, as have been all his successors, including our present leader, President Heber J. Grant, whom I pray God will increase in health and strength and return to us, and I speak it in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER MARK B. GARFF

Former President of the Danish Mission

"Blessed is he who endureth to the end."

I bring the good greetings and the love of the Danish people who belong to the Church, to President Grant, President Clark, President McKay, the Council of the Twelve, the Seven Presidents of Seventy, the Presiding Bishopric and the Presiding Patriarch of the Church. That is my first obligation to this group.

My second obligation is that I shall extend the love of the Danish people to the congregation of the Church. That was their wish and their desire before I left that land.

I express my appreciation to Elder Richard R. Lyman, Elder Joseph Fielding Smith, and Elder Sylvester Q. Cannon for their visits to the Danish Mission, for the inspiration that they brought. I am most grateful and thankful for the opportunity I have had of giving service, that I was an instrument in the hands of the Lord in helping to evacuate the missionaries from Europe under the jurisdiction and leadership of Elder Joseph Fielding Smith. I learned to love him and I appreciate him. Even though we were eight thousand miles from the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ, yet I am sure that the same inspiration dominated all of us, and your sons and your daughters returned to the land of Zion, "a choice land above all other lands," because of the inspiration that our Heavenly Father granted unto His servants.

There is one thought that I would like to leave with you, and that thought is this: Why are you here today? Why are you not in war-torn Europe? Why aren't bombs falling on you? This is the only place in the world today—the United States—where there is any religious security, it is the only place where there is any guarantee of religious security, and why are you here? Why have you been so blessed? Because the Lord God talked to Joseph Smith and gave him commandments concerning the peoples of the earth; that he should go, and that he should send others to preach the Gospel to the nations of the earth. Some humble missionary left Salt Lake City, or left some other city, and went into far-away Denmark, into far-away Norway, and into far-away Germany, and other nations and sought out our parents, our grandparents, our great grandparents, and because the Lord sent those men we are enjoying the blessings of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. We are not Americans, a great part of us, because of any choice of our own, but because missionaries went to that land and brought us here. We owe that to the Gospel of Jesus Christ; we owe it to the Church.

If for no other reason I paid my tithing I would pay it because some humble missionary brought my grandparents to this country. I have an opportunity for religious freedom; I have an opportunity for economic security; I have an opportunity to hear the voice of the prophet of the living God, and oh how grateful I am that I have a testimony of the Gospel of Jesus Christ! How grateful I am that some missionary sought out my grandparents! How blessed am I that I have had the opportunity of rendering service in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints! I say this to you in all sincerity. The greatest thing that you and I can do is to give more richly than we have received.

I bear witness to you as a servant of God that He lives, and that His coming is near at hand. I bear witness to you that the door is opening, for He said a hundred years ago that His coming was near at hand, even at our very door, and the Lord will show unto the nations, and unto you, and unto all mankind that that which the prophets have said is true.

As recorded in the first section of the Doctrine and Covenants, the Lord said the time would come that they who would not hear the voice of His servants, the voice of the prophets, and the voice of the Apostles, would be cut off from among the people, and that has happened.

God grant that we may appreciate the fact that we are Americans. Do not sell your birthright for a mess of pottage. Do not barter your freedom away. Do not trade your Constitution for all the things and all the thoughts that are propounded by men, for they would steal from you your freedom, and the Gospel, and your soul for the almighty dollar. God lives. This is the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and I bear you my testimony in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I feel that I owe an apology to the other brethren because our trouble here runs back to the beginning; I talked too much the first day. So Brother Jacobs of the Palestine-Syrian Mission, Brother A. Richard Peterson of the Norwegian Mission, and later, Brother John A. Israelson of the Norwegian Mission, we shall hear from you next time.

I might say just a word myself. I wish sincerely to thank the brethren and sisters for the prayers which they have offered up in my behalf. Only the Lord Himself knows how much I needed help. This has been my first experience, I hope it is my last. I am grateful for the Spirit of the Lord that has been with us. I am grateful for the blessings that have come from the testimonies of the brethren who have spoken, and grateful that we have been able to let President Grant hear this great Conference.

I also leave my testimony with you of the truth of this great work in which we are engaged. I ask God to bless us always, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

I wish to thank the choir for the music rendered at this Conference, beautiful and inspirational it has been as always.

An anthem, "Worthy is the Lamb, and 'Amen,'" (Handel), was sung by the Choir.

Elder Heber J. Burgon, President of the East Jordan Stake, offered the benediction.

Conference adjourned sine die.

The congregational singing was directed by J. Spencer Cornwall and Richard P. Condie.

Accompaniments and interludes on the great organ were played by Alexander Schreiner and Frank W. Asper. Organ accompaniments and solo presentations for the Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast Sunday morning were played by Frank W. Asper.

Stenographic notes of the Conference were taken by Frank W. Otterstrom and Joseph Anderson.

Joseph Anderson
Clerk of the Conference.

Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith

Taken from his sermons and writings as they are found in the Documentary History and other publications of the Church and written or published in the days of the Prophet's ministry

Selected and arranged by the Historian, Joseph Fielding Smith, and his Assistants in the Historian's Office of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Many of these discourses and writings appear in the Documentary History of the Church, but others have not been included in these volumes, but are scattered through the early publications of the Church. It has been difficult even for the student to obtain these because the old publications are not accessible for general use.

LIFE OF JOSEPH F. SMITH

Sixth President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

By JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

From the day of his birth until the day of his passing—four score years—there was scarcely a day that was not filled with intense and interesting activity. He commenced life in the midst of tribulation and dark persecution, and through the greater part of his life he was called upon to face the spirit of hate and wickedness, to a degree almost beyond human endurance.

This volume dedicated to a man among men with the faith of the prophets of old. Its worth in your library is incomprehensible and its presence, when read, will give words of wisdom and words of courage.

FIRST DAY MORNING MEETING

The opening session of the Conference was held Friday morning, October 4, at 10 o'clock.

Every available seat in the great Tabernacle auditorium and galleries was taken, being occupied by people who had come from the various Stakes and Missions of the Church.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

The time has come to open the One Hundred Eleventh Semi-annual Conference. I am more grateful than I can say, and we here are more grateful than we can express, that President Grant is with us this morning and is presiding at this meeting. He has asked me to conduct these services.

All official meetings of the Church are announced in the Conference Folders, which may be obtained at the entrance to the Tabernacle. Those who expect to attend any of these meetings should provide themselves with a copy. All other notices, such as reunions, etc., will be found in The Deseret News.

The music this morning will be by the Singing Mothers of Bonneville, Cottonwood, Emigration, Ensign, Highland and Wells Stakes. They will sing under the direction of Sisters Josephine Brower and Olive N. Rich. The congregational singing will be under the direction of Richard P. Condie. The organist is Dr. Frank W. Asper.

The Chorus and congregation sang the hymn, "Now Let Us Rejoice."

Elder Joseph J. Cannon, President of the Temple Square Mission, offered the opening prayer.

The Singing Mothers Chorus, Sister Josephine Brower directing, sang, "Holiness Becometh the House of the Lord," (by Evan Stephens).

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Mrs. Jane Knowlton Kimball, widow of the late President J. Golden Kimball of the First Council of the Seventy.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAYSecond Counselor in the First Presidency*

It is now my privilege to read a Statement by the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

STATEMENT BY THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

The meeting of the Saints in this General Conference finds the world still war-torn. Millions of the Lord's children are suffering and mourning. All the woes and misery that attend armed conflict are spending their force upon them.

From these afflicted peoples comes the prediction that the approaching winter will bring famine. If famine shall come, the history of the past shows it will likely bring plagues with it.

Our brethren and sisters are found on both sides of this terrible struggle. On each side they are bound to their country by all the ties of blood, relationship, and patriotism.

As always happens in such cases, each side claims to believe it is in the right. Each claims to feel it is fighting for its very existence. As the war progresses in its cruelty and horror, each may come to aim at the complete subjugation or extermination of the other.

THE LORD'S WAY

This would be an inhuman and unrighteous purpose. God's way requires that nations shall live in peace and amity, one with another. The Master's command was:

Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you, Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use
you. (Luke 6:27-28)

The Saints on either side have no course open to them but to support that government to which they owe allegiance. But their prayers should go up day and night that God will turn the hearts of their leaders towards peace, that the curse of war may end.

God is not pleased either with war, or with the wickedness which always heralds it. When He uses war, it is to wipe out sin and unrighteousness.

The hearts of all the Saints are torn with grief over the sufferings of their brethren and sisters who are taking part in this struggle. So, for the Saints this is a fratricidal conflict. They so mourn over it. Their prayers ascend to our Heavenly Father that the war may come to a speedy end.

To those Saints who are stricken by this great tragedy, we say live righteously, pray constantly, and the Lord will answer as your faith and works and His all-wise purposes allow Him.

To those whose wickedness has brought this strife and turmoil, we say repent lest the Lord shall smite you in His wrath. He will not hold you guiltless of the innocent blood of your fellowmen.

To all the nations, we say adjust your differences by peaceful means. This is the Lord's way.

AMERICA'S OPPORTUNITY TO BE PEACEMAKER

To our nation we repeat the Master's admonition:

Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God. (Matt. 5:9)

How infinitely greater it is to lead nations to peace, than to subdue a nation to chains. Let America put her house in order, forsake selfishness, greed, and avarice, abolish unrighteousness, wipe hate from her heart, hold in loyal friendship the good and upright of all nations and peoples. Then to her shall come the high destiny of the peacemaker.

PRAYER FOR PEACE

We humbly pray our Heavenly Father, that He will send to the earth His messengers of peace, that this terrible war shall afflict no more nations and spread no farther over the face of the land, that fear and frenzy shall be driven out from their place among the peoples, that hate shall be banished from the souls of men, for where hate abides, there righteousness cannot live; that sanity shall again assert its sway, and that love shall fill the hearts of men even to overflowing.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

Taking advantage of the fact that I am conducting the meeting, and in order to put myself out of misery as early as possible, I wish now to say something to the Conference, and, as I wish to make it as concise as possible and be sure to say the things as nearly like I want to say them as possible, I have submitted it to writing.

PAMPHLETS

Reports come to us that pamphlets are being circulated among the people under circumstances that lead some to believe they are published and distributed under some kind of approval or sanction from the General Authorities of the Church. These pamphlets are said to contain extracts from early sermons delivered by the early leaders of the Church, the parts of the discourses printed having to do with world conditions which the compilers of the pamphlets apply to the situation existing in the earth today.

COMPILATION AND DISTRIBUTION NOT AUTHORIZED

The General Authorities have had nothing whatever to do with the preparation of these pamphlets nor have they sanctioned or approved their compilation or issuance. When the General Authorities shall wish to do anything of this sort, they will do it under their own names and will not hide their identity behind some Church member.

It is also reported to us that in many cases, these extracts as appearing in the pamphlets are in effect garbled and that moreover when read in the full text in which they appear, they take on quite a different meaning from what they seem to have when torn from their context. A text should always be studied for its real meaning in connection with the full context.

Furthermore, it is our information that these pamphlets are in some instances being surreptitiously merchandized even in the Temples, and also in Priesthood quorum meetings. This should not be done. The

Friday, October 5First Day

Temples are holy places; they are not book stores; they are not places in which propaganda is to be carried on. The people are warned against all these perverse activities. Moreover, Priesthood quorum meetings are not book-selling gatherings; they are meetings for the study of the Gospel and the carrying on of the regular Priesthood activities.

EXALTATION THROUGH TEMPLE MARRIAGE

There are too many marriages of our young people that are mere civil marriages—marriages for time. This is much to be regretted. It is a situation that calls for remedy from every Bishop, from every auxiliary organization, and from every parent.

After its absence from the earth for hundreds and hundreds of years, the Lord revealed in this Dispensation of the Fullness of Times, the principle of the eternity of the marriage covenant, and He restored to the earth the divine authority to consummate it. This revelation and this restoration makes of marriage a holy relationship, out of which and out of which only, can come man's greatest glory and exaltation.

OPPORTUNITIES FORFEITED IN CIVIL MARRIAGE

You young people are trifling with your divine destiny, you are treating lightly a great commandment, you are casting aside as dross the greatest opportunity that comes into your life, when you fail or refuse to be married in our temples where husband and wife may be sealed for time and for all eternity by the men bearing the holy Priesthood of God. A civil marriage—and that is all any marriage is that is performed outside the temple—merely legalizes a marital relationship. It has none of the effects of a sealing for time and eternity.

You young people, if you think enough of one another to marry at all, you should love one another enough to wish to perpetuate your association forever; if you do not think enough of one another for that, you may well hesitate long before you decide to go forward in life otherwise. The situation is not changed by having your Bishop or President of Stake, or some ex-Bishop friend, or like person, perform the ceremony for time. All these are civil marriages only.

OUR LANDS

In his eloquent oration on the Pioneers last July, President Bryant S. Hinckley read the following statements made by Brigham Young:

Talk about these rich valleys, why there is not another people on earth that could have come here and lived. We prayed over the land, and dedicated it and the water, air, and everything pertaining to them unto the Lord, and the smiles of heaven rested on the land and it became productive and today it yields the best of grain, fruit, and vegetables. . . . There never has been a land from the days of Adam until now that has been blessed more than this land has been blessed by our Father in heaven; and it will be blessed more and more if we are faithful and humble and thankful to God for the wheat and corn, the oats, the fruit, the vegetables, the cattle, and everything He bestows upon us, and try to use them for the building up of His kingdom on earth.

I can remember, and so can all you older brethren and sisters, when our lands were in the heyday of their productivity. We can remember when the snow drifted deep in the mountain gorges, when the run-offs of the springtime made our streams rushing torrents that watered our lands and spread out upon them the rich fertilizing sediments from the mountains, when our farmers and stockmen were prosperous, when we merited the symbol adopted for the State—a busy hive of industry, when our homes and fences and barns and corrals were in repair, when our farmers' words were as good as their bonds, and both were A-1.

CHANGING SCENES

The old time snows have not been falling in the mountains for many years. Our farms are run-down, many acres of them are idle, our fences and barns and corrals are falling down, our homes are unpainted, the roofs leak, our streets are full of weeds, too many of our meeting houses are shabby, we look too much like idling ne'er-do-wells. Another fifty years of this will almost return us to the desert.

Again quoting Brother Brigham:

You inquire if we shall stay in these mountains. I answer yes, as long as we please to do the will of God our Father in heaven. If we are pleased to turn away from the holy commandments of the Lord Jesus Christ, as ancient Israel did, every man turning to his own way, we shall be scattered and peeled, driven before our enemies and persecuted until we learn to remember the Lord our God and are willing to walk in His ways.

There are other enemies than human persecutors. We can be our own worst enemies, and drive ourselves away from our most cherished possessions.

LAND BLESSED THROUGH PRAYER AND EFFORT

Would we not better pray again over this land and the air and the water and everything pertaining to them? Would we not better turn our reliance to our own efforts and their fruits as blessed by the Lord? Why should the Lord bless the land we do not farm? Why should He give us water for that land we are not using? Why should He give us crops when we do not plant? Why should He bless us with His blessings when our reliance is put not in Him but on government gratuities for not working, for not farming, for not doing the things that have been man's allotted part since Adam was driven from the Garden.

The Lord cannot be pleased with shiftless idleness; those of us in default must mend our ways.

The tragedy of all this is, that the innocent must as always suffer at least in part the punishments that afflict the guilty. The rain falls on the unjust as upon the just, and the lands of the just parch as do those of the unjust. Yet God will not forget those who serve Him and keep His commandments. Their reward is sure, in their happiness, in their blessings of contentment, of health, of the consciousness of a life well lived, in their salvation and exaltation.

CHURCH GRAIN ELEVATORS

As the press has announced, the grain elevator which has been under construction at the Church Storage Square has now been completed. Its capacity is 318,000 bushels. With what may prove to be a spirit of forecast, it has been named Church Elevator No. 1. The Church also has an elevator at McCammon, Idaho, with a capacity of some 80,000 bushels, and a small one at Sharp's Spur, Levan Ridge, with a capacity of 8,500 bushels—or a total wheat storage capacity of some 400,000 bushels.

The Church has borne the cost of securing and building these elevators. The Relief Society Wheat Fund will be used by the Relief Society to fill the elevators with wheat. The Church will assume the upkeep, maintenance, repair cost, as also the cost of storage of and in these elevators. It will be necessary from time to time to replace this wheat so stored. The Church will absorb the losses incident to this operation, and if at any time such operation yields a profit, this will be applied towards the costs of running the elevator.

So far as possible, all labor incident to this storage operation will be Welfare labor.

A relatively small part of the storage space in these elevators will be used by the Welfare Committee for storing various grains in connection with their various operations.

WHEAT DONATIONS RESTORED

Thus we return to its original form the donations of wheat, made by the people to the sisters, and by the Relief Society sisters themselves, beginning back in the time of Brigham Young. These donations were made at the sacrifice of comforts and sometimes of necessities. In the beginning they frequently represented the result of gleaning the wheat fields by the sisters themselves,—a grievous toil oftentimes, but one that brought joy to their hearts at the time and a reward from their Heavenly Father in the hereafter. Our fathers and grandfathers, our mothers and grandmothers were fashioned in heroic molds; they were built of the virtues that make mighty empires. It is not too much to hope and pray that we of our day may measure to their stature.

WELFARE PLAN

The Welfare Plan is growing daily in its efficiency, thanks to the untiring devotion of the Welfare workers in the Wards, and Stakes, and at the central office.

The Plan has now been in operation a little over four years. During that time it has helped an average of about 50,000 individuals annually. Experience has been gained that has enabled those in charge so to perfect their plans that, as was stated at the last April Conference, we feel assured that short of a great worldwide calamity that should affect the very foundations of our whole economic life, the Church will be able to care for the indispensable needs of its worthy poor, in time of want. This was our first objective,—to maintain life.

TO REBUILD CIVIC, RELIGIOUS LIVES

Co-equal with that was the rebuilding in those who had a temporary misfortune, of a full civic and religious life. It was the aim that no one of them should come to feel that because he had suffered a financial setback, he had had closed against him any social or spiritual activity or opportunity for progress and ultimate achievement. No Bishop has done his full duty, and no Ward Relief Society has met its full opportunity, that has left any needy Ward member in doubt on these matters.

From the very beginning, the problem has been to keep away from ambitious and often ill-considered plans and schemes for remaking society and recreating our economic structure. It would have been a simple matter to begin visionary undertakings that would not only have bankrupted the Church but that would have broken the heart and courage of all of us by the greatness of our disaster. We have therefore gone slowly and watched each step taken. The Lord has been with us in this plan.

EXPANSION OF PLAN

As by-products of securing the necessities of life for the needy, we have ventured into a few other fields where we felt we could help those who were near distress as well as those actually in need. We have created an organization that has made small character loans to men and women who could not borrow from financial institutions; we have set up a manufacturing establishment for the renovating and building of household furniture and fixtures, which gives employment particularly to willing but aged unemployables, and that provides cheap articles for the needy. We have set up an agricultural committee to help find farms for young men especially who wished to farm and whose training and experience gave some reasonable assurance they could farm successfully. We have now set up a committee whose business it is to investigate what, if anything, the Church may wisely undertake to do, consistent with its resources, to help by advice or otherwise in setting up cooperatives, both for production and marketing.

MEASURES TAKEN TO PRODUCE WELFARE MATERIALS

One of our aims has been to produce as fast and as fully as possible, within the program itself, all the materials we need to carry out our Welfare work. We are doing this first by making surveys of the needs of each Ward and Stake of the Church, then by making a budget of production covering these needs, and then by assigning these budgetary needs among the various Stakes able to produce them. The first year we were able to furnish only some 10% of what we used. This proportion has constantly risen each year until last year we produced approximately 58% and this year we expect to produce, in our better organized regions, substantially 70% of our needs, and we hope by another year to make it nearly 100%. There will always be a few articles, such as spices, for example, that we must buy.

In doing all this, we have acquired and are operating a coal mine, we have helped in starting lumber mills, a plaster mill, we are now setting up a poultry farm, and are preparing to install a milk processing plant. Other things will be added as rapidly as consistent with a wise development. Lastly we have set up, as an experiment, a small revolving fund to be used in building very modest homes for those who are in a position to get some help from financial institutions. This can easily lead into such large outlays of money that we are going ahead very carefully and slowly. We never forget that the funds we are handling are stamped with the most sacred trust that can mark money, for they are the tithes and offerings given by the Saints to build up the Church and Kingdom of God. Out in the Northwest they are carrying on locally such a housing program under most promising circumstances. The same sort of operations are going on in many other parts of the Church, principally under the direct sponsorship of Priesthood quorums. All this is most gratifying and encouraging. We are very hopeful that out of all these experiences we shall be able to work out a successful plan for such undertakings, but, I repeat, we are going slowly and cautiously, and here, as always, we must look primarily to the local groups themselves to carry on this work, not alone the work of supplying the labor therefor, but the burden of furnishing the finances, also. The Church cannot undertake, the undertaking would be too vast, to furnish the money for this and other like matters, the Church Wards and Stakes or Priesthood quorums furnishing merely the labor. These agencies must also look forward to furnishing the great bulk if not all of the finances as well as the labor for such special projects.

WELFARE PLAN FOR MUTUAL HELPFULNESS

As was expected, there are now appearing certain tendencies which unless we meet them squarely and correct them at once, will lead to the creation of a Church dole system, the very last thing the Church intends to do. From the foundation of the Church until now, idleness has been condemned as unworthy of Church members, as destructive of character, as violative of the true Christian life, as contrary to the command given to Adam as the law of this world "In the sweat of thy brow, thou shalt eat bread." The Lord has repeatedly spoken about it in our time.

The task which the Welfare system has now most urgently to do is to provide work for those who receive help. We urge all of the people to cooperate with the Ward Welfare Committees to this end. It should be possible for plans to be worked out by which any man in a community having a job to be done could go to his bishop and state his need; that then the bishop, either directly or through the Stake or regional organization, could supply this man with the help needed for the job; the man having the work done would pay to his bishop, as a contribution to the Welfare Plan, the cash value of the labor at the regular wage values; to the man doing the work at the instance of the bishop, the bishop would give as compensation for his work, an order on the storehouse for the things which the man needed, or in some cases the man might be given part cash, the order on the storehouse and the cash to furnish sufficient to meet the needs of the one doing the work. Such an operation will give the Welfare worker something to do, it will enable the member having the work to do to get the work done as cheaply and as well as he could get it done otherwise and it will give to the member having the work done and to the Welfare worker joy and satisfaction over their mutual helpfulness. I want to say to the people of the Church that we have found these Welfare workers capable and industrious in what they undertake. They are not the kind of workers that the W. P. A.'s are sometimes described to be. Welfare workers are frequently men who from one cause or another are no longer employable in regular industry but who, like their younger fellow Welfare workers, can and will still do a day's work for a day's pay. We honor all such men and are grateful to the Lord for their integrity, industry, and devotion to their duty, and for their loyalty to the Church.

"GOOD TIMES"

By the present outlook, there will be for the next months a great increase in industrial activity, which may be expected to have a general reaction on all business, and if so we shall have a period, longer or shorter, of so-called good times. We members of the Church should not be misled by this. The great bulk of the money which is to be expended in this industrial expanse will be wholly unproductive from an economic standpoint. The nation will be billions poorer, not richer by these expenditures, in so far as our economic, commercial, and industrial national life is concerned. These billions must be raised either by increased taxes, which we must expect will increase the cost of living, or by further borrowings that will greatly increase our public debt and so add to our taxes, or the money may be raised by both means. As I said at another Conference, after the war with all this destruction of wealth—that is property—is past, we must be prepared to face another depression, the depth and duration of which we may not now know. We shall hope that this temporary "prosperity," as we shall probably call it, that may come, will not lead the Welfare organizations and workers to relax any effort to perfect their organization so as effectively to carry on their relief work. I assure you we shall hereafter need all the help we can now plan and provide for.

COMPULSORY MILITARY SERVICE INAUGURATED

In saying this I am not passing any judgment upon or making any criticism of our preparedness program. We must be able to resist invasion. But I may point out that for the first time in our history we are inaugurating universal compulsory military service and apparently we are preparing to maintain a great standing army, both of which have been under a wise ban during our whole national existence, because they have been deemed dangerous to our Constitutional government and to our free institutions.

INVASION A REMOTE POSSIBILITY

It may also be observed that we have had built in our minds a sort of frenzy of fear of foreign and subjugating invasion. Responsible military opinion credibly reported, is to the point that while desultory air raids causing great damage and considerable loss of life, might, under more or less ideal weather conditions over the whole Atlantic, be made against some of our Eastern coast cities, yet an armed invasion by great foreign armies sufficient to conquer us, is such a remote possibility under existing means and methods of transportation as should not make us hysterical, and we are nearly so now.

It does seem that if the navigation of a channel 20 miles wide can hold up a belligerent from making even an attempt at armed invasion for a period of weeks now ripening into months, that the navigation of an ocean 3000 miles wide might be a sufficient barrier to any great armed invasion at all, and we need not take too seriously threats by that belligerent to do so, or his brags either. One hundred thirty odd millions of free people, with unlimited resources and the highest industrial development in the world, will give some pause to the most ambitious ruler. Nevertheless, until the world quiets down and sanity comes back to men, we should be prepared to repulse such an invasion if it came. Our preparation should be solely to repel invasion, not to conduct an aggressive war nor to make conquests. But let us not fall into a panic of fear.

WAR

In the hope that it may tend to mitigate some of the hate now rising that threatens to engulf us, as well as for our peace of mind and our ability to gauge future happenings, it seems well that we should be under no misapprehension as to the present status of the United States in the existing European conflict. By all the rules and principles by which nations have governed their conduct in the past, the United States has already committed several hostile acts and we are in fact now at war.

It is the settled law of war, that the private citizens of neutral states may, without in any way jeopardizing the neutrality of their sovereign, carry on commerce with either or both belligerents subject to certain rights of search, seizure and confiscation by the belligerents in cases of trading in contraband of war or in case of violating a legal, effective blockade; but it is just as well settled that no neutral state can itself supply one belligerent with the materials of war, without thereby losing its character as a neutral and becoming itself a belligerent.

The nations of the earth in their last voluntary and near unanimous statement of the law on these matters, declared:

The supply, in any manner, directly or indirectly, by a neutral power to a belligerent power, of warships, ammunition, or war material of any kind whatever, is forbidden. (Hague Convention XIII, 1907)

U. S. NEUTRALITY VIOLATED

There seems no question but that we have supplied to one of the belligerents, our own secret inventions for waging war, our own air armament, and now our own armed vessels of war, fully provisioned and in every way equipped for immediate belligerent service. Opinions differ as to whether or not Congress authorized the last transaction, but Congressional approval would not change the international character of the act but only give relief from the violation of our own law.

We have been the victims of a similar act upon the part of Great Britain. In 1863, the Confederates were fitting out at Birkenhead, opposite Liverpool, two iron-clads for use against Union commerce. Our Minister in London repeatedly called the situation to the attention of Earl Russell, who replied that the British Government "could not interfere in any way with these vessels." Mr. Adams, answering, expressed "profound regret" at this conclusion of the British Government, and added: "It would be superfluous in me to point out to your Lordship that this is war." The British Government then acted.

As the result of other and many acts of the sort threatened here, we demanded arbitration as to whether or not Britain had violated her neutrality. Britain, be it said to her eternal credit (for our charges touched really her honor) consented. The result of the arbitration was the largest single award of damages in our favor ever rendered by any arbitral tribunal.

HOSTILE ACTS

Again there seems no doubt but that we now have made some kind of an alliance with one of the belligerents, Canada, that if her enemy shall attack her, we shall join in Canada's defense. Thus agreeing to give aid and succor to one of the belligerents against the other, if it is attacked by the other, and such attack is of course the normal course of war, is on our part a hostile, belligerent act against Canada's enemy. So we are at war also on that score.

Finally, while the details are not known, we are said to have leased some naval or air bases from one of the belligerents without, it is assumed, consulting the other belligerent. These leases are probably in such form and made for such purposes as also constitute hostile acts, for it is inconceivable that Britain, following her centuries-old policies, would lease to any power any of her territory for military use and occupancy, except she was to receive military aid as the result.

So we are at war. We should not be misled as to the nature of our acts, if and when Britain's enemy strikes back at us. In such event, should we be told that Britain's enemy commits against us an act of aggressive, inexcusable warfare, we should know that this will not be fact, for under the rules and principles of war we have already in effect declared war against that enemy.

As already stated, I have said these things in the hope that it may assuage a little the hate that will be piling up if and when that act comes. A Latter-day Saint cannot hate anybody. The hates of the last war are the moving cause of this one. So it will be to the end, unless we shall conquer hate. This the Gospel helps us to do.

REGISTRATION

Utah has an honorable record for its service and support of this nation in times of war. The people of the Church share in that record. The people of the Church are patriotic. In this time of preparation for eventualities which we all pray may not come to us, we people must do our full share. We shall confidently expect that no young man member of the Church, will seek to evade his full responsibility. We feel assured that every young man will do his full duty, and live the precepts that guide the Church and its membership "in obeying, honoring, and sustaining the law." We ask our young men who go into training camps to remember always the teachings of their parents and of the Church; we ask them to keep themselves unsoiled, in body and mind; we ask them to remember that our faith requires that they be 'honest, true, chaste, benevolent, and to do good to all men, . . . and that if anything is virtuous, lovely, or of good report, or praiseworthy, they should seek after those things.' If they shall do all these things we promise them the blessings of the Lord.

FAMINE AND PLAGUE

As has been already noted, both belligerents appear to have predicted famine for the other. One of the belligerents has, according to the press, predicted plague for the other. If this prediction means that the one making it intends to infect the other with plague, by some means or other, then it must be said that such infection would mark a degree of infamy and savagery for which the modern world holds no parallel, and against which all the instincts of humanity would cry out and all Christian principles adjudge condemnation.

But war always brings plagues which seem to find their best breeding places in great groups of men brought together in armed camps. We may not confidently expect that plagues will not break out in Europe, nor that breaking out there, they will not appear amongst us. I have pointed this out before.

Our hazard will probably be increased through our great training camps, which must also be manned by a great group of physicians, surgeons, and nurses that will be taken from their service to the whole people.

We at home owe it as a duty to ourselves, to our country, and to humanity, to keep ourselves as free from contagion, as fully healthful, as possible.

THE LORD'S DISEASE-PREVENTIVE LAW

The Lord has told us how to do this. Many have not hearkened to His word, who would not deny its truth; others have not believed it was His word. But God will vindicate His commands, by blessing those who keep them, and by permitting the ordinary laws of nature to operate, uncontrolled, upon those who do not.

President Grant has for half a century been preaching the Word of Wisdom to the people. If we had followed his counsel, we could now face the future fearlessly. If sickness and disease shall overtake us, we shall then remember. It is to be hoped that if disaster shall overtake any of us, we shall not be in such a situation that we must reproach ourselves for a failure to live the disease-preventive law of the Lord.

How glorious are the blessings promised to those who do keep God's laws:

And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their navel and marrow to their bones.

And shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures;

And shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint.

And I, the Lord, give unto them a promise, that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them. (D. & C. 89:18-21)

THE PROMISE

This does not say and this does not mean, that to keep the Word of Wisdom is to insure us against death, for death is, in the eternal plan, co-equal with birth. This is the eternal decree. But it does mean that the destroying angel, he who comes to punish the unrighteous for their sins, as he in olden time afflicted the corrupt Egyptians in their wickedness, shall pass by the Saints, who are "walking in obedience to the commandments," and who "remember to keep and do these sayings." These promises do mean that all those who qualify themselves to enjoy them will be permitted so to live out their lives that they may gain the full experiences and get the full knowledge which they need in order to progress to the highest exaltation in eternity, all these will live until their work is finished and God calls them back to their eternal home, as a reward.

These blessings will come to those who qualify as sure and certain as life itself.

Whenever we are inclined to appraise the dealings of God with His children, we should remember that God's ways are not man's ways, and that behind what we see and understand, are the all-wise purposes of an All-wise God.

May God bless us, preserve us, and help us to keep His commandments always, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

The congregation and Choir sang the hymn, "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet."

ELDER REED SMOOT

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I do not remember any occasion in my life that I have been more deeply impressed with the remarks of Brother Clark than I have been today—timely, wise, prudent—and I wish that every American citizen could have heard them. When I see this vast audience, knowing that every soul here was deeply interested—for I took particular occasion to see whether they were or not,—and I noticed there was no restlessness, I am convinced beyond question of a doubt that every word uttered received a hearty response in the hearts of the people, and created a spirit of testimony as to the wonderful conditions portrayed to us.

QUOTATIONS FROM THE SCRIPTURES ON PRAYER

I thought this morning that I would refer to Matthew, sixth chapter, (v. 5-13) in which we find the following:

And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, they have their reward.

But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.

But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions as the heathen do; for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

Be not ye therefore like unto them; for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him.

After this manner therefore pray ye; our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name.

Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find, knock, and it shall be opened unto you:

For every one that asketh receiveth: and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. (Matt. 7:7-8)

All things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive. (Matt. 21: 22)

Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them.

And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any: that you Father also which is in heaven may forgive your trespasses. (Mark 11:24-25)

SERVANTS OF THE LORD BLESSED THROUGH PRAYER

If you remember the time when Peter was imprisoned by Herod who was persecuting the Church, and prayer was made without ceasing by the Church of God for him. Peter was bound with chains and smitten between two soldiers, and the keepers before the door kept the prison. Behold, the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison, and he smote Peter on the side and raised him up, saying, "Arise quickly," and the chains fell off from his hands; and the angel said unto him, "Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals." So he did, and he said: "Cast thy garment about thee and follow me." He went out and followed him, and he wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; though he saw a vision.

When Paul the Apostle was preaching to his brethren in Asia, they were very sick and despaired of their lives, but the prayers of the people restored him to health and strength.

Have we in this day and age forgotten how to pray? Are we drawing away from our Father in heaven with our hearts? Let us remember the passage in James, chapter 1, verses 5, 6, 7:

If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.

But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed.

For let not that man think he shall receive anything of the Lord.

STORY OF A WOMAN'S CONVERSION

I heard a story of a woman, a fine woman of good family, who came through pain to the habit of drink and drugs. She fought against it with all the strength of her strong will and mind, but she could not conquer it. She went to a doctor and he helped her for a time. Then again she went under. She left her home and country and went alone to a strange land, hoping a new environment would put her on her feet, but she went down, and still further down. She met a Christian who talked to her of God. Her father and mother were intellectuals of their country; they had rejected God. She listened to the stranger who was a Christian, and longed to believe, but she could not, too deep was her conviction that God is only a wish fulfilment for weak people to hold onto.

One night there was a terrific electric storm. She was so frightened for fear of the thunder and lightning that it made her almost like her nerves were shattered. She walked the floor in fear of the terror of the storm. Finally she fell upon her knees and cried out: "You! You! if there is a You! send me a sign; stop this storm—stop it!" She crept back into bed, shaking and sobbing. The next thing she knew it was morning; the sun shining, and the birds were singing outside her window; not a cloud was in the sky. She had the feeling as though the world had just been made, and she with it, new and clean; life was new and holy. There was a God. The woman who had taken care of her came to see how she had stood the night through that awful storm; all night long it had rained. She stared at the woman unbelieving—the storm had been stopped—and then a smile and a light spread over her face. Never in all her life, not even when a child, had she slept through a storm. There was a God, and He answered, but in His own way.

She was won over instantly, she was cured. All desire for drink or drugs had been washed away. She became a power for good and gave her whole life to helping people find God.

MISSIONARIES SENT IN ANSWER TO PRAYER

I am thankful to my Father in heaven that He has answered my prayers and the prayers of my mother who prayed for the true Gospel to come to her while she was in a foreign country. He sent the missionaries of Christ's church with the truths of the Gospel to her in answer to her prayers. I am grateful that she taught me how to pray and to have faith that my prayers would be answered. St. John said:

And this is the confidence that we have in him, that, if we ask anything according to His will, he heareth us:

And if we know that He hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him. (1 John 5:14-15)

A PIONEER EXPERIENCE

After the pioneers had been here nearly two years the harvest was going to be a bounteous one, and they were very happy and thankful to their Father in heaven. But myriads and myriads of black locusts swarmed the fields, mowing down all they could on their onward march; the crops seemed doomed. No food was there to carry them through the coming winter; the nearest food was a thousand miles away, and it could come to them only by ox-teams. Famine itself came in its form over the ground. It smote the hearts of brave men with fear; not for themselves, but for their wives and children, dearer to them than life itself. Every effort to stop the plague of insect hordes failed. Desperation seized the people, and in this hour of trial and threatened tragedy there came to them the faith that God was their sole refuge. They prayed for help. Out of the sky came great winged clouds of gulls. They settled down on the fields. At first it looked like they came to help the crickets destroy. But their real purpose was soon apparent; they came to prey upon the destroyers. All day long they gorged themselves, disgorged, and feasted again. The white gulls fell upon the black crickets like hosts of hell until the pests were banished and the people saved. The birds then returned to the lake. Kneeling, the grateful settlers wept tears of joy over their temporary deliverance, and thanked their God for this answer to their prayers.

My father passed through that experience. I have heard him repeat it to his family many many times. The first time I heard it I was a small boy and it is too long for me to tell the story that he told me. But I want to say to you that there never was, as I know or have read about, a divine blessing from God when the people had to depend upon Him entirely, greater than on the occasion referred to.

Prayer is practiced in the Kingdom of God. Part of our prayers should be devoted to our leaders; they have great responsibilities. Oh, so many of the people do not realize the responsibilities that fall upon the President and his Counselors these days. It has been so from the beginning and as long as there is life it will continue to be so. Let us pray for our leaders at all times instead of criticizing them; pray that they may be given courage to continue with unflagging zeal from year to year; pray for the power of God to be upon them.

FAITH IN GOD SHOWN BY GREAT MEN

There is on the Sub-Treasury building in New York a fine piece of statuary of George Washington at Valley Forge, kneeling down in prayer in the woods. That figure explains a great deal the strength of Washington's life. It is no accident that the two greatest Americans to whom we all look up and most admire—Washington and Lincoln—were men of prayer and men of faith in God. Their strong belief in God was the rudder which guided the ship. Abraham Lincoln on one occasion said to his physician: "One rainy night I could not sleep. The wounds of the soldiers and sailors disturbed my very bones, pierced my heart, and I asked God to show me how they could have better relief. After wrestling some time in prayer he put the plans of a sanitary commission in my mind and they have worked out pretty much as God gave them to me that night. You ought to thank your kind heavenly Father and not me for the sanitary commission."

Benjamin Franklin said: Conceiving God to be the fountain of wisdom, I thought it right and necessary to solicit his assistance for obtaining it; to this end I formed the following little prayer, which was prefixed to my tables of examination, for daily use:

O powerful Goodness! bountiful Father! merciful Guide! Increase in me that wisdom which discovers my truest interest. Strengthen my resolutions to perform what that wisdom dictates. Accept my kind offices to thy other children as the only return in my power for thy continual favours to me.

William DeWitt Hyde wrote "A Boy's Prayer";

Give me clean hands, clean words, and clean thoughts. Help me to stand for the hard right against the easy wrong. Save me from habits that harm me; teach me to work as hard, and play as fair in thy sight alone as if all the world saw. Forgive me when I am unkind, and help me to forgive those who are unkind to me. Keep me ready to help others at some cost to myself. Send me chances to do a little good every day, and grow more like Christ the Savior.

George Careless wrote the music of one of the most beautiful songs we have in my opinion:

Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Uttered or unexpressed;
The motion of a hidden fire
That trembles in the breast.

Prayer is the burden of a sigh,
The falling of a tear,
The upward glancing of an eye,
When none but God is near.

Prayer is the simplest form of speech
That infant lips can try;
Prayer, the sublimest strains that reach
The Majesty on high.

Prayer is the Christian's vital breath,
The Christian's native air;
His watchword at the gates of death;
He enters heaven with prayer.

One who prays to his Father in heaven will not go far wrong. God will be mindful of him. God bless you all, and may we not forget to pray, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER JOSEPH L. WIRTHLIN

Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

I sincerely trust, my brethren and sisters, that I might enjoy the inspiration of the Lord's Spirit the moment or two I stand before you.

It seems that the minds of some of us run in parallel channels. Brother Smoot has addressed you on the subject I had in mind.

BLESSINGS ENUMERATED

I am very grateful for membership in the Church; I am grateful for my forbears who made it possible, by accepting the Gospel in Europe and coming to the Promised Land, for me and mine to enjoy peace and plenty. I am particularly grateful for the Priesthood of God which has been restored in these the last days, through the instrumentality of a prophet. I have only gratitude in my heart for the leadership in this Church, who have and are continuously advising and counseling people as to their spiritual and temporal needs. This advice and counsel is motivated and inspired from divine sources.

As parents a wonderful opportunity is ours, particularly in that everyone of our sons can hold the Priesthood of the Lord and receive all the blessings attached thereto. The Priesthood is a shield against temptation; it motivates and inspires young men to the highest and noblest of deeds, and every young man, whether he holds the office of Deacon, Teacher or Priest, is a servant of the Lord Jesus Christ. In accepting the Priesthood, young men, in all reality, enter into a contract with Christ whereby they will serve him faithfully and loyally when called upon to do so by those who are in authority, and the Redeemer will bless them, magnify them, and sustain them in their Priesthood work. All of these young men perform the various functions of their offices not in and of themselves as individuals, but, as I have said, as servants of the Lord Jesus Christ each one of them being commissioned to perform the duties of his particular office.

It is a wonderful thing to contemplate that John the Baptist, the forerunner of the Redeemer who held the keys of the Aaronic Priesthood in the days of the Lord Jesus Christ, returned to earth, bestowing this divine gift of authority upon Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery, giving them the right to preach the Gospel of repentance, to baptize for the remission of sins, and to enjoy the ministering of angels.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR BOYS IN PRIESTHOOD

Elbert Hubbard declared, "Be patient with boys. You are dealing with soul stuff; destiny awaits just around the corner." I am not hesitant in declaring there are no boys the world over where destiny is awaiting around the corner as it awaits with glorious opportunities for the young men who hold the Priesthood of the Lord Jesus Christ. Among them will be found the leaders of tomorrow: Bishops, Stake Presidents and General Authorities. With this future lying ahead of our young men, every parent must realize his and her responsibility in the task of guiding and directing these boys in thought and deed and qualification, in order that they shall be worthy and fully prepared to assume the duties and obligations of tomorrow.

May I say to those of our brethren who have the honor and privilege of associating with these boys in their Priesthood work, there is no work that can bring a higher degree of pleasure and satisfaction. Only a little time is required to get the confidence of a boy, and there is no confidence that is more implicit, and no friendship more loyal and devoted than that of a boy.

STORY OF A BISHOP'S SUCCESS

There was once a Bishop who had the high honor of ordaining 26 young men to the office of Deacon. The experience of ordaining so many young men made a deep impression on his mind, and he asked himself the question, "What obligations have I assumed now as the Bishop of this Ward in bestowing this Priesthood upon these young men?" And after careful and prayerful thought he arrived at the conclusion, there rested upon him and his two associates in the Bishopric, the responsibility of so guiding and directing the activities of these Deacons that when the time should arrive for advancement each and every one of them would be worthy and fully qualified to receive the office of a Teacher.

The first step in this program was to get the confidence of these young men. They were encouraged to present their problems to the Bishopric; problems of work, school problems, and the multiplicity of problems that boys of this age generally have. The boys responded, and these three magnificent men were always willing and prepared to render counsel and advice. Social activities were encouraged, the homes of the Bishopric, were frequented by the boys. Eventually these young men were ordained Teachers, and later the office of Priest was bestowed upon them. Eventually the day arrived when the young men reached the age of prospective missionaries. All of them were called; twenty-five responded, the other one having a physical ailment which prevented him from accepting a call. These young men were ordained Elders, went out in the world, and with the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ, preached His plan of salvation with vigor and force. These young men were honorably released, returned home, and all of them are now married and rearing fine Latter-day Saint families. In addition to this they are considered among the outstanding citizens of their communities. I am sure you will agree with me that this is an outstanding achievement. And why? Simply because three men took a little interest in some boys. The achievement of these good brethren can be the blessing and accomplishment of any one man or group of men that will manifest interest in the young men of the Church.

A BOY'S PRAYER ANSWERED

I was deeply impressed by Brother Smoot's address on prayer. May I say there was never a time in all history when the habit of praying should be encouraged as now. Young men who hold the Priesthood of God are more inclined to call upon Him for assistance than the young men who have failed to receive the glorious blessings of the Priesthood. I recall an instance that occurred during the darkest days of the depression.

There was a poor widow and her family struggling against great odds to sustain and maintain themselves. In this family group the oldest child was an 18 year old son who was deeply touched because of the family situation and the terrific struggle his Mother was having in solving their economic problems. One day he declared to her, "Mother, if you will permit me to go to California I can secure employment and at least render some small assistance to you." The mother replied and said, "Son, permit me to think this over for a day or two." After two or three days she called her son to her side and said, "I give you my consent; you may go to California upon one condition, and the condition is that you will always pray as you know we have prayed in this home morning and night, and although we have had our problems, the Lord has blessed us and assisted us in many ways."

With his mother's permission, this young man gathered his few clothes in a bundle, took some food and water, and went on his way. He had planned to secure a ride across the barren wastes of the American desert from some passing motorist, but during these dark days of the depression very few people were traveling, and consequently he trudged for two days over the desert, at the end of which time an inventory of his food and water indicated that unless someone picked him up he would soon find himself in a very precarious situation, and in addition his shoes were about worn out.

As he analyzed his condition there came back to him with a flash the advice of his mother—to pray regardless of where he might be. Looking up he saw in the distance a building, which proved to be a deserted service station. Standing by it was a dilapidated bill board. Arriving at the old building he went around to the rear of the billboard, knelt down and poured out his soul to the Lord, telling Him that unless someone came to deliver him, the possibilities were that he would perish.

That day a friend of mine was traveling across the desert, his destination a large city in California where a convention of his company was to be held. As he sped across the desert he was cognizant of the fact that he had passed an old deserted service station. Going on for some distance the impression came to him which seemed to convey the message that he should turn around and go back. At first he thought little of it, but the impression came the second time stronger than before. Finally he turned to his wife and said, "Mother, I have had two rather peculiar experiences. Something tells me we should turn around. Do you know of any reason why we should?" She replied, "No, but if you have had an impression I suggest that you turn around." He turned his car around in the middle of the desert, and upon approaching the old deserted service station and the dilapidated billboard, was hailed by the boy. The good man stopped and the boy asked if he might have a ride. Of course the reply was "yes."

The man, his wife and the boy again started on their way toward California. Naturally the boy and the man became very friendly, the boy declared to the man, "You are an answer to my prayer. I had neither water nor food, my shoes are worn out, and I knew that in and of myself I could do nothing, and so I went back of the billboard and asked the Lord that someone be sent to deliver me." The full significance of the impressions that the man had experienced now dawned upon him, and with a tear in his eye he said, "Yes, son, I know that I am an answer to your prayers."

Brethren and sisters, in this great Church many of our boys and girls could well afford to follow the example of this young man in being prayerful, and without doubt the Lord will hear and answer their prayers. We should teach them to pray; teach them to be loyal to the leadership of this Church and particularly to follow the admonitions of the men who have been selected and appointed by the Lord to guide and direct the destiny of this people. I challenge anyone to point out one instance where the President or his counselors or the Quorum of the Twelve have ever given any advice but what it was for the good and benefit of the people.

THE AUTHORITY TO BAPTIZE

As parents we should impress upon our young people that as servants of God they act in their Priesthood capacities because the authority they hold has been restored to earth from a divine source. Teach them that the Priesthood is the divine right bestowed upon men whereby they act as His servants and agents in performing the ordinances of the Gospel and in building up the kingdom. This thought was impressively demonstrated to me while laboring as a missionary in the State of Missouri. A lady presented herself to my companion and I, applying for baptism. The time appointed was a Sunday afternoon on the banks of the Spring River, outside of Carthage, Missouri. Upon arriving at the appointed place we discovered that another minister and his group had preceded us, and the ordinance of baptism was being performed.

We listened with a good deal of attention and interest to the baptismal prayer uttered by the minister. These were his words: "Under the great commission I baptize you in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost, Amen." The term "Under the Great Commission" stimulated some thought on my part. Returning to our room we opened our Bibles to see if we could discover what the minister presumed to call "The Great Commission." We found in the last few verses of the last chapter of the book of Matthew what is commonly known as "the Great Commission." As you will recall, the Savior was bidding farewell to his disciples for the last time, admonishing them in the following words, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

These verses the Lord spoke but to eleven men, commissioning them to go into the world preaching the Gospel of repentance and performing the ordinance of baptism for the remission of sins. Consequently he did not designate anyone who might have the desire to preach or baptize, which brings forcibly to mind the words of the Apostle Paul when he declared, "And no man taketh this honor unto himself but he that is called of God as was Aaron."

What a glorious thought it is to contemplate that the Priests of the restored Church of the Lord Jesus Christ have been called as Aaron to perform the ordinance of baptism or any other Aaronic Priesthood duty because of divine light. The young men who perform the ordinance of baptism under no condition or consideration ever have to beg the question of authority, using such terms as "Under the Great Commission." But they declare emphatically and with full knowledge, "Having been commissioned of Jesus Christ, I baptize you in the name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, Amen." And may I add they are the only group in the world who have the right to declare "having been commissioned of Jesus Christ."

SERVICE BRINGS ITS REWARD

I humbly pray that the Lord of Israel will bless, guide and direct us in our responsibilities of leading the youth of Zion in paths of righteousness. When the day of responsibility comes, they will be willing, qualified and worthy to serve in any capacity. Such service will bring to them the greatest of heavenly rewards, a reward that cannot be stayed by the hand of man or the evil one, a reward predicated on obedience to the Lord, for He always keeps His promises and rewards them that serve Him.

The Prophet Joseph Smith declared, "For whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two Priesthoods of which I have spoken, and the magnifying of their calling, are sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies.

"They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham, and the Church and Kingdom, and the elect of God."

May I earnestly suggest to you, there is nothing in this world that is of greater value than to achieve a place in the Celestial kingdom, wherein your sons and daughters may become the very elect of God, which I pray will be the blessing of everyone of them, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

The Singing Mothers sang the anthem, "Holy Art Thou," Sister Ruth Jensen Clawson, soloist, Sister Olive F. Rich directed the singing.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I would like to repeat my slogan of last Conference: Brethren and sisters, "Drive carefully." There is no reason why we should have a tragedy of death at almost every Conference which we hold. Brothers and sisters, if you will just take a little more time to get home or to get here, we will excuse you for being late at the meetings if you do so, and then we will not have these tragedies.

Elder Joseph T. Finlinson, President of the Deseret Stake, offered the benediction.

Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock p. m.

FIRST DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

The second session convened promptly at 2 o'clock p. m., Friday, October 5.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

The time has come to begin our afternoon session. We are again blessed with the presence of President Grant, who is presiding at this meeting, and who has again requested that I conduct the services.

The music this afternoon will be furnished by the Singing Mothers of the Bonneville, Cottonwood, Emigration, Ensign, Highland, and Wells Stakes. They will sing under the direction of Sisters Meryl T. Cardall, Permillia Bean, and Nellie N. Bennion.

Friday, October 5

First Day

Congregational singing will be under the direction of Elder Richard P. Condie. The organist is Dr. Frank W. Asper.

The Chorus and congregation sang "High on the Mountain Top."

Elder Jesse W. Richins, President of the Twin Falls Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The Singing Mothers sang Brahm's "Cradle Song," Sister Meryl T. Cardall directing.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

SUSTAINING THE AUTHORITIES

We shall now sustain the General Authorities of the Church.

For the benefit of those in the audience and those listening on the air, who may not understand this proceeding, I will make the following brief statement.

CHURCH OFFICERS SUSTAINED BY ASSEMBLY

In this Church all the General Authorities and other Church-wide officers are "sustained",—in a certain sense, "elected"—by the body of the Church in a General Conference, which is, speaking politically, a constituent assembly.

NOMINATING POWER RESTS WITH PRESIDENT

In this Church, the power of "nominating" or calling to office, is not in the body of the Church. This power is vested in the General Authorities of the Church, and in final analysis in the President of the Church who comes to his place under the guidance of inspired revelation. As a matter of fact, as our Articles of Faith—more or less the equivalent of the creeds of other Churches—declare:

"We believe that a man must be called of God, by prophecy, and by the laying on of hands, by those who are in authority to preach the Gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof."

When the presiding authority has so "nominated" or chosen, or called any man to office, that man is then presented to the body of the Church to be sustained, in political language "elected."

Thus the body of the Church has no calling or "nominating" power, but only the sustaining, or politically speaking, the "electing" power.

When the presiding authority presents any man to the body of the Church to be sustained, the only power which the assembly has is to vote, by uplifted hand, either to sustain or not to sustain.

MEMBERS CANNOT PROPOSE MEN FOR OFFICE

Obviously, neither the body of the Church, nor any of its members, can propose that other men be called to office, for the calling of men is the sole power and function of the presiding authority.

Therefore all debate, all proposals of other names, all discussions of merit and worthiness, are wholly out of order in such an assemblage. Any person attempting so to interrupt the proceedings would be a disturber of the public peace, amenable to the ordinary peace officers of the law and would of course be so dealt with.

CHARGES TO BE PREFERRED IN REGULAR WAY

I ought to say that any person having any charge to make against any officer of the Church can do so before the regular Church tribunals established for that very purpose of affording means of carrying out the discipline of the Church. But this sustaining, constituent assemblage of the Church is not such a tribunal.

We shall now proceed to propose the General Authorities of the Church for the sustaining vote of this great body of Priesthood and Church membership.

This is a solemn ceremony. You members of the Priesthood are exercising one of your greatest privileges and highest prerogatives.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH

President Clark then presented for the vote of the Conference the General Authorities and General Officers of the Church, also the General Auxiliary Officers, and they were sustained by unanimous vote of the congregation, as follows :

ELDER STEPHEN L RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

The morning breaks, the shadows flee;
 Lo! Zion's standard is unfurled.
 The dawning of a brighter day
 Majestic rises on the world.

A HIGH OBJECTIVE GIVEN

I can think of nothing more expressive of the joy and gladness which came to our forebears as they contemplated the value and extent of this great work which we have the honor now to represent. We are engaged in a great and glorious enterprise,—the establishment of God's kingdom in the earth. I know nothing which is calculated more to keep our thinking right and our devotion firm than to keep that transcendent mission of the Church ever present in our minds.

When I contemplate this high objective which is given to our people I recognize the need of applying our energy, our devotion, and our love to the accomplishment of this outstanding task, and I am almost overwhelmed at times with the tremendous responsibility, the obligation, and the opportunities which are entailed. I know nothing that would more help us to discharge this responsibility than to live in accordance with the principles of the Gospel of Christ.

A CONCLUSION REACHED BY PRESIDENT GRANT

I recall that some months ago—maybe it has been a year or more now—President Grant one morning came into our temple meeting and said in substance this: "Brethren, I have been thinking for a long time what I could best do in the closing years of my administration to advance the work of God and bless the people," and he said: "I have reached this conclusion that there is nothing I can better do than to persuade the people simply to keep the commandments of God." We all agreed with him, and upon reflection I think that all will concur that that is the best and most effective thing that we can do for the advancement of the great cause we represent.

THE SOVEREIGNTY OF CHRIST MUST BE ACKNOWLEDGED

In order that we may better keep the commandments I am persuaded that there must ever be stored in our hearts a deep and abiding love for our Savior Jesus Christ, who is the King of this earth, who is at the head of the Kingdom of God, and whose humble servants we are. We worship Jesus Christ as the divine Son of our Eternal Father. We are committed to the great philosophy of faith which He gave to the world.

We are not inclined, for which I am grateful, to worship merely His attributes, however desirable they may seem to us. We do not deny the sovereignty of the King Himself. In my humble judgment one of the reasons why the Christian faith has not made more progress in the world and has not more effectively influenced the life and the conduct of men and of nations lies in the fact that men have not, deep in their hearts, acknowledged the sovereignty and the Lordship of Jesus Christ. It is true that many of them have advocated His philosophy of life; they have admired His great altruistic sayings, and the policy of the good neighbor, the friendship He has taught, His kindness, His mercy, but they have refrained from acknowledging Him as the divine Ruler with power to order our lives and provide for us the one true way by which we can best serve Him, establish His kingdom in the earth and win our way back into His presence.

THE POWER OF GOD IS WITH HIS CHURCH

My brethren and sisters, I realize that it seems indelicate and presumptuous to some of our friends to make the declaration that here and here alone in all this wide world is to be found the true commission coming from Jesus Christ to His servants; that here only is set up the Church which is the foundation of the Kingdom, in the extension of which is to be realized our Father's purposes for the redemption and blessing of all mankind. I am aware that that statement does seem presumptuous, and I make it only because I am constrained to do so by the revelations that have come from God, and by the deep-seated conviction that I have that every word of it is true; that the holy Priesthood which has been given to men in this dispensation is the authentic, veritable power of God, that it came from divine source, and that they who first received it have given a true accounting of their heavenly experience in its bestowal.

I recognize the fact that most of us men are weak and frail individuals, and it may seem to our friends of the world that we are scarcely worthy or capable to exercise the functions of this divine power. I myself feel weak as I contemplate this investiture of power, and I constantly pray that God will give me more strength and more wisdom and discernment in the exercise of the functions of the holy Priesthood. I do know, however, that God will qualify those who truly keep His commandments and in whose hearts is an abiding love and a resolution to cherish this great and holy power that God has given to us. That power is needed in the world today. Thank the Lord that it is here to speak to the children of men. While they may not listen to it nor heed it, as coming from divine sources, there will come a time when men will recognize its authority and its import in the direction of the affairs of this world.

THE LORD MAGNIFIES HIS SERVANTS

I am not discouraged because I recognize that our numbers are still relatively small. Some one has said that there is but one Latter-day Saint to every ten thousand in the population of the world. It would seem an almost impossible task to disseminate the principles of truth with such a minority. But I remember that old saying that "God and one man are a majority" and I have confidence to state that if we keep ourselves in line with our duties; if we fully live these principles of the truth that we are charged to teach, God will give us power, He will magnify our work, He will make our messages reach into the far corners of the earth. He will sustain His own.

I recognize too that in our weakness and frailty we are not able to carry forward the work as expeditiously as we might like. I believe that every delinquent man who holds this Priesthood retards the progress of God's work. I wish it were possible to appeal to these thousands of men who have received this divine commission to mend their ways. I am convinced that they who will not use and magnify this Priesthood will in the end lose it. I am satisfied in my own heart that this power was given to us for service. I interpret it in terms of service; I am sure that the mere ordination is not sufficient, and only those will be ultimately chosen who make their lives conform to the principles upon which the Priesthood is founded. Then they will be vessels through which the Spirit of Almighty God may come to His children here in this earth.

REPENTANCE A SAVING PRINCIPLE

I trust that those who have been thoughtless, careless, and neglectful may repent of their ways. I deem it a great disaster for men who have had hands laid upon their heads in ordination to this divine power to forsake it. We hold out the hand of friendship and brotherhood and kindness and mercy and the principle of repentance and forgiveness to those who will repent.

Of all the principles announced by our Savior, none has ever found a higher place in my affections than the principle of repentance and forgiveness. It seems that this kind and merciful provision of the Gospel is more adapted to human weakness than almost any other. I trust that our officers and all of us shall show the spirit of forgiveness and kindness towards those who do repent. I know of no parable that breathes more the true spirit of Christ than the parable the Savior told of the prodigal son, and I have always felt that he told the parable for the benefit of the father even more than for the benefit of the children.

He had that wayward son take from his father his heritage, his patrimony, and waste it, and go away from his home, to spend that which had been given him in dissipation and riotous living, violating all the laws of his father's household, committing every sin in the category, and then, in the story, the boy was subjected to the utmost misery in penitence for his wrong-doing. After he had spent his wherewithal and was reduced to starvation, he was required to beg work from a friend he had known in his better days, sent to his estate; and, finally he came to that ignominious position of swineherd, a keeper of the hogs. We are told that so abject was his degradation that he was forced to eat the husks with the hogs which he fed. And then the spirit of repentance came over him and he recognized his great wrong, and he cried out to heaven, "I am no more worthy to be my father's son," and he pleaded for forgiveness. Making a resolution founded upon his penitence he found his way sorrowfully back to his father's home. Under the old Jewish law the father would have turned him out, but the Savior vested the father with a divine love, and when he saw his wayward son return in penitence he went forth to meet him. He raised him up and clasped him in his arms, and called forth to his servants to bring a robe and put on him and to bring a ring and put on his finger, which was the symbol of his restoration to his father's household, and cried out, "Bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it, and let us eat and be merry, for this my son was dead, and is alive again. He was lost, and is found."

That is the way in which the Savior brought the spirit of repentance and forgiveness, and it becomes us, members of His Church, to carry that spirit in our hearts, and to exercise it toward our brethren and our sisters. To those who have made mistakes we hold out this glorious principle of repentance—come back, forsake your sins, and be received into the household of faith and the brotherhood of the Priesthood.

JOY THROUGH FORGIVENESS

I have never seen happier people than those who have repented. I remember one time—I do not know whether the President will remember it—taking a young man to President Grant, a young man who had made a grievous error, heartsick and broken he was about it, and he said to me, "Do you think I could ever be forgiven?"

I said: "I will take you to the President."

We went to the President, and the President became convinced that he had truly repented, and he forgave him. Of all the joy and happiness that I have ever seen written on a human countenance I think I saw the utmost on the face of that youth as he appreciated this gift of repentance and forgiveness.

Now, my brethren and sisters, we know the great purpose of our Church. We know of the need of its glorious principles in this sad and torn world. God help us to live, so to keep the commandments, so to have the spirit of Christ, that we may establish His mighty work in the world, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER JOHN H. TAYLOR

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I have certainly been interested, my brethren and sisters, as you have been, in the very splendid remarks and counsel that have come to us so early in our Conference.

ADMONITION TO PROVE ALL THINGS

The other day I was reading the words of Paul where he gave us the admonition to "prove all things, and to hold fast to that which is good."

When I was a young boy my Sunday School teacher gave us this information. He said, "The flies are God's scavengers. You have noticed that just outside of the kitchen door the flies collect around the dishwater and other materials that may be thrown onto the lot and if it weren't for the flies eating up the waste material, we would all get sick." Of course this information was undoubtedly as good as could be had by him, or perhaps others, in regard to this matter. The fact that this had been told to us in Sunday School and by a man we all very much loved was no indication that the thing was right. Later in life we found that we could not hold fast to it because newly discovered evidence had proved it untrue.

If we follow the admonition of Paul and put sufficient time into proving all things we will be able to find the things to which we should hold fast. In the various scientific fields this has been followed extensively, and it is the only method that can be followed in order to arrive at the truth. I have this thought in mind: that we are very much concerned and we spend considerable time in proving scientifically whether things are right or wrong, eventually arriving at a basic truth, which always remains a truth and as such helps in arriving at other truths.

In the things that have to do with the Gospel of Jesus Christ, I am quite sure that we are not using this method to the same extent as we might use it in proving all things, and then in holding fast to that which is good. I heard one of our speakers say that we were on very poor ground when we thought our testimonies were sufficient in regard to some of the things that we declared that we knew. He said that very frequently, even when it came to testimony, we should put it on one side so that we might prove it right again. I can see no more advantage in eliminating the truth and the testimony that God gives us in religious things than I can see in continually disregarding basic truths of science. In arithmetic we might say that two times two are four is always correct, we prove it daily by its use. We get no place, we are confused when, in order to re-prove this proposition, we say two times two are five. It seems to me that this is the thing we do every once in a while with the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

THE VALUE OF A TESTIMONY

The Lord in His mercy gives to us a testimony and demonstrates it to us in such a conclusive way that we know that we do have a basic religious truth for our testimony. For example, we know and we testify individually and collectively that God is a personal being and that we are made in His image. If our experiences and investigations, and His inspiration to us have proved this to be a basic truth, we should hold fast to it because it is good.

Men in the past have not been able to understand our conception of God. They cannot see that anything in the shape of man could be able to have the ability, the power, and the majesty that dwell in God the Eternal Father. As we move through life we do have men who in a measure assume the qualities and majesty of God, and feel that they are quite necessary to the affairs of life, but these men are gradually eliminated as was the house that was built upon the sand. Perhaps the only trouble is that they are able to do so many wicked and bad things before the waves come.

We have the same proposition in relation to the Word of Wisdom. We know the fundamental truth of the Word of Wisdom is based on a truth that cannot be eliminated or removed by any type of argument or reason. For instance, in coffee we have caffeine that is harmful, yet we sometimes reason that the same thing that makes coffee objectionable may not be so objectionable when it is used in some other way. It just indicates that we have not proven the thing so thoroughly that we have been able to hold fast to that which is good and make it a part of our lives.

THE SCRIPTURES MAKE CLEAR THE TRUTH

The Lord has said: "Search the scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me." Thus we have a way of finding the truth regarding God and His relations to us. We have a way of establishing the truth so thoroughly in our hearts that we will be able to hold fast to it. Perhaps if we had had the same interest and used the same time and the same thoroughness in searching the scriptures of the Lord as we have used in the field of science, we would find that we were growing in the ability to hold fast to that which is good, and not let it get away from us.

We have practically the same advice given to us in the Book of Mormon, but we seldom have a desire in our hearts to know whether this book is right or wrong. If we will go to this book, according to Moroni, and read it in a prayerful way, with faith, desiring to have a testimony and to find out as to its truthfulness, by the inspiration of God and the power of the Holy Ghost we shall know the truth.

We who have taken this admonition, we who have accepted this way of proving the things of God, have readily found out, if we have done the thing sincerely, that the Book of Mormon is true, and that God gave it to His prophet, Joseph Smith.

SAFETY IN KEEPING THE COMMANDMENTS

There are so many things in life that are vital to us. If we would go where we want to go, if we would have the blessings that we would like for ourselves and our loved ones, we must find out the things of God and then hold fast to them and never let them get away from us, either in times of tribulation or temptation, or times of joy and happiness.

May the Lord bless us and help us to guard His word in that light and live sincerely the precepts and the admonitions given to us, for the Lord has said: "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Perhaps at the end of our lives we will have demonstrated how much love we have for God by the number of commandments that we have kept and held fast to. May He so bless us, I humbly pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

The Singing Mothers sang "Songs My Mother Taught Me," by Dvorak. Sister Permillia Bean directed the Chorus.

ELDER RICHARD R. LYMAN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Since we are living at a time when wars of the greatest known magnitude are being fought between some of the most powerful nations of the world, very naturally we are wondering what the results are going to be and particularly what part our own country will play in this intense and most disheartening conflict. We are all extremely anxious to know whether or not our government is so constituted that it can endure indefinitely, or whether the time is now approaching when government of the people and by the people and for the people is to perish from the earth.

Dr. Andrew D. White, great scholar, wise diplomat, historian, and the first president of Cornell University, said many years ago that since all the republics of the past have failed, he had made a careful study for the purpose of determining whether in our republic there is any element that did not exist in those republics which have not endured. His conclusion was that the only new and outstanding characteristic of our republic is its public school system and he expressed the view that if our nation is to endure indefinitely it will be because of the broad democratic training and education in our public school system that we are giving to all the citizens of our nation.

PUBLIC EDUCATION NOT ENOUGH

But there are those who have strong convictions that public school education alone is not enough to preserve indefinitely and in peace, the life, the liberty and the prosperity of this our beloved country, the United States of America. Many are of the opinion that other elements are necessary. Religion, morality, righteousness! These are elements which must be factors in the make-up of any nation, it is said, if that nation is to endure indefinitely.

Experience has taught that morality is the life of a nation and religion is the life of morality. "Arming a country with guns and tanks and airplanes is not enough," says Roger W. Babson. Selecting men for the army, the navy and the air force on physical fitness alone will not suffice. "If our defense program is to succeed," he continues, "the entire country must experience a re-birth, for in the end, only righteousness can save a nation."

REVELATIONS PERTAINING TO THIS LAND

Our modern revelations, as recorded in the Doctrine and Covenants of the restored Church, (Section 58) declare that this is the land upon which the Zion of God shall stand. The faithful are to have this land as an inheritance for their children forever and forever. Here the poor and the lame and the blind and the deaf are "to partake of the supper of the Lord." But in this land, these revelations tell us, the law of the Lord must be obeyed, and here, the record says, no man is to be in bondage to any other man, and it declares that the Constitution of our country was prepared under divine guidance. The Prophet Joseph when dedicating the Kirtland Temple prayed that the Lord would have mercy on all the nations of the earth, and he appealed especially for the Lord to have mercy upon this our own government, so that the principles of freedom and justice for all men guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States might be "established forever."

Then again, the inspired words of the Book of Mormon assure us that inasmuch as we live the righteous life and keep the Lord's commandments, we shall prosper here in America which the Lord says again and again is "a land choice above all other lands." The faithful, according to this divine record, are to enjoy this as a land of their inheritance and adds that this "land of promise" is for them and for their faithful children forever. Those faithful ones who have been "gathered here from other nations" are also to enjoy this as a land of liberty. The righteous inhabitants of this country, this inspired record continues, "shall never be brought down into captivity." Here "there shall be none to molest them," none to "take away this, the land of their inheritance."

A LAND OF PROMISE

It is gratifying and satisfying to us who have faith in the inspired words of this divine record, the Book of Mormon, to read further that "This land shall be fortified against all other nations," it shall be a land of liberty and upon it there shall be no king. This inspired book says further that God has preserved this country for a righteous people, and that whatever nation shall possess this land of America, shall serve God or else that nation "shall be swept away." "Whatsoever nation shall possess this land," the divine record continues, "shall be free from bondage, and from captivity and from all other nations under heaven, if they will but serve the God of this land who is Jesus Christ."

Our fathers came to this land of promise and under divine guidance, as we believe, they established our Constitution and government which guarantee freedom, liberty and justice to all men. Having been led and guided by providence very appropriately they adopted these words as the motto of our country, "In God We Trust," and it is fitting therefore that the people of our nation sing:

Our father's God to Thee,
 Author of liberty,
 To Thee we sing;
 Long may our land be bright
 With freedom's holy light,
 Protect us by Thy might,
 Great God, our King!

COERCION IN GOVERNMENT NOT THE LORD'S WAY

The Lord Himself has always favored government by the people. You will remember that in the days of Samuel the Prophet the Lord instructed him to let the people have whatever form of government they desired. They clamored for a dictator, a king, and because the Lord respected the right of free-will and human choice, because He recognized the right of men to govern themselves, and that it is better that humanity be self-governed, even though they are poorly governed, than to be compelled to obey even the divine law, He told the Prophet to let the people have a king, a dictator, since they insisted upon it. And the Bible tells us that after the decision of the Israelites to have a king, their dictatorial rulers wasted the substance of the people, they took away their personality and their freedom, and oppressed them with heavy taxes and other burdens. Instead of making a government for the people, as in a democracy, the people became the subjects of the dictators who did not rule for the good of the many but to bring power, wealth and idleness to a few.

Our government is founded on the principle laid down by the Lord Himself: that a man is capable of self-government. This is in harmony with the divine intent expressed by the Creator when He said:

Let us make man in our image, after our likeness and let them have dominion . . . over all the earth.

This important statement of man's right and ability to rule is expressed in our Declaration of Independence thus: "Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." And no doubt those forms of government in which there is an assumption to rule without the consent of those who are to be governed are responsible for that forceful expression, "Resistance to tyrants is obedience to God."

PROVISION MADE FOR THREE BRANCHES OF GOVERNMENT

Wisely did our forefathers organize our national institution with three different, distinct departments, each one to be entirely separate from and independent of the other two. These three departments are the Legislative, the Executive and the Judicial. These able and far-seeing patriots and statesmen thus made these three separate and distinct departments the cornerstone of our republic and the guarantee that in our land there shall never be a dictator.

Among those who created this great free government were Puritans whose ancestors had struggled for generations in England and in Holland to secure the right to think, the right to be free, and the right to worship God in whatever way they saw fit. In England, in those early days, non-conformity with the rules, regulations, beliefs and doctrines of the established Church was neither permitted nor tolerated. Puritanism contained the principle of true religious toleration. And doubtless the ultimate tendency of the views of the Puritans was to republicanism rather than to monarchy although in England the Church and the State were considered one and inseparable.

Eight restless years the Pilgrims spent in Holland where they had gone to find religious liberty and free government. They discovered soon, however, that for them Holland could not be a permanent home. Bradford says that when they looked toward America they were actuated by a great hope and an intense inward zeal to lay a good foundation in those then remote parts of the world for the propagating and the advancing of "the gospel of the Kingdom of Christ." They struggled to prepare stepping stones, at least, to assist others in the accomplishment of this great and important gospel service.

Thus were the Puritans inspired to come to America and here help to prepare a people and frame a government providing such religious tolerance that it was possible for God the Father and His Son Jesus Christ to come to these United States and here restore and establish the Gospel in its original fulness. Under these just and liberal laws it was possible for the ancient church to be established again with all its keys, rights and authority to teach, preach and proclaim the fundamentals of righteousness in preparation for the coming again of our Lord and Master who is to bring joy, happiness and peace to the world.

TWO ANTAGONISTIC FORCES AT WAR

These great present-day battles, to which I have referred, the greatest of all time, are contests between two forces which are utterly antagonistic. One of these is impelled by the despotic passion to rule mankind and rob human beings of their free agency, and the other has for its cherished ideal the right and ability of man to rule himself. The one contemplates government dominated by dictators; the other is the plan of the Almighty who created men free and equal and endowed them with the right and the intelligence to be their own sovereigns. The Creator never intended that a tyrant should assume the role of dictator and lord it over the sons and daughters of God under the despotic motto: "Might makes right."

Our forefathers interpreted this great fundamental principle of freedom for mankind in these words:

All men are created equal. They are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights. To secure these, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. Whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to abolish it.

The aim of our patriotic fathers was to establish a government that would guarantee to them and to their descendants to the last generation freedom, security, and happiness. They expressed their feelings in the Declaration of Independence which says:

Appealing to the supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, we do in the name and by the authority of the good people of these colonies solemnly publish and declare that these United States are and of right ought to be free and independent states.

And the exalted republican principles for which these great and mighty leaders stood are thus expressed:

We the people of the United States in order to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

JESUS PROMOTED THE RIGHTS OF MANKIND

Christ Himself did not come to the great and to the mighty of the earth; He came to humble shepherds who were watching their flocks by night. But for His teachings, His announcement and defense of the sacred right of all men, you and I today might be the slaves of tyrants, the bondsmen of cruel masters. Clarence True Wilson said:

From the scorching fires of every persecution there has arisen some leader with a tongue of fire who has been inspired by the love of Jesus Christ to call men to a higher, a purer and a better life. Jesus promoted the rights of mankind. He is the Creator, he is the Architect of the republican form of government.

His Church stands on the principle of human brotherhood. He taught that he who humbleth himself shall be exalted, that this world of ours is for us all and not for a select few. No one ever chose for his followers and associates men less gifted, more simple, plain and humble than did Jesus when he selected his twelve Apostles. And yet see into what heroic, noble, able, death-defying characters they became. Thus the Savior Himself demonstrated that the humblest men may develop into the highest characters. He had high regard for the plain people. Every example He set, every doctrine He taught was, it seems, intended to show that genuine greatness is in the act of service. He taught the equality of men and the dignity of those who are poor and stricken. The longest sermon he ever preached was delivered, it is said, to a motley crowd of peasants and fishermen. To this audience of ordinary people he gladly gave those great ideas and ideals contained in that matchless religious appeal, the Sermon on the Mount.

THE CHURCH AND THIS GOVERNMENT

Our nation, our country and this Church, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, seem to conform to what was predicted and specified by the ancient prophets. We verily believe that in our present combination of Church and government we have what the Prophet Daniel said had been shown to King Nebuchadnezzar in his famous dream. The king was shown things that are to come to pass in these latter days. Many nations and many kingdoms are to be destroyed, but the God of Heaven is to set up a Kingdom which shall never be destroyed, a Kingdom that shall not be left to other people, a Kingdom that shall break in pieces and consume all other kingdoms, and, the Prophet adds, it is a Kingdom that shall stand forever. It is the stone cut out of the mountain without hands, the stone that is to become a great mountain; yes, the prophet says it is the stone that is to fill the whole earth. (Daniel 2) It is our belief that this refers to our own land, choice above all other lands, and to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, with its principles of free agency and self-government.

PEACE ACHIEVED THROUGH UNSELFISHNESS

And now, in the name of Him who is our only King, Jesus the Son of God, let us as members of the Church and as citizens of this great nation, unite in an appeal to our heavenly Father, with whom nothing is impossible, to bring to us and to all mankind that glorious blessing of peace, good will and understanding, for which righteous people all over the world these days are so devoutly praying. And when making these our heartfelt, prayerful appeals may we never forget that only by living unselfish lives, by feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, visiting the fatherless and the widows in their affliction and extending to all men their God-given liberty, can we hope to secure joy and happiness and everlasting peace.

By our faithfulness and devotion to these righteous principles may we bring to our beloved nation and to the distressed people of all the world these choice blessings, I humbly pray, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

ELDER MARVIN O. ASHTON

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

I have been impressed as you have by the services thus far this afternoon, and of course what was said this morning. I do not know what part of President Clark's talk impressed you most, but I know what gave me the most comfort. It was when he said: "I will now speak and take a hand in putting myself out of misery." Shocked as I was in hearing one of the Authorities make such an intimation, I thought, "Well that certainly helps some of the rest of us out." After all, as someone has said, "There is as much human nature in one of us as the rest of us."

There are two things that a person prays for in trying to fill this speaking responsibility. One is, he prays that he will feel at ease to the extent that he might say what he would like to say; and, second, that what he does say may be tempered with inspiration from above that he will be wise in saying nothing that would be improper. I certainly pray that I may be blessed in these two regards this afternoon.

VISITS TO STAKES BRING ENCOURAGEMENT

The Presiding Bishopric have been going through the Church considerably lately. We see what is going on here, and what is going on there, and of course in some of these places we see what is not going on. It is a wise observation that we should not be pessimists. We are cautioned to observe the bread part of the doughnut as well as the hole. Now it is not my purpose in any sense to be a pessimist. I want to appreciate the food of the doughnut as well as the space inside.

When you see two hundred lads of the Aaronic Priesthood take part in a chorus in a Stake conference, you begin to realize that somebody is at work with boys. When you see some Stakes do outstanding things you thank God for such leadership. The other day in one of the Stakes I called at a little home and saw sitting on the floor three deep—they had to sit on the floor to be accommodated in the house—about fifty-five to sixty young people, ninety per cent of whom having attended their sacrament meeting this night, now assembled in a Book of Mormon class, wholesomely conducted by themselves. You see those things and you are impressed.

When you see a little Bishop stand up and say that he could account for every one of his Lesser Priesthood boys for the past ten years, and each one of them is wholesome, clean, and sweet, it makes you appreciate what some people are doing. Of course that sounds pretty much like the fellow they tell about crossing the plains, driving a swarm of bees. He contended he did not lose a bee. But I believe that Bishop. God bless him!

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE PICTURE

Now for just a minute let us look at the inside of the doughnut. You cannot ostrich-like put your head under the sand and say there is no danger about you. You have to take facts as they are. There is a fact thrown out to you and to me that is a challenge, and I mention it. This is our work; I mean the Aaronic Priesthood. It is the work of the Presiding Bishopric. There are right now 36,733 adult Aaronics in this Church of record; men twenty years of age and above who are not Elders or hold the Melchizedek Priesthood. May I remind you that the average attendance at sacrament meeting of these men is five per cent. I have too much sense to condemn that group of men. The best gold we have, we shall find in those men if we dig down deep enough and use the right process in "smelting the ore." Now there is a challenge to you.

Another way of saying it is that out of ten boys from twelve to twenty you are really teaching or training only six the way you should. Now put that figure in front of us—36,733. Look at it sideways, from the front and from the back, any way you want to look at it! It is there staring us straight in the eye. Someone has said, "Let us have the strength to face a fact though it kills us." Let us face the facts.

Now what about your pedagogy, what about your human kindness, what about your boys' men—ability, and all the rest of the virtues that we oftentimes brag about? I ask you the question, where is it all? Where are those other four? Why don't we touch their lives more successfully than we do?

APPEAL FOR BETTER LEADERSHIP

Sometimes I think we give the boys an acid test and a burning test. Let me explain what I understand that means: If you will take a bone that has stood on an anthill for three or more years, (I don't care how dry it is), and you soak it in muriatic acid, as dry as that bone is you can tie it in a knot. You have nothing but gristle or animal matter left. Now take what you have left and put the torch under it and you haven't very much left of that bone. The muriatic acid in one case eats up the mineral or the lime, and the burning eats up the animal matter.

Now that is just what some of us do with boys. I am looking now at the inside of the doughnut. I am looking at those things we do not do. I am keeping in mind all the time some of the fine things that we do. You give the boy the acid test and then the burning test. Now let us see what we mean by the acid test. Here is one:—you give the boy improper supervision. Someone has said, "We are not shepherds, we are sheep herders." We "taketh" them not down into green pastures, but we "draggeth" them over cacti and rocks, and before we get through with them, their mouths are bleeding from briars and thorns we "suffereth" them to eat. Sometimes if you get a good boys' man for the boys, along comes a petty vacancy in the Ward and you let him go. Somebody suffers. There is not a bigger job in this Church than taking care of these boys. The boy of today is the man of tomorrow. When our deacon comes to his quorum meeting, too many times he is met with an unprepared program. He is met too many times with a leader who knows little or nothing about boy psychology or the first principles of getting his interest. We fumble him about with our clumsiness and lack of consistent follow-up until up his sleeve, while he respects us, his soul rebels against our promiscuousness.

When you see these figures—just four out of ten—you may think of that poem, "The Charge of the Light Brigade," and say to yourself, "Someone has blundered." We'll have to wake up; we'll have to put more life into our stewardship, if you please, of these boys. I cannot think of anything that better illustrates what I want to say than a story that has been told before. I apologize for alluding to it again, but it may crystallize better what I am trying to say.

A Scotch minister had trouble with a good brother in his congregation who would go to sleep. The minister stood it as long as he could. Finally he called Sandy to him and told him he would have to stop going to sleep; he could not stand it any longer; that he was setting a bad example. The brother insisted he couldn't help it. Finally the minister's eyes brightened, and he thought he had some real inspiration. Said he: "When you come to Church next time, bring a little snuff in a can; and when you feel yourself getting drowsy, just apply a little bit of snuff in your nose."

Then his good church patron had some inspiration and he came back with: "Wouldn't it be an awful good thing if you'd put a wee bit o' snuff into your sermons." We'll have to put more snuff in our teaching of boys.

I wouldn't have a lad that wouldn't wiggle, and if you think the way some of you folks take care of this wiggling lad, the way you handle him is right, you are sadly mistaken. I hate to say it, but I do not hesitate for one minute. I have seen conditions that warrant my saying it. The leadership sometimes of these boys is dead on its feet. We do get into ruts, and boys that look for a little spark of animation from us are disappointed.

In a lecture that was delivered before a hospital convention the other night, a wise observation was made by the speaker. He spoke in hospital terms because they understood them. He warned them against a disease altogether too prevalent. This ailment has afflicted too many men who are supposed to lead boys. The lecturer said: "If you get the disease there is no need of being vaccinated; that won't do you any good; they cannot operate; when you get this disease, the only thing you can do is to blast. Now here is the disease: it is metallurgic fever. It is the condition in the body where the iron in the body turns to lead and centers in the seat of the trousers."

Here is another way of saying the same thing:

Man was not made to sit entranced
And press, and press, and press his pants,
But rather with an open mind
To circulate among his kind.
So, my friend, beware the snare
That lurks within the cushioned chair.
To run the race it has been found
Both feet must be upon the ground.

THE TRUE STORY OF A BOY

Now I say these things seriously. We ourselves are in a deep slumber and we expect to keep awake a wiggling, wholesome, American boy. That is an acid test. What may be another acid test?—not putting the proper value on a boy. Do you look to the value of the heart that beats under his coat, or do you see only the outside of the coat? Many a good mother misjudges a boy because he is not a Lord Fauntleroy. Because he doesn't keep his hair combed, you think he is on the road downward. Sometimes you do not see him as he really is. He puts his worst foot forward; he is in the "ugly duckling" stage. But if he were treated anywhere near right, he would develop into a bird of real plumage and grace.

To illustrate: A little girl of the slums was found dangerously sick. There must be a blood transfusion at once. Her ragged urchin brother was accosted:—would he give his blood for his sister? "Sure," he thundered back. After they had worked on his arm for a few minutes, its whiteness, because of the wash, he had not witnessed before, almost frightened him to death. The pumping apparatus was set to work and his sister revived. When he learned that his sister fared well, notice the deep-seated surprise back to the doctor. (I hope you get it.) "Fine, Doc, but when do I croak?"

Do you in judging look at the thread-bare ragged apparel, or are you bent on discerning the sacrificing thump of the heart that beats deeper down in his soul?

Christ said that no greater thing can any man do than to give his life for his fellows. That young lad thought that when he was asked to give his blood for his sister, it meant that he was giving his life. We in our civilization box the ears of the lad until his ear drums are numb and he is deaf the rest of his life, and that same fellow is the man who gives you your electric light today. We put a dunce cap on an Einstein, and our schools court martial the boy who may be the military general of tomorrow, who cuts through smoke and shrapnel to victory and makes this the "land of the free and the home of the brave."

Not understood. Poor souls with stunted vision
 Oft measure giants by their narrow gauge;
 The poisoned shafts of falsehood and derision
 Are oft impelled 'gainst those who mould the age
 Not understood.

Not understood. How many hearts are aching
 For lack of sympathy? Ah, day by day
 How many cheerless, lonely hearts are breaking
 How many noble spirits pass away
 Not understood.

Oh God, that man would see a little clearer
 Or judge less harshly where they cannot see,
 Oh God, that men would draw a little nearer
 To one another, they'd be nearer Thee
 Not understood.

With this boy is our vision stunted and do we measure him by our narrow gauge? Fathers and mothers, you make some mistakes. Teachers in schools, and we in the Church should see a little clearer and judge less harshly.

TEACHERS MAY INFLUENCE BY EXAMPLE

Now to the burning test to this lad: I mention it as the third test, but not the least. The burns that take place here go down into the bone. Now I am speaking of the example that we set as the teachers of this boy. What kind of men do your Bishops pick to teach these boys? what kind of life are we, whom the boy is supposed to look up to, living? If you please, will our lives "hold water?" Do we have a long face on the Sabbath day and in holy places, and play a different tune in our conduct in the affairs of men in the ordinary business of life? In my judgment there is nothing doing more harm in this Church today than men who are trying to play a double game. The boy always finds it out. You can't fool him. By our conduct we often pull up by the roots the most precious sprouts of confidence ever germinated.

To illustrate what I am driving at: Maybe some of you remember Deacon Jones, who is mentioned in the book, "David Harum." He was a sanctimonious, wonderful fellow on the Sabbath day, but during the week you had to hold on tight to your eyebrows or he would take them too—one of those two-faced "angelic" souls that grace this world; the kind Christ speaks of in his rebuke to the old Pharisees; a front as pious as apple sauce, but a trail on the sands of time of dead men's bones. He was on his deathbed; he was doomed to go. He had made quite an impression on some of the village who did not think very straight; but he did not fool the boys. The boys had his number. He began to sink, and sink, and finally he got so low that instead of answering the doorbell or the knock on the door by the inquirers, they had a blackboard put out in front of his abode. Every half hour the attending physician gave his temperature and his pulse. There was quite a commotion in the village, everybody was watching that blackboard. Well, the boys watched it, too, and they were waiting for an opportunity to express themselves. (If you ever want to get the proper value on yourself, ask the boys.) I think the last bulletin read, "8:05 a. m.—pulse 50, temperature 86." When nobody was looking, a bright lad, with mischief bent, who knew the Deacon, slipped up with a piece of chalk, and excitingly recorded: "8:22½ a. m. Much excitement in hell; Deacon Jones not yet arrived."

As Bobbie Burns put it, "The man of independent mind looks and laughs at a', that."

DISCIPLINE MOLDS CHARACTER

Now I would not have you think for a minute that I want you to pamper this boy. Let him stand on his own feet. One man said: "One of the greatest crops that America is reaping today is the spoiled child." Some of you people who have worked all your lives are as guilty as the man of wealth. You say, "I have had such a hard time in my life that I certainly won't let my children go through the same thing." And the spoiling process goes on. I do not think that we appreciate to the full extent what this means. Does your girl or boy know how to spell "gratitude"? Do you let your boy fight for what he gets, or do you hand him all his desires on a silver platter.

I remember at our home, for years and years, we had a cow. (I won't forget the cow because of certain responsibilities I had connected with it.) Every time a calf would come to town, father would in the course of events send at the proper time for the butcher. But there was one little heifer that father said we would keep. When that animal was about nine months old, father came home one day with a big strap with spikes driven from the inside out. He said that it was to go over the calf's nose. In other words, the day had arrived when the calf must be weaned. I wonder sometimes if we parents use the same philosophy on our children? Do we wean them? I am speaking now figuratively. Many a boy becomes eighteen, or twenty, goes through school, and, if you please, remains not weaned. Many a boy is spoiled because you can't spank grandmothers. Yes, too, because you can't spank parents. Until the last few years, I have thought that the cow ought to have worn the strap and the spikes ought to center in that part of her anatomy that the calf was most interested in. But I have changed my mind entirely, I think that as far as the children are concerned, the strap still belongs over their noses with the spikes going out. Parents should be painfully reminded when the occasion arises that the weaning is in process. America will learn before she gets through that her children should know more than stepping on the gas, smoking Turkish blends, and ordering up chocolate eclairs and tutti-frutis. Yes, and what's true of the children of Uncle Sam is doubly true of this Church.

I took a piece of plastic clay
And idly fashioned it one day,
And as my fingers pressed it still
It moved and yielded to my will.
I came again when days were past,
The bit of clay was hard at last;
The form I gave it still it bore
But I could change it never more.

I took a piece of human clay
And gently formed it day by day;
I molded with my power and art
A young child's warm and yielding heart.
I came again when days were gone,
It was a man I looked upon.
The form I gave him still he bore;
But I could change him never more.

Now, may the Lord bless us in this boys' business. Don't forget while we are putting the acid test and the burning test on this lad, tobacco shoots her shrapnel, liquor drops bombs from the sky, and then you find indolence and bad habits walk arm in arm with the boy to destruction.

Let's handle this boy more scientifically. Let's give him more attention. He's more valuable than our crops, our hogs, and our business. He is the man of tomorrow. Give him the right start. The boy is like a zipper; start him right and he'll come through. Don't jerk him, you might tear the meshes and then you haven't a track to travel on.

May God help us to hold these boys, is my prayer in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

The Singing Mothers Chorus, under the direction of Sister Nellie M. Bennion, will sing: "The Lord is my light," by Allitson.

I am sure that I express the gratitude of all the people here in conference, and those who have been listening in on the air to these Singing Mothers for their splendid music.

Again I urge you brethren and sisters to drive carefully, and save your lives and the lives of others.

The chorus sang "The Lord is my Light." (By Allitson)

Elder Charles C. Heaton, President of the Kanab Stake, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 10 o'clock a. m., Saturday, October 5, 1940.

SECOND DAY MORNING MEETING

Conference reconvened Saturday morning, October 5 at 10 o'clock a. m.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

We are blessed again this morning in having with us President Grant, who is presiding at this meeting, and has asked me to conduct the services.

The singing today will be congregational, under the direction of Elder J. Spencer Cornwall, except for one solo. Our organist is Alexander Schreiner. The opening song will be by the congregation, "O Say, What is Truth?", by Melling, hymn book, page 17.

The congregation sang the hymn, "O Say, What is Truth?" (By Melling.)

Elder Charles W. Fagg, President of the Grant Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Praise to the Man." (By William W. Phelps.)

ELDER GEORGE F. RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I feel very happy, my brethren and sisters, in my religion and the association I have with you this morning in worshiping the Lord in General Conference of His Church. Personally I appreciate your attendance at this Conference. I enjoyed very greatly, with others of my brethren and their wives, greeting about seven thousand five hundred people, leaders of the Church, at a reception held in the Hotel Utah Thursday evening; and I suppose you are all here, or most of you, today. To me it is an evidence of your faithfulness, brethren and sisters, and appreciation of the Gospel, realizing that many of you have come from afar, great distances, and at more or less expense, and I believe that you have come in discharge of a sacred religious duty, and with a desire to mingle with the Saints of God, and to worship Him in His appointed way.

FAITHFUL LATTER-DAY SAINTS COMMENDED

I feel full of blessing for you and all the faithful Saints. I know the integrity of the Latter-day Saints, the sacrifices that many of them are making for the Gospel's sake. May God bless you and reward you abundantly therefor, and keep you in the faith. Those who are indifferent and careless in regard to their religion, I hope that the Spirit of the Lord will strive with them, that men in high places of responsibility will strive with them, and that they may be brought into real activity and appreciation of the Gospel, and take advantage of their opportunities in making their calling and election sure, while they are here and have the opportunity, and I desire to be one with them.

I suppose that we are all candidates for the highest degree of glory in the Celestial kingdom. In order to attain to those heights we must serve the Lord and work the works of righteousness, as outlined by the Gospel which the Lord has given us for our guide.

One of the articles of our faith reads:

We believe that through the atonement of Christ all mankind may be saved, by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the Gospel.

INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL EVIDENCES OF THE GOSPEL

There are, I may say, two principal incentives for men to yield obedience unto the Gospel in order to obtain salvation. We may say the one is the external and the other the internal evidences of the Gospel. If we ever attain to a fulness of glory it must be by the keeping of the commandments of the Lord, by living by every word that proceedeth forth from His mouth. We must have faith in order to do so. Faith is the first principle of revealed religion, the foundation of all righteousness, and the moving cause of all action. Faith comes by the word of God. Hence we preach and teach, that men and women may have faith, that they may repent of their sins, yield obedience unto the laws and ordinances of the Gospel, and through the atonement of Jesus Christ obtain eternal life and exaltation.

The internal evidences of the Gospel are experienced by those who have received the Gospel, and they have the benefits of the external evidences as well; while those who are non-members of this Church have practically but the external evidences.

When I speak of internal evidences, I regard the Holy Ghost as the soul of Mormonism, and Mormonism is the Church and Kingdom of God established on the earth, with the everlasting Gospel restored in these last days.

We look at a man of fine physique and personality and admire him, but we do not know his real worth until we become acquainted with him and learn that he is a man of character, a man of integrity to truth and the principles of righteousness, and then we love him more dearly.

THE COMPANIONSHIP OF THE HOLY GHOST

People on the outside look at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and admire its organization, its institutions, its accomplishments; but they have not felt as the Latter-day Saints have felt, who have embraced the Gospel and helped to make Mormonism what it is today. When a person has had faith to repent of his sins, and yielded obedience in the waters of baptism, and had hands laid upon him by those having authority, for confirmation to membership in the Church, and received the Holy Ghost, it is his right, through continued faithfulness, to have the companionship of the Holy Ghost with him all the time, to be, as it were, a lamp to his feet and a light to his path through life, to know the course that he should pursue, and have strength and power to pursue that course.

That is the will of the Lord, and I understand what the Lord meant, when He said: "He that doeth the will of the Father shall know of His doctrine"—it meant that very thing. Those who have taken that course in sincerity do know, by the revelations of the Lord, through the Holy Ghost, that His course is right, in accepting of the Gospel; that this work in which we are engaged is indeed the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

The scriptures tell us: "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, except by the Holy Ghost." I bear you my testimony, brethren and sisters, that I do know, by the power of the Holy Ghost, and added evidences of the Gospel, that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior and Redeemer of the world. I feel that I know it just as well and by the same means that Peter knew, when the Savior asked His disciples:

Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?

* * * * *

And Simon Petter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon-Barjona; for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.

MEN KNOWN BY THEIR FRUITS

The Savior gave a test that people who are not members of the Church might apply in their investigation of the Gospel, particularly in regard to prophets, that they might know a true prophet from a false one. It is contained in the seventh chapter of Matthew, where He said:

Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves.

Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?

Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire.

Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.

By the fruits of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, its membership, we may be known as God's people, and this work as His work.

THE PROPHET ISAIAH QUOTED

I desire to read to you, brethren and sisters, a few words from the prophecy of Isaiah, who spoke under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost and for the Lord, so that this that I am going to read to you is the word of the Lord, and was intended for us. I read from the twenty-ninth chapter:

Stay yourselves, and wonder; cry ye out, and cry; they are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink.

For the Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes; the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered.

And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I cannot, for it is sealed:

And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned.

Wherefore the Lord said, Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precepts of men:

Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder; for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid.

THE PROPHECY FULFILLED

Those of us, brethren and sisters, who are familiar with the circumstances surrounding the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, and the establishment of this work in the earth, can readily see in it a fulfilment of the word of the Lord as He spoke it through His servant, the prophet Isaiah. It was to be a marvelous work and a wonder that the Lord should bring forth at this particular time, when the Book of Mormon should come forth. The Book of Mormon itself contains a fulness of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, as taught by Him to the ancient inhabitants of this American continent, and it is before the world today.

In the beginning of this work, in the days of the Prophet Joseph Smith, a wonderful work was accomplished. He laid the foundations for an ever growing and increasing organization and activities in the Church intended for the honor and glory of our Father in heaven. He was taken away in early manhood. He gave unto us the revelations of the Lord, for our guidance. At the time of his death there was but one auxiliary organization in the Church, that of the Relief Society. That organization has become a marvelous organization. Yes, I may say it has become a marvel in the eyes of men and women within and without the Church.

ORGANIZATIONS PERFECTED

It was in the days of President Brigham Young that the Sunday School organization was established. It has grown and increased until it is a mighty organization in the earth, a marvelous work and a wonder, the like of which cannot be found anywhere else.

It was in President Brigham Young's day that the Young Men's and Young Ladies' Mutual Improvement Associations were organized. Each of them has become a marvelous work and a wonder.

It remained for the administration of President John Taylor to give to the Church the Primary organization, which is another marvelous work and a wonder in the earth today.

DEVELOPMENT OF CHURCH UNDER PRESENT ADMINISTRATION

It remained for President Heber J. Grant and his administration to carry on this great work in its development, increasing the Stakes and Wards of Zion. In the days of the Prophet Joseph Smith they had but one or two Stakes, and now we have a hundred thirty-two. They had a few Wards, and now we have more than a thousand Wards. We have Missions established, and for more than a century we have been carrying on at tremendous expense. Today we have something like two thousand missionaries constantly in the field. The expense to the Church and to the individual missionaries and their friends, valuing a missionary's time at $900.00 a year, reaches nearly $4,000,000.00 per annum. This gives evidence of the faith and the knowledge of the Latter-day Saints that they are engaged in God's work, and are willing to make sacrifices for its advancement in the earth.

In the days of President Heber J. Grant and his administration there has been organized in the Stakes of Zion a missionary system, known as the Stake missionary work of the Church; and be it known, brethren and sisters and friends, according to the statistics of the Church, in the past two years, with fewer missionaries employed, there have been more converts made within the Stakes of Zion than in the mission field. If we compare the cost of maintaining the missionary work abroad, this work carried on at home is without practically any cost to the Church and its membership. The missionaries maintain themselves. They carry on their vocational work. They can sleep in their own beds at night, eat at their own tables, and the work goes forward,—a marvelous work and a wonder, to the credit of the present administration of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Another outstanding accomplishment in the administration of the present President of the Church is that of the Welfare work of the Church. Those of you who heard President Clark's talk yesterday morning upon this subject of the welfare work of the Church must have been convinced that it is indeed a marvelous work and a wonder, evidence that the present President of this Church has been divinely called as God's mouthpiece and prophet unto this people. Do we need these evidences? If so, we should make use of them and let them have their influence upon our minds, at least to lead us to a careful and thorough investigation of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, as it is preached today.

This could not be accomplished, of course, by the leadership of the Church alone. It involves the faithfulness and integrity of the membership of the Church; and may the Lord bless you, brethren and sisters, for such integrity and faithfulness.

DUTY OF MEMBERSHIP OF THE CHURCH

So this is the work of God, and it will go on, until God's purposes have been fully accomplished in the earth. It is for us as members of the Church to do our duty and to stand in holy places and watch the judgments of God go by. This we will do if we have the right spirit and are living our religion without any fear or trembling on our part, for we know that God will take care of His own.

I bear my testimony to you, brethren and sisters, that I do know that this is God's work; that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God; that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God and is and ever will be, as also his successors, one by one, down to the present time, and not the least among them President Heber J. Grant. Thank God for him. May he be preserved unto us and unto his work many years to come, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

Of the First Council of the Seventy

Twice each year, for the last few years, I have had the privilege and pleasure of sitting and looking into your faces, and contemplating the things that are transpiring in your hearts. But I want to say to you now that it is greatly different from sitting and looking at you, in this position which I now occupy. Just a few feet above my seat makes considerable difference.

There is one thing that we all have been contemplating, and I know that we have come to some definite conclusions concerning it, and that is the well-being and the safety of this people who have been gathered out from every nation and from every branch of people upon the earth, here to this land which has been consecrated and dedicated of God, our Eternal Father, for the gathering place of His own. I believe that we will come to the conclusion that we are perfectly safe in our daily walks and talks, if and when we devote ourselves to God's great work, in the right spirit.

THE LIBERTY BELL

You know that through one hundred and eighty-four years there has now come down to us a rather national emblem—it has become almost a shrine. I speak of the old Liberty Bell, which, though voiceless for these many years, has served so well, and which was eagerly looked upon by the people on July 4th, 1776, as it rang forth its message that this country was in very deed free from tyranny and free from that which had caused mankind so much distress. You know it was brought from England in 1732, and it rested in the State House in Philadelphia for a number of years. Then in 1753 it cracked and was remolded by American workmen. This did not last very long. It cracked again, and then was remolded. But the strange thing to me is this, that some twenty-five years prior to its being cast the last time, out of the scripture men sought that which was molded into its crown and that was, as it came from the holy writ: "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land, unto the inhabitants thereof."

Now, this bell was in use by the City of Philadelphia until July 8th, 1836, when it cracked while being tolled at the funeral of Chief Justice John Marshall.

FREE AGENCY A GIFT FROM GOD

It seems strange that God has prepared the way for His people, and perhaps strange to us that God is now preparing the way for His people, but such is the case. In the beginning of this earth of ours for this thing which God prepared for His children, He gave some definite, pointed instructions, and was rather jealous of what He said and what He desired, and to us have come these things which we would like to obey and love to keep.

God has also given unto each of us the one and only tool by which we might gain honor and success and exaltation, or on the other hand, misery and disgrace and absolute degradation. Now, that tool is the free agency of man to choose between right and wrong, and God has safeguarded it, from time to time called our attention to it, and brought it home to us.

LIGHT AND UNDERSTANDING TO BE STRIVEN FOR

I read in the Doctrine and Covenants this:

Wherefore, he that preacheth and he that receiveth, understand one another, and both are edified and rejoice together.

And that which doth not edify is not of God, and is darkness.

That which is of God is light; and he that receiveth light, and continueth in God, receiveth more light; and that light groweth brighter and brighter until the perfect day

And again, verily I say unto you, and I say it that you may know the truth, that you may chase darkness from among you;

He that is ordained of God and sent forth, the same is appointed to be the greatest, notwithstanding he is the least and the servant of all.

I feel that we should never imagine that we have seen the light at one time, and it becomes therefore unnecessary for us constantly to strive to glimpse those flashes from heaven that are coming to us, as they did in the past. I would that we might open the windows of our souls and receive that light which God desires to give and is giving to his people.

LEADERSHIP THROUGH SERVICE

You recall when Christ was with His Twelve, one thing that has always rather impressed itself upon me, was the time when the Twelve and Christ were together, and the Twelve, some of them were contending, one with the other, as to who might be on the right-hand side of God and who on the left, and these things were said: (This is in Mark, the tenth chapter.)

But Jesus called them to him, and saith unto them, Ye know that they which are accounted to rule over the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and their great ones exercise authority upon them.

But so shall it not be among you; but whosoever will be great among you, shall be your minister;

And whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all.

The salvation of man is not brought about by force or coercion or the powers of dictatorship. These are not the methods God has used, nor are they the methods God will use.

Refer to your Pearl of Great Price, and read in Moses that which God gave to us then:

And I, the Lord God, spake unto Moses, saying: That Satan, whom thou hast commanded in the name of mine Only Begotten, is the same which was from the beginning, and he came before me, saying—Behold, here am I, send me. I will be thy son, and I will redeem all mankind, that one soul shall not be lost, and surely I will do it; wherefore give me thine honor.

But behold, my Beloved Son, which was my Beloved and Chosen from the beginning, said unto me—Father, thy will be done, and the glory be thine forever.

Wherefore, because that Satan rebelled against me, and sought to destroy the agency of man, which I the Lord God, had given him, and also, that I should give unto him mine own power, by the power of mine Only Begotten, I caused that he should be cast down.

Constantly there has come ringing into our ears these admonitions, these things, which bring us up standing, to realize that it is God who speaks to His people, to direct them and to cause that their minds may run in the proper channels.

GOD'S WORD GIVEN TO HIS PEOPLE

The following was given in a revelation to the Prophet Joseph Smith:

Who am I that made man, saith the Lord, that will hold him guiltless that obeys not my commandments?

Who am I, saith the Lord, that have promised and have not fulfilled? I command and men obey not; I revoke and they receive not the blessing.

Then they say in their hearts: This is not the work of the Lord, for his promises are not fulfilled. But woe unto such, for their reward lurketh beneath, and not from above.

Now, these passages of scripture that I have read to you, I have read them for this one purpose, and they have led me to this thought, that every single last soul of us here, and all the members of this great Church of God, scattered throughout the length and breadth of the land, have seen the light, and we have had that light confirmed by the testimony of the Holy Ghost in our hearts and souls, that this is God's work, that God in His own way has wrought and brought to pass that which you and I now behold.

Think of God's message. Think of His methods, the choosing of Moses, the call of Abraham, and the placing of Joseph sold into Egypt, the sending of His Only Begotten Son among the children of men, to bring about that which Christ wrought, which is sung by the millions upon this earth here today. Then think of the marvelous thing that He did in His quiet, unostentatious manner; how Moroni appeared to the Prophet Joseph Smith, to bring forth this great work that you and I are now engaged in.

All this being true, all this having been revealed to us, we knowing of its truth and virtue, I think is it quite necessary that we bring ourselves to understand that with the establishment here upon this earth of God's prophet, God's servants, we can say in our hearts that these are the servants of God, chosen absolutely and literally by Him for the guidance of His people here upon this earth.

SUCCESS IN LOCAL MISSIONARY WORK

Now, just one word: I am thrilled with that which has been told to you people by Brother Richards, Apostle George F. Richards, concerning the work which is going on here in the Stakes of Zion. Your sons and daughters have been sent abroad. They have been marvelously blessed. But here in your own Stakes, up and down these great stretches, your sons and husbands and daughters and wives are in this great missionary work, and up to July of this year we were just fifty-one baptisms ahead of the same time last year; and during this last month one hundred ninety-four men joined this Church, who never knew of its truth before.

So I rejoice, and say to you I feel that it is not necessary that we should feel overly concerned about what will happen to us, if we will do that which God desires us to do.

God bless you, I pray in Jesus' name, Amen.

ELDER RICHARD L. EVANS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I had rather half-heartedly cherished the idea that the broadcast tomorrow morning would be accepted as my contribution to this Conference. It was almost the case six months ago, but five minutes at the last of the closing session saved the establishment of such a precedent, I am sorry to say.

Usually when I occupy this position, which is at least once a week and often two or three times a week, I have the benefit of a radio script in front of me. It is much more comfortable, but not nearly so spontaneous. I ask at this time that if the Lord has a message that He would like me to speak, He will prompt it. I feel very weak in addressing this congregation.

THE NEED FELT FOR TRUE LEADERSHIP

In our conduct of the Tabernacle Choir broadcast over the nationwide Columbia network each Sunday morning, and over the nation-wide Canadian Radio Commission stations, and also by short wave and by electrical transcription across the seas and into other continents, we receive mail postmarked from almost every section of the globe, and literally from every nook and corner of America.

This mail reveals that people are hungry for leadership, that they are searching earnestly for a foundation on which to place their feet, for a fixed destination toward which to strive, and that they are sick to death of the confusion and the contradiction that they see about them. This hunger for leadership in one sense is a very happy thing, and in another sense it may be a very dangerous thing. When people are in that frame of mind it makes it much easier for a false leader to win their following.

I am impressed with the fact that our responsibility in this Church is the responsibility of leadership, and that we must take it, whatever it may cost us, because the Lord has told us that we have been sent to be a light unto the world and to be saviors of men; and if we don't give this leadership, others will assume it, to the sorrow of mankind and to our own condemnation. I feel sure that this leadership must enter into all of the activities of living.

President Clark mentioned here, yesterday morning, the fact that our fathers and grandfathers had prayed over the land and the water and the air, and all of the physical elements of production, much to their credit and to their blessing. I feel sure that we need to pray over a good many other things, including our scholarship, our academic activities, our political activities, our social activities. I am sure that we need to pray over every phase of thought and of life.

It is a very difficult thing to take leadership in this day—so much is being discovered; so much is happening; so confused are the issues, I think it safe to say, without contradiction, that in a public sense we can't be sure of much of what we hear or much of what we see or much of what we read; that the phrase, "evil and designing men," has a much broader application, than the limited sense in which we use it in connection with the Word of Wisdom. Those things that are printed and spoken to shape our thinking, in all fields of communication and human contact, are largely designed and colored and adulterated and modified to bring men into the line of thought of other men, often without regard to the facts or the truth of the matter in question. It is very difficult to know, and I think man unaided, of himself, and without some Higher Help, cannot know what to believe and what not to believe of the maze of material that daily passes before our eyes and comes within the range of our hearing.

THE SEARCH FOR TRUTH

A cherished friend of mine, whose life paralleled mine for many years, up to a few years ago, when there was a parting of the ways, is now in one of America's greatest institutions of learning, and has achieved international eminence in his scientific field. A few weeks ago he wrote me and said: "I am conducting researches in many fields, and I am just beginning to learn the high cost of finding out the truth about anything."

And he continued: "The problem is so complex that all we can do is arrive at half-truths and first approximations."

I wrote him back and said: "It must be a great comfort to you, in your work, to know that you are a member of a Church that will accept everything of truth that you ever find in your researches, in whatever field of thought or activity, and all that we ask of you is to pursue them beyond that stage of half-truth and first approximations of which you have spoken, and conduct them to their final end, where there will be no question about their eternal verity—to that point where the generations to come will not of necessity repudiate them."

I have a strong feeling that our young people who go into our universities and colleges should have before them constantly the promise of Moroni, that "by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things," which is repeated in substance in the Doctrine and Covenants to the effect that "the Holy Ghost . . . showeth all things and teacheth the peaceable things of the kingdom." I never remember having gone into an examination of any consequence in my life without making it a matter of prayer. I know that the young man or young woman who approaches any problem in the academic field, or any other field, would have a great advantage if he would keep as his constant companion the spirit of our Father in heaven, which would give him an active sense of warm assurance when he was in the presence of truth, and would give him a contrary feeling when he was not in the presence of truth. It wouldn't give him knowledge without study, or discovery without search, or truth without effort, but, granted that he pursued his work intelligently and diligently, he would have a great advantage in all of his findings and doings, academically and otherwise, if he made the spirit of all truth his constant guide.

STRENGTH COMES THROUGH PRAYER

This is the thing the Latter-day Saints have that helps them to take leadership regardless of the confusion and the contradiction about us. I know that in my home my widowed mother was constantly in an attitude of prayer. My most vivid memory of her—and I cherish it dearly—is a memory of her on her knees, pleading with the Lord, her Father in heaven, for a solution to the many problems and difficulties that beset her life. I suppose that I had had as much formal education by the time I was fourteen years old, in terms of days spent in school, as she had had in all her life, and yet after I had had the privilege of acquiring university degrees I could still go to her when I was troubled, and find the right counsel and the right answers to whatever was confronting me, and I am grateful to have had such a mother and such a home, and to have had evidence of the effectiveness of that approach, that promise which through prayer and through diligence and through walking in the ways of our Father, makes it possible for the Latter-day Saints to assume leadership, and we can do it in no other way, except by keeping constantly in touch with the spirit of our Father in heaven, by which we may know the truth of all things.

This is our promise, if we live for it. It is the means whereby we can take leadership in spiritual matters, in economic affairs, in social conditions, and in all the ways of life—and the only way.

SAFETY IN FOLLOWING TRUE LEADERSHIP

Besides this we have our living prophet, for whom I am grateful, and I hope to follow after him all the days of my life. I know that when I don't follow him I am wrong, and I know that when I do I am right, even if I don't agree with him. To those who only follow him when they do agree with him he is not a prophet unto them. I am grateful to the Lord for preserving the life of President Grant. I know that the leadership of this people is a responsibility that weighs heavily upon him, and that he would avoid it if he could, oftentimes, but he has no choice in the matter; and by looking to his counsel and example we may also be helped to know when we are right and when we are not right in the presence of all the confusion we see about us.

I wish to leave you my testimony that I know that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that He shall one day reign upon this earth, in His own time, and that all those things that the prophets have spoken in all generations will come to pass, regardless of the belief or unbelief of men; and that he who leads us today speaks for God in the affairs of this world in this generation.

May the Lord bless you and be with you and help you to give the leadership that the Lord intends that you shall give, lest others take it, and lest we thereby be condemned for not having taken the place that was rightfully ours, and for which we had the guidance if we had lived according to the laws of God, our Father.

May He bless us all, I ask, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

A bartone solo: "If Christ Came Back Today," (by O'Hara), was sung by Elder Walter Welti.

ELDER JOHN A. WIDTSOE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

This crowded house on a week-day with beautiful weather, is an answer to the cry of the ancient prophet of Israel: "There is faith in Israel." It is good to be one of you in this, the Church of Christ.

I have been impressed to speak to a theme which may not be strictly spiritual, but which in its relations to Gospel living seems to me to be of prime importance.

PREPAREDNESS A PART OF THE GOSPEL PLAN

Preparedness is today on every tongue. There is danger ahead, and defenses must be set up. Preparedness is not a new word to Latter-day Saints. For one hundred and ten years our voice has been one of warning to prepare against the commotion and calamities of the last days. We have taught and continue to teach that full preparedness and complete defense against the devastation by evil is the acceptance of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. When every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Jesus is the Christ we may look for the peace of Eden, but not before.

Our land is setting up defenses of powder and steel. That is well enough. But there are intangible defenses more powerful which direct the use of material defenses. These must be fostered, if our preparedness shall be adequate. To one of these defenses I call your attention—to the education we give our children, particularly in schools, as a determining defense against evil.

TRUE EDUCATION A PROTECTION AGAINST EVIL

Latter-day Saints believe in education; the Church itself is but a great teaching institution. We understand that to learn we must be taught; and also that our actions are determined largely by the teachings we receive. Therefore, we teach our children as a preparation for life.

The example was set by the Lord. When Adam and Eve were placed in the Garden of Eden, in forgetfulness of their past, the Lord came and taught them the Gospel. This was done again later, to others, as eternal truth was forgotten or corrupted among the children of men.

There is no place for ignorance in the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Light and truth, ever increasing, the only safe protection against evil, must ever guide this people and all the world, if humanity shall find peace and happiness.

Thus has come the exceedingly high educational standing of Latter-day Saints—above that of any other group of like numbers in the world. We expect ever to seek after knowledge and to share in the great truth-advances of these latter days.

However, knowledge alone contributes little to human welfare. Only when used for the good of man does it acquire real value. "The Glory of God is intelligence"; but the intelligent man gathers knowledge and proceeds to use it in harmony with the divine plan of salvation—for the blessing of the children of men. True learning comes when knowledge is used. Correct use gives life to knowledge. In Mormon terminology, wisdom and intelligence are synonymous. Wisdom in the use of knowledge is as important as knowledge itself.

Such beliefs have made the Latter-day Saints supporters of all sound educational endeavors. We look upon our public schools, from kindergarten to university, as the finest expression of democracy. They are levelers and equalizers of our citizenry. They offer the even chance in life for rich and poor, weak and strong.

THE DUTY OF SCHOOLS

Therefore, we have given our public schools a great trust; and have endowed them with tremendous power. Our children are in their keeping during most of the formative years of life. As the schools teach so will the coming generation think and act. The conditions in our land today, good or bad, may well be laid at the doors of our schools, which nourished us in our immaturity with ideals which in our maturity are being translated into action.

In return for this trust we expect our schools to be preservers of the principles of human welfare; bulwarks against every insidious, subversive foe of human freedom; defenses against all invaders of human rights; teachers of the way from war to peace, from poverty to prosperity. In times of moral, social or economic upheaval, our schools, ideal-builders, must be among the nation's most powerful defenses. We rely on our schools, for example, to prevent the unspeakable, blazing evil now raging in Europe from starting a conflagration in our land. We teach with easy precision protection against communicable diseases. It is more important to teach immunity against untruth; to show how the fruits of our civilization may be preserved and increased. Among the many instruments of democracy, the schools must stand foremost in preparing the people against coming evils, and for a better future day.

We are in the midst of a changing day. It is folly to believe that we can go on happily with millions of men unemployed, and as many millions living under an inadequate standard of living. There will needs be much readjustment to secure prosperity for all. Many activities must be re-directed to make every able-bodied person self-supporting. In this realignment of forces, and reorganization of resources, the schools must take an active, practical part.

To do this, to be worthy of their high commission in this troubled day, two major objectives must be courageously reemphasized and accomplished by our schools.

RELIGIOUS TRAINING MUST BE ENCOURAGED

First, moral and religious education must be given hereafter an honorable and corresponding place by the side of the traditionally important subjects of the curriculum. For the safety of the nation, moral teaching should be given, at definite hours, in every publicly supported classroom. There must be eager cooperation with every project, such as our L. D. S. Seminaries and Institutes, to supply religious instruction outside the school. There must be no whining and hiding behind a misinterpretation of the constitutional provision for religious liberty. We still say on our coins, "In God we trust." There must be no attempt to place the sole responsibility upon the Church. The strongest defense of this or any other nation is not of sword and shot, of long range cannon and bombs from the sky. It lies in the spiritual domain of life, among the intangibles. The human will, according to its training, determines whether steel shall be shaped into swords or plowshares. The "fifth column" and other corroding influences, and all evil, often disdainful of exploding bombs, are conquered and chained only by spiritual weapons. Thinking citizens, the country over, are recognizing the danger of a citizenry, untaught and untrained in the moral and spiritual principles upon which human welfare has ever rested. Unless our schools resolutely place such training foremost, they will have sown to the whirlwind.

IMPORTANCE OF PRACTICAL EDUCATION

Second, the right of way, after moral and religious training, in every school and college curriculum, must be given to useful knowledge—knowledge that may be used in making a living, in meeting the actual and daily needs of life. Unless this is done our physical defenses will prove inadequate, and economic chaos will increase. We must dignify and ennoble the necessary tasks of life, to secure contentment among humanity.

The activities of life center upon the business of making a living. Every man worthy of life desires to be able to sustain himself and a family of his own. This has always been an objective of the Latter-day Saints. In our welfare program the need of caring for the poor, necessary and beautiful as it is, is less important than the attempt to find ways and means to enable the poor to provide for themselves, and to raise the standard of living of all to meet their natural wants properly. Universal self-support will be a mighty defense against any enemy. A contented, self-supporting people will resist the cheap, enslaving offerings of evil.

Practical education must be featured as never before. Men and women must be taught how to use the natural resources about them for their support in life. The economic possibilities must be set forth, of waters, soils, forests, mountains and hills. To solve the problems of the day, and of tomorrow, we need more trained farmers and mechanics, skilled craftsmen, business men and housewives who are so educated that they can do their work intelligently, and therefore with respect for their calling; and who are ready to wrestle joyfully with the gifts of earth. For these are the only true producers of wealth. There would be more prosperity and home happiness if more men toiled with the hand as well as with the head, and if every girl were trained in the processes of maintaining and running a household successfully with emphasis on child care and training. Such education for boys and girls should begin in the lowest grades for some do not reach high school and many fail to enter college.

Such education does not require special industrial or vocational schools. That would defeat the spirit of democracy, for every boy, rich or poor, should learn how to support a family, and every normal girl looks forward to the joys of wifehood and motherhood. Besides in a true democracy, class consciousness must be avoided. Such important training should not be neglected nor left to chance. Our present system of education should direct from year to year, from grade to grade, the thought and training of students toward the application of knowledge to useful ends—life-sustaining ends. The colleges should gladly receive students so trained, and continue the training under college environment.

Culture accompanies such training. The discipline of the mind is the essence of culture. The so-called "common pursuits," have in later years been invested with a variety of newly discovered knowledge. They are in this respect not surpassed by the so-called "professions." The study of agriculture and home making may be made as cultural as of astronomy; or of our own government as that of ancient Rome. Failing to recognize this, thousands of young people have failed to find their places in life. They find no jobs for they have not been trained to work, too often only to seek to avoid work. In the words of Brigham Young, "Education is the handmaid to honest labor."

Moreover, they who have learned to work, and who have acquired their belongings through personal toil, are the safest members of society. They believe in private property; and what is more, they believe in allowing others to gather about them material benefits. They will be the last to attempt to dispossess others of property won through honest toil. Teaching men and women to work and to earn a living is the best insurance against the false economic doctrines which flood the land.

OPPORTUNITIES LIE AHEAD

One other thought remains. The pioneers who entered these valleys conquered the desert with such knowledge and strength as they possessed. Since that day, knowledge has increased immeasurably. By the invention of machines, man's strength has increased a thousand fold. Resources of earth lie about us which were beyond the reach of the early pioneers, but which may now be developed with our new knowledge and added power. There are more opportunities for youth today than in the pioneer years. It is our own fault if this has not been taught by our institutions of learning. In the development of practical education the pointing out of such possibilities will be of major importance.

MORAL AND SPIRITUAL TRAINING ARE FACTORS AGAINST EVIL

If the schools shall be powerful factors in building defenses against evil, and in preparing against the enemy, they must face about from traditional views and give undivided attention on the one hand to moral and spiritual training, and on the other to practical education. Such teaching, for that matter, has been the counsel and advice of the Church from the beginning. Never was it needed more than now.

We who have been entrusted with parenthood must anxiously plan for the welfare of our children and the coming generations. If changes are needed, let us make them. The schools are ours, and the responsibility for the coming race is ours. The time has come when schools must train our children for safe living, that is for greatest usefulness, which means greatest happiness.

The vast majority of the teaching profession, looking into the future, agree in the main with the view which I have here expressed. They recognize that schools must reflect the wishes of the people, by whom they are supported; and as good citizens, themselves, are ready to help our schools foster truth and destroy evil, thus making them main defenses of our nation.

As a Church we have always tried to be in the forefront of progressive changes. An uncertain future looms before us. As far as we have influence we should turn our educational endeavors towards a secure and happy future. If we do so, we shall help build a mighty defense against threatened disaster.

ELDER RULON S. WELLSOf the First Council of the Seventy*

The outstanding characteristic or difference between the religion of the Latter-day Saints and that of the various churches in the world is the fact that God has endowed this work with power from on high. In other words, divine authority is the distinguishing feature between the Church of God and the churches of men, that have been established by a great many various sects of so-called Christianity.

PLAN OF SALVATION OF DIVINE ORIGIN

The principle of authority was made manifest in the very beginning of the promulgation of God's work, and that occurred in that primeval day, before the earth was created, when God had assembled together His sons and His daughters to hear the glad tidings of great joy.

It is only a natural and obvious conclusion which everybody should concede that if there be a plan of life and salvation, that it must be one of divine origin, for only God can save His children. And we ought to recognize the fact that we are here in a state of mortality; that death has come into the world as a result of disobedience in the Garden of Eden, under very peculiar circumstances; and the purpose of this thing is that mankind might be given the privilege of choosing between good and evil, and undergoing a test or a trial, and for that purpose God created this earth and placed His children upon it, that we might receive that education and that knowledge and understanding, that education pertaining to our spiritual and temporal welfare, that we might be able to combat with the powers of evil.

How could we ever be saved, how could we ever be exalted, unless we should have the benefit of this earth life experience, and be in attendance and ready to learn in God's great school which He has established for the education and benefit and blessing of His children? It must be then conceded that the plan of life and salvation would be one that was devised by the Lord Himself, and cannot be of any human invention. That being the case, we must look to Him for that all-wise plan and for that perfect system by which we may be prepared to receive what God intends we shall receive.

MAN'S THREE ESTATES

There are three estates of man: The first estate was when we dwelt with God as His spirit children, in His holy habitation, before the world was made, as we read in our favorite hymn:

O my Father, thou that dwellest
In the high and glorious place,
When shall I regain thy presence
And again behold Thy face?
In thy holy habitation
Did my spirit once reside?
In my first primeval childhood
Was I nurtured near Thy side?

That tells, in those beautiful lines of Eliza R. Snow, what occurred before the world was made, to which the Lord referred when He said unto His servant Job:

Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? Declare, if thou hast understanding. * * *

When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy.

That is a question that implies a great deal. It contemplates and infers that there was a time and a place where God had assembled His children together to hear a proclamation. What was the occasion? We are told there that it was a time of rejoicing, and the Lord had assembled His sons, and His daughters, too, I doubt not, to hear the glad tidings of great joy. It was the proclamation of God's plan for the salvation of His children, for the education and the improvement of the children of God. It involved the creation of this earth, and it involved the knowledge of good and evil, that we might be tried, and for this purpose was it created that we might in our second estate through obedience to His plan qualify ourselves for the third estate, namely: eternal life in the Kingdom of God.

COVENANTS MADE BY THE LORD

We read all through the scriptures, both in ancient and in modern scriptures, that the Lord has made a covenant with His people. He has always called those to whom He has given a dispensation of His providence, "His covenant people". What was that covenant? We hear a great many talk about the new and everlasting covenant, even among our own people, and we sometimes jump at the conclusion that it refers exclusively to the marriage covenant. The marriage covenant is truly a very great and important part of that everlasting covenant, but it is only a part.

The Lord made it known to the Prophet Joseph Smith, as you will find it recorded in Section 66, paragraph 2, of the Doctrine and Covenants, that the "new and everlasting covenant" is nothing more or less than the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ in its fulness, as it was revealed and proclaimed in that primeval day when the great and noble ones, or the "morning stars," sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy—the day the Lord made known to them the terms of His everlasting covenant, setting forth what He expects us to do, and also informing us what He will do if we comply.

What is a covenant? Our standard dictionaries define a covenant as "an agreement entered into between two or more persons or parties." It is just such an agreement that the Lord promulgated and announced to His spirit children, that filled their hearts with joy and gladness, and whereupon the morning stars, the great and noble ones, sang together and all of the sons and daughters of God made the heavens ring with the shouts of joy and gladness over these glad tidings.

It is that one and only way that the Lord has ever revealed, that one and only plan, that one and only Gospel that was promulgated in that early day. It is that which has been given to the children of men as the power of God unto salvation. It was first given to our father Adam, after his expulsion from the Garden of Eden. The Lord revealed that covenant to him, and explained precisely what it was and declared that it was the plan of salvation. It was continued with Enoch, and was also re-established with Noah and his sons after the deluge.

It was again given to Abraham, and with him the promises of the everlasting covenant were made as frequently as stated in the Bible, and later it was established with Moses after the delivery of the children of Israel from their long bondage in the land of Egypt but under the "lesser law," the law of carnal commandments, the rebellious and stiff-necked Israelites not being prepared for the higher law, but were given the lesser law as a school master to bring them to Christ; and when our Lord came in the meridian of time, He again set up His Church and established the same everlasting covenant, but now under the higher law.

In the light of these various dispensations, we can readily see the meaning of the words of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, which I now quote:

O, Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not! (Luke 13:34.)

During each of these dispensations many generations have been brought into the fold by entering into the covenant through the holy waters of baptism and have gone to their reward, but let it be remembered that the Devil and his angels also came and led the children of men again into darkness and error and a general falling away from the Truth ensued, and always for the same reason as it was described by the Prophet Isaiah when he said, "because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance and broken the everlasting covenant" and thus the earth has been defiled. (Isaiah 24:5).

ABRAHAM SHOWN SOME OF THE LORD'S WORK

I have just stated that it was with Abraham that the promises were made; let me now add that it is from the writings of Abraham and those of Moses that we learn the particulars concerning the everlasting covenant as these writings are contained in the Pearl of Great Price, from which I now quote:

Now the Lord had shown unto me, Abraham, the intelligences that were organized before the world was; and among all these there were many of the noble and great ones:

And God saw these souls that they were good, and he stood in the midst of them, and he said: These I will make my rulers; for he stood among those that were spirits, and he saw that they were good; and he said unto me, Abraham, thou art one of them; thou wast chosen before thou wast born.

And there stood one among them that was like unto God, and he said unto those who were with him: We will go down, for there is space there, and we will take of these materials, and we will make an earth whereon these may dwell;

And we will prove them herewith, to see if they will do all things whatsoever the Lord their God shall command them.

That is our part in the covenant, to do all things whatsoever the Lord our God shall command us. All things that the Lord our God shall command us are embodied in the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ in its fullness, for the Lord has said that "man lives not by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God".

Then comes the Lord's part:

And they who keep their first estate shall be added upon.

Very significant language. What does that mean? It means simply this, that there shall be added to our immortal spirits these bodies of flesh and bones.

And they who keep their second estate—[that is, our present estate here after we have received these bodies of flesh and bones]—They who keep their second estate shall have glory added upon their heads forever and ever. (Pearl of Great Price. Abraham 3:22-26)

What a glorious promise! A never-ending glory that is to be added upon the heads of those who keep their second estate, by doing what the Lord commands them, obeying His glorious Gospel. That is the only plan. It is God's plan, and has been given to the inhabitants of the earth in the various dispensations of His providence.

THE COVENANT RE-ESTABLISHED BY THE SAVIOR

When the Lord our Savior came and dwelt upon the earth, the everlasting covenant was re-established among the children of men, under the higher law. Previous to the coming of Christ the lesser law ostensibly, but very imperfectly, was being administered by the various sects of that day. The children of Israel, fresh from their bondage in the land of Egypt, where they had imbibed much of the idolatry of that nation, were not prepared for the higher law, and the Lord gave unto them the lesser law as a schoolmaster to bring them unto Christ.

But when the Savior came and ministered among men He established His Church and Kingdom anew, under the higher law. In the former dispensation it was the law of carnal commandments, they not being prepared for that higher law. Moses was complaining to the Lord that he was slow of speech and felt himself incompetent to lead the people, and he asked the Lord that He would give him someone in his stead. The Lord was not pleased altogether with his request, but finally it was granted, and He said unto Moses: "Take thy brother Aaron and his sons to act in the office of the priest." Then He conferred upon Aaron a part of the glory that was upon Moses—not all. The glory which was upon Moses was the glory of the Melchizedek Priesthood. The part that was given to Aaron is known to us as the Aaronic Priesthood. That was the beginning of this order of the Priesthood, and yet it is to endure forever.

The Aaronic Priesthood continued to minister in the affairs of the Church and the Lord took Moses out of their midst and with him the holy Melchizedek Priesthood, but the Aaronic Priesthood remained in the Church until the coming of John the Baptist. (Doc. & Cov. 84:25 and 26).

MANY DISPENSATIONS GIVEN TO GOD'S CHILDREN

From what I have said and from the inspired writings of the prophets, which I have copiously quoted, it will be obvious that there have been many dispensations of God's providence in every one of which prophets have been raised up duly commissioned of God to act in His name, for as the Prophet Amos has declared it: "Surely the Lord God will do nothing but He revealeth His secret unto His servants the prophets:" (Amos 3:7).

It will also be apparent that the everlasting covenant, or in other words "the Gospel of Jesus Christ" has been the very essence of God's dealings with mankind, even from the days of Adam until now—yes, and even antedating the creation of this earth to that primeval day "when the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy."

It will also be noted that after each and every one of the various dispensations there has been a falling away and darkness has covered the earth and gross darkness the minds of the people, as prophesied by Isaiah the prophet. (Isaiah 60:2).

Even the glorious Messianic dispensation when Jesus ministered among men and set in His Church firstly Apostles and secondly prophets, etc., for the work of the ministry, that we be not tossed to and fro by every wind of doctrine, was no exception to the rule for it, too, was soon followed by a universal apostasy; and, indeed, heresies were creeping into the Church while the Apostles were still living, (see I Cor. 11:18, 19) but after the Apostles "fell asleep" and the prophetic spirit disappeared, they fell into the deepest gloom of darkness and superstition and paganistic ceremonials and mysticisms which were entirely foreign to the simple ordinances of the Gospel as they were taught and practiced in the primitive Church by the Savior and His Apostles. For a full discussion of this subject let me refer you to the series of radio addresses delivered by the late President B. H. Roberts over Radio Station KSL, which has been published in book form under the title of "The Falling Away".

THE LAST DISPENSATION

Now, however, came the promise of another dispensation, even "The Dispensation of the Fulness of Times". This dispensation has already been ushered in through the visitation of heavenly beings and the instrumentality of Joseph Smith, the Prophet, by whom the Lord has again set up His Church and Kingdom and established His everlasting covenant restoring the fulness of the Gospel of Jesus Christ in its primitive purity. This is the Church and Kingdom which the Lord has set up never again to be thrown down nor given to another people, but it shall stand forever, as foretold by the Prophet Daniel. (See Daniel II).

And now again as on all previous occasions, He has endowed His Church with power from on high, the all important and outstanding feature which has always distinguished His Church from the man-made churches of the world.

May we ever have an abiding testimony of the Truth and may our faith ever manifest itself in the works of obedience. May we hearken to the counsels of our leaders, upholding and sustaining them in their high office, for they are God's servants zealously laboring in building up His Church and Kingdom upon the earth, I pray in the name of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

We have a number of released Mission presidents. We hope to hear from as many of them as possible. In order, however, that we may hear as many as possible, we shall ask them to be good enough to confine themselves to five minutes time. Anything under five minutes is five minutes. Five minutes is not six or seven or ten.

Our first speaker will be President Joseph Jacobs, of the Palestine-Syrian Mission.

ELDER JOSEPH JACOBS

Former President of the Palestine-Syrian Mission

My dear brothers and sisters, I bring you greetings from the Saints in the Palestine-Syrian Mission. It was my privilege and blessing to be called to preside over that historic and interesting Mission in 1937. Although in numbers the Saints in that Mission are relatively few, yet in faith and works they are a great people. While there and since returning home, their reports show that over ninety per cent of those who should pay tithing, do so. In the payment of Fast offerings, in the attendance of their meetings, and other Church activities they compare favorably with the highest group in the Church.

About three weeks ago I received a report from that Mission field about the condition of the Saints. The report states that they are all firm in the faith, are continuing their meetings, tithing is being paid regularly, and an entire family has applied for baptism.

Incidentally, the report was mailed the latter part of May but just arrived here.

Being literally located at the cross-roads of the world, from time immemorial wars have been numerous in that part of the world. And because of its geographical position it is dangerous to remain in that land whenever war breaks out in any of the nearby nations. Because of these conditions, that Mission has been closed four times since it opened in 1890. Intervals of closing range from two to thirteen years. But every time the Mission opened, the new Mission president has been able to find many of the Saints and has discovered to his surprise that they were still in the faith and carrying on.

I rejoice in the privilege and opportunity that has come to me to proclaim the Gospel in that land—in the land where the Savior of the world did His missionary work while He was on the earth. Over twenty-five years ago a Patriarch promised me that it would be my privilege and blessing to preach the Gospel to them that are of the House of Judah. That promise has been fulfilled.

The Lord was with us in our labors. He blessed us so that our way was always open. None in our family nor any of our missionaries was seriously ill. We were not persecuted as the former missionaries were in the past in that land. Our efforts were blessed with some baptisms and many friends.

That you may appreciate our difficulties I shall just mention one item. We used five different and distinct languages in our mission field, each with its own alphabet, grammar and syntax.

Once I was giving an illustrated lecture to a group of professors from the University of Beirut. When I showed the Pioneer Trails film and praised the achievements of the pioneers and how they made the desert blossom as the rose, it sounded to them like I was over-rating the accomplishments of the pioneers and the beauties of Utah. At the end of the lecture one doctor stood up and asked to say a few words. He said he wanted to substantiate what I said. "Not only that, but," said he. "Rev. Jacobs did not state half of the beauty of Utah. I have been in Utah. Every city and village I passed through was clean and well arranged. I went through the Tabernacle grounds and want to witness to you that every word that Rev. Jacobs said is true and more so."

One day I was explaining our beliefs to a minister. I read to him our first Article of Faith. When I got through reading it, he said, "Well that is nothing new—I believe in all of that. Why" he said, "I have made a special study of God, I know all about Him. In fact I wrote my thesis on God when I obtained my degree from college." When I mentioned that our God is a personal God, as we believe the Bible teaches, we disagreed. "We do not need a God in this day and age," he said, "we are too civilized to believe in such fancies." How thankful I was that God had blessed us in our day with a living prophet to reveal eternal truths!

I want to thank my Heavenly Father for the privilege of living in this land of promise—in this land which is choice above all other lands—in this land of Zion. And above all I want to thank Him for my membership in this Church.

May our Heavenly Father bless the leaders of this nation that we may be kept in the paths of peace. May he bless our Prophet and President and his associates that they may lead, guide, and direct this Church to its glorious destiny. And above all, may He bless us all with the spirit of humility and obedience so that we may follow our leaders and so live as to be worthy of all the blessings He has seen fit to grant us and may yet bestow upon us, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.First Counselor in the First Presidency*

To the minute!

Obedient to my usual custom, I want to thank this choir for the splendid music which it has rendered.

Remember, please, brethren and sisters, to drive carefully. Let us have no accident if it be in any way possible to avoid it. One police officer has sent word asking that I be good enough to add to my slogan, and I use his words: "Please ask the pedestrians to show a little sense."

The congregation sang the hymn, "Redeemer of Israel".

Elder Alonzo J. Gilbert, President of the Idaho Stake offered the closing prayer.

SECOND DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The fourth session of the great Conference convened Saturday afternoon, October 5, at 2 p. m.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.First Counselor in the First Presidency*

We are again blessed with the presence of President Grant at this service, and we are grateful to our Heavenly Father for this blessing. President Grant has asked me to conduct the services.

The music this afternoon will be furnished by members of the Tabernacle Choir. Not all of the members can attend, owing to their being employed in places from which they cannot be excused, but those who can attend are here. While we sang very well this morning, I suppose we will have to admit that they can sing better than we did.

The choir is under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall. Elder Alexander Schreiner is at the organ.

The choir and the congregation sang the hymn: "O Ye Mountains High," by Charles W. Penrose.

The opening prayer was offered by President Joseph R. Christiansen, of Moroni Stake.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "Holy Spirit, Truth Divine," by Handel.

ELDER JOSEPH F. MERRILLOf the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

My Brethren and Sisters: We Latter-day Saints are certainly a peculiar people, due in part to our characteristic religious beliefs and claims. Yet we are a very practical people, combining religious faith and the affairs of daily life into what we may call a "way of life." It is to some phases of this "way of life" that I wish to call your attention.

We gladly accept the view of the Psalmist, declared in these words: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honour." (Psalms 8:4, 5)

OBSERVANCE OF LAWS OF CHURCH WINS RESPECT

A few weeks ago I heard President Clark tell a factual story of the failure of a fine upstanding young man to be employed by a large financial organization. The young man possessed ability, a fine personality, a good education and excellent initiative. He had been a valiant worker in the Church. The opening with the organization was intended to lead to an important executive position. Our brother failed of employment because he was found to be smoking.

His prospective employer knew the Church teaches the Word of Wisdom, and further, that the young man in question had formerly both taught and practiced the Word of Wisdom. So why did he take up smoking? President Clark did not say. But was it not because he lacked moral courage and foolishly thought smoking would help him to succeed in the business world?

President Clark's statement reminded me of a conversation I had 28 years ago with our late lamented Simon Bamberger, former governor and long a prominent business man of Utah and a non-Mormon. At the time of our chat Mr. Bamberger said he personally interviewed the applicants for important jobs with his companies. "If a Mormon applied we preferred that he be a returned missionary," he said, "but never employed him if he admitted that he even occasionally drank coffee or liquor, or smoked a cigarette." To my question "why" Mr. Bamberger answered, "I know these young men taught your Word of Wisdom while missionaries. On coming home if they fail to live the Word of Wisdom, I believe the answer is one of two things—they are either weaklings or hypocrites. The Bamberger Company wants neither weaklings nor hypocrites in its employ." Neither did the great organization of which President Clark spoke want a weakling or a hypocrite in its employ.

All the world who have heard of the teachings of Mormonism know that the Church stands for total abstinence from the use of narcotic drinks and drugs, including tea, coffee, liquor and tobacco. But there are some members of the Church who admit they took to the use of one or more of these forbidden things in the belief that it would help them socially, professionally or in business. Was and is this a mistaken belief? Certainly very many desirable opportunities have been lost by our people, as indicated by the examples just mentioned, because they lacked the moral courage or the good judgment to say "no" when they were tempted.

A little study of the matter will convince us that the weak always admire the strong, the unclean delights to see the clean, the foolish envy the wise. In this drifting, sinful world a clean, high type, beautiful character is beloved by the multitude even though the vast majority of them do not attain to his high moral plane of living. No member of the Church, young or old, male or female, will ever handicap himself or herself in the association with decent people by maintaining the high moral standards of living advocated by the Church. On the contrary, smoking and drinking by reputedly good Mormons will always hurt them, never help them, in gaining respect from worth-while non-members. They may succeed, but it will be in spite of their lapses rather than because of them.

CHARACTERISTIC DOCTRINES OF THE CHURCH

But let us go further and be reminded that "unto whom much is given much is required." The Latter-day Saints make many more religious professions than do ordinary Christians. We have many characteristic doctrines, among which are those relating to the personality of the members of the Godhead, of the divine calling of Joseph Smith, of the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon, of the universality of the resurrection of the dead, of salvation for the dead, of the eternity of temple marriages, of personal pre-existence in the spirit world, and several others. The God whom we worship is a real personal being having the very form in which we ourselves are made, a God who hears and answers acceptable prayers and gives revelations to those worthy of and entitled to them; a God who said "this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Pearl of Great Price, Moses 1:39)

Another characteristic and basic doctrine of Mormonism is that of eternal progression. We are spirit children of our Father in heaven and were conscious, intelligent, spirit-body personalities in the forms we now possess at the time of the great rebellion in heaven when Lucifer, the Son of the Morning, fought with the Father's loyal hosts, among whom we were numbered, in order to establish force as the dominant factor in man's salvation. Lucifer (Satan) and his rebels were overcome and cast out, coming down to earth where they have been ever since.

SATAN'S INFLUENCE IN THE WORLD

These things are well-taught among us so that we understand them in outline, at least. My purpose now in reminding you of them is to call your attention to the fact that Satan, a spirit brother of ours, is a real existent personal being with a spirit body and is here among us with a multitude of helpers. He is infinitely more than a mere idea, a thought, or figment of the imagination. Now a thing sad to see is that Satan has enormous influence and power among men which he exercises to their hurt, sorrow and death. What makes this particularly sad to see is that it is wholly unnecessary for men to yield to Satan's power. God has given each one of us the strength, with His help, to put Satan behind us. In yielding to him men do not live up to their high privileges. They seem not to remember who they are—sons of a royal Father, the supreme commander of the universe, a Father who loves them so much that He gave Jesus Christ, His greatly beloved, first-born and only begotten Son in the flesh, to die a tortuous, ignominious death that they might have the opportunity of being redeemed and live again forever in His glorious presence. Yes, brethren and sisters, God has given us the power and clearly indicated the way to overcome Satan.

FREE AGENCY A BLESSING FROM GOD

But let us ever remember, in this connection, one thing more—God has given us our free agency. In this connection it is also well to remember the truth expressed by a beautiful hymn in these words:

Know this, that every soul is free
To choose his life and what he'll be;
For this eternal truth is given,
That God will force no man to heaven.

He'll call, persuade, direct aright,
And bless with wisdom, love and light;
In nameless ways be good and kind;
But never force the human mind.

Freedom and reason make us men;
Take these away what are we then?

People often complain that God is either non-existent or merciless and devoid of love, otherwise He would not permit such a monstrous and inhuman tragedy as is today being enacted in Europe and elsewhere. But no one who understands the Father's doctrine of free agency can ever give any sympathy or support to such complaints. But time does not permit me to give further attention now to this point.

ATTRIBUTES OF GOD INHERITED BY HIS CHILDREN

I wish to give emphasis to the fact that since we are spirit children of our Father in heaven it is perfectly natural that we should possess at least in embryo and microscopic quantities the attributes of our Father. And looking at these attributes as they are developed in our finest characters—as they were beautifully exhibited in the earthly life of Jesus, for example, we may get concrete ideas about the nature of God who possesses these attributes in perfection.

One of these is intelligence. Indeed, intelligence is His glory. Intelligence governed by wisdom is also the glory of man, the attribute that chiefly sets him apart from the mere animal. Possessing this attribute it is easy to understand why it is right for him to be given his free agency. We are therefore entirely in accord with the doctrine expressed in the Declaration of Independence at the birth of our nation—that man is endowed by his Creator with the inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR OUR OWN ACTS

But free agency entails upon man a weighty obligation—that of being responsible for his conduct. And particularly is this the case in full measure in our land of liberty. As residents of America and as members of the Church, privileged as we are with an understanding more or less complete of who we are, of our relations to one another, to our fellow-men, to our country and to our God, we have indeed been given much—are more highly favored than nearly all other men. But we say this humbly and thankfully, not boastfully. We say it also in full realization of the fact that because the Lord has given us much He will in justice exact much at our hands. He will hold us accountable for all that we do.

And here let me particularize a little, indicating a few of our obligations. The Lord requires us to develop the attributes with which we were born. We cannot be saved in ignorance. The law of growth is activity. No one is exempt from this law. But to grow properly the activity must be suited to the growth desired. Playing foot-ball may develop an athlete but it will not make a musician. An intellect governed by wisdom is man's proudest possession. Conduct actuated by the golden rule yields him the greatest happiness. Responsibilities fully met contribute most rapidly to God-like growth.

But in all of these things let us remember that Satan is ever near to handicap us if he can. It is easier to drift than to row. So Satan always prompts us to drift. To grow strong in body, mind or spirit, one or all, self-discipline is absolutely essential. But if we please our Maker we must grow; therefore we must discipline ourselves, that is, we must bring our conduct into harmony with the inexorable laws of divinity that govern growth. I have already indicated a rule of conduct that is in complete harmony with the great law of moral growth—the golden rule.

Now to particularize still more. We Latter-day Saints profess so much that logic, reason, and consistency require us to demonstrate our honesty and sincerity by living according to our teachings, e. g., observe the Word of Wisdom. But this is not all. The Lord requires us thus to live in order to win His favor. And He cannot be deceived. He knows our hearts and our thoughts.

Are we reasonable and wise in what we do? To know what is best to say, what is best to do and to know how best to do it is to possess inspired wisdom, probably our greatest gift. If we live worthy of divine guidance, as we are privileged to do, we shall not go very far astray. We spend great sums and send thousands of missionaries forth to preach the Gospel. Do we so live that our lives are sermons in harmony with the teachings of our missionaries? If not, why not? If not, we shall certainly be condemned. Let us not forget it.

We live in this land choice above all other lands. Are we worthy to enjoy its incomparable blessings? Do we discipline ourselves, self-imposing upon us whatever struggles and sacrifices may be necessary in order that we shall preserve inviolate the principles bequeathed to us by the fathers of our country, many of whom spilled their blood and gave their lives that their descendants might be free?

INTELLIGENT VOTING COMMENDED

Brethren and sisters, the obligations of American citizenship are numerous and sometimes heavy. But to a genuine Latter-day Saint, diligently trying to keep the commandments of God, it is a real pleasure to bear these responsibilities. May I remind you that among the greatest of them is the duty of wise voting. Perhaps few, if any, of us fully meet this responsibility. To do so we must keep ourselves informed of the necessary pertinent facts relative to candidates, remain free from the influence of prejudice and all deceptive propaganda, give no support of any kind to demagogues and their deceptive promises, but be willing to labor and to sacrifice as much as necessary that our government and our country shall be kept free from the hands of those who would despoil them.

To refresh your memories of the attitude of the Church in these matters please re-read Section 134 of the Doctrine and Covenants on "A Declaration of Belief Regarding Governments and Laws," adopted by a unanimous vote at a general assembly of the Church held at Kirtland, Ohio, August 17, 1835.

The following taken from the Declaration is a key sentence: "We believe that no government can exist in peace, except such laws are framed and held inviolate as will secure to each individual the free exercise of conscience, the right and control of property, and the protection of life." The Church cannot look with any degree of favor upon any proposition whatsoever that would oppose to the slightest extent this statement.

Brethren and sisters, our free America, the America of our fathers, is gravely in danger, not from enemies without but from enemies within. It is the duty of all Latter-day Saints, living under the stars and stripes, as well as of all loyal citizens, to forget their petty differences and their ignoble personal selfishness, and rally to her support. This may best be done by holding inviolate the Charter of our liberties—the Constitution of the United States and all good laws made in harmony therewith. This certainly requires that we shall be careful and elect to make and administer the laws only people who are wise, patriotic and morally worthy—only men and women of high character.

God bless America, God bless His faithful children, and give them the strength, moral courage and wisdom, through their desire and worthiness, to keep His commandments I humbly pray in Christ's name. Amen.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy and President of the New England Mission

I am happy to come from Boston to attend this Conference, and to report to the parents of the missionaries laboring in New England that they are a noble band of young men and women, and we are proud of them. They work very hard and it does not take long for them to prove themselves true servants of God.

LABORS OF MISSIONARIES PRAISED

New England is a difficult mission because we have so few members of the Church, but what we have are as true and noble as ever lived. If we have a branch of six or eight or ten members that have been converted in New England, we call it a large branch, and your sons and daughters go into these districts and sometimes far out on the borders of Canada, for we have Saints in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. It is a fine people that we labor among. Boston is said to be the hub of America and the center of culture, and there are some twenty universities and colleges in Boston alone. So you see we are among a people who have always believed in education. You would be happy to see your boys and girls laboring, and could you be in the city of Lynn, a manufacturing center, at a Sunday morning meeting, you would find ten or fifteen young girls and boys, from the Methodist Church, singing in our choir there, and our Elders sitting in the Methodist Church of a Sunday evening taking part in their choir.

A TRIBUTE TO THE PEOPLE OF NEW ENGLAND

You would like New England people. Many of them are descendants of the old Puritan stock; that stock that was represented in England by such men as Oliver Cromwell and John Milton. They came to America to build new homes and to be free to worship God as they wanted to worship. We speak unkindly sometimes of those people because they were very strict in their habits. They were Calvinistic and though they had their faults, they had their strong characteristics. They would not tolerate immorality. They would not tolerate impurity in politics. Said John Milton on one occasion: "Politics is the science of government and no politics can be pure until there is brought to bear on this great science the ideals that God governs in the affairs of men.." We do misunderstand them, it is true, but they were strict in their home life. I wish that today in the world we had more of the iron men like Cromwell, Admiral Coligny, and Governor Bradford of Plymouth Colony.

AMERICAN IDEALS CORRUPTED

One of the great wrongs going on in America to-day is the idea held by millions of people that they have the right to enjoy the things of life which they have never earned. It is a form of dishonesty that is corrupting the youth of to-day, it has already corrupted millions. It has produced an aversion to hard work. Idleness and the love of pleasure have taken away many of our American ideals given to us by the fathers of this nation. The hate of man for man has grown in this country as it has grown in the lands across the seas. These forces have torn down religious ideals, and the Gospel of Jesus Christ our Lord finds little lodgment in the hearts of men. Our civilization is suffering from a breakdown in character because our teachings have not had a sufficient effect on the actions and lives of individuals. We speak of reforms,

Human nature can only be reformed by a strengthening of prophetic religion. A new day for social betterment can come only through the revelations of God to his people—the pure Gospel of Jesus Christ. Benjamin Franklin warned us in the Constitutional convention at the very birth of this nation that our government will end in despotism if the people become corrupt. This nation must turn back to God.

HONOR DONE TO C. E. DALLIN

I should like to tell you about a lovely thing that happened in Boston two weeks ago to-morrow. It concerns the unveiling of the "Paul Revere monument," created for the city of Boston by our well known sculptor, Cyrus E. Dallin. The monument was inspired by the poem of Longfellow's which runs: "Listen, my children and you shall hear of the mid-night ride of Paul Revere." In 1884 Dallin entered his model in competition with ten other sculptors, the country's foremost. He won over men like Andrew O'Conner and Daniel Chester French. Dallin was told by the committee to execute his statue and it would stand in Copley Square. Then a sculptor named Trueman H. Bartlett wrote to the Boston Transcript: "It is the most outrageous piece of effrontery and lack of intelligence on the committee's part to have selected that model—a model of an impossible man on an impossible horse—." These words had their effect, and the appropriation promised was never made. Dallin sought at intervals for fifty-five years to induce various mayors to appropriate funds for the statue, and a few years ago, he appealed to the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, also without success. Several months ago, he presented his case to the five trustees of the George Robert White fund, who have the income of some $6,000,000 at their disposal for the erection of works of art. An appropriation was made for the statue and Dallin came into his own. The wrong done over half a century ago to a struggling art student of 23 was righted. There are compensations in life for long waiting when ideals are at stake.

The statue stands in the north end of Boston near Paul Revere's old home and on the mall near the old North Church, from the tower of which hung the lanterns on the night of the nineteenth of April, 1775.

I was present at the unveiling of the monument and heard Mayor Tobin of Boston say: "This day, I have the honor in behalf of the city of Boston to right a wrong that was done over a half a century ago. . . . I have the honor of introducing to you Mr. Cyrus E. Dallin, the sculptor of this beautiful statue." Mr Dallin arose, bowed to the crowd and sat down again. He had won at last and his noble heart was filled with gladness.

Dallin's "Massasoit" the Indian who made peace with the Pilgrim Fathers, stands overlooking the sea at Plymouth Rock, and his "Appeal to the Great Spirit" stands in front of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. What pride we all have in the beautiful Angel on the cap-stone of our Temple here, which was also made by Dallin. It is possibly his masterpiece. Dallin's story of how he came to make the statue at the request of President Wilford Woodruff is one of the loveliest things I ever heard.

AN APPEAL FOR LOYALTY TO THE CONSTITUTION

That Sabbath day after the dedicatory exercises of the monument of Paul Revere, an old priest stood before hundreds of Italians in the old church near by and spoke on the "God-given Constitution of the United States." It did my heart good to see those alien people pay deference to our flag and to Paul Revere. Herein is a lesson. You Italians, you Germans, and French, you Scandinavians and all other foreigners who have joined the Church and come to America have found freedom and liberty as you have never known before, and you may rest assured that this is a country blessed of God, and its Constitution was written by men who were God-inspired. Be true to your country and its Constitution which is for all time, for never can anything better take its place. The ideal of America was stated by President Grover Cleveland in Philadelphia at the centennial exercises in honor of the drafting of the Constitution in 1887. Said President Cleveland: "When we look down one hundred years and see the origin of our Constitution, when we contemplate all its trials and triumphs, when we realize how completely the principles upon which it is based have met every national need and every national peril, how devoutly should we say with Franklin, 'God governs in the affairs of men,' and how solemn should be the thought that to us is delivered this ark of the people's covenant and to us sealed with the test of a century. It has been found sufficient in the past, and it will be found sufficient in all the years to come, if American people are true to their sacred trust. Another centennial day will come, and millions yet unborn will inquire concerning our stewardship and the safety of the Constitution. God grant they may find it unimpaired; and as we rejoice to-day in the patriotism and devotion of those who lived one hundred years ago, so may those who follow us rejoice in our fidelity and love for Constitutional liberty."

FAITH OVERCOMES FEAR

My brethren and sisters, let us grow in faith; that faith which will regenerate our lives completely. If we have the enlarged faith in the living God that was taught us by the Master, nothing can hurt us. Do you recall the story of the three men who were thrown into the fiery furnace because they would not bow down to the golden image erected by Nebuchadnezzar and give up their knowledge of the Living God? The Jews were in the furnace of affliction, but they were not afraid. When the three men—Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego stood before the priests of Babylon, they answered: "If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace; but if it be not according to His plan, be it still known unto thee, O king, that we will not worship thy gods nor the golden image.

"And the fire had no power upon their bodies, nor was the hair of their head singed, nor had the smell of fire passed upon them, for there was with them in the furnace a fourth whose aspect was like unto the Son of God."

What a lesson for the martyrs of the day in which we live!

I pray for the blessings of God upon us all, that we may be unto all people a light and life and a help in this darkened world, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

BISHOP LEGRAND RICHARDS

Presiding Bishop of the Church

As has been expressed during the meetings of this Conference, this is a great Church, a great people, and great have been our accomplishments. I was impressed as my father, Elder George F. Richards, opened the meeting this morning by his enumeration of some of the great things the Church has achieved up until the present time. I believe that we are only in the process of preparation for far greater achievements and accomplishments, for the Lord expects it at our hands. This is His Church and it is His Kingdom. Its destiny has been decreed and proclaimed by the prophets of old, and ultimately it is the Kingdom that shall fill the earth. With that thought in mind we should seek to prepare ourselves for every event of the Lord's providence concerning us and be prepared to carry on His Kingdom.

THE PRIESTHOOD AS A MEANS OF BRINGING PEACE

Brother Clark expressed in his opening remarks not a great fear that we should be attacked by any foreign foe, and I have felt that way in my own heart for some time. But in analyzing the prophecies of the scriptures it seems to me that we are in some danger lest there should be people arise against people, and this in our land, as well as nation against nation, and I have always felt that if we could live nearer to one another, love one another as the Lord intended we should do that this brotherhood that is being built up through the Priesthood that we bear would be the thing that would preserve us against bloodshed. In the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants we are told that the day will come when every man who is not willing to take up his sword and fight against his neighbor should flee to Zion for safety, but if we keep close to the spirit of this great Priesthood that we bear, this brotherhood, we should be able to live at peace with one another and not have to take up the sword against our neighbors.

TOLERANCE IN POLITICS COMMENDED

With the wonderful achievements of the Church I feel there are some weaknesses that we should have pointed out. You will remember that Paul, in indicating the purpose of the organization of the Church, said that among other things it was for the perfecting of the Saints. Ever since I was a young man there has been one thing that has not been pleasing to me. It seems to me that it is a disturbing influence and probably the most disturbing of all influences in the midst of the Latter-day Saints, and that is this political discord. I know I am stepping in where angels fear to tread, but since I am not a politician I think I might be privileged to say a word or two on this subject. Notwithstanding the loyalty we bear to the Church, and all the service we render, somehow our minds become darkened when we talk of political things, and those who otherwise should be the best of friends and the best of neighbors become at variance with each other. I have heard President Grant tell in years gone by of some of the brethren who went Ward Teaching together and before they separated they were fist-fighting because they got into arguments over politics. I was with a group of brethren one day, when the discussion became so hot that one brother said, "If the Savior should come back to the earth and He was a member of the other party I would oppose Him." I could understand this statement, but I did not believe the brother meant it. He saw me walk away in disgust so he hunted me up the next day and apologized for what he had said.

This extreme attitude has always annoyed me. My family has sometimes said, "How is it that you do not take a more active part in politics?" And I have said, "Because I love my friends too much, and I have seen too many men lose their friends because of their activity in politics." I do not see, brethren, why we cannot stand for correct principles and not have to "haul through the mire," so to speak, each other just because we go out after a political position. I sometimes wonder if our brethren realize how much they do to destroy the faith of the youth of the Church and cause unfavorable criticism and comment by those who are not of the Church when they assail each other as has been the practice for all the years since I have been old enough to remember. We ought to feel that we owe our allegiance to the Church and to the Priesthood and to our brethren. We should love our brethren until the love that binds us together will be stronger than the cords of death, and this ought to cause us to sustain and uphold each other under all circumstances and not permit the evil one to get an inroad into our midst because of these disturbing influences.

SAFETY IN FOLLOWING ADVICE OF CHURCH LEADERS

Another word about politics, if you will permit it. We have had testimonies today from some of the brethren. I was particularly impressed with what Brother Evans said, that he believed in following the Prophet of the Lord even though he did not think he was right, because he found he always was right, and he said those of us who are not willing to follow him when we do not think he is right do not believe that he is a Prophet of God. This accords with my feelings along this line. I have had the privilege for the past two and a half years, with my counselors, of meeting weekly with the First Presidency of this Church, and I want to testify to you here today, my brethren and sisters, that they are in very deed prophets of God, and I am willing to follow them when their judgment is different from mine because to me they are more than ordinary men; they are men clothed upon by the power of God. When we raise our hands to sustain them as prophets, seers, and revelators, we ought to think twice before we criticize their judgment and their recommendations.

A report came to the office the other day from one of our brethren who said, "Well, if the President expresses his opinion on these political matters, the people will do just the opposite to what he says." We would not like to believe that this is true among the Latter-day Saints, but if there are any of us who feel that it is true, we ought to search our own hearts and see if that is the kind of faith we have in the leaders of this great Church. There are those all over the world including religious leaders today who are looking with despair upon the present conditions of the world and they are wondering how we are going to find the way out. While I was in the South, I read in one of the largest newspapers in Atlanta a long article written by Bishop Candler of the Methodist Church of Atlanta, a man who is respected all over this nation, and one of the great leaders of his people. After decrying the conditions, the lack of faith and the lack of leadership in the world, he closed his article with these words, "We need the reappearance of prophets sent of God." When even religious leaders feel the need of prophets sent of God why shouldn't we feel the need of following the prophets who are in our midst who are sent of God? Shortly after that, in the city of Atlanta, in November 1936, Bishop Ainsworth addressed a conference of Methodists relative to alarming conditions observed today and urged the people of all faiths to engage in a crusade to save civilization from moral decadence. And then the Bishop added: "Never in the nation's history was the arresting voice of a prophet of God more needed than it is today. Tremendous forces of reconstruction are at work and their mighty currents are changing the shore lines of our civilization. Millions of our people have lost their moorings. Civilization has reached the crossroads and the more serious minded leaders of the race are wondering where we are going."

If this be the opinion of religious leaders of the world and they openly acknowledge that never in the history of the world has the arresting voice of a prophet been so needed as it is today, why shouldn't we pray for faith and courage to follow the prophets the Lord has given us? So far as I am concerned I wish we as Latter-day Saints had the faith to follow these men whom God has chosen to lead us, endowed with the inspiration and revelation of heaven, so that their voices and their judgments and their instructions and their advice would have first place in our lives regardless of any political party or political doctrine. It seems to me that it has almost come to the point in our Church where even if they express their thoughts on some of the very fundamentals for which the Church has ever stood, for which every prophet in this great Church has stood, they are criticized by some of the brethren on the grounds that they are meddling in politics.

WARNING OF DR. JOHN M. REINER

There stood in this pulpit in January 1898 Dr. John M. Reiner, a Roman Catholic Priest of New York, who had been attending the meetings regularly for some time, and President Woodruff and Brother Penrose were on the stand. President Woodruff called him up to the pulpit. He stood here, and after giving the reasons why he had found it necessary, impelled by the reports he had heard, to make investigation of our claims, he made this statement: "The Church of God need never fear an enemy from without, but the enemy within your walls, he who walks with you side by side into your tabernacle, or into your temple, he who makes the same profession, he who speaks the same language, he who pretends to have the same religion and believe in the same revelations and to be guided by the same authority, but whose heart is far from God and who lives an ungodly life. He is the worst enemy you have and in due time if you do not clean out your house from such people, God Himself will smite you with pestilence."

I believe, my brothers and sisters, that our greatest danger as a people is from within, and I would like to believe that the Latter-day Saints believe in the leaders of this great Church to the point that they are willing to accept their counsel and advice. I think sometimes we almost bind them so that when they have the inspiration of Almighty God and would like to speak to us they hesitate for fear some of us will feel that they are interfering with political affairs. If I had my way I would welcome the day, come it as soon as God may grant, when these men with whom I am associated so intimately and whose very intimate thoughts I know and their desires for the welfare of this people and the welfare of the Kingdom of God, might not only be issuing instructions to this great Church but to this great nation, which we are told is a land choice above all other lands and over which Christ our Lord, as decreed, shall reign, as King of Kings and Lord of Lords, because in this land it is decreed that the new Jerusalem of the Lord our God shall be established.

A PRAYER ANSWERED

I heard an experience the other day of one of our Stake Presidents, a grand and noble man, and I respect him, and I am going to take the liberty of repeating it here without mentioning names because it illustrates the kind of faith I think we ought to have in these leaders of ours. Sometime ago an article was published over the signature of the First Presidency and it seemed to irritate him and it irritated others because it dealt with some political measures, and he thought it was not right for the Presidency of this Church to express themselves on such matters. He went into his office to think it over, and he went into his private room and prayed about it. When he came out from that moment of prayer, he decided that if these men were prophets of God they had a right to speak, and it was his place and his responsibility to follow them and to respect their counsel and advice. That is the kind of faith I like to see in this Church.

A LESSON IN THE SAVIOR'S WORDS TO PETER

I think sometimes as I listen to men criticizing the leaders of the Church, and we have some among us who do that, of the words of the Savior to Peter of old. You will remember that constantly Peter was checked on by the Master, and shortly before His crucifixion, He said, "Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you that he may sift you as wheat; but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not; and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren." Peter was sure he was converted and so he answered. "Lord, I am ready to go with Thee both into prison and to death". And He said, "I tell thee, Peter, the cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me."

And so I feel sometimes when we are not willing to follow the counsel and advice of our leaders, in substance, we, as Peter of old, deny that we know them; for surely we know them not in their true positions and in their true work as prophets of the Lord Jesus Christ except we be willing to follow them even though it be unto death itself.

The Master said, "They have Moses and the prophets . . . if they hear not the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead."

God grant that ye may stand as united brethren and that we uphold those whom God has appointed to preside over us, and if we do this, my brethren and sisters, I have no fear but that this Church shall hurriedly and speedily take its place as God has decreed. God bless you all I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER SYLVESTER Q. CANNON

It is a source of great joy to me, my brothers and sisters and friends, to meet with you in the sessions of this Conference and to partake of the spirit of these gatherings. I rejoice greatly in the presence with us today of President Heber J. Grant in the measure of health and strength that he enjoys. I pray with you that he may continue to enjoy vigor and life and accomplish the mission which he has before him in great measure, as long as he desires. I pray for the blessings of the Lord to attend his Counselors. I sustain them fully and wholly, and I sustain all of the General Authorities and all the local authorities; all the Stake Presidencies and Ward Bishoprics and Mission Presidents; and all who have part in this work. I realize how great and responsible this work is, and what a joy there is in the accomplishment of righteous deeds. I pray that the Lord may bless me in the things I may have to say this afternoon.

There have been many important messages presented to us today and yesterday. I sense all that has been said as being of great importance and welfare to us, and I desire that I may sustain in every respect the responsibilities that rest upon me, in common with you, to measure up to every duty and labor to the very fullest extent possible. I have in my heart nothing but great rejoicing in the work in which I am engaged with you and I desire to qualify in the fullest measure for every undertaking, responsibility, and blessing that the Lord has given me. I realize that the blessings of the Lord are with us. I realize that His desire is for our progress, our salvation, and our exaltation in every respect, to the extent that we will fulfil every commandment that He has given us. And so I say that I am prepared, and desire to measure up to every responsibility that the Lord has given. I have great joy and satisfaction in consideration of the kindness shown to me by my brethren, and by all of you, my brethren and sisters.

My mind has rested to some extent on the responsibilities of the Priesthood, but this subject has been touched upon by some who have spoken, so I have decided to speak of other things.

HUMAN AND DIVINE GOVERNMENT

There are many principles revealed and many covenants made by the Lord with His children who have taken upon them His name to serve Him. There are other agreements or covenants made by men one with another which are to do with civil affairs, and are intended to be honorably complied with. We call these agreements or covenants. The agreements or promises made to mankind by the Lord are in the nature of divine covenants, or divine understandings, and these the Lord has made to His children, through His faithful servants. To the extent that mankind has fulfilled the conditions they have received the blessings and the promises the Lord has made.

I might relate a number of these things. You are familiar with them in the history of the world and the hand-dealings of the Lord with His children. He made promises to Adam that he should have dominion over every living thing. Adam was true to his covenants and he fulfilled his part. And so it has been with Enoch and with Noah. When Noah received the commandment of the Lord he fulfilled that covenant faithfully and received a blessing. So with Moses and other ancient prophets. Coming down through the various dispensations we find that John the Baptist received the authority and followed the instructions of the Lord to preach the Gospel. To him was given authority to perform the ordinance of baptism upon those who manifested repentance; who first had faith in God, and who had grown in the spirit of repentance and the desire to be forgiven of their transgressions or shortcomings. John the Baptist received the keys of that authority and held them in all the centuries from the time of the Savior until the nineteenth century. And the Savior himself gave to mankind the promise that through faith in God and through repentance they could be baptized and receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, whereby they should receive the confirmation of the baptism by fire and the Holy Ghost.

COVENANTS IN THIS DISPENSATION

In this dispensation the Lord revealed to the Prophet Joseph many things and gave him instructions, and among other instructions which were given and blessings which he received was the restoration of the holy sacrament of the Lord's supper; and in like manner the eternal covenant of marriage,—one of the greatest promises made to men in earlier days which has been restored again in these days.

How sacred and important it is that men and women should qualify —those who have accepted the truths of this Gospel of Jesus Christ, and have received authority of the holy Priesthood by divine restoration—to partake of the spirit of this responsibility and this covenant, and to enter into that promise and that blessing. We and our children are entitled to receive these blessings if we live for them, and observe them with all our hearts, in love and kindness, in justice and righteousness.

THE COVENANT OF ETERNAL MARRIAGE

Now my brethren and sisters, I consider this quite important. I felt I would like to talk briefly about this particular covenant the Lord has given. In earlier days, in the early history of mankind, we are told that for this cause should a man leave father and mother and cleave unto his wife, and they twain should be one flesh. We are intelligent beings. We are eternal beings, and inasmuch as we try to do the will of the Lord and keep His commandments He will bless us and fulfil His promises to us. And so, in this latter day, He has given this covenant through the authority of the holy Priesthood, restored again in these days, whereby His sons and daughters who have observed to do His will and have received the authority and fulfilled the covenants shall be entitled to go forward and be united for time and for eternity, and that that covenant should be binding upon them to the extent that they live for it throughout all time. It is a remarkable thing to think about, to realize what eternity means. It sobers one considerably when one thinks of entering into a covenant of this kind, not only for this life, but for the life to come. It justifies very careful consideration on the part of those who enter into it. The man and the woman should be worthy; they should exemplify in their lives every principle of the Gospel to the very best of their ability, and they should strive to grow in patience and in kindness, in good-will and love towards each other, and especially try to exemplify the finest and highest principles of the Gospel and of the Priesthood they have received.

A PRINCIPLE WITH PROMISE

The Prophet Joseph Smith received many instructions in this last dispensation of the fulness of times, and among them were other commandments and other instructions given of the Lord, one of which was the principle of tithing, which is the Law of the Lord, given to mankind that through their faithful observance of that principle they should grow in righteousness and in truth, and be prospered. It is a principle with a promise, and all Latter-day Saints who have undertaken to observe that principle are blessed, blessed particularly spiritually, but also prospered temporally, so that they are able to meet their obligations. I testify to the truth of this, because I know the Lord is a loving Father. He has given us great blessings in the observance of this as well as of every other commandment.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE

With regard to the matter of marriage and divorce, not only in this nation, but in all the nations of the world, I would like to say that scandalous conditions prevail to a large extent. People have neglected eternal marriage; they have done away with the eternal covenant and have substituted therefor civil covenants which endure only until death.

Conditions throughout the nations referred to are far from what they should be. Instead of marriage being recognized as a sacred covenant, as given by the Lord to mankind, it is too often a temporary tie between man and wife, subject to divorce. Such conditions I say are too prevalent in the world. Men and women are too illy situated to sense the seriousness and the vitality, importance and righteousness of the eternal covenant.

CAUSES OF DIVORCE

In going over some of the causes of divorce in this nation I find that there are three main causes: First is cruelty. Generally speaking that is more prevalent in the case of the woman, who feels she is unfairly treated by her husband. Thirty-two per cent of the cases of divorce are for cruelty; twenty-eight percent are for the cause of desertion; and seven and one-half per cent for adultery, which is a very serious charge. These are some of the causes which bring about divorces and are obtained by women, which would indicate that the women are more badly treated by their husbands than the husbands by the wives.

There are more legal causes for divorce on the part of the wife than the husband. One-third of the divorces occur after four years or less of marriage. One third of the divorces are from five to nine years; and one-third of divorces are for over ten years. That indicates something of the conditions with regard to that principle.

The Ladies Home Journal, about a year or two ago, made a survey of the causes of divorce. They found that sixty-nine percent of the women believe in divorce. Money, they say, is the chief cause of friction. Young people, they find from the conclusions, should be taught more about sex before they are married. Sex instructions, they say, should be given by their parents.

Now, these are some of the conditions which prevail in the world. The Latter-day Saints generally believe whole-heartedly, thoroughly, loyally, truly and eternally, in the principle of eternal marriage—marriage for eternity as well as for time—and yet there are many young people in the Church who are not subscribing to this condition—this eternal covenant. They are missing a great opportunity. Too many hasty marriages are very often the occasion for hasty divorces. But those who enter into the covenant of eternal marriage, in my judgment, are those who carefully consider what they are doing, wisely, prayerfully, and earnestly striving to be led and guided into righteousness, so that they resist hasty marriage and every influence that is not in harmony with the Spirit of the Lord.

As an example of what has been achieved by the Latter-day Saints in overcoming this condition of hasty marriages and divorces, and the tendency to disregard the covenants that are made, I want to call your attention to the records, because the Church has kept a record for years with regard to these statistics which are of concern to us. They have been kept as accurately as they could be obtained.

STATISTICAL COMPARISONS

I should like to refer you to certain results which indicate some of the comparisons of marriage and divorce in the nation of the United States as compared with those of the Latter-day Saints. The last year of which we have records was in 1938. The marriage rate of the United States as a whole was 10.41 per thousand population, as compared with 17.5% per thousand population of the Latter-day Saints, which is 70% greater. The divorce rate was 1.71 per thousand population as against 1.04 for the Latter-day Saints. This was about 40% less. But that result was obtained from the record of civil marriages, and not from those performed in the temples of the Lord. In the Latter-day Saint Temples where such ordinances are performed the result was, for those who entered into marriage for eternity .28 per thousand population, or about 83% less. That indicates something of the difference where people observe this covenant that the Lord has given for our eternal welfare.

It is a matter of great importance to every Latter-day Saint. Worthy parents sense the importance of teaching their children this eternal principle. Stake Presidencies, Bishoprics, and all the officers throughout the Church realize that in teaching this divine principle they are instructing worthy young people in the proper observance of an eternal principle of great promise and blessing to all who righteously observe it.

This is one of the great things to think about, that the covenants they make in this life will endure for eternity, if they live in harmony therewith. The blessings of God will attend those bonds if worthily observed. The conclusions are that those who do these things through their willingness and righteous desires to observe these commandments, grow in virtue and regard the sacredness of the covenants and generally are more faithful and dependable and worthy than those who marry for time only.

WHAT OTHERS SAY ABOUT US

Now I would like to say another word. Some time ago I noticed a newspaper article coming from the Coast with regard to eugenics and marital conditions among the Christian peoples of this nation. This briefly states that Dr. Paul Popenoe, social expert and director of the Institute of Family Relations, addressing the California division of the American Eugenics Society, referred to an investigation made by Dr. Ellsworth Huntington of Yale University in the following words: "Dr. Ellsworth Huntington at Yale University has calculated the number of great grandchildren likely to represent the present day leaders in the United States. This is based on a study of persons listed in 'Who's Who,' and therefore represents the fertility only of eminent persons, not of the rank and file. He finds the Mormons have a prospective advantage of more than 400 per cent over their nearest competitors. Jews are almost at the bottom of the list.

"From the sample in 'Who's Who,' 1000 leading adherents of the Mormon faith at the present day will be represented by 10,200 great grandchildren.

"A thousand Lutherans will have only 1950 great grandchildren; Baptists 1560; Methodists 1458; Roman Catholics 1310; Congregationalists 1125; Unitarians 1025; Episcopalians 910; Jews 755; and Universalists 500.

"The low birthrate of the modern Jew is almost world-wide."

Now, that is a challenge to mankind as to what the Latter-day Saints, who are faithful in the observance of this eternal covenant, represent in comparison with mankind generally. Prominent people in other churches, because they have not observed to do these things which make for greater stability, greater love, greater patience, greater consideration, and every other quality, are not able to measure up to the same standards as the Latter-day Saints have achieved.

May the Lord bless us and help every one of us to strive to harmonize our desires with our families to these fine standards that we have referred to that the Lord has established. He is blessing mankind to the extent that we live and keep His commandments, and I testify to you that these principles are true. The Lord is kindly towards His people. May His blessings continually attend us. I testify to you that this is His work, the restoration of the Gospel in these days. These brethren who preside over us are men who are guided by the inspiration and power of the Lord. I pray that we may desire to live in such a way that we may be worthy of the trust vested in us, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

You brethren, returned Mission Presidents, we shall now turn to you to give us the balance of the afternoon. Again I suggest to you that we should like to hear as many as we can. We can hear more if you will speak five minutes and quit than if you speak ten minutes, and anything under five minutes is five minutes.

Will Brother William T. Tew, Jr., formerly president of the East Central States Mission please come to the stand.

ELDER WILLIAM T. TEW, JR.

Former President of the East Central States Mission

I am very happy to be here this afternoon and to take the place of my old friend, A. Richard Peterson. We were together in school, preparing for our missions abroad. In years past we both filled missions in foreign lands, and we have also been in foreign lands and at home presiding over missions during the past few years.

I am happy to be here today to mingle with my brethren and sisters in this great tabernacle. We have been thrilled today listening to this great choir—the harmony, the volume, the fervor, the enthusiasm, the inspiration that seems to fill these singers has in turn thrilled this audience and the unseen audience that perhaps numbers hundreds of thousands.

Since returning home about five or six weeks ago I have been asked many times, "Are you glad to be home?" I can honestly say to my brothers and sisters that I am glad to be home. I was glad when I was in the mission field, but when my mission was completed and I was released, why shouldn't I be glad to be back among my brethren? I believe that when one puts his whole soul into the missionary work for a period of three years or more, he deserves a release. If he doesn't put his soul into it, he deserves a release long before the three years are up.

We have had great joy in our mission. The Lord has blessed us with health and strength, and He has increased our testimonies of the Gospel. We have had great joy in mingling with our Saints abroad, many of whom are here today at this great Conference. We have enjoyed the companionship, the loyalty and love of your boys and girls who have been sent there as missionaries. I want to tell you, my brethren and sisters, there is nothing in the world more dear to me than the love of these young people who have filled honorable missions in the mission field. They are an inspiration to those who labor among them; they are the stalwart defenders of the faith; they are the "hope of Israel" because the "hope of Israel" is the youth of Zion. The future of this Church and the salvation of our Church rests with the youth.

My brethren and sisters and friends, I have been impressed very much within the last few days studying things regarding our Savior's life. One of the things that occurred to me last evening as well as this afternoon is the experience of our Savior as a boy of twelve in the temple of the Lord. When His mother sought Him she found Him both asking and answering questions among the wise men and lawyers of the temple. His question to her was, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" I do not know any greater ideal, any greater goal or objective in life that you and I can have, or that young people can have in their souls than the one embodied in that question. We should be about our Father's business, and the question arises in turn, "What is our Father's business?"

We have been told that the Lord's work and the Lord's glory is to bring to pass man's immortality and man's eternal life; and eternal life we are told is a quality of life, the kind of life that God Himself lives, that kind of life that Jesus, the Christ, came to give—life abundant, rich and full and joyful. That is the Lord's business; that is my business as one of His children; that is your business, my brethren and sisters, as the children of the Lord. Though we grant the fact that the Lord is Omnipotent, it seems to me that in this realm of His work, bringing to pass man's eternal life, the Lord does need you and me, because I claim—I may be wrong—but I claim the Lord cannot give me eternal life, that quality of life, that degree of joy which is celestial, unless I am willing to do my duty and keep His commandments, assist my fellow men in learning His commandments and encouraging them in keeping those commandments.

I am sure the Lord spoke a glorious truth when he said to Oliver Cowdery and others: "If you should labor all your days in crying repentance unto this people, and bring save it be one soul unto me, how great shall be your joy with him in the kingdom of my Father!"

And so we have rejoiced in the mission field in devoting ourselves to the service of the Lord. We have brought into the Church in the last three years between twelve and thirteen hundred souls, converts and children. We have traveled over a hundred thousand miles. I have attended and preached in more than a thousand meetings. How much good has been done rests of course with the future.

My brethren and sisters, we have increased in testimony. We bear our testimony to you this afternoon that this is the work of the Lord, and the only way to bring peace and joy to the world is by knowing the Lord's commandments and by keeping them.

My five minutes are up. From the bottom of my heart, I want to thank the parents of those boys and girls who have served in the mission field. I do thank them and am grateful for their lives, for their devotion and for their service. May the Lord bless these young people at home that they may keep in the harness, that they may be kept in the faith, that they may be an inspiration to all those with whom they associate, I pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

ELDER PRESTON NIBLEY

Former President of the Northwestern States Mission

I desire to take this occasion to express the gratitude that Sister Nibley and I feel for the opportunity we have had to serve as missionaries in the Northwestern States Mission. This was my second mission, and it was her first. I can say that we enjoyed every minute of our time.

We were sent out, according to President McKay, for two and a half to three years, but we remained there three years and eight months.

Oregon was not a new country to us, as my father had been there many years previously, and I had been there as a child. We have thousands of Latter-day Saints in the northwest, and many more are migrating out there on account of business and other opportunities. Besides the Portland and Seattle Stakes we have some ninety-two branches and Sunday Schools. We left 130 missionaries, whom we dearly love.

When I received my release from the First Presidency, I did not know whether I wanted to come home or not, I felt so interested in my work. I remembered what my father told me about his mother when she was dying; she turned to him and said: "Charlie, this dying is no doings of mine." (Laughter)

One of the things which has pleased us has been the fine leadership we have had from President Grant and his Counselors. As Bishop Richards said, so I say, that the Latter-day Saints have the finest leadership in the world, our First Presidency. I express my loyalty to them. No one wrote me more frequently than President Grant, kind, loving, encouraging letters. I received many from him. When I opened his letters and read: "Dear Preston," and found that they closed, "Yours affectionately, Heber J. Grant," I felt close to my President. He was my President thirty-five years ago when I was a missionary in Europe, and now he is nearing his eighty-fourth birthday, and I thank my Heavenly Father that he has been preserved to us.

President McKay has been all that a brother and leader, could be, and we have loved him and his leadership, and we love him now. I did not hear from President Clark so frequently, but President Clark, I always knew you were there, and I knew you were back of us.

Brother and sisters, we tried to look after your missionaries. We never took our eyes away from them; we watched them by day and by night, and encouraged them so that they would return home and be an honor to you. We watched their health, we watched everything pertaining to them.

I think our converts are being made in the northwest principally through the Latter-day Saints who reside there. They bring their neighbors to Church, and we are baptizing the neighbors of our Saints. Many hundreds have joined the Church. During our presidency over 2,000 were baptized in the Northwestern States Mission.

Now, with the other mission presidents here, I do not know whether I should say it or not, but during the first six months of this year the Northwestern States Mission led the Missions of the United States in tracts distributed and Gospel conversations, and in baptisms per missionary.

I am grateful that we received an honorable release from the First Presidency. We are happy to be home, and we shall continue to serve in any capacity to which the Brethren call us.

I bear you my testimony that this is the work of God, that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, sent to restore the Gospel in this last dispensation. I leave you this testimony, and I do it humbly, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

The choir sang "I Will Give Thanks Unto the Lord," by Campbell-Tipton.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

I am afraid, my brethren and sisters, you will have to say that this choir is better than we were. I thank them, and I thank their employers who permit them to come and sing for us so beautifully this afternoon.

Elder Asael E. Palmer, President of the Lethbridge Stake, offered th closing prayer.

THIRD DAY

MORNING MEETING

Sunday morning, October 6.

The great Tabernacle was crowded to capacity with people who had assembled many of them more than an hour in advance of the time to begin this session, to listen to the Conference proceedings. The large Assembly Hall immediately south of the Tabernacle was also crowded with people, and thousands in addition assembled upon the Tabernacle grounds, where, by means of amplifying equipment that had been installed, they listened to the services as given in the Tabernacle.

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., who conducted, opened the meeting promptly at 10 o'clock.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

There are literally thousands of people who cannot get in the Tabernacle at all this morning, and hundreds are standing in the entrances and aisles. Please do the best you can to give some of them seats. On the sides, too, as well as the center, and up in the gallery. Be good enough to move as close together as possible. It would be very helpful.

We are again blessed with the presence of President Grant, who will preside at this meeting and who will speak to us. He has asked me to conduct the services.

The music this morning will be by the Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall. Elder Alexander Schreiner is at the organ.

The hymn, "The Spirit of God Like a Fire is Burning," (By William W. Phelps), was sung by the choir and congregation.

Elder John B. Reed, President of the San Luis Stake, offered the opening prayer.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

GRATITUDE FOR FAITH OF PEOPLE

It is needless for me to tell you good people how grateful I am to be here today. I missed the Conference six months ago, and I am grateful beyond expression to all of you good people, to the Saints generally, and to some people who are not members of our Church for your and their faith and prayers in my behalf that I should be healed. I am grateful to the doctors who so kindly, carefully, and energetically at home, and while in Los Angeles, gave me the benefit of their services.

I lack the capacity to express the gratitude and thanksgiving in my heart for the blessings of the Lord to me and this people. I humbly pray that while I am speaking to you this morning the Spirit of the Lord may be and abide with me. I do not expect, however, to preach to you this morning, I simply desire to express my gratitude to the Lord, and I expect to have the pleasure this afternoon, as my doctor, Silas Smith, consented that I may speak again, at the close of the Conference.

KINDNESS ACKNOWLEDGED

I am grateful to my friends in California, to my relatives and to my railroad, banking and insurance friends, to Mr. Chandler of the Los Angeles Times, and to all of the officials of the Church in California, because of their fine attention to me and their interest in my welfare. I am grateful for the fine treatment I received at the Catholic Hospital in Los Angeles.

I am very thankful for our fine Conference, for the wonderful attendance here today, and for the magnificent body of the Priesthood that were together last night.

THE FILM "BRIGHAM YOUNG" COMMENDED

I am thankful beyond expression for the very wonderful and splendid moving picture that has been made of Brigham Young. I have heard some little criticism of it, but we cannot expect the people who do not know that Brigham Young was in very deed the representative of God upon this earth, who do not know his wonderful character, to tell the story as we would tell it. We know that he was a prophet of the living God and the representative of the Lord here upon the earth. There is nothing in the picture that reflects in any way against our people. It is a very marvelous and wonderful thing, considering how people generally have treated us and what they have thought of us. Of course there are many things in the picture that are not strictly correct, and that is announced in the picture itself. It is of course a picture and we could not hope that they would make a picture at their expense, running into a couple of million dollars, to be just as we would like it. We know that Brigham Young was a powerful and wonderful man, the greatest man of his day, and one of the great things about Brigham Young was that he always gave credit to Joseph Smith for everything that he did. He claimed that he was simply building upon the foundation laid by the prophet of God, who had seen God and conversed with Jesus Christ. He never doubted for one minute the final triumph of the people here in Utah. He was a man of God, and the people thought the world and all of him.

THE CHURCH MAKING FRIENDS

I am very thankful for the health of the people. I am very thankful for the very marvelous and wonderful change that I find wherever I go in the attitude towards the Mormon people. To be known as a Mormon, living the Gospel of Jesus Christ, is a recommendation to all those that know us as a people. As the years come and go the Word of Wisdom and all the various teachings and doctrines laid down by the Prophet Joseph Smith and so faithfully and strongly carried out by Brigham Young are making us friends all over the world.

BLESSING AND PRAYER FOR PEACE

The doctor told me I could have five or six minutes, or even ten. I have occupied only about five, but as I am going to talk to you again at the close of the conference, and as I do not want to overdo in the least degree, I shall simply say, God bless you, one and all. God bless the honest the world over. God bless all good people, and hasten the day when people shall seek to God for guidance and direction, when wars will cease and peace will reign, is my prayer, and I ask it in humility and in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, our Redeemer. I bless you by the authority of the holy Priesthood of the living God that I hold, and I do it in the name of Christ, our Redeemer, Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

President Grant: words cannot express the gratitude of the people for your presence, your message, and the degree of health which you have. May the Lord continue to bless you is the prayer of all the people of the Church.

ELDER ANTOINE R. IVINS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I am delighted, brethren and sisters, with this opportunity of standing before you for just a few short minutes this morning. The gathering of men who were here in this building last night, and the gatherings of men and women who have been here during this Conference, give new testimony to the fact that there is in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints still a fervent faith in God, our heavenly Father.

PESSIMISM AND OPTIMISM

There are people in the Church who have the temerity to say that our condition is such as to justify, perhaps, God our heavenly Father in taking the Gospel from us. I have had at least one man cite to me the sixteenth chapter of Third Nephi, tenth and eleventh verses, in which God says that when certain conditions shall prevail within the Church, He will take the Gospel from us, citing as justification the fact that we are now in such a condition that we might lose it—a pessimistic view, indeed, I take it.

I insist on feeling, brethren and sisters, that I am an optimist. As I move about among you people I have many opportunities to see how you feel, to realize your trust in God our heavenly Father, and I believe that there is in the Church today still the same faith that characterized our grandfathers and grandmothers when this Church was re-established in our dispensation.

If you will permit, I would like to cite you just one or two instances which make me feel this way.

FAITH IN MISSIONARY WORK

One time when I was in the Mexican Mission I passed through a little town in Arizona, and asked a man how he felt regarding the depression. He said: "We feel just as we always do, Brother Ivins. It is always depression in this section." I happened to know that that man had a family of six or eight, and that every boy and girl that he had, who was of age, had performed a mission for the Church, one of them at that very time serving in the Mission over which I had the privilege of presiding.

Not very many weeks ago a man came into my office with his son. He said: "Brother Ivins, I am presenting this son for a mission." The few questions that I directed to him brought out the fact that this was the ninth child of his to fulfil a mission for the Church; that in addition to those nine, he had supported his brother on a mission, and was at that very time supporting a man, who was not of his family, in the New England States Mission.

One time when I was interviewing a young man in Idaho, his father having brought him in, said: "Brother Ivins, we recommend this boy for a short-term mission. If, however, the leaders of the Church feel that he should serve a full term, they are welcome to his services, but in that event my wife and I will be forced to sacrifice our home, which represents the savings of our lifetime. We are willing to do it if the Church requires it."

Those things indicate to me that in those instances, at least, there is a fine degree of faith within the Church. As we move around we interview prospective missionaries who are to be called to go out into the world, and we ask them some very pertinent and sometimes very delicate questions, to find out just what their attitude is, and how they have lived. I find, to my utter pleasure and satisfaction, that almost without exception those young men and young women are able to tell me, and look me honestly in the eye when they do it, that in preparation for this great event in their lives they have lived clean and pure lives.

Now, when that type of faith exists within the Church I am not particularly worried as to the future. I feel that God is going to be justified in honoring the Priesthood which He has here in the Church at this time, and that He will not feel like taking the Gospel from us.

LOVE OF NEIGHBOR EXHIBITED IN WELFARE WORK

We had portrayed the accomplishments of the Church Welfare work, the other day, in the program of one of these meetings. Nobody can look at those things and tell me that there is not faith still in the Church. I think we are meeting those problems with a wonderful display of faith. It gives me an unbounded satisfaction to realize that men are willing to devote their time and their talents, not only without compensation, but at their expense, for the welfare of their fellows.

The injunction of Christ was that we should love God, our heavenly Father, first, and our neighbor second; and this is indication to me that we do, most of us at least, love our neighbors, for we are willing to work for them, and work for them for nothing, help them over their pitfalls and out of their troubles, and to a higher state of living.

Now, why should we be terribly pessimistic over this outlook, when we realize that those conditions prevail? We do recognize the fact, however, that there are conditions within the Church which need rectifying. There are too few of us who are living fully and completely up to our opportunities.

MELCHIZEDEK PRIESTHOOD PERCENTAGES

I have had the privilege of checking, this year, the relationship between the number of families in the Church and the number of members in the Melchizedek Priesthood. I find that in some of the Stakes the proportion between families in the Stake and members of the Melchizedek Priesthood is as low as fifty-five. In other places it runs up to eighty-eight or ninety. In Colonia Juarez, the other day, I checked that very item, and I found those people down there having representatives in the Melchizedek Priesthood to the extent of eighty-eight per cent of their families, I believe; but just recently another Stake checked as low as fifty-five.

What does this mean? It means, to me, that too few of us are taking advantage of the sealing ordinances in the temple. Things like that, and other things, need rectifying, to be sure, but I insist, and I leave it to you as my testimony, that there is within this Church an honest, true faith in God our heavenly Father, and I think the manifestations of these Conference meetings bear me out in that testimony.

I pray that God will help us to keep it bright within our hearts, that we may never falter in His service, and that He will be pleased to honor us and bless us in our operations. God bless you all, Amen.

TABERNACLE CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

During the period from 10:30 to 11:00 a. m., the regular weekly National Broadcast of choral and organ music and brief spoken comment was included as part of the Conference proceedings. This program, now in its twelfth year of continuous nationwide broadcasting was presented by the Tabernacle Choir and Organ, and broadcast through the courtesy and facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting system network, throughout the United States and Canada, and by short-wave transmission to many foreign lands. This broadcast originated with Radio Station KSL, Salt Lake City, and, exclusive of routine introductory and closing announcements, was as follows:

"Crucifixus"—Bach .....Choir
 "Ella Entering the Cathedral"—Wagner.....Choir

Announcer, Richard L. Evans: "And Jesus made as though he would have gone . . . But they constrained Him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent." (Luke 24:28-29) And blessed are they who abide His coming, as the gathering storm and the growing darkness of our times bring with them those events that move us on toward another eventide of which the prophets of all generations have spoken. And there is that about the record of prophecy which, even though it may not be pleasant to our ears, strikes conviction to our souls. For "all things must come to pass in their time." (Doctrine and Covenants 64:32) Time and the relentless march of events brought by its passing have been portrayed in musical symbol by the composer Vierne, and we now hear "Westminster Chimes" moving with the sweep of the hours and the march of the years—but "the day or the hour no man knoweth; but it shall surely come." (Doctrine and Covenants 39:21).

"Westminster Chimes"—Vierne.....Organ

Announcer, Richard L. Evans: And then Stephen said unto them: "As your fathers did, so do ye. Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted?" This accusing question could be asked of any generation, for men have always persecuted those who have seen ahead of their own time—whose vision has been enlarged and whose understanding has been quickened by that Spirit which giveth light to every man that cometh into the world (Doc. and Cov. 84:46)—in all fields of thought and knowledge, pertaining both to things here and things hereafter. The Isaiahs, the Galileos, the Noahs and the Columbuses, the Peters and the Pauls, have never been popular in their own day—but they have been so right in spite of the unwillingness of their own generation to believe them. And it would not seem to be popular to say now in our day that the unprincipled chaos in which we find our world was foreseen by the prophets of God and will find no cure and no lasting peace until men turn to Him and pattern their lives in accordance with His ways. Mere lip service will not be acceptable, and the temporary repentance that is forced by immediate fear and present stress will not be mistaken for obedience and a contrite heart. Let the cynic enjoy his brief day; let the man without faith deny it, and let the unbelieving take such hope as they can find. But the unchangeable facts remain, and there rise to meet the dissenting chorus, the words of Stephen: "Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? And when they heard these things, they were cut to the heart . . . And they stoned Stephen." (Acts 7:51-59) "And he kneeled down and cried: To thee O Lord I yield my spirit." This event of New Testament record was given musical setting by Mendelssohn in the St. Paul from which Richard Condie and the Tabernacle choir now sing.

"And They Stoned Him" and "To thee O Lord"—St. Paul —Mendelssohn .....Choir

"O My Father" (Tune "Harwell")—Lowell Mason.....Organ
 "Beautiful Savior" .....Choir

The singing of the Choir was conducted by J. Spencer Cornwall.

Alexander Schreiner was at the organ. The spoken word was by Richard L. Evans.

CHURCH OF THE AIR

Immediately following the conclusion of the Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast, the following nationwide Church of the Air program was presented by the Columbia Broadcasting system, as a part of the proceedings of the Conference:

The Tabernacle Choir and the congregation sang two verses of the hymn, "For the Strength of the Hills We Bless Thee."

PRESIDENT DAVID O. MCKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

For nearly twenty centuries millions of Christians have prayed for the coming of the Kingdom of God, and for more than twenty centuries millions of people have persistently rejected the conditions indispensable to the realization of this era of peace and brotherly kindness.

Even though the essentials for a better world have not been generally accepted, yet mankind has ever striven for a better way of living. In every progressive age of the world's history thinking people have been dissatisfied with their current social and economic conditions, and have sought for remedial changes. Many of their hoped-for Utopias, however, though they have inspired men to action, have ended only as dreams and phantasies.

In response to this urge for change, the twentieth century is no exception. Indeed, during the last fifty years people have witnessed greater political unrest, more stupendous upheavals than have probably occurred in the same length of time in the history of the world. European monarchies have been overthrown, and rising out of the monarchical ruins have come the dictatorship of the proletariat in Russia, the Fascist regime in Italy, the Nazi rule in Germany, and the Fascist form of government in Spain. Democracy, as exemplified in Great Britain and her dominions, and in the United States, has successfully withstood the battling horrors of a World War, and now, after only a quarter of a century, is again either actually participating in or standing on the brink of a second devastating conflict.

If, in the spirit of charity, we say that misguided men have brought all this about because of their desire for a better government, the fact still remains that civilization is encompassed by social upheavals that threaten to divert if not entirely thwart the progress and happiness of the present generation.

FUNDAMENTALS IN DISCARD

Humanity is passing through one of its most crucial experiences. We are in the midst of a revolution both of thought and mode of life. Beliefs of parents are questioned, old ideals are in the discard. Communism, Naziism, Fascism, Totalitarianism are giving birth to new conceptions that strike relentlessly at beliefs and teachings which were accepted a decade ago as fundamentals and unassailable. "Under the influence of a science as superficial as proud," writes M. Paul Gaultier, a leading publicist of France, "old beliefs have been turned into ridicule, conscience is treated as a superstition, and honesty as a prejudice. Self-interest alone remains as a motive, and pleasure as the sole end of life. For too many people," he continues, "evil consists not in infringing social laws, but in getting caught. Morality and duty figure in their eyes as so many prejudices out of fashion, and vestiges of centuries gone by."

Granting the severity of this arraignment, the fact still remains that moral and religious skepticism is too generally apparent, and political chicanery, fraud, and civic unrighteousness all too common.

In the words of an assistant Secretary of State: "We seem to be slipping backward in the long march of progress. We are in danger of losing part of the precious heritage for which our ancestors fought and gave their lives. Human liberty, democracy, parliamentary government, freedom of speech, tolerance, faith—these in important parts of the world have ceased to exist. Autocracy and dictatorships are demanding men's allegiance. Political institutions are cracking ominously. Democratic government is fighting for its life."

To climax these distracting conditions, war, with all its attendant horrors, is sweeping the earth as a devastating conflagration, leaving in its wake only ashes, agony, and death.

Truly, the time has come as perhaps never before when men should counsel together, and in wisdom determine how the world may be made a better place in which to live.

THE PERFECT GUIDE

To achieve this desired end, the first and most important step is to choose as leader one whose leadership is infallible, whose teachings when practiced have never failed. In the present tempestuous sea of Uncertainty, the Pilot must be one who through the storm can see the beacon in the harbor of peace.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints proclaims that there is but one such Guiding Hand in the Universe, but one unfailing Light, and that the Light of Christ who said: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." An active, sincere faith in the basic teachings of Jesus of Nazareth is the greatest need of the world. Because many reject this truth is all the more reason why sincere believers should proclaim it.

The ultimate purpose of Christianity is to develop honorable, upright individuals in an ideal society known as the Kingdom of God. No one, not even the unbeliever, can gainsay this as a most worthy goal. True, nearly two thousand years of trial have failed to bring about even an approach to the realization of either the perfecting of the individual or the establishing of an ideal society. As a result, Christianity and its handmaiden, Democracy, are now on trial before the world tribunal. The fact is, however, that conditions in this war-torn world instead of proving that Christianity has failed, emphatically bear witness that men are forever learning, but never coming to a knowledge of the truth; or, as one man cynically remarked, "Men's lives consist mostly in making the same mistakes over again."

Christianity, as summarized in the divine admonition, "Love the Lord thy God, and thy neighbor as thyself" has never yet been accepted and practiced by the nations of the world. Were that principle even partly applied, our advanced scientific knowledge, our almost unlimited mechanized power, our unexcelled opportunities for education would be directed, not as now, for the destruction of human beings, but for the betterment of individuals, and for the advancement and redemption of mankind.

As the first essential to a better world, therefore, we declare with the Apostle Peter that there is "none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

IMPROVEMENT IN MORALS

It is charged that "one of the distinctive traits of modern society in every country is the sinking of the moral ideal in the minds and life of the people." Manifestly, then, a second essential in world betterment is the raising of the moral standard.

If anyone listening in is saying to himself "this is trite," then I say such a thought itself justifies the call for men who will re-dedicate themselves to the principles of honesty, justice, tolerance, and love, and who will practice these virtues in their business and professional activities. "And this life is possible," as someone has declared, "in social conditions the most diverse, and with natural gifts the most unequal. It is not fortune, or personal advantage, but our turning them to account that constitutes the value of life." "Nothing," says Emerson, "can bring you peace but the triumph of principles."

In the light of political scandals recently disclosed in some of our States, what a brilliant though discarded gem, for example, is the plain, every-day principle of honesty. Though as genuine as the blue-tinted diamond, how little it is valued in a world where "business is honey-combed with dishonesty, and the political world abounds in duplicity and chicanery." Even to repeat such a charge makes one feel heavy-hearted. In contrast, recall the calm assurance, the confidence that pervades your soul when you know you are in the presence of one whom you can trust. Let us re-polish, and make more brilliant this old-fashioned principle so essential to human happiness. Would that all men and nations might unite with the Church in saying:

We believe in being honest, true, chaste, benevolent, virtuous, and in doing good to all men.

A RE-DEDICATION TO PRINCIPLES OF UNSELFISHNESS

Man needs a re-dedication to the principles of unselfishness. No peace or freedom can come to this world so long as men live only for themselves. It is true that self-preservation is the first law of nature, but it is not a law of spiritual growth. He who lets selfishness and his passions rule him binds his soul in slavery, but he who, in the majesty of spiritual strength, uses his physical tendencies and yearnings, and his possessions to serve purposes higher than personal indulgence and comfort, takes the first step toward the happy and useful life. This truth was taught not only "in the Beginning" when the Gospel was first revealed to man, but also when the Savior began His earthly ministry. On the Mount of Temptation was enacted the first scene in the Christ's earthly drama of the abundant life. There He resisted the challenge to gratify His appetite; He turned aside the appeal to His vanity and pride; He scorned the bribe of worldly wealth and power, as in spiritual victory He said to the Tempter, "Get thee hence," and "angels came and ministered unto Him." Only thus by the brilliant triumph of the spirit over the flesh can we hope for a better world.

UPHOLDING THE CONSTITUTION

Finally, if we would make the world better, let us foster a keener appreciation of the freedom and liberty guaranteed by the government of the United States as framed by the founders of this nation. Here again self-proclaimed progressives cry that such old-time adherence is out of date. But there are some fundamental principles of this Republic which, like eternal truths, never get out of date, and which are applicable at all times to liberty-loving peoples. Such are the underlying principles of the Constitution, a document framed by patriotic, freedom-loving men, who Latter-day Saints declare were inspired by the Lord.

This date, October 6, has been set apart by churches as "Loyalty Day." It is highly fitting, therefore, as a means of making the world better, not only to urge loyalty to the Constitution and to threatened fundamentals of the United States government, but to warn the people that there is evidence in the United States of disloyalty to tried and true fundamentals in government. There are unsound economic theories; there are European "isms," which, termite like, secretly and, recently, quite openly and defiantly, are threatening to undermine our democratic institutions.

Today, as never before, the issue is clearly defined—liberty and freedom of choice, or oppression and subjugation for the individual and for nations.

As we contemplate the deplorable fact that within the brief space of one year, TEN European nations have lost their independence, that over TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY MILLION people have surrendered all guarantees of personal liberty, deeper should be our gratitude, more intense our appreciation of the Constitution, and more strengthened our determination to resist at all costs any and all attempts to curtail our liberties, or to change the underlying system of our government.

CONCLUSION

When the people who call themselves Christian militantly enlist under the leadership of the One to whom they refer as King of the World; when they accept as facts and not as theories His moral and spiritual teachings; when for selfishness they substitute kindness and thoughtfulness for others; when they aggressively defend the principles of true liberty, then may we begin to realize the hope that Wrong may be abolished, Righteousness be enthroned in human hearts, and honest relations and justice become the daily practice of society. Then, and not until then, will the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our God.

Then shall all shackles fall; the stormy clangor
Of wild war music o'er the earth shall cease;
Love shall tread out the baleful fire of anger,
And in its ashes plant the tree of peace!

The Tabernacle Choir sang, "To Thee O Lord Do I Lift Up My Soul," by Kalinnikoff, and "Doxology."

J. Spencer Cornwall led the singing, Alexander Schreiner was at the organ, and the program was announced by Richard L. Evans.

(End of the Church of the Air Broadcast)

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

We have all been edified, instructed, and built up by President McKay's great address.

Our next speaker will be Elder George Albert Smith of the Council of the Twelve.

ELDER GEORGE ALBERT SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

No normal man, having partaken of the inspiration that we have enjoyed this morning while singing the praises of our Heavenly Father and listening to the addresses of the brethren, could stand in the presence of an audience like this without realizing his need for divine guidance. I would not undertake this responsibility if I did not believe that the Lord would help me in what I may say.

This is the 222nd Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Each one preceding it has been favored by the Lord in that he has fulfilled his promise to his sons and daughters who were assembled in worship, that he would be with them to bless them, and he is fulfilling that promise today.

SABBATH OBSERVANCE UPLIFTING

This is the Lord's day, an appropriate time for us to meet together in His name, for He has commanded that we should assemble on the Sabbath to pay our devotions to the Most High. I know of no more beautiful spot in all the world than this in which people are permitted to worship. I avail myself of the opportunity to thank those who look after this block, particularly Brother Nauman, the good man who has devoted much of his life to making Temple Square delightful to all visitors. The flowers that have adorned the stand during this conference are his contribution to our happiness in this sanctuary and I know of no place where flowers are more appropriate than in the House of the Lord.

What an uplift would come to the world if all of our Father's children on this, the Sabbath day, instead of warring on one another were seeking Him in worship and humbly praying for His all-wise guidance in conducting their lives. With that attitude among men war would cease, but if men continue to refuse to obey the counsels of the Master of heaven and earth destruction will increase until civilization may disappear from the earth.

PROPHETS HAVE RAISED A WARNING VOICE

The Lord has warned us of our danger and advised how to escape it. Amos, the prophet, said, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but He revealeth His secret unto His servants the prophets." Many prophecies are already fulfilled and others will be in the near future.

Centuries have passed since our first parents began their mortal existence and were advised by the Lord how to obtain happiness. For hundreds of years we have had His instruction through His prophets recorded as scripture so that we could know what He had desired of us. Isn't it strange that after centuries of opportunity to know the truth as taught by the Father of all a majority of the people of this world do not believe it or accept him as the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. That they do not accept His teachings is evident that they do not believe in Him, and it is disappointing that in the year 1940 in our own land there are many who fail to realize that God is our Heavenly Father.

Men cannot justify their delinquencies before the great Judge by declaring that they have not had the opportunity to know, for all down through the ages prophets of the Lord have been teaching what He desires us to know, and in our own day and age opportunity unparalleled in the history of the world has been offered to the children of men to know that there is a God and that we are His children. Here we are in worship enjoying the peace and the inspiration of our Heavenly Father with the assurance that He can hear and answer our prayers. Yet in some parts of the earth today there are multitudes who are seeking to destroy one another. They have no desire to worship God or accept His advice. They prefer to have their own wrong way and be wilful in having it.

The Holy Bible is a most wonderful record and if there ever was a time when we should know what it contains it is now. Many would be surprised if they would read it, to discover that some of the predictions that were made by the servants of the Lord thousands of years ago are now in course of fulfilment. It would astonish some people to know that the Prophet Isaiah, seven hundred years before the birth of Christ, predicted His coming. Two hundred years before the fall of Babylon he predicted its destruction, and told in remarkable detail what would follow even down to this day. He said (Isaiah 13 :19-22) :

And Babylon, the glory of Kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency, shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah.

It shall never be inhabited, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation; neither shall the Arabian pitch tent there; neither shall the shepherds make their fold there.

But wild beasts of the desert shall lie there; and their houses shall be full of doleful creatures; and owls shall dwell there, and satyrs shall dance there.

And the wild beast of the islands shall cry in their desolate houses, and dragons in their pleasant palaces; and her time is near to come, and her days shall not be prolonged.

If the Lord had not revealed it to him Isaiah could not have known these things. We today are witnesses that that promise is still in effect, notwithstanding that when the prophecy was uttered Babylon was the greatest city in all the world, the wealthiest and the most powerful of all kingdoms, and was governed by the greatest of all earthly kings.

Sometimes we forget that the Lord has spoken and we fail to inform ourselves to His decrees. Read the prophecies of Jeremiah and Ezekiel with reference to Tyre, or the strong city, and how they were fulfilled and the city overthrown. The ruins are still visible in the bottom of the sea, and the original site is a barren rock.

The dream of Nebuchadnezzar about the great image, interpreted by Daniel more than two thousand years ago, was still in process of fulfilment when the Church of Jesus Christ was organized in 1830.

Read in Joshua, Chapter 6, of the threat against the man who dared to rebuild the city of Jericho and its remarkable fulfilment when Hiel after hundreds of years, disregarding Joshua's warning, lost his two sons when he laid the foundations and set up the gates of the city.

The scriptures are replete with the prophecies of the servants of God that are fulfilled. They were humble men such as are here in this house today; but under the inspiration of our Heavenly Father the heavens were opened to them, the future was revealed and they predicted with certainty what should occur. They could foretell the future but it required the Master of heaven and earth, our Heavenly Father, to fulfill their promises.

A PROPHECY FULFILLED IN LATTER DAYS

We find one promise was made that particularly points to us. I refer to that of Micah when he said: (Micah 4:1-2)

The mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it.

And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

Can you think of any place but this to which the people of the various nations of the earth have been gathered in fulfillment of this prediction? Micah did not know of himself that God would establish this Church; he did not know that another prophet would come and predict things with reference to this time; no man could know. But the Father who knoweth all things revealed it to him; he predicted it, it was recorded and the children of men are fulfilling the prediction.

Dozen of passages in the scriptures could be cited as evidence that our Heavenly Father in mercy and kindness has been talking to the children of men all down through the ages, not only telling them what would occur, but pleading with them to turn from the error of their ways lest destruction should overtake them.

The destruction of Jerusalem was foretold by Jeremiah, a prophet of the Lord, and his prediction fulfilled to the very letter. The scattering of Judah was predicted by the Prophet Ezekiel hundreds of years before it occurred and Judah is still scattered. Isaiah named the man who should rebuild Jerusalem a hundred years before he was born. How did that prophet know that his name would be Cyrus if the Lord did not reveal it unto him?

PROMISES MADE REGARDING AMERICAN CONTINENT

In the Book of Mormon, "The American volume of scripture," the Lord has given to us information pertaining to this land upon which we dwell and called it a land favored above all other lands. I recommend that not only you Latter-day Saints read the Book of Mormon, but that our Father's other children read it. They will find that it contains, in addition to what the Bible has told us about the world, what the Lord has said about this Western Hemisphere—that this should be a land of liberty unto the Gentiles and that no king should dwell upon this land, but that He, the God of Heaven, would be our King and would fortify this land against all the nations, that this should be a land of peace and happiness, on condition that we would honor the God of this earth, the Father of us all. The factor controlling this promise is that we must keep the commandments of our Heavenly Father or it cannot be realized.

MODERN PROPHECIES

In our day the Prophet Joseph Smith has spoken. Through him there have been given to the world many things that are important, many revelations that later were fulfilled.

Nearly thirty years before the Civil War commenced in our country he predicted that it would occur and that it would begin in South Carolina. How did Joseph Smith know that if God did not reveal it to him? How could he pick out the very place that it should begin? I think it would be desirable to read what the Lord said at that time, December 25, 1832. Doctrine and Covenants, Section 87:

Verily, thus saith the Lord concerning the wars that will shortly come to pass, beginning at the rebellion of South Carolina, which will eventually terminate in the death and misery of many souls;

And the time will come when war will be poured out upon all nations, beginning at this place. * * *

With the sword and by bloodshed the inhabitants of the earth shall mourn; and with famine, and plague, and earthquake, and the thunder of heaven, and the fierce and vivid lightning also, shall the inhabitants of the earth be made to feel the wrath, and indignation, and chastening hand of an Almighty God, until the consumption decreed hath made a full end of all nations.

Just as in the centuries that are past when the Lord spoke through Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and his other prophets he has spoken in our day through His prophet, Joseph Smith. When the Church was still building the beautiful city of Nauvoo, Illinois, he predicted that the Latter-day Saints would be driven from their homes, that they would find a place in the tops of the Rocky Mountains, and that they would become a mighty people in the midst thereof. How did he know? He knew by the same power that Isaiah and the Prophets of old knew with reference to the things they predicted.

Read the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants that inform us how we may escape the calamities that are to cover the earth and afflict all mankind. We are better than other people only as we live better. We have the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The responsibility of disseminating it among the children of men has been magnificently performed in all parts of the world by more than 60,000 of the sons and daughters of the living God. To the ends of the earth from this sacred building have been broadcast by radio songs of praise, accompanied by the great organ sermons of truth, expressions of gratitude and thanksgiving intended for the blessing of all mankind. We meet today in this great Tabernacle built during the poverty of the people and dedicated to the Lord, the father of our spirits, and while we have been sitting here the voice of one of his faithful servants has gone out not only to all parts of our nation but to the islands of the sea and other distant lands.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF CHURCH MEMBERS

Our Heavenly Father, through His faithful representatives, has told us of the important things that should occur and we can read about them in His holy scriptures. If we really desire to be saved and exalted in His celestial kingdom He has told us how to proceed and has warned us that we must discharge the obligations entitling us to that exaltation. While we enjoy this blessing it carries with it a tremendous responsibility. Every man and every woman under the sound of my voice who has accepted the Gospel of Jesus Christ, who has gone down into the waters of baptism and been confirmed a member of His Church should so live that others seeing their upright lives may be constrained to accept the Gospel of our Lord and prepare to become faithful sons and daughters.

Now in conclusion, let me say that God lives, I know that the Bible contains His holy word. I know that the Book of Mormon is a history of the ancestors of the American Indians and tells of God's hand-dealings with His children here in America in an early day. I know that the Doctrine and Covenants contains the promises of our Heavenly Father to the children of men—wonderful promises that can only be realized by us if we make ourselves worthy of them by living correct lives. Let us who have accepted the Gospel of our Lord evidence our knowledge of its truth, let us demonstrate our assurance of its power and set such an example before all the world that our Father's other children, whom he loves as much as he loves us, may desire not only to search the old scriptures but to read the new scriptures and listen to the voice of His servants who today are in different parts of the world calling all men to repentance, with the promise that if they will repent and receive the Gospel of Jesus Christ as revealed by Him in former days and in this latter-day, all—not just a few—but all may be exalted in His celestial kingdom and obtain glory, immortality and eternal life. That we may be worthy of our heritage, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen.

ELDER THOMAS E. McKAY

Acting President, European Missions

My brethren and sisters, I am very pleased and thankful to report that in spite of the unsettled and rapidly changing conditions in Europe, our Missions are functioning almost as usual, in the hands of local people. All headquarters, with the exception of one, are maintained. That one exception is the French Mission. The headquarters at Paris have been closed temporarily, but Brother Gaston Chappuis, who has just returned from Paris with his wife, received permission just before leaving to visit Belgium, and he reports that the work there in that part of the French Mission is well organized; and before we left Switzerland this spring, the other part of the French Mission in Switzerland was placed in the hands of a very capable brother, and the French-Swiss district is also progressing nicely.

As I stated, all other Missions are well organized. We receive letters quite regularly. We have asked for at least a letter a month. These letters, of course, are censored, and the brethren cannot report about other than Church affairs—nothing political. On all the mail from continental Europe we find stamped upon the envelope the word "Geoffnet," or "Gepuft," the German word for censored; and the letters coming from Great Britain are stamped in large letters, "Opened."

All the Missions report that Sunday Schools, Relief Societies, sacrament and Priesthood meetings, as well as branch and district conferences are being held as usual; and nearly all of the Missions report baptisms. In a letter received last week from one of the Missions, they reported fifty-five baptisms for the first eight months of this year. Three of the Missions have reported an increase in tithing and Fast offerings, as compared with the same period last year.

We are very happy, too, and thankful to report that in those countries that have been invaded not one of our members, whether a soldier or lay member, has lost his life or been injured. In Norway, and also in Holland and Belgium, a number of our members lost their homes and everything of an earthly nature that they had, but their lives were spared. One brother is reported missing in the British Mission, but it is hoped that he is in Switzerland.

In a letter just received from our brother in charge of the French-Swiss district, in expressing his appreciation for a few extra Eras that we had sent him—he was very honest—said: "I am receiving the Era already from Brother Ursenbach," (a former Mission President), "but I am very glad to get these extra numbers, President McKay, because we send them out to the Tommies who are interned here." Until that time we had not realized that some of our British soldiers were interned in Switzerland. Once in a while a little political news creeps through.

We are pleased also to report that in Great Britain all members of our Church holding the Melchizedek Priesthood have been excused from army service, so as to take care of their Church work. The following is a copy of a letter to Brother Andre K. Anastasiou, acting President of the British Mission regarding this matter:

Sir:

I am directed by the Minister of Labour and National Service to refer to your recent meeting with an officer of this department and your letter of 22nd July regarding the position under the National Service (Armed Forces) Acts of men in Holy Orders in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

In reply, I am to state that it has now been decided that men in the major Orders may be regarded as covered by the provisions of Section 11 (1) (e) of the National Service (Armed Forces) Act, 1939. Such men are not, therefore, liable to be called up for service under that Act and they are not required to register when other men of their age class are called upon to do so.

As regards the list which you submitted with your letter of 22nd July, I am to state that all the men referred to therein will be regarded as covered by the statutory exception conferred upon men in Holy Orders except the two Priests named.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant
(Signed) R. A. Luce

A. K. Anastasiou, Esq.
149 Nightingale Lane
London, S. W. 12

Now brethren and sisters, in conclusion may I express my heartfelt appreciation for the opportunity that has been given to me to continue, although rather remotely, in contact with these brethren and sisters in war-torn Europe. For nine years I had the privilege of associating with those people, and, brethren and sisters, they are good people. They love the Gospel; they are finding in very deed that the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation. It is a great comfort to them. They write: "We are all right; we have the Gospel."

May I commend to you, brethren and sisters, in concluding, the beautiful remarks of President Grant at the opening of this session, permeated with tolerance and love; also the message of the First Presidency read at the opening of the first session of our Conference. Read that, and re-read it. Tolerance and love permeated every sentence.

Who seeks for heaven alone to save his soul
May keep the path, but will not find the goal;
While he who walks in love may wander far,
But God will bring him where the righteous are.

God help us to walk in love, to keep His commandments, that we may enjoy true happiness here in this life, as well as in the life to come, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

The Lord moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform. I know that all of our hearts rejoice in the report which President McKay has been able to make.

The Tabernacle Choir sang, "Alleluia," by Mozart.

The closing prayer was offered by Elder George H. Robinson, President of the Bear Lake Stake.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p. m.

THIRD DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

The concluding session of the Conference convened Sunday, October 6, at 2 p. m.

Once more the Tabernacle was crowded to capacity, and again the large Assembly Hall was filled with listeners, and thousands of others congregated on the Tabernacle Square, where, by means of amplifiers, they listened to the Conference proceedings as given in the Tabernacle.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

We are again happy that President Grant is present and presiding. He has asked me to take charge of the meeting.

This afternoon the music will be by the Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall. Dr. Frank W. Asper at the organ.

The choir and congregation sang, "Come, Come, Ye Saints."

The opening prayer was offered by President Thomas E. Towler, of the Wells Stake.

The Choir sang "Lamb of God" (Haydn).

ELDER JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

And again this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come, or the destruction of the wicked.

THE CALL TO REPENTANCE

These words were spoken by our Savior to His disciples shortly before his crucifixion. They have reference to the day in which we live. In fulfilment of that prediction the Elders of this Church have been preaching the Gospel in the nations of the earth for one hundred and ten years, they have been raising the warning voice and crying repentance. It was not only expedient, but it was inspirational that the Presidency of this Church, at the opening of this Conference should send forth a petition or an epistle not only to the Latter-day Saints, but to the people of the earth, calling them to repentance and giving unto them a warning.

From the very beginning the Lord has called upon the Elders of the Church to raise the warning voice, and we read:

Hearken, O ye people of my church, saith the voice of Him who dwells on high, and whose eyes are upon all men; yea, verily I say: Hearken ye people from afar; and ye that are upon the islands of the sea, listen together.

That is the call from the Lord to every soul upon the face of the earth, to give heed to His warning. Then continuing He says:

For verily the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape; and there is no eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear, neither heart that shall not be penetrated.

And the rebellious shall be pierced with much sorrow; for their iniquities shall be spoken upon the housetops, and their secret acts shall be revealed.

And the voice of warning shall be unto all people, by the mouths of my disciples, whom I have chosen in these last days.

And they shall go forth and none shall stay them, for I the Lord have commanded them.

And so they have gone forth, bearing witness of the restoration of the Gospel, preaching repentance, warning the people of the calamities that were to follow their preaching.

A WARNING TO THE WORLD

Wherefore, fear and tremble, O ye people, for what I the Lord have decreed in them—(that is, in the Elders)—shall be fulfilled.

And verily I say unto you, that they who go forth, bearing these tidings unto the inhabitants of the earth, to them is power given to seal both on earth and in heaven, the unbelieving and rebellious;

Yea, verily, to seal them up unto the day when the wrath of God shall be poured out upon the wicked without measure—

Unto the day when the Lord shall come to recompense unto every man according to his work, and measure to every man according to the measure which he has measured to his fellow man.

Wherefore the voice of the Lord is unto the ends of the earth, that all that will hear may hear:

Prepare ye, prepare ye for that which is to come, for the Lord is nigh.

Then again the Lord gave this instruction:

Wherefore, I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments;

And also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets—

The weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow man, neither trust in the arm of flesh—

But that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world;

That faith also might increase in the earth;

That mine everlasting covenant might be established;

That the fulness of my Gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers.

That proclamation was given in the very beginning of this Church; it is found in the Preface which the Lord Himself wrote to this book of commandments.

Further, again the Lord says:

For I am no respecter of persons, and will that all men shall know that the day speedily cometh; the hour is not yet, but is nigh at hand, when peace shall be taken from the earth, and the devil shall have power of his own dominion.

And also the Lord shall have power over His saints, and shall reign in their midst, and shall come down in judgment upon Idumea, or the world.

That was said more than a hundred years ago. Peace has been taken from the world, the devil does have power over his own dominion today, and the Lord has not yet come to dwell with His Saints, but that also shall be fulfilled.

THE JUDGMENTS TO COME

Let me present another petition to the nations of the earth and to the Elders of the Church:

Hearken ye, for, behold, the great day of the Lord is nigh at hand.

For the day cometh that the Lord shall utter his voice out of heaven; the heavens shall shake and the earth shall tremble, and the trump of God shall sound both long and loud, and shall say to the sleeping nations: Ye saints arise and live; ye sinners stay and sleep until I shall call again.

Wherefore gird up your loins lest ye be found among the wicked.

Lift up your voices and spare not. Call upon the nations to repent, both old and young, both bond and free, saying: Prepare yourselves for the great day of the Lord;

For if I, who am a man, do lift up my voice and call upon you to repent, and ye hate me, what will ye say when the day cometh when the thunders shall utter their voices from the ends of the earth, speaking to the ears of all that live, saying—Repent, and prepare for the great day of the Lord?

Yea, and again, when the lightnings shall streak forth from the east unto the west, and shall utter forth their voices unto all that live, and make the ears of all tingle that hear, saying these words—Repent ye, for the great day of the Lord is come?

And again, the Lord shall utter his voice out of heaven, saying: Hearken, O ye nations of the earth, and hear the words of that God who made you.

O, ye nations of the earth, how often would I have gathered you together as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, but ye would not!

How oft have I called upon you by the mouth of my servants, and by the ministering of angels, and by mine own voice, and by the voice of thunders, and by the voice of lightnings, and by the voice of tempests, and by the voice of earthquakes, and great hailstorms, and by the voice of famines and pestilences of every kind, and by the great sound of a trump, and by the voice of judgment, and by the voice of mercy all the day long, and by the voice of glory and honor and the riches of eternal life, and would have saved you with an everlasting salvation, but ye would not!

Behold the day has come, when the cup of the wrath of mine indignation is full.

Behold, verily I say unto you, that these are the words of the Lord your God.

Wherefore, labor ye, labor ye in my vineyard for the last time—for the last time call upon the inhabitants of the earth.

THE WORD OF THE LORD TO THE MISSIONARIES

Again speaking to the missionaries in an early day the Lord said:

Behold, I sent you out to testify and warn the people, and it becometh every man who hath been warned to warn his neighbor.

Therefore, they are left without excuse, and their sins are upon their own heads.

He that seeketh me early shall find me, and shall not be forsaken.

Therefore, tarry ye, and labor diligently, that you may be perfected in your ministry to go forth among the Gentiles for the last time, as many as the mouth of the Lord shall name, to bind up the law and seal up the testimony, and to prepare the saints for the hour of judgment which is to come;

That their souls may escape the wrath of God, the desolation of abomination which awaits the wicked, both in this world and in the world to come. Verily, I say unto you, let those who are not the first Elders continue in the vineyard until the mouth of the Lord shall call them, for their time is not yet come; their garments are not clean from the blood of this generation.

Abide ye in the liberty wherewith ye are made free; entangle not yourselves in sin, but let your hands be clean, until the Lord comes.

For not many days hence and the earth shall tremble and reel to and fro as a drunken man; and the sun shall hide his face, and shall refuse to give light; and the moon shall be bathed in blood; and the stars shall become exceedingly angry, and shall cast themselves down as a fig that falleth from off a fig-tree.

And after your testimony cometh wrath and indignation upon the people.

For after your testimony cometh the testimony of earthquakes, that shall cause groanings in the midst of her, and men shall fall upon the ground and shall not be able to stand.

And also cometh the testimony of the voice of thunderings, and the voice of lightnings, and the voice of tempests, and the voice of the waves of the sea heaving themselves beyond their bounds.

And all things shall be in commotion; and surely, men's hearts shall fail them; for fear shall come upon all people.

And angels shall fly through the midst of heaven, crying with a loud voice, sounding the trump of God, saying: Prepare ye, prepare ye, O inhabitants of the earth; for the judgment of our God is come. Behold, and lo, the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet Him.

These are the words of the Lord to His servants, and to the nations of the earth. As I look into your faces I see before me hundreds, thousands, who have been gathered out from the nations of the earth, either you or your parents, but you heard the Gospel in foreign lands. In obedience to this call you are here today. Nations have refused to hear the testimony of the Elders of Israel as it has been proclaimed, and the Lord has withdrawn them from among the nations, that is, many of them. He has done that because they have rejected the truth, and because of their wickedness. War comes because of wickedness; it never comes because of righteousness, but through the violation of the laws of God.

THE WORD OF THE LORD HAS GONE FORTH

Now, the Lord has predicted all these things. We have known this; it has been taught to us for a hundred years. We have been informed that it is necessary to keep the commandments of the Lord, for us to repent of our sins, for us to walk in ways of righteousness, and do the thing that the Lord would have us do. The nations have had proclamations made to them from time to time. In the early days of this Church it was very customary for the Presidency of the Church to send forth a proclamation, not only to the Saints, but to the inhabitants of the earth, calling upon them to repent, to turn from their ways of wickedness to ways of righteousness, accepting the fulness of the Gospel as it has been revealed.

It is nothing new—should not be—to us to see these calamities and these destructions taking place upon the face of the earth. We have been warned; the Authorities of the Church have spoken from the very beginning calling attention to these things. We have seen and we have read in the records the Lord has given us, the Doctrine and Covenants, the Book of Mormon, and the Pearl of Great Price, that all these things were due to come in the dispensation of the fulness of time.

Now let me read this other scripture:

Therefore, verily, thus saith the Lord, let Zion rejoice, for this is Zion—THE PURE IN HEART; therefore, let Zion rejoice, while all the wicked shall mourn.

For behold, and lo, vengeance cometh speedily upon the ungodly as the whirlwind; and who shall escape it?

The Lord's scourge shall pass over by night and by day, and the report thereof shall vex all people; yea, it shall not be stayed until the Lord come;

For the indignation of the Lord is kindled against their abominations and all their wicked works.

Nevertheless, Zion shall escape if she observe to do all things whatsoever I have commanded her.

But if she observe not to do whatsoever I have commanded her, I will visit her according to all her works, with sore affliction, with pestilence, with plague, with sword, with vengeance, with devouring fire.

THE WAY OF ESCAPE

Nevertheless, let it be read this once to her ears, that I, the Lord, have accepted of her offering; and if she sin no more none of these things shall come upon her.

We have the means of escape through obedience to the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Will we escape? When I see, even among the Latter-day Saints the violation of the laws of the Lord, I fear and I tremble. I have been crying repentance among the Stakes of Zion for thirty years, calling upon the people to turn to the Lord, keep His commandments, observe the Sabbath Day, pay their honest tithing, do everything the Lord has commanded them to do, to live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God.

By doing this we shall escape the calamities.

I am going to repeat what I have said before, for which I have been severely criticized from certain quarters, that even in this country we have no grounds by which we may escape, no sure foundation upon which we can stand, and by which we may escape from the calamities and destruction and the plagues and the pestilences, and even the devouring fire by sword and by war, unless we repent and keep the commandments of the Lord, for it is written here in these revelations.

So I cry repentance to the Latter-day Saints, and I cry repentance to the people of the United States, as well as to the people of all the earth. May we turn to live in accordance with divine law, and keep the commandments the Lord has given, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER CHARLES A. CALLIS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

The blessed Savior said:

Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. John 14:1.

Again

For I will reveal myself from heaven with power and great glory, with all the hosts thereof, and dwell in righteousness with men on earth a thousand years, and the wicked shall not stand.

(Doctrine & Covenants Section 29:11.)

BLESSINGS TO FOLLOW JUDGMENTS

The earth, in spite of these dark, gloomy days, is moving forward to a glorious ideal. The good that seems imprisoned is working toward deliverance and triumph. "We believe that Christ will reign personally upon the earth, and that the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisaical glory."

The judgments that are raging in the earth are testimonies to the Latter-day Saints that God's blessings will follow, for He loves mercy more than judgment.

STRENUOUS WORK NEEDED

If Paul were to return to the earth now would he say to the American people what he said to the people of his day?

The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play.

I think that America stands in need of the gospel of strenuous work. We are becoming a soft people; we like our nights of pleasure and our days of loafing. There would not be nearly so much sin in the world today if men and women would work more and play less. It is becoming a practice to talk much of our rights. These rights of course are sacred; they are God-given, but if we neglect to use them they become a curse, as it were, and God will take them away.

Why not talk more about obligations to man, to country, and to God? We are under deep obligation to care for our fellow-creatures. Think of this wonderful truth in the Book of Mormon:

When ye are in the service of your fellow beings ye are only in the service of your God.

GOD'S PURPOSES TO BE FULFILLED

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is the mother of men because it has given so much. This heaven-inspired Church Welfare Plan creates in us a fine desire to be sympathetic and to work, and to help others to work. The joy that we gain from service to men is not easily measured.

Wars may come, and they will go. I do not believe the Millennium is imminent; this Church is consecrated to the task of preaching the Gospel to every nation, kindred, tongue and people. We have scarcely scratched the surface. Where we are baptizing one today, in the not distant future we are going to baptize fifty, aye, a hundred, for God's purposes are sure to be fulfilled. He does not delight in the death of the wicked. He loves His children and through His servants, He is pleading with them to come to the light, which results in obedience to Him.

ETERNAL RICHES REMAIN

The days are dark; we suffer temptation, we suffer hardships of various kinds, but there is one thing that depression and war cannot take from us. I refer to the gift of eternal life. We should put more trust in the spiritual values of existence. The things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal. Wars may rage, famine may come, earthquakes and the like, and depressions, but these things cannot take away the eternal riches of Jesus Christ. Some of these riches are the glorious atonement, salvation for the dead, the second coming of the Son of God, the glorious resurrection and the eternity of the marriage covenant by which we are united in marriage on earth and in heaven by the power of the holy Priesthood. Thieves and misfortune cannot take these things from us, for they are immortal, God-given, and shall survive death and destruction. The Apostle Paul sings this glorious refrain of gratitude:

It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us.

THE LOVE OF THE SAVIOR

What a wonderful thing it is to have a mediator, the Lord Jesus, who intercedes for his brethren.

And Paul continues:

Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine or nakedness, or peril, or sword?

* * * *

Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us.

For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come,

Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ our Lord. (Romans 8:34-39).

For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. (Romans 8:18).

Ere long the skies will rend and Jesus Christ shall descend in glory with all his holy angels. Then will begin the long foretold Millennium, for which women have wept and for which men have prayed. Christ shall reign upon the earth in glory and in power from the rivers to the end of the earth. In that glorious Millennium we shall have good government, freedom from corruption; we shall rejoice in the divine reign of Him who is Prince of Peace and King of Kings.

When He comes

He will rule the world with truth and grace,
And make the nations prove
The glories of His righteousness
And wonders of His love.

Even so, blessed Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen.

ELDER SAMUEL O. BENNION

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I am delighted, my brethren and sisters and friends, to greet you upon this occasion, and to feel the impressions of the holy Spirit of God that have been manifest all through this great Conference. It is always an inspiration to see the large congregations of the Church gathered together as we see them during the periods of our Annual and Semi-Annual Conferences—people who have come from great distances, people who have in their hearts the testimony of Jesus, who are led to do the things they know are right, and who desire to walk in the path of God.

EVIDENCES OF A MARVELOUS WORK IN THE EARTH

This is an evidence of the marvelous work and wonder that our Eternal Father is performing in the earth. He has gathered out from among the nations the progenitors of those who are here in the Church at the present time; and those who are here have accomplished the things that He intended. But the power of the adversary has been so violent that it has curtailed free agency among the children of men. I say unto you, my dear brethren and sisters, that the free agency of men is limited; there are not many peoples in the earth today who enjoy such freedom as can be enjoyed in a great democracy like this. Our Eternal Father has established this country for the work that He has designated to take place in these latter days.

MESSAGE TO BE TAKEN FROM PRIESTHOOD MEETINGS

When I looked upon the congregation of men last night in the Priesthood meeting I was deeply impressed. I saw in the faces of those men a firm determination, a resolution to carry out the plan of God. It will be but a few hours before they go back into their fields of labor in all the Stakes of Zion, and there they will teach the Gospel to the children of men, and testify to those who belong to the Church that this was and is the Church of Christ our Lord. They will admonish them that the time has come for men to measure up. They will encourage them to gather out from among the communities where they live those who might receive the truth. How many of us know our neighbors. How many of us think about the men or the women who may be living near us, who are not members of the Church? I take it that this great body of Priesthood is concerned about these, our brothers and sisters, and that their desire is to carry to them the Gospel message.

OUR DUTY TO THOSE WHO COME HERE TO LIVE

There are many people who come into the Stakes of Zion who do not really know why they come here, take up their abode and live among us. But we may well believe that they have been directed here for the purpose of baptism, for the purpose of hearing the voice of their Redeemer. We pray constantly for our missionaries who go abroad, that they may search out the honest in heart, but we little think about those in our midst who have been moved upon by the spirit and power of God to come into this land where they may receive the blessings that are theirs by right. For in the great plan of our Eternal Father, established before the foundations of this earth were laid, all men who would believe, all who would be valiant for the testimony of Jesus, were given the opportunity to hear the truth. It was ordained that they should be made partakers of these great blessings—the blessings that were to be theirs here and in eternity. Of such are the congregations of the Latter-day Saints composed.

But there are thousands of men yet to hear the Gospel, there are thousands of women who might be turned into the channels of real service for which there is such an abundance of opportunity, under the leadership of the women's organizations of the Church. There is a great work for us to do, and there is no time for us to wait, for this is the work of God, this is the great day which our Eternal Father declared through His holy prophets, centuries ago, He would establish in the last days. This Church is never more to be thrown down or given to another people. This is the day of salvation. We invite the children of men everywhere to investigate the doctrines we believe. I invite my friends who may be listening in to take time to read the doctrines of the Church, to read the things that the Lord has revealed, and become acquainted with them. Let me repeat that there are many fine men and women in this world, many of whom live within our gates, who might become members of the Church, if they could be made to see the great plan of our Redeemer. It is our responsibility and privilege to carry this message to them.

A TESTIMONY OF THE TRUTH

Now, my brethren and sisters, I know that this is the work of God. There is no doubt in my mind that the Lord lives, that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world, that Joseph Smith was the prophet whom the Lord selected before the foundations of this earth were laid, to bring about His righteous purposes in your day and mine. That great plan of God shall continue as long as the earth shall stand. And it will be carried to the children of men through the guiding leadership of the Holy Ghost.

A great miracle has taken place among us. Our Father's prophet, our leader, the man that we love, has been partially restored to health and is able to be here and speak with power and influence. May we sustain him, may we sustain each other, sustain the things the Lord has revealed to us, that His work may become stronger, and that His plans may be carried out as He would desire them to be, I pray in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Tabernacle Choir sang, "Lead Kindly Light," by Jenkins. The soloist was Elder Harold H. Bennett.

ELDER RUDGER CLAWSON

President of the Council of the Twelve

My brethren and sisters: You see here on the pulpit a movable platform that can be raised up and let down to suit the speaker. It is not a Republican platform; it is not a Democratic platform; (Laughter) it is a Church platform and I can hardly reach up to it. (Laughter)

AN INSPIRING CONFERENCE

Brethren and sisters, I feel that it is a high honor to be asked to stand here and address this wonderful congregation of Latter-day Saints.

This is a marvelous attendance, a marvelous work and a wonder, to have a building here that will accommodate between 8000 and 9000 people. That was the attendance last night at the General Priesthood meeting. It was a very inspirational and instructive meeting as were all the meetings of the Conference. And haven't we had a wonderful day today? Think of the beautiful music that is furnished by the Tabernacle Choir. Their voices go out to all the country around, to all the world, as it were, and yet they remain with us. The Choir is entitled to great credit for the wonderful work it is doing.

I am sure, my brethren and sisters, that you feel as I do, that we are very happy indeed to have the President of the Church, who has been ill, with us on this occasion and at this Conference. It is fitting that he should be here, and we could not be fully satisfied without him. But he is here. He is looking pretty well and he feels well. I heard him say that he is feeling fine.

Now there is hardly anything lacking, but if there is one thing above another that I would like it would be the gift of eloquence to express myself before this congregation. You know some of the brethren of the Twelve, if not all of them, except myself, have the gift of eloquence; and it helps to stir up the congregation, and it is restful to have a little eloquence punctuate one's remarks when speaking.

Let me tell you at this point that I forgot to look at the time when I came to the pulpit so I shall ask President Clark, when I have talked about twenty minutes, to let me know without your knowing it. (Laughter)

THE GOSPEL FURNISHES TEXTS

Permit me to say this: There is a wealth of material in the standard Church works sufficient to furnish texts for our brethren who speak from the pulpit, and also the sisters when they speak. I think we should be pretty careful in our religious gatherings to preach the Gospel. That's the important thing. Lectures, in many instances, are very fine aids in their place, and there is a place for them—particularly scientific lectures and historical talks. The Lord has intimated that we ought to read good books and become acquainted with the things of the world, but in our special gatherings of the Saints we ought to be sure to preach the Gospel. It is an elaborate subject, it is very comprehensive. The Gospel covers a wide range, and the principles of the Gospel are most important, and therefore I am to tell you right now that I would like to say a few words upon two great movements in the Church.

TEMPLE WORK FOR THE DEAD

One is the missionary movement which was mentioned by Brother Joseph Fielding Smith in his talk. That is one of the subjects that I wanted to bring before you, and the other subject is the work for the dead. These are two highly important subjects, because we are under injunction of the Lord through the Prophet Joseph Smith to look after the matter pertaining to the dead. The living can take care of themselves if they will, the opportunity is before them. We have the temple and they can go into it and get their endowments, their blessings and sealings but the dead cannot do that. I am speaking now of our ancestors in the spirit world, because every man here has a line of ancestors behind him, and every woman here has a line of ancestors and it is our business to look up our ancestors and get what information we can.

Now upon my mother's side we have done a very good work because we have had the names to do it, but on my father's side we have been stopped because of a break in the line somewhere, and we have not until lately been able to get back very far. The names we did get we have done the work for and that is very fortunate. I hope the Lord will open up the way and give us some more names. I would say to you, my brethren and sisters, do not forget your dead, because you owe them this much effort to do something for them. They lived in a day when the Gospel was not upon the earth; they certainly have a claim upon us and I am prompted to say that if we refuse to recognize our obligation to do the work for our dead the Lord will reject us as a Church, because you know that souls are very precious unto him and we cannot afford to neglect this matter.

With some people it is difficult to get to the temple because they live some distance away, but they should make an extra effort to do so, and some people living very near to the temple have not done their work for the dead, and yet they have means but they have overlooked it. We cannot afford to go to sleep over this matter.

Perhaps my time is up, but I have not heard from President Clark yet. (Laughter) A person sometimes gets more interested in his own talk than does the congregation. (Laughter) So we have to ask the man in charge to notify us when to stop. I am rather glad it is that way because if we did not feel an interest in what we were saying ourselves, who would feel an interest in it? (Laughter)

MISSIONARY PREPARATION

I am very much interested in the missionary work that has been going on in our Church for a hundred years. It is brought down to a fine point because one of the Presidency of the Church, Brother David O. McKay, has a hand in it. A committee looks after the groups of missionaries who come up to Zion for a little training; they have to have a little teaching before they can go out and preach the Gospel. They ought to have a good deal, but they will get some experience in the mission field. It is wonderful what the Lord can do with these young men who are going out; and mark you, these young men who are going out as missionaries could not do very effective work without divine authority, so they come up here and get it. They go to the Temple and get the Temple blessings, and they go into the study room and listen to lectures on the Gospel, after which the hands of the Council of the Twelve Apostles and First Council of Seventy are laid on their heads conferring the authority to preach the Gospel. The result is that there are hundreds of thousands of people in the spirit world who benefit from the work of these young men.

THE WORTH OF SOULS IS GREAT

I think I might have time to read just a stanza or two in relation to this subject. The Lord said in Section 18 (I have heard President Grant quote this section—it is a very important matter):

Remember the worth of souls is great in the sight of God;
For, behold, the Lord your Redeemer suffered death in the flesh;
wherefore He suffered the pain of all men, that all men might repent and come unto Him.

And He hath risen again from the dead, that He might bring all men unto Him, on condition of repentance.

And how great is his joy in that soul that repenteth!

Wherefore, you are called to cry repentance unto this people.

And if it so be that you should labor all your days in crying repentance unto this people, and bring, save it be one soul unto Me, how great shall be your joy with him in the kingdom of our Father!

Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

When I was at law school, I was made one of the editors of the Law Review. The boys who were working on the Review came to call me "Simon Legree—the slave-driver." It looks as if I were building a reputation here in the Church along the same lines.

ELDER ALBERT E. BOWEN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

There is much concern today about the cause of liberty in the world. People are anxiously asking, "What is going to be the outcome of this war, and what will happen to the world if the dictators win?" I do not know the answers to these questions. It is not necessary that I should know, nor that you should know.

GOD'S PLANS WILL TRIUMPH

It is important, however, that we do not permit ourselves to be unduly distracted when the hidden purposes of events and their end are not immediately clear to our perception. The lifetime of an individual is but a short span when reckoned against the stretch of history. Whatever the present may forebode, or the immediate future may bring we shall be better able to maintain our composure if we are fortified by an abiding "faith and confidence in God and in the triumph of His work" if, in the phrase of Bancroft we can say, "Eternal wisdom marshals the great procession of the nations, working in patient continuity through the ages, never halting and never abrupt, encompassing all events in its oversight, and ever effecting its will . . . ."

MAN'S POWER FADES

Alexander conquered the world but the great general was scarcely dead when his vast empire crumbled and soon was no more. Cromwell made himself a mighty ruler but his power passed away with him. Napoleon startled the world by the brilliancy of his achievements, but he was so unfortunate as to live to see the mighty empire he had welded fall apart before his eyes.

Those who now are turning the world upside down will also die. The mischiefs they have wrought will then, if not sooner, by degrees be undone. The peoples of conquered nations, and of the conquering nations, too, for that matter, are not going to be content perpetually to submit to the stifling oppression under which they now suffer nor to the smothering of their instincts of freedom. It has always been the case that when tyranny becomes oppressive enough people revolt against it and shake it off.

CALMNESS COMMENDED

But all this does not mean that nations or peoples should resign themselves to the fate of being subdued. The struggle back out of the thralldom of tyranny is always waged through blood and sacrifice and heart-breaking rigors and disciplines. Bitter suffering must be endured before the will is steelled to the endeavor.

It is infinitely wiser and safer to preserve the good one has than to suffer its annihilation and then have to go over the toilsome, grueling and thorny way of getting it back again. But the process of preservation is not facilitated by hysteria. The hysterical mind does not conceive rationally, nor plan coherently nor execute effectively. Let us try in these difficult times to sift the truth out of the welter of confusion, to view it calmly and to decide with sobriety.

LIBERTY A PRINCIPLE OF LIFE

Of this we can be sure: Liberty is a thing of the spirit. A man must nourish it and cherish it in his heart as he does love for his wife and children. Except for its manifestation as a quality in human life it has no existence. Governments cannot confer it; they can only protect the individual in the enjoyment of it. Navies and armies cannot bestow it; they can only defend its exercise. No people can possess it unless they make themselves worthy of it.

The lessons of Europe are fruitful for us if we will but read them. We are amazed at the ease with which some heretofore great nations have been subdued. The superficial explanation is lack of proper military armament. The true reason lies deeper and is the cause for the lack of preparation.

Whether their undoing came from disloyalty, treachery, sedition, resulting in betrayal, or whether it came from taking into their family bosoms designing aliens and falling prey to their seductive propaganda, or from the indolence and love of ease, and craving for the flesh pots which made them unwilling to subject themselves to the necessary exertion and discipline and self-denial to protect their heritage does not much matter as it all comes to the same end anyway.

The question forced upon us is, why should the people of a great nation become disloyal and seditious, why should they be beguiled by seductive portrayal of alien ideologies, why so flabby and soft and indolent and comfort-loving as to be unequal to the exertion of protecting their birthright?

CAUSES OF DOWNFALL OF NATIONS

A building does not crash when the first termite begins to bore into its supporting beams. But when these have been allowed to multiply and continue their burrowing and tunneling and eating there comes a day when the fiber of the wood is so thoroughly destroyed that under the impact of some shock or addition of weight the support gives way and the structure comes tumbling down. It would be absurd to say that the new weight or the shock caused the structure to fall. We sometimes are bewildered at the sudden collapse of a man's character which theretofore had been rated high. It will generally be found that the degenerating process had been working in him a long time before the crash came.

Strong nations, commanding great resources, do not fall in the days of their strength before an invading enemy. They first disintegrate from within. When their vital internal structure has been eaten away then the hollow shell collapses before the first onslaught of a virile foe.

What we have been witnessing in Europe is not so much the conquering might of an organized power, great as that is, as the mere pushing over, with some minor and notable exceptions, of the hollow frameworks of governments whose sustaining spiritual integrity had already gone into decay.

CONDITIONS IN AMERICA

Now what of ourselves? We know that we harbor here large numbers, alien as well as native born, who openly advocate the superiority of alien principles of government over our own. Others there are who devote themselves to coddling the sowers of seeds of sedition and disloyalty. And with a discouraging universality we see the evidences of calculating self-interest, greed, indifference—a materialistic, grabbing, senseless scramble for the things which it is so mistakenly supposed will give a sense of security or satisfy the restlessness that is our very plague.

We are saying that we face a great crisis, that the very existence of our nation is at stake. And yet one class of people is being told and is telling itself that it will not give up one whit of certain alleged gains it has made. It is willing to prepare for the emergency provided that it is not called upon to sacrifice anything. Another class is demanding assurance against loss, and still another as a matter of self interest and expediency is willing to let vital things wait. By sections and communities we are joining in the mad scramble. I read that the defense commission is being harassed and hampered by the clamors of localities, chambers of commerce, pressure groups, and politicians for the location of this or that industry in this or that place without regard for military requirement or efficiency of the whole program. We want to save our country if we can conveniently, but if it goes down we want to be able to say that our congressman got us a liberal part of the public funds and be sure that we hand ourselves over to the conquerer with plenty of public works on hand and our local vanity satisfied.

Concerted action is required but jealousies and envy divide us. Our appraisals of value are inconstant and bewilderingly shifting. While in truth the interests of all classes are inseparably bound up together we have driven great wedges separating the industrialists from the laborers, and the agriculturists from both and the consumer from all the others. For a long time we have been stigmatizing large industries and denouncing them as baleful. Now we are frantically urging them to grow bigger and are offering capital for that purpose. What we have heedlessly decried as evils we now recognize as being our only hope for a speedy and large armament. One of our largest industrialists was within the year denounced as a national menace. Now we are dependent upon him in an inordinate degree to make us the defensive implements we need, all of which shows the folly of our periodic surges and revulsions of feeling toward the integrated elements of our nation.

SPIRITUAL STRENGTH NEEDED

This is all contrary to the spirit of universal brotherhood taught by the Savior of the world, and is our most alarming portent of danger, far more alarming than the power of any foreign foe. In recent years we have heard much over our country about economic security and about various notions for material betterment. Greater ease, more comfort, less toil have been flashed before us as symbolizing the highest ideals of human attainment. But we have heard almost nothing about spiritual strengthening, tightening of moral disciplines, subordination of personal desires or the development of the wholesome spirit of give and take which make for a greater national unity and a more healthy and trustful and confidence-begetting relationship. Here is a task for the Church.

I have noted with keen interest for a number of years now that from this pulpit in these Conferences, with growing emphasis there have been voiced persistent and reiterated pleas for a greater devotion to and cultivation of the spiritual values of life which ought to flow from our belief in and acceptance of the divine mission of the Savior of the world. The people have been begged to discipline themselves to the virtues of kindness, unselfishness, self-denial, humility, reverence and justice; to be abstemious, industrious, thrifty and self-reliant. Apparently thoughtful men among the laity are being shocked by world events into a realization of the perils which lurk in neglect of these bulwarks of strength.

About two years ago some observant British leaders sent out the warning to the people of the realm that the great issue which divides the world is at bottom a spiritual conflict in which good and evil spirits are working through mankind. "When the evil spirits conquer," said they, "the collapse of private and public morals sets in, the spirit of discipline and sacrifice dies," and they warned that Britain must make its choice between spiritual restoration and annihilation. How prophetic those words were stands now revealed. It might have been better for England if she had given earlier heed to them.

WINSTON CHURCHILL'S NOTABLE WORDS

I am sure every listener must have thrilled to the appeal of Winston Churchill when upon his assumption of the premiership he warned his countrymen that he could promise them nothing but blood and tears and toil and sweat. That was, at the time of his speaking, a new note in the utterance of a modern public man, strange to our ears. And how magnificently Britons responded to the rallying call of their great leader who dared to tell them the naked unpleasant truth!

INDOLENCE SAPPING STRENGTH OF THE NATION

I wish every man and woman in America might read and ponder an article by Dr. Alexis Carrel appearing in the September issue of the Reader's Digest. "Amusement" said he "has been our national cry; 'a good time' our chief concern. The perfect life, as viewed by the average youth or adult is a round of ease or entertainment, of motion pictures, radio programs, parties, alcoholic and sexual excesses.

"This indolent and undisciplined way of life has sapped our individual vigor, imperiled our democratic form of government. Our race pitifully needs new supplies of discipline, morality and intelligence. Strange to say democracies have made no consistent effort to inculcate these qualities in their citizens. Although vast social betterment schemes have been projected, we have forgotten that these ultimately depend for their vitality upon the individual citizen. 'You cannot carve rotten wood,' says the Chinese proverb. Nor can you carve decayed character into the durable underpinnings of a better race."

Forty men of prominence recently warned the people of America that "The democratic way of life, must be based ultimately on the religious principle of the Fatherhood of God, and the worth and dignity of man when regarded as a child of God. It must uncompromisingly oppose any effort at the deification of the State or the suppression of individual liberty and sense of moral responsibility."

A FORCE FIGHTING AGAINST GOD

So long as armed aggression is rampant in the world proceeding upon the principle that the only deterrent to the gratification of every rapacious desire is the limit of brute force, peaceably inclined peoples must prepare themselves to repel that force. But, cautions the warning manifesto, unless a spiritual and moral resuscitation is worked and respect for religious values built up we shall arm in vain.

We have used our freedom to renounce all discipline, and in the marvelous achievements of this industrial and scientific age we have grown arrogant and have discarded our ancient faith. The iconoclasts have been at work.—Those egotists who cannot rest happy so long as an unsullied name, eclipsing their own, is allowed to stand untarnished, have been busy with their smear pots. They are called by the very ugly but very appropriate name de-bunkers. Nothing so much needs de-bunking as they themselves. Because they cannot dissect God and examine His parts they have denied that He is; they have scoffed at the divinity of Jesus and because His benignity and purity and unselfishness and all-embracing compassion so far transcend their cynical powers of comprehension, they have characterized Him a pretender and notoriety-seeking rabble rouser. The Ten Commandments are ridiculed as a defenseless and untrue imposition upon a primitive, uncultured and migrant people. Washington and Lincoln and the other great characters of history they have with profane hands dragged down from their high pedestals and have dissected bit by bit, searched out and with malicious glee thrown upon the screen the distorted and magnified image of their every foible and blemish. The founders of our government, the framers of our Constitution are converted into self-seeking aristocrats bent only on preserving their advantages of station, while that great instrument itself is made the embodiment of palpably absurd and now outmoded eighteenth century philosophy. They are determined that nothing shall remain sacred or be revered. They have succeeded only too well. To maintain itself strong in the present a people must be sustained by the consciousness of a noble past and the hope of a glorious future. Too much of the nobility of the past and the hope for the future has gone into eclipse.

PRINCIPLES THAT LEAD DOWNWARD

The gifts of this industrial age are mechanisms, gadgets, ease, luxury, diversions. These we have set up as principles by which we live in the place of faith in the nobility of man, reverence for his Maker and the discipline of our bodies, minds and spirits to the divine law. Our substituted principles we find not to be principles at all but merely incidentals. Put to the test of realism they come tumbling down about us and men stand bewildered by their own impotence and futility. They have lost the sustaining power of great convictions. As for our government they are not convinced it is better than some others; they do not really believe in our freedom, nor that it is in peril both from within and without, nor that its loss would be calamitous. They are not sure why they live in the earth at all, what life's purpose is nor what it is they want to do.

TEACHING THE TRUTH NOT AN EASY TASK

There must be a new cementing of shattered convictions, a re-establishment of wavering faith, a calling back to basic principles. This again is a task for the Church. It is a work for you Presidents of Stakes, and Bishops of Wards and other leaders. In its fulfilment you will have large need for moral courage because your leadership will involve your telling people unpleasant truths, things they would rather not hear. It will require you to lead them in hard ways.

As I read the history of the ancient prophets they were more often than not the bearers of unpleasant messages. It fell to them to tell kings, judges, rulers and people that the courses they were following portended disaster and to admonish them against persistence in such courses. It was not an easy nor an inviting labor. It did not make them popular, but frequently jeopardized their lives and drove them into hiding.

Jesus himself passed through the same experience. The next day after He had miraculously fed the multitude the crowds sought Him on the opposite side of the lake whither He had gone in the night time. As they pressed upon Him He said to them, "Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves and were filled." Then He proceeded to unfold His doctrine which imposed high requirements upon any who would be His followers, stressing the preeminence of spiritual values over material satisfactions.

"It is," said He, "the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." His listeners complained that His sayings were hard, and began melting away. Sorrowfully and pathetically the chronicler records: "From that time many of his disciples went back and walked no more with him." So long as they were the recipients of gratuitous benefits they were eager followers, but their ardor turned cold when they found that the price of discipleship was renunciation and reformation. But that alone was then and is now the way of salvation.

The Choir and congregation sang "Come Let Us Anew."

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

Partly for the benefit of those who are on the air, and who cannot see us here, I wish to say that it is with profound gratitude and joy that we now turn the balance of the time over to President Grant.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

It is needless for me to tell you good people how grateful I feel that I am able to speak to you at the close of this Conference. As a rule I never put my remarks on paper, but my mind is not working as well the last five or six months as usual, and I therefore asked my secretary, Brother Anderson, to copy quite a number of things that I know off by heart, at least I did before my illness, but I do not know whether I know them today or not, so I am going to read to you.

QUOTATION FROM "THE POWER OF TRUTH"

There is nothing in all the world for which I am so grateful as an absolute knowledge that we, the Latter-day Saints, have the true Gospel of Jesus Christ. I read from William George Jordan's book "The Power of Truth." There are eight articles in the book. One year I distributed 7,500 copies of the first article, autographing them all, to friends. The author says:

Law is the eternal truth of nature—the unity that always produces identical results under identical conditions. When a man discovers a great truth in Nature he has the key to the understanding of a million phenomena; when he grasps a great truth in morals he has in it the key to his spiritual re-creation. For the individual, there is no such thing as theoretic truth; a great truth that is not absorbed by our whole mind and life, and has not become an inseparable part of our living, is not a real truth to us. If we know the truth and do not live it, our life is—a lie. * * *

In exact proportion to the basic truth they contain do religions last, become permanent and growing, and satisfy and inspire the hearts of men. Mushrooms of error have a quick growth, but they exhaust their vitality and die; but truth still lives.

The man who makes the acquisition of wealth the goal and ultimatum of his life, seeing it as an end rather than a means to an end, is not true. Why does the world usually make wealth the criterion of success, and riches the synonym of attainment? Real success in life means the individual's conquest of himself; it means "how he has bettered himself," not "how has he bettered his fortune?" The great question of life is not "What have I?" but "What am I?" * * *

Truth is the sun of morality, and, like that lesser sun in the heavens, we can walk by its light, live in its warmth and life, even if we see but a small part of it, and receive but a microscopic fraction of its rays.

Which of the great religions of the world is the real, the final, the absolute truth?

It is the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, again restored to the earth by personal administration of our Father in Heaven and His Son Jesus Christ.

I shall now read what the Lord says—not what I say. It is not what Joseph Smith said, but what the Lord said to him:

How long can rolling waters remain impure? What power shall stay the heavens? As well might man stretch forth his puny arm to stop the Missouri river in its decreed course, or to turn it up stream, as to hinder the Almighty from pouring down knowledge from heaven upon the heads of the Latter-day Saints.

FEW ARE CHOSEN

Behold, there are many called, but few are chosen. And why are they not chosen?

Because their hearts are set so much upon the things of this world, and aspire to the honors of men, that they do not learn this one lesson—

That the rights of the priesthood are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven, and that the powers of heaven cannot be controlled nor handled only upon the principles of righteousness.

That they may be conferred upon us, it is true; but when we undertake to cover our sins, or to gratify our pride, our vain ambition, or to exercise control or dominion or compulsion upon the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness, behold, the heavens withdraw themselves; the Spirit of the Lord is grieved; and when it is withdrawn, Amen to the Priesthood or the authority of that man.

Behold, ere he is aware he is left unto himself to kick against the pricks, to persecute the saints, and to fight against God.

LEARN BY EXPERIENCE

We have learned by sad experience that it is the nature and disposition of almost all men, as soon as they get a little authority, as they suppose, they will immediately begin to exercise unrighteous dominion.

Hence many are called, but few are chosen.

No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the priesthood, only by persuasion, by long-suffering, by gentleness and meekness, and by love unfeigned;

By kindness, and pure knowledge, which shall greatly enlarge the soul without hypocrisy, and without guile—

Reproving betimes with sharpness, when moved upon by the Holy Ghost; and then showing forth afterwards an increase of love toward him whom thou hast reproved, lest he esteem thee to be his enemy.

That he may know that thy faithfulness is stronger than the cords of death.

A CONSTANT COMPANION

Let thy bowels also be full of charity towards all men, and to the household of faith, and let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly; then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God; and the doctrine of the Priesthood shall distil upon thy soul as the dew from heaven.

The Holy Ghost shall be thy constant companion, and thy scepter an unchanging scepter of righteousness and truth; and thy dominion shall be an everlasting dominion, and without compulsory means it shall flow unto thee forever and ever.

These words coming from God I appeal to you people to read and reread. I have read them hundreds of times. They are from Section 121 of the Doctrine and Covenants, and are among the greatest words ever given to the Prophet Joseph Smith as recorded in the Doctrine and Covenants. They were given to him in Liberty Jail shortly after he had been tried and sentenced to be shot, in connection with his brother Hyrum and others, by the State Militia. Thank the Lord for raising up General Doniphan, who declared that he would have nothing to do with such cold-blooded murder, and that he would withdraw his brigade. His remonstrance so alarmed them that they dared not put the decree into execution.

I now read again—not the words of Joseph Smith, but the words of the Lord given to Joseph Smith:

NONE TO ESCAPE

For verily the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape; and there is no eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear neither heart that shall not be penetrated.

And the rebellious shall be pierced with much sorrow; for their iniquities shall be spoken from the housetops and their secret acts shall be revealed.

And the voice of warning shall be unto all people by the mouths of my disciples, whom I have chosen in these last days.

And they shall go forth and none shall stay them, for I the Lord have commanded them.

Behold, this is mine authority, and the authority of my servants. and my preface unto the book of my commandments, which I have given them to publish unto you, O inhabitants of the earth.

Wherefore fear and tremble, O ye people, for what I the Lord have decreed in them shall be fulfilled.

TO ENDS OF EARTH

And verily I say unto you, that they who go forth, bearing these tidings unto the inhabitants of the earth, to them is power given to seal both on earth and in heaven, the unbelieving and rebellious;

Yea, verily, to seal them up unto the day when the wrath of God shall be poured out upon the wicked without measure—

Unto the day when the Lord shall come to recompense unto every man according to his work, and measure to every man according to the measure which he has measured to his fellow man.

Wherefore the voice of the Lord is unto the ends of the earth, that all that will hear may hear;

Prepare ye, prepare ye for that which is to come, for the Lord is nigh;

And the anger of the Lord is kindled, and His sword is bathed in heaven, and it shall fall upon the inhabitants of the earth.

And the arm of the Lord shall be revealed; and the day cometh that they who will not hear the voice of the Lord, neither the voice of His servants, neither give heed to the words of the prophets and apostles, shall be cut off from among the people;

BROKEN COVENANT

For they have strayed from mine ordinances, and have broken mine everlasting covenant;

They seek not the Lord to establish His righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own God, whose image is in the likeness of the world, and whose substance is that of an idol, which waxeth old and shall perish in Babylon the great, which shall fall.

Wherefore, I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments;

And also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets—

The weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow man, neither trust in the arm of flesh—

But that every man might speak in the name of God, the Lord, even the Savior of the world;

That faith might also increase in the earth;

That mine everlasting covenant might be established;

PROCLAIM FULNESS

That the fulness of my Gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers.

Behold, I am God and have spoken it; these commandments are of me, and were given unto my servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language, that they might come to understanding.

And inasmuch as they erred it might be made known;

And inasmuch as they sought wisdom they might be instructed;

And inasmuch as they sinned they might be chastened, that they might repent;

And inasmuch as they were humble they might be made strong, and blessed from on high, and receive knowledge from time to time.

And after having received the record of the Nephites, yea, even my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., might have power to translate through the mercy of God, by the power of God, the Book of Mormon.

And also those to whom these commandments were given, might have power to lay the foundation of this Church, and to bring it forth out of obscurity and out of darkness, the only true and living Church upon the face of the whole earth, with which I, the Lord, am well pleased, speaking unto the Church collectively and not individually—

ALLOWS NO SIN

For I the Lord cannot look upon sin with the least degree of allowance; Nevertheless, he that repents and does the commandments of the Lord shall be forgiven;

And he that repents not, from him shall be taken even the light which he has received; for my Spirit shall not always strive with man, saith the Lord of Hosts.

And again, verily I say unto you, O inhabitants of the earth; I the Lord am willing to make these things known unto all flesh;

For I am no respecter of persons, and will that all men shall know that the day speedily cometh; the hour is not yet, but is nigh at hand, when peace shall be taken from the earth, and the devil shall have power over his own dominion.

And also the Lord shall have power over His saints, and shall reign in their midst, and shall come down in judgment upon Idumea, or the world.

TRUTH ABIDES

Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled.

What I the Lord have spoken, I have spoken, and I excuse not myself; and though the heavens and the earth pass away, my word shall not pass away, but shall all be fulfilled, whether by mine own voice or by the voice of my servants, it is the same.

For behold, and lo, the Lord is God, and the Spirit beareth record, and the record is true, and the truth abideth forever and ever. Amen.

LEAVES BLESSINGS

I know as I know that I live, that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God, the Redeemer of mankind. I know that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the true and the living God, and the instrument in the hands of God of again restoring to the earth the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, the plan of life and salvation. I leave my blessing upon the righteous people of all the world. I bless the Latter-day Saints at home and abroad, those holding positions of trust, and those that have gone forth to proclaim the Gospel. I promise them that the Spirit of the Lord shall attend them if they live clean and pure lives.

I thank the Lord for this privilege of bearing my testimony again and making this declaration to the Saints in this Conference assembled. May God's blessings attend you through time and all eternity, is the earnest and sincere prayer of my heart. God bless you. Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

We all acknowledge the blessings of the Lord in permitting President Grant to come and re-deliver and make his own, the messages of the Lord which have been declared in the past. We thank him for his blessing and his assurance that the Lord will prosper His work.

The choir will sing in closing, "O Great is the Depth," by Mendelssohn, after which we shall ask Governor Henry H. Blood to pronounce the closing prayer.

We must not let this Conference close before expressing our gratitude—not only my gratitude, but the gratitude of all of us—for the wonderful work of this Choir, for their great devotion to their service; to the conductor, the assistant conductor, the organists, and of course to Brother Richard L. Evans in connection with the broadcast.

Drive carefully; pedestrians, walk sensibly.

After the benediction this Conference will adjourn sine die.

The Choir sang, "O Great is the Depth."

Governor Henry H. Blood pronounced the benediction.

Conference adjourned.

The musical exercises at the Friday sessions were furnished by the Singing Mothers, under the direction of Sisters Josephine Brower, Olive N. Rich, Meryl T. Cardall, Permillia Bean and Nellie N. Bennion. The music at the Saturday afternoon and Sunday sessions was furnished by the Tabernacle Choir, J. Spencer Cornwall, Director. The congregational singing was directed by J. Spencer Cornwall and Richard P. Condie.

Accompaniments and interludes on the great organ were played by Alexander Schreiner and Frank W. Asper. Organ accompaniments and solo presentations for the Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast Sunday morning were played by Alexander Schreiner.

---

Stenographic notes of the Conference were taken by Frank W. Otterstrom and Joseph Anderson.

JOSEPH ANDERSON,
Clerk of the Conference.

Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith

Taken from his sermons and writings as they are found in the Documentary History and other publications of the Church and written or published in the days of the Prophet's ministry

Selected and arranged by the Historian, Joseph Fielding Smith, and his Assistants in the Historian's Office of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Many of these discourses and writings appear in the Documentary History of the Church, but others have not been included in these volumes, but are scattered through the early publications of the Church. It has been difficult even for the student to obtain these because the old publications are not accessible for general use.

One Hundred Eleventh Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

---

The One Hundred Eleventh Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints convened in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Utah, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, April 4, 5, and 6, 1941.

The great Tabernacle was crowded to capacity at every session.

Through the courtesy of Radio Station KSL and of the other radio stations cooperating, the proceedings of the Conference were broadcast locally and also over KFXD of Nampa, Idaho; KSEI of Pocatello, Idaho; KTFI of Twin Falls, Idaho; KID of Idaho Falls, Idaho; KSUB of Cedar City, Utah; and KEUB of Price, Utah. Presidents of Stakes in these localities arranged meetings in various of their Ward meeting houses where Ward and Stake congregations could hear the Conference. A direct wire from the Tabernacle to the Los Angeles Stake Tabernacle, in Los Angeles, California, carried the service to that area.

President Heber J. Grant was present at all of the sessions of the Conference with the exception of the Saturday afternoon meeting, and presided. President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., First Counselor in the First Presidency, conducted all the general sessions.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH PRESENT

Of the First Presidency: Heber J. Grant, J. Reuben Clark, Jr., and David O. McKay.

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles: Rudger Clawson, George Albert Smith, George F. Richards, Joseph Fielding Smith, Stephen L. Richards, Richard R. Lyman, John A. Widtsoe, Joseph F. Merrill, Charles A. Callis, Albert E. Bowen, Sylvester Q. Cannon, and Harold B. Lee.*

Assistants to the Council of the Twelve Apostles: Marion G. Romney, Thomas E. McKay, Clifford E. Young, Alma Sonne, and Nicholas G. Smith.**

Of the First Council of the Seventy: Rulon S. Wells, Levi Edgar Young, Antoine R. Ivins, Samuel O. Bennion, John H. Taylor, Rufus K. Hardy, and Richard L. Evans.

Of the Presiding Bishopric: LeGrand Richards, Marvin O. Ashton, and Joseph L. Wirthlin.

OFFICERS AND OTHER AUTHORITIES PRESENT

Church Historian and Recorder: Joseph Fielding Smith, and the following assistants: Andrew Jenson and A. William Lund.

*Elder Harold B. Lee was sustained at this Conference as a member of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Elder Reed Smoot.

**These five brethren were sustained as Assistants to the Council of the Twelve Apostles at this Conference.

Members of the General Committee, Church Welfare Program.

Members of the Church Board of Education.

Presidents of Stakes and their counselors, Presidents of Temples, Patriarchs, Bishops of Wards and their counselors, High Priests, Seventies, General, Stake and Ward officers of the Auxiliary organizations, from all parts of the Church.

Mission Presidents: John H. Taylor, Temple Square, Salt Lake City, Utah; Gustave A. Iverson, Eastern States; Leo J. Muir, Northern States; George F. Richards, Jr., North Central States; John F. Bowman, Central States; W. P. Whitaker, Southern States; ElRay L. Christiansen, Texas; James P. Jensen, East Central States; William W. Seegmiller, Western States; Henry H. Blood, California; Nicholas G. Smith, Northwestern States; David A. Smith, Canada; A. Lorenzo Anderson, Mexico; David F. Haymore, Spanish-American.

FIRST DAY MORNING MEETING

The first session of the Conference convened Friday morning, April 4, at 10 o'clock.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

The hour has come to open the One Hundred and Eleventh Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. President Heber J. Grant is present and presiding; he has asked President Clark to conduct the meeting.

We are grateful to greet this great audience that promises to crowd to capacity the Tabernacle. Through the courtesy of Radio Station KSL and other Radio Stations cooperating the proceedings of this Conference will be broadcast over KFXD at Nampa; KSEI at Pocatello; KTFI at Twin Falls; KID at Idaho Falls; KSUB at Cedar City; and KEUB at Price. The Presidents of Stakes in these localities are arranging meetings in various of their Ward meeting houses where Ward and Stake congregations can hear the Conference. A direct wire from the Tabernacle to the Los Angeles Stake Tabernacle in Los Angeles, California will bring the services to that area.

There are present on the stand this morning President Grant and his two Counselors, the eleven Apostles, all the First Presidents of Seventies, and also the Presiding Bishopric.

The music is being furnished by the Brigham Young University Chorus and members of the Provo duo Stake Choirs. The directors are Doctors Franklin Madsen and Florence Madsen; organist, Elder Alexander Schreiner.

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "High on the Mountain Top,"—Words by Joel H. Johnson, Music by Ebenezer Beesley.

Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference, offered the invocation.

The Choir sang "O Come, Let Us Worship"—Mendelssohn.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

We are more grateful than we can say that President Grant is here with us, as already announced, and he will now address us.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

It is a source of great satisfaction to me to meet with the Latter-day Saints in this Conference.

I am grateful for the many blessings we enjoy as a people. I know the Lord is mindful of us and will be to an even greater extent if we but serve Him.

ADMONITION TO THE SOLDIER BOYS

It grieves me deeply that it is necessary for thousands of our boys to go into the army. I hope and pray that they will go out with the missionary spirit, maintain their ideals and come back to us as sweet and clean as when they went away. I trust that it will be possible to keep them out of this terrible war. You parents and loved ones keep as close to them as you possibly can.

OFFICERS AND TEACHERS MUST SET EXAMPLE

I have made this statement to the leadership of this Church at times previous, but I feel to repeat it again at this time.

"I ask every man and woman occupying a place of responsibility whose duty it is to teach the Gospel of Jesus Christ to live it and keep the commandments of God, so that their example will teach it; and if they cannot live it, we will go on loving them, we will go on putting our arms around them, we will go on praying for them that they may become strong enough to live it. But unless they are able to live it we ask them to please step aside so that those who are living it can teach it. No man can teach the Gospel of Jesus Christ under the inspiration of the Living God and with power from on high unless he is living it. He can go on as a member and we will pray for him, no matter how many years it may require, and we will never put a block in his way, because the Gospel is one of love and forgiveness, but we want true men and women as our officers in the Priesthood and in the Relief Society."

And a man has no right to be a member of a Stake Presidency, a member of a High Council, a member of a Bishopric, or of any General Board, who cannot stand up and say that he knows the Gospel is true and is keeping the commandments of the Lord to His people.

RESPONSIBILITY IN THE CHURCH BRINGS HUMILITY

At this time I feel that I could say nothing to you that would better portray my testimony and my love of God than to give in substance what I said to the English Saints nearly four years ago.

"It has never ceased to be a wonder to me that I do represent the Lord here upon the earth. My association from childhood with the remarkable and wonderful men that have preceded me has made it almost overwhelming to think of being in the same class with them.

"The last words uttered by President Joseph F. Smith were to the effect, when he shook hands with me—he died that night—"The Lord bless you, my boy, the Lord bless you; you have got a great responsibility. Always remember this is the Lord's work and not man's. The Lord is greater than any man. He knows whom he wants to lead His Church, and never makes any mistake. The Lord bless you."

"I have felt my own lack of ability. In fact when I was called as one of the Apostles I arose to my feet to say it was beyond anything I was worthy of, and as I was rising the thought came to me, 'You know as you know that you live that John Taylor is a prophet of God, and to decline this office when he had received a revelation is equivalent to repudiating the Prophet.' I said, 'I will accept the office and do my best.' I remember that it was with difficulty that I took my seat without fainting.

EARLY EXPERIENCE AS AN APOSTLE

"There are two spirits striving with us always, one telling us to continue our labor for good, and one telling us that with the faults and failings of our nature we are unworthy. I can truthfully say that from October, 1882, until February, 1883, that spirit followed me day and night telling me that I was unworthy to be an Apostle of the Church, and that I ought to resign. When I would testify of my knowledge that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the Living God, the Redeemer of mankind, it seemed as though a voice would say to me: 'You lie! You lie! You have never seen Him.'

"While on the Navajo Indian reservation with Brigham Young, Jr., and a number of others, six or eight, on horseback, and several others in 'white tops'—riding along with Lot Smith at the rear of that procession, suddenly the road veered to the left almost straight, but there was a well beaten path leading ahead. I said: 'Stop, Lot, stop. Where does this trail lead? There are plenty of foot marks and plenty of horses' hoof marks here.' He said, 'It leads to an immense gulley just a short distance ahead, that it is impossible to cross with a wagon. We have made a regular "Muleshoe" of miles here to get on the other side of the gulley.'

"I had visited the day before the spot where a Navajo Indian had asked George A. Smith, Jr., to let him look at his pistol. George A. handed it to him, and the Navajo shot him.

"I said, 'Lot, is there any danger from Indians?'

"None at all."

"I want to be all alone. Go ahead and follow the crowd.' I first asked him if I allowed the animal I was riding to walk if I would reach the road on the other side of the gulley before the horsemen and the wagons, and he said, 'Yes.'

"As I was riding along to meet them on the other side I seemed to see, and I seemed to hear, what to me is one of the most real things in all my life, I seemed to see a Council in Heaven. I seemed to hear the words that were spoken. I listened to the discussion with a great deal of interest. The First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve Apostles had not been able to agree on two men to fill the vacancies in the Quorum of the Twelve. There had been a vacancy of one for two years, and a vacancy of two for one year, and the Conference had adjourned without the vacancies being filled. In this Council the Savior was present, my father was there, and the Prophet Joseph Smith was there. They discussed the question that a mistake had been made in not filling those two vacancies and that in all probability it would be another six months before the Quorum would be completed, and they discussed as to whom they wanted to occupy those positions, and decided that the way to remedy the mistake that had been made in not filling these vacancies was to send a revelation. It was given to me that the Prophet Joseph Smith and my father mentioned me and requested that I be called to that position. I sat there and wept for joy. It was given to me that I had done nothing to entitle me to that exalted position, except that I had lived a clean, sweet life. It was given to me that because of my father having practically sacrificed his life in what was known as the great Reformation, so to speak, of the people in early days, having been practically a martyr, that the Prophet Joseph and my father desired me to have that position, and it was because of their faithful labors that I was called, and not because of anything I had done of myself or any great thing that I had accomplished. It was also given to me that that was all these men, the Prophet and my father, could do for me; from that day it depended upon me and upon me alone as to whether I made a success of my life or a failure.

RESPONSIBILITY TO MAKE GOOD

There is a law, irrevocably decreed in Heaven before the foundations of this world, upon which all blessings are predicated, and when we obtain any blessing from God, it is by obedience to that law upon which it is predicated.

"It was given to me, as I say, that it now depended upon me."

"No man could have been more unhappy than I was from October 1882, until February, 1883, but from that day I have never been bothered, night or day, with the idea that I was not worthy to stand as an Apostle, and I have not been worried since the last words uttered by Joseph F. Smith to me: 'The Lord bless you, my boy, the Lord bless you; you have got a great responsibility. Always remember this is the Lord's work and not man's. The Lord is greater than any man. He knows whom He wants to lead His Church, and never makes any mistake. The Lord bless you.'

"I have been happy during the twenty-two years that it has fallen my lot to stand at the head of this Church. I have felt the inspiration of the Living God directing me in my labors. From the day that I chose a comparative stranger to be one of the Apostles, instead of my lifelong and dearest living friend, I have known as I know that I live, that I am entitled to the light and the inspiration and the guidance of God in directing His work here upon this earth; and I know, as I know that I live, that it is God's work, and that Jesus Christ is the Son of the Living God, the Redeemer of the world and that He came to this earth with a divine mission to die upon the cross as the Redeemer of mankind, atoning for the sins of the world.

JOY IN PREACHING THE GOSPEL

"'As in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive.' I have had real, genuine joy; I have had joy in lifting my voice in England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Germany, France, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, and Czechoslovakia, in the Hawaiian Islands and far-off Japan, in Canada on the north and Mexico on the south, in nearly every State of the Union, proclaiming my absolute knowledge that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the Living God, the Redeemer of the world, and that I know that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the true and the Living God, and that the men who have succeeded him in presiding over this Church are the men God desired to stand in that position.

"I do not make this statement because of any desire to magnify myself—I love the Gospel of Jesus Christ as I love nothing else in this world. I am here today for the reason that I desire to leave here my testimony as an old man—because a man who is in his 85th year is an old man.

WORK OF FORMER PRESIDENTS OF CHURCH

"John Taylor came to the presidency of this Church succeeding Brigham Young, when he was 72 years of age. Wilford Woodruff came to the presidency of this Church after he was eighty-odd years of age, and he lived to be more than ninety. Lorenzo Snow came to the presidency of this Church when he was 85 years of age, and served it in a most miraculous and wonderful way for three years. Joseph F. Smith came to the presidency of this Church when he was two years beyond the time of retirement, namely, 62 years of age, and he served for exactly eighteen years, and I have served for twenty-two years. It is only fair to you to say that I never for one minute believed that he was going to die, until the night he passed away and when he took hold of my hand, and told me what I have quoted to you. I felt in my heart and I had prayed for it; I had fasted for it; I had asked for it; that he should live to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of this Church, seeing that his beloved father, the Patriarch, Hyrum Smith, had been murdered for the Cause; and I believed that he would so live, until I received that message, which was the last message he spoke to anybody.

"May God bless me and you and every soul that has a knowledge of the divinity of this work, to so live it that our lives will proclaim it to all those with whom we come in contact, is my humble prayer, and I ask it in all humility in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, our Redeemer and Savior. Amen."

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

President Grant: We are deeply grateful and profoundly touched by your message. We need you, and love you, and we admire your courage. God grant you many years of health and strength to serve Him.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

We have just listened to one of the most memorable testimonies, and one of the most impressive, ever given in this historic building. God bless President Grant.

You will be interested in the following brief report from President Thomas E. McKay, President of the European Mission, regarding the Missions in Europe:

REPORT OF CONDITIONS IN THE EUROPEAN MISSIONS

It is more than a year now since the 699 American missionaries laboring in the twelve missions classified as European were released to come home or were transferred to missions in America. At the time of the evacuation, capable local brethren were placed in charge, and they are carrying on the work quite successfully. Because of mobilization and war, nearly all of our brethren of military age have been called to the front, and the work is having to be taken care of by the elderly brethren and the sisters.

However, our Sacrament meetings, Sunday Schools, and Relief Societies, and Mutuals to a limited extent, are being held. Because of a shortage of fuel, and blackouts, most of these meetings must be held in the day time, and are combined, or one is held immediately following the other.

In spite of these handicaps, progress is being made. The district and annual conferences are being held. Limited missionary work is being done, especially in the British Mission where the brethren holding the Melchizedek Priesthood are excused from army service. Baptisms are reported from all the missions. Tithing and Fast Offerings are being paid, collections of food and clothing are made quite regularly, and the less fortunate of the members are being well cared for.

The following paragraph, taken from the Norwegian Mission Report, is typical of reports from a number of the missions:

"Many of the Saints have lost all they own—home, property, work. All they have left is the clothes they wear. Many have taken part in the fights, but their lives are spared. These hardest afflicted of the Saints have not lost their faith. They have seen that even if they have lost everything else, God has saved their lives."

Because of the extremely heavy bombings recently in the British Isles the First Presidency were very much relieved, and we are sure you will be, to learn in a letter received today, dated London, March 15, stating among other encouraging news the following:

"The conditions of the British Mission are about the same. All the branches are functioning and we have had no casualties or damage within the last two months."

A previous letter had reported damage to the leased property at 295 Edge Lane, Liverpool, where the Millennial Star was published and the bookstore located. These activities are now carried on at our headquarters at 149 Nightingale Lane, London.

Except in Paris, France, the headquarters of all the missions, including the Czechoslovakian and Palestine-Syrian Missions, are being maintained as usual, and very encouraging reports are being received from all the Acting Mission Presidents. They all say: "Don't worry about us, we are all right—we have the Gospel."

CHANGES IN CHURCH OFFICERS, STAKE, WARD AND BRANCH ORGANIZATIONS SINCE OCTOBER CONFERENCE—1940

Special Appointments:

Frank Evans, former Eastern States Mission President, was appointed Secretary for Finance to the First Presidency, to succeed Arthur Winter, deceased.

An anthem, "Grant Us Peace"—Evan Stephens—was sung by the Choir.

REPORT OF THE CHURCH AUDITING COMMITTEE

Elder Orval W. Adams, at the request of President Clark, read the following report:

President Heber J. Grant and Counselors,
Dear Brethren:

We have examined the Financial report of the Church for the year 1940. The records are complete, accurate and intelligible; the accounting system is adequate and modern; the budget is in balance, and the Church is free from debt.

Sincerely yours,
Orval W. Adams
Albert E. Bowen
H. H. Bennett
George S. Spencer
Church Auditing Committee.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

My brethren and sisters, while I stand before you I trust that the Lord will lead me to say something that will be helpful, uplifting, and encouraging.

You have heard the report read by President McKay, and there are certain things I should like to refer to briefly in that connection.

First, let me say that we miss Elder Reed Smoot this morning, a man of valiant, able, and conspicuous service to his nation, and a man who I think has been the greatest single missionary of our time.

You have already heard regarding the Saints in Europe. I may say that since our last Conference we have evacuated the missionaries from the Pacific Isles, Australia, and New Zealand, and have returned them, some to Hawaii, and the rest to the mainland. This evacuation was carried out speedily as was the one from Europe, and without any accident or untoward incident.

BUDGET IN BALANCE

As Brother Orval Adams has told you, the budget is in balance. We have lived within our income; the Church is not in debt. As I have said on a previous occasion we hope and intend, so far as we are able, to keep it this way; first, because we believe that is the way the Church should be run; secondly, because we believe we should set the example in handling your trust funds, you members of the Church; thirdly, because, for what it may be worth, we would like to set an example that might be followed by our own governmental agencies.

During the last year we spent more for stake and ward purposes; education, temples, and relief assistance, than we spent in 1939. We spent less for missionary work, due probably entirely to the withdrawal from foreign fields, and we spent less in hospitals, largely due to the fact that the hospitals are becoming better business institutions, and are maintaining themselves.

As might be expected, and as ought to be, in view of the employment which is now being furnished and has been for some months, there were 18,294 fewer persons receiving relief from the Church in 1940 than in 1939. This load should lessen, but I should like to urge all presidents of stakes, bishops and counselors, the auxiliaries, and the Welfare organizations to remember that the major part of the employment which we now have available is for war purposes and war industries, and when this war is over those industries will cease; those employed in them will be thrown out of work; it will take considerable time for readjustment, and the need for your Welfare program as planned will be greatly intensified.

URGES CARE IN SPENDING

We are trying as best we can to spend your funds, which you have given to the Lord, wisely; we are trying to make no commitments that we cannot meet in the matter of buildings and other activities so numerous in which the Church is engaged. We are trying not unduly to expand our activities. We are being very careful and ask you brethren, (and we rejoice beyond expression to have so many bishops and presidents of stakes here at this Conference, perhaps the greatest number that has ever assembled at any individual Conference of the Church) we are asking you brethren, in making up your building program, to remember that you are on a rising market; that you cannot tell just what your materials are going to cost; therefore we urge you to be careful in the making of your estimates.

In the spending of tithing funds, we are trying to spend them for the welfare of communities rather than for the welfare of particular individuals. The Church is not a banking institution, and while, through our Welfare organization, we are helping individuals, that is done upon the recommendation of the quorum to which the individual belongs, and with their guarantee. If we were to undertake to lend to everybody who needs help there would be no money left for the regular activities of the Church.

We are trying to practice economy, and particularly in our buying, because, I repeat, we are spending funds marked with the highest kind of a trust, and so we urge you brethren, you bishops, you presidents of stakes, in your buying, to get the most that you can for your money. These funds are not given to you to spend to help some particular person in whom you have a special interest, however worthy that person may be, unless he can give you the service for his funds.

We are trying not to build magnificent cathedrals, but serviceable meeting houses, and would like you brethren and sisters to have that in mind when you are planning for the expenditure of funds.

GRATITUDE EXPRESSED FOR GENEROSITY OF SAINTS

Our Fast Offerings, to which Brother McKay alluded, have increased, in the average, (there is only a slight increase over 1939)—the average this year was 83 cents, as he stated, and 82.2 in 1939.

Twenty-eight stakes in 1939 paid more than a dollar; 45 in 1940. But we missed some of the excellent records that were made by stakes in 1939, and the maximum of 1940 was not so great for a stake as it was in 1939.

We have begun and are pushing to completion the Idaho Falls Temple. We have erected a memorial building to Joseph Smith on the Brigham Young University campus. We have been adding Welfare storehouses, and in addition we have been carrying on the regular building of the Church.

I would like to thank the people on behalf of the General Authorities for their generosity, their loyalty, their service in carrying on the temporal affairs of the Church as well as the spiritual affairs. The Lord has in this Church combined the spiritual and the temporal very closely and we therefore have both as a part of our mission, and, I repeat, the First Presidency and the General Authorities of the Church are grateful beyond expression for your services of the past.

PERILS OF TIMES

Now, I have not time to touch on more of those matters, although there are several others that deserve mention, but I want to read something to you to conclude my remarks.

The perils of these times justify some comment. May I be pardoned if I repeat now some things I have said on other occasions.

In September, 1923, eighteen years ago, at a religious service in this Tabernacle, I mentioned certain trends I then saw. They were: a spirit of revolution that threatened the very foundations of government everywhere, indeed the destruction of the existing bodies politic of the world; the unrestricted immigration of aliens who were foreign and in tradition hostile to our systems of government; the enhancement of the power of the Federal Executive; the breaking down of the mutual independence of the three branches of government,—executive, judicial, and legislative; the disappearance of local self government and the assumption of control by the Federal Government of the very details of our lives; the curtailment of our constitutional guarantees under the Bill of Rights; the building of class in our nation and of class conflict and hatred; the spread of Bolshevism, we call it Communism now, working for the overthrow of our government, the doing away with religion, even the overturning of our family relationships.

During the eighteen years passed since then, I have on all opportunities repeated these observations.

I will leave you to make up your own minds how far these trends have become realities.

NO MAN SEES END

No thinking person doubts that our people, our nation, and the world are now passing through one of the great crises of the world's history. We are in the midst of a world-wide revolution, which is wholly alien to our free institutions and is foreign in birth, concept, and directing head. No man, of his own power, sees the end. But the end the revolutionists seek is fairly clear; it is the overturning of the whole existing order, political, financial, economic, social, religious, the complete destruction of our Constitution and the government established under it, and then the setting up of some sort of despotism that shall destroy, in all these fields, the free agency which the Lord gave to man. The revolutionists plan that this is to be largely done during the war, under the plea of war necessity; it is to be continued after the war under the excuse—if we are not then too cowed to require an excuse—that this new political order is necessary that we may rehabilitate the world. They count that then, after a little time, the revolution will be secure. There seems no doubt that this is their conscious, deliberate, planned end. We have gone a long way already down this road.

OUR DUTY TO SUSTAIN THE CONSTITUTION

Knowing as we do that God set up this Constitution of ours and that He has declared it "should be maintained for the rights and protection of all flesh, according to just and holy principles," (D. & C. 101:77) it is the duty of every member of the Church to protect and defend the Constitution against any and all attack. In this country our lawful political allegiance runs not to any man, not to any party, not to any "ism," but to the Constitution of the United States and to the free institutions set up under it. There can be no tampering with the "just and holy principles" of the Constitution. No true Latter-day Saint can or will do other than reverence the Constitution; each will do all in his power to save it from pollution or destruction.

FORMER PREDICTIONS REPEATED

For the past several Conferences, I have spoken about world conditions. In the April Conference of 1937, I said:

.... there is strongest reason for believing that some of the most skilled, astute, and shrewd diplomats, politicians, and statesmen of all Europe are now planning to have the people of the United States finance the next European war either before the war begins or during its progress.

I continued:

Furthermore, certain of these same diplomats, politicians, and statesmen are planning to entice the United States into an offensive and defensive military alliance in order that we shall participate in that next world war by sending our young men to the battlefields of Europe. The argument they now plan to use to bring this about is that in this way only can the peace of the world be preserved. While this is a most profound fallacy, it will unfortunately find a sympathetic ear among many of the people of this country who do not fully understand international relations. It will require the wisest statesmanship on our part to prevent the United States from becoming again the victim of a world military catastrophe.

I need make no comment about these statements.

TO BE PEACEMAKERS THE DESTINY OF AMERICA

This war began as a war for empire. This is an unrighteous cause. A war to enlarge and maintain empire of conquest is no better. This war continues for these two objects. All other issues urged in this contest are merely ancillary to the getting or keeping of empire. America has no place as a belligerent in such a conflict. We do have a place in the world by Divine design and destiny as the makers of a lasting peace, but we must come to this task not as joint conquerors but with clean hands and a contrite spirit, bearing in our hands the olive branch of peace, spiritual hope, and righteousness.

We have heard that our help in the conflict was always to be short of war; but we have for many months been in fact actual participants in the war.

We have also been told our sons would not be sent abroad to fight, but American vessels on both of our coasts are reported now actually making ready for use as troop transports.

It does look as if only Divine intervention of some kind can keep our sons on our own soil, fighting for our own cause, in defense of our own freedom and liberties.

We all have the deepest sympathy for the woe and misery which afflict the innocent peoples of Europe. We join them in sorrowing for lost loved ones. We pray to the Lord to mitigate their suffering and assuage their grief. But we need not be so much concerned about political Europe. This war is merely the outbreaking of old political hatreds that have festered in Europe for a thousand years. They have never been fully wiped out before; they will not after this war is over. Our great concern is that this endemic yet virulent infection shall not spread to America and leave us with an incurable malady.

I have before urged and I now urge that we put hate away from us, because it is the hates from the last war that have made this one. Hate and righteousness cannot dwell in the same heart. Hate cankers the soul and destroys spirituality. Hate has no place in the hearts of the followers of Jesus.

A CHOICE LAND

With infinite patience, infinite mercy, infinite love, the Lord has tried to lead His children of this earth along the paths He has made for us, that we today might not become ripened in iniquity and subject to chastisement as were His children in the olden times. We who live on this hemisphere have a special blessing and a prescribed decree. This is the blessing:

Behold, this is a choice land, and whatsoever nation shall possess it shall be free from bondage, and from captivity, and from all other nations under heaven, if they will but serve the God of the land, who is Jesus Christ. (Ether 2:12.)

This is the decree:

Wherefore he that doth possess it shall serve God or shall be swept off; for it is the everlasting decree of God. And it is not until the fulness of iniquity among the children of the land, that they are swept off. (Ether 2:10.)

May the Lord help us so to live that we enjoy the blessings and escape the decree.

Too many of us of this land have not hearkened to the voice of the Lord, nor observed His laws and commandments. The offenses of the peoples of the earth have been great; the eternal law seems to be that there must be an equal atonement.

Jesus said to His disciples:

"Woe unto the world because of offenses! for it must needs be that offenses come; but woe to that man by whom the offense cometh! (Matt. 18:7.)

THE LORD'S PLANS WILL TRIUMPH

But in all the afflictions we now have or that loom up ahead, it is my faith that the Lord is at the helm, for this is a major event in the history of man. It is my faith that nothing has happened and nothing will happen that is contrary to His plan or that is against His will. In the final event, God does not permit any trifling with His decrees. However far afield men may wander, Righteousness and Truth finally triumph. Of these things I have the same knowledge that I have that I live.

Of all peoples, we are, with this knowledge, the most blessed in the earth. Because, however dark may seem the days, we shall face our trials with the sure knowledge that God lives; we know that He can hear and answer our prayers according to His wisdom; we understand that we have an existence hereafter where we and our loved ones shall be forever safe from the ills of the flesh; we know that we shall have eternal happiness if we live and die righteously; we know that the Lord will bless and protect wherever he may be, every man who lives the principles of the Gospel and who does his duty.

PRAYER FOR PEACE

We believe in peace. We are the devoted followers of the Prince of Peace. We abhor war, save in the actual defense of our homes, our families, our liberties. For we remember that when Peter struck off with his sword the ear of Malchus, the servant of the High Priest, the Lord said: "All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." (Matt. 26:52) The Lord made no exceptions to His law. History has made none.

We pray for peace. We pray that the Lord will keep the youth of America out of the European conflict. We ask Him to bring peace into the hearts of men.

With all my heart I join in the anxiety and pray the prayer of President Grant. God bless our boys and the boys of all America! God bless the youth of the world, ignorant of the why of all this and innocent of any blame therefor.

May the Lord bless us and increase our testimonies of the truth of His Gospel, for the day cometh when this shall be our greatest solace, and comfort, the sheet anchor which shall keep us from spiritual despair. God bless us, preserve us, increase our testimonies, help us to live the Gospel, I ask in the name of Jesus, Amen.

PRESIDENT RUDGER CLAWSON

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

This is a very wonderful gathering. It looks very much like a Priesthood meeting, but it is a general meeting of the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, a very important gathering.

I was deeply impressed with the remarks made by President Grant. I am sure we are all very happy to have him with us, to take the lead and point out the way. The Lord bless him and heal him!

A VERY SATISFACTORY REPORT

The statement read this morning by President McKay was and is perhaps the most elaborate and comprehensive statement ever made to the Church, both financially and socially, from this stand. The budget is balanced and the Church is out of debt. What excellent good news that is! How we ought to rejoice and glorify the Lord for the prosperity and the faith and good works of the Latter-day Saints! We feel relieved, we feel strengthened and encouraged when we can have such reports as those that were also commented upon by President Clark, and his further remarks this morning were indeed impressive and encouraging to the Latter-day Saints. It is hoped they will have a good effect throughout our country.

GOSPEL PREACHED BY WORD AND EXAMPLE

Brethren and sisters, the Lord has said in a revelation to Joseph Smith the Prophet—said it in more than one place in the scriptures—that salvation is the greatest gift of God to man, and that salvation comes by the preaching of the Gospel. The miracles and blessings that follow the preaching do not come before but come after the preaching to confirm the faith of the Latter-day Saints and all who will receive the word of God. God does not give signs and miracles to make us believe, but rather to strengthen and help those who receive the message.

I call your attention to an incident connected with the crucifixion of the Savior. It was his great mission to come to the earth, under the direction of His Father in Heaven, that His precious blood might be shed for the redemption of mankind. After His crucifixion, and just prior to His returning to Heaven, He delivered an important charge to His disciples in these words:

Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.

So I take it that that responsibility is upon those who are called to preach the Gospel. There is nothing greater than to preach the word of God, to acknowledge His hand, to walk uprightly before Him, to be humble and faithful, and not only by word of mouth but also to preach the Gospel by example. We are making history individually and collectively, and so it is highly essential that our lives and example should conform with our preaching, and then it will be effective.

MESSAGE PREACHED AT HOME AND ABROAD

A good work is now being accomplished. We are calling young men and young women and some that are older into the mission field. They are soldiers of the cross. They go not to kill and destroy as in war, but to save and build up, and if we are all faithful and true to the Cause and exemplify our words by our lives the effect will be tremendous, and the effect as it is is very fine. The influence of the testimonies and exhortations that go out from this Conference unto the world at large will have a most salutary effect I am sure.

Notable people and tourists traveling over the country, stopping at Salt Lake City are usually headed the first thing for the Temple Block; they have heard about this wonderful Tabernacle which is like a testimony of the truth, where holy men have stood and taught the people. These visitors have been influenced and they marvel and wonder about it. Some of them investigate the Gospel; they have reflected about this matter of tithing; they have approved of it and they would like to know just how it is done. Of course we have to say that we regret that we cannot tell them just how to do it in their churches; we know how to do it in our Church because it is a law of God given to us. Every individual who earns means in the Mormon Church is under the responsibility of observing the law of tithing. It is not binding upon these other churches because they do not have the authority and the spirit to do it. The unity of this great congregation here—what it would mean if we were all perfectly united, sitting under the voice of revelation, the voice of the Priesthood and the power of God—it is a wonderful thing! We are a blessed people and have much to be thankful for.

BEARS TESTIMONY

I feel that it is a great privilege, brethren and sisters, to stand before you and to bear my testimony and to say to you I know absolutely, without mental reservation, that this is the Church of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, and He is with us and His power and influence will uphold us, and we will have an instructive and wonderful time before the Conference closes.

Peace be unto you, my brethren and sisters; the Lord prosper you in every righteous undertaking, in every movement for the benefit and blessing of the people, I ask in the worthy name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Choir sang an anthem, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains"—
Dr. John Stainer,

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.First Counselor in the First Presidency*

I should like to repeat the slogan, "Drive carefully, and pedestrians walk sensibly."

Elder Leo J. Muir, President of the Northern States Mission, offered the benediction.

Conference adjourned until 2 p. m.

FIRST DAY*AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference reconvened at 2 o'clock p. m., Friday, April 4.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.First Counselor in the First Presidency*

The time has come to open the second session of our Conference. We are blessed again this afternoon with the presence of President Heber J. Grant, who is presiding, and he has asked President Clark to conduct the meeting.

There are present on the stand this afternoon President Grant and his two Counselors; the eleven Apostles; all of the First Seven Presidents of Seventies; and all the Presiding Bishopric.

The congregation and the Brigham Young University Chorus and members of the Provo Duo Stake Choir sang the hymn, "How Firm a Foundation"—Words by Keene.

Elder Charles S. Clark, President of the Cassia Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The Choir sang "Glory to God in the Highest"—Pergolesi.

ELDER GEORGE ALBERT SMITHOf the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

I wish all you fine people in the body of the house could see this audience from the stand. It is a wonderful sight, every seat filled and people standing, both in the doorways and in the gallery.

I trust that I may be blessed of the Lord today, that I may express to you the feelings of my heart with reference to the work with which we are identified. After the wonderful session we had this morning I feel that it would be just too bad if I should try to talk myself and express my own personal feelings, unless the Lord helps me.

THE COMMANDMENTS OF THE LORD GIVEN FOR OUR GOOD

As I travel around among the people I am sometimes astonished to find that some appear to feel that they are doing the Lord a favor by belonging to His Church. They seem to have an idea that when they keep the commandments of the Lord, that they are doing something to please somebody else.

I doubt that the people of the world realize that the reason they are in the predicament they are in today is because they have neglected to follow the advice of our Heavenly Father. The uncertainty, the distress, the anguish that is prevalent in so many parts of the world is traceable directly to violating His commandments. The Lord, when He gave to us the Ten Commandments, gave us advice for our good. It was not for His benefit, except that He is always happy when we do right. But I am thinking now of the commandments that came down from Sinai: "Thou shalt honor the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve." That was not to please Him. The advice that He gave in that regard, and elsewhere, has been for our good and for our benefit.

When He commanded us that we should honor the Sabbath Day to keep it holy, He only gave us the information that would help us to enjoy our lives. That is all.

"Thou shalt not steal." When that commandment was given it was intended that if people in this world would be honest, that they would derive the benefit. Only this morning our beloved President quoted a portion from the Doctrine and Covenants, referring to the laws that govern us:

There is a law, irrevocably decreed in heaven from before the foundation of this earth, upon which every blessing is predicated.

So the Lord, in His kindness, seeing the attitude of His children, and knowing that they would need guidance, gave to us the Ten Commandments, and other commandments that have been given from time to time, to help us to find happiness. You observe people running to and fro in the world, seeking happiness but not finding it. If they would only pause long enough to accept the Lord's advice happiness would follow, but they will find it in no other way.

BLESSINGS FOLLOW THE KEEPING OF THE COMMANDMENTS

It is strange that any member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints should have to be urged to say his prayers, and yet there are some people who do not pray in secret or have their family prayers. Yet unless we pray we lose the protection that prayer offers. (D. & C. Sec. 20:32-34.)

The Lord has given us the privilege of contributing one-tenth of our interest, for His Church, for the development of His work in the world. Those who pay their tithing receive their blessing. If we do not desire the blessing, we may withhold our contribution. The Lord promises His blessing if we honor His law and not otherwise.

Everything that He has asked us to do is for our good, not for somebody else's benefit particularly, though, of course, it benefits others when we set a good example. With this great body of Priesthood and the membership of the Church assembled here, what an influence we ought to have, if we are keeping the commandments of the Lord.

The President referred to the fact, this morning, that there were offices in the Church, and that men who hold those offices ought not to expect to hold them unless they magnify them. Why? Because they receive no benefit from it, only as they keep the commandments of the Lord and magnify their callings. It is of no particular advantage to be a High Priest or a Seventy or an Elder in this Church, just to hold that office. But if we live up to the teachings of the Lord, if we do what He asks us to do, then we have promise of a blessing. The Lord, all the years from the beginning of time, has been ready to bless His children whenever they will permit Him to do it.

There are some who do things they ought not to do, and yet they hope for a blessing. We sing: "God Bless America." What a wonderful hymn that is! How beautifully it is sung in large congregations! But God cannot bless America if the people who live in America refuse to keep His commandments. We must earn the blessing if we would receive it.

We are commanded by the Lord to teach our children what they should do, that they should have faith, that they should repent, and that they should be baptized when eight years of age; and He says that if we fail in our responsibility, the sin be upon our heads. What does that mean? It means, to me, that if our children fall away because of our neglect and because of our carelessness, there will come a time when we realize that we did not prepare them for the blessings the Lord wanted to give them, and the result is that they have failed to receive the blessings and the sorrow will be upon our own heads.

I am grateful that I belong to a church that does not compel obedience. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints does not coerce. The Gospel of Jesus Christ is a gospel of love, intelligence, a wonderful guide for our lives. That is what it is for. It is for everybody. Yet we find people who resist the very thing that would make them happy. They will not live the Gospel but seek happiness only in the pleasures of life that will not endure.

I think this great organization that we belong to ought to be able to set such an example that people in our neighborhoods, not members of the Church, seeing our good works, would be constrained to glorify the name of our Heavenly Father. That is the way I feel with regard to that. All that we need to do is to set an example, be good men and good women, and they will observe it. Then perhaps they will afford us the opportunity to teach them the things that they do not know.

Every blessing that we desire must be earned by obeying the law upon which that blessing is conditioned. Now, we understand that, brethren and sisters. How unwise we are if we fail, if we ourselves decline to do the thing that will earn us a blessing, when we know that we cannot obtain it in any other way except to earn it. That is the difference in the attitude of those who understand the Gospel of Jesus Christ and the people of the world. I have had people tell me: "Oh, it doesn't make so much difference what you do. After a while everybody will be saved in the Kingdom of God." It used to be quite customary when I was in the mission field in early days, to hear that. That is what the devil is telling the world. That is the way the Adversary teaches. If he can just keep them doing wrong all the time, and neglecting that which is right, he has them just where he wants them to be, and he has us where he wants us, when we fail to do right.

THE PRIESTHOOD TO BE HONORED

To be ordained to the Priesthood may not prove a blessing. We should not at any time feel that it will be a blessing to us, unless we honor it, unless we magnify it, and have in our hearts the desire that the Lord intended we should have, when He bestowed that gift upon us, and we should always desire to do good.

What a wonderful group we have enrolled in this organization! Lovers of all that is good and beautiful, marvelous choirs that come from different parts of the Church to sing for us here; to supplement the delight that the Tabernacle Choir and Organ give to us; this lovely building in which to meet, not another like it in the world. We have every blessing that the world has anywhere, plus the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Of course, the world does not understand it if we say it that way, but we ought to understand it. Everything that I can find that is good in any church in all the world, is a part of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. No other church can say that.

This is the Lord's Church. I sometimes hear people speak of it as "our church." This is the Lord's Church. Our Heavenly Father ordained that it should come at this particular period of the world's history, and He directed that it receive the name of His beloved Son. Fortunate are we if while we are members of it we live up to the opportunities that it offers, lest we fall into transgression and lose our faith and forfeit the blessing that the Lord desired us to possess.

ADVICE TO SEEK FOR IMPROVEMENT

Now, brethren, let us do better than we have ever done before. Let us renew our determination to be real Latter-day Saints, and not just make-believe. I do not think I ought to be talking just like that to this group, because I feel that perhaps the cream of the Church, very much of it, is in this building; but I do not know anybody who can not do a little better than he has been doing, if he makes up his mind.

I think that with the distress everywhere, with the prediction that the Lord made in the first Section of the Doctrine and Covenants, that "peace should be taken from the earth," we must feel that that time has come. Surely we ought to take stock of ourselves, and our homes should be the abiding place of prayer and gratitude and thanksgiving. Husbands should be kind to their wives, and wives considerate of their husbands. Parents should hold the love of their children by their righteous living. Our homes would then not only be the abiding place of prayer and thanksgiving, but would be the place where our Father could bestow His choicest blessings, because of our worthiness.

I pray that the peace that cometh from our Heavenly Father may abide in our hearts and in our homes, that we who have been honored by fellowship in the Church of His Beloved Son may appreciate that honor every day, and so live when the race is run that we shall have earned an inheritance in the Celestial Kingdom. We must not surrender to temptation, but should meet our problems in the spirit of love and kindness toward all men, ever serving God and keeping His commandments. And we are always serving Him when we are blessing our kind; do not forget that.

FAITH SHOWN BY GOOD WORKS

We cannot expect to earn blessings without earnest effort. We will be required to make what appears to some to be sacrifices. I suppose people think when they pay their tithing that they are making a sacrifice, but they are not; they are making a real investment that will return an eternal dividend. Our Heavenly Father gives us all that we have. He places all in our hands, authorizing us to retain for our own use nine-tenths of it, and then He asks that we put His tenth where He directs, where He knows it will accomplish the most good in developing His Church.

When we heard the reports this morning of this great Church, the financial report impressed me much. To know that a great organization like this, with its multitudes of people, functioning in so many ways, in the midst of the world's turmoil and distress is in such a condition that one of the Presidency of the Church could stand here and truthfully say to us this Church is out of debt. With the nations and most of the people in debt, yet the Church has been so managed that it is out of debt. Let us think about it. Let us sustain the Church. Let us follow the advice of the leadership of the Church. Let us so live that the Lord can bless us as He blesses the Church.

The Lord gave one commandment to the people, in which He said this was the only church in all the world that He is well pleased with, and He emphasized that by saying, or inferring at least, that that did not mean individually. That meant the Church as a whole. But how wonderful it would be if He could say of us that He is pleased with all of us as individuals.

God grant that we may so live and let our light so shine that others, seeing our good works, will be constrained to glorify His name. Let there be in our hearts love and compassion and consideration and charity for every soul that we come in contact with. Then we can consistently kneel down in our own homes and invoke the favor of the Lord upon those that we love, and upon all those with whom we associate, and when life's labor is complete may we find that we have listened to the whispering of that still, small voice that always guides us in the path of righteousness, and know that it has meant for us the opening of the door to the Celestial kingdom, for ourselves and those we love, to go forward throughout the ages, not unhappy eternally, but happy eternally, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

ELDER ANTOINE R. IVINSOf the First Council of the Seventy*

My beloved brethren and sisters, it is with a sense of extreme responsibility that I stand before you here this afternoon, realizing that to take your time is a responsible thing. I pray that you may all give me an interest in your faith and prayers, that the short time I stand before you I may enjoy a portion of the Spirit of God, our Heavenly Father.

LOVE EXPRESSED FOR LEADERS

I am extremely grateful this afternoon for the privilege I had this morning of listening to the testimony of my beloved uncle, the President of the Church. I hope he knows how deeply we all love him. I want to tell him that the Lord cannot extend his years too long to please us, who are so near to him. I believe that I echo the sentiments of this vast congregation when I say that.

I am thankful, likewise, that the Lord has seen fit to spare to us, in the First Council of the Seventy, our very beloved Senior President, Brother Wells. There is nobody whom we love more than we do these men, and we would put with them Brother Clawson, who stands at the head of the Council of the Twelve. We associate with them very closely. We know their integrity and their devotion to the work of the Lord, and we would have naught but peace and joy, happiness and success to crown their future years.

JOY IN MINISTERING AMONG THE LATTER-DAY SAINTS

As we move about among the people we strive to serve you to the very best of our ability, realizing that we are your servants as well as the servants of God, our Heavenly Father. We make very many fine friends. I see many of them in the audience today, and I want to thank them for the kindly ministry that they have given unto us as we move about.

In these visits it has been my privilege to talk with a great many of the officers of the Church, and to study the conditions that prevail throughout the Church, and I believe that we have the finest people on the earth, the finest because they have the purest belief in God, our Heavenly Father, a God to whom we can actually call for blessings, who will recognize that call, and minister unto us according to our wants.

We would like, if we could, to find ways and means of helping each other to live nearer and closer to God our Heavenly Father, to observe better the principles of the Gospel, which we know to be the principles of life and salvation, life here in the earth, which will give us the very fullest possible growth and development, and a life hereafter, with our Heavenly Father. We struggle and we strive, with this aim and purpose. Sometimes we feel that we do not have a very great measure of success. But then frequently we find that we do sow seeds that grow and flourish and produce happiness and joy in the hearts of the people. That, it seems to me, is our major purpose—to help you to help each other to greater joy and happiness and success.

MELCHIZEDEK PRIESTHOOD COMPARISONS

One thing I have noticed, as I move about among the people, that I think maybe it would be worthwhile to call to your attention. You know we minister in the Priesthood especially, and we check the activities of the Priesthood throughout the Church. For more than a year I have been comparing the number of men holding the Melchizedek Priesthood, in the different Stakes which I have visited, with the number of families in the Stakes. It startled me almost past belief, the other day, to find in one Stake that I visited that there were possibly only 43 out of 100 families with a representative in the Melchizedek Priesthood.

Now, if we had an ideal condition prevailing, the only families not represented in the Melchizedek Priesthood would be the families of widows, because all of the men who are married would marry in the Temple, and all the young women who would marry would marry men who would marry in the Temple. But that does not seem to prevail.

When there are as many, or as few as 43 out of 100 represented in the Melchizedek Priesthood, there seems to be a condition that we might well pay attention to. It runs all the way from 43 to above 95. I visited one Stake where that comparison was as high as 95. That seems to me to be almost an ideal condition. Now, somewhere in between there will be a happy medium. That is what we ought to seek, at least the happy medium. Let us strive to increase that proportion, by teaching our young people the advisability of marrying within the Church. Then let us strive to increase it further by teaching our young people the advantage of working in the quorums of the Priesthood, so that when the time comes that they care to marry, they can be married in the Temple, having been made Elders in the Church.

It seems to me that those things merit our consideration. Just why it is that that proportion is so low in some places, I do not know that I can say, but I believe it is because of the environment in which the young people live in those Stakes, that most of their associations are outside of the Church, and consequently many of them are marrying outside of the Church. Now, it so happens that occasionally a marriage of this kind is rectified because the non-member party to the marriage eventually comes into the Church through conversion. It seems to me, however, that it would be infinitely better for that conversion to be realized beforehand. Isn't it a serious consideration?

THE TEACHING OF MARRIAGE IN THE TEMPLE MOST DESIRABLE

We have those two fields of labor, then, for our Stake missionaries, for instance, and especially for our fathers and mothers, to teach their young people that it is a highly desirable thing to marry within the Church, to marry people whose sympathies are like yours, whose faith is like yours, who understand you, and whom you can understand. And then to teach these young men their duties, so that this group, which we call the Adult Aaronic Priesthood group, will shrink to the vanishing point. It would be a wonderful thing if we could accomplish that one thing within the Church. If we could do it, even to reduce it just a little, within the next year, think what a wonderful project that would be within our Stakes and within our families.

There is nothing we could do, perhaps, that would help our young people to a better realization of their possibilities, than to so teach them that they would marry in the Temple. There is nothing that I have ever been more grateful for than that privilege, the privilege of being sealed to my wife for not only this life but for an eternity which is to come. The very sanctity and sacredness of that thing is one of the greatest supports that we could have in life. It is one of the very finest objectives that we could have in dealing with our young people. Now, to impress upon them the sanctity of it and the desirability of it, we have to teach them some other things.

RESPONSIBILITY OF LEADERS TOWARDS THE YOUNG

There are far too many of us who fail to teach our young people the law of chastity. Nothing in a man's life, or that of a woman, can give the satisfaction and the joy that comes from the realization that your life has been a chaste and upright life. These young people are placed in our trust, and we have a responsibility towards them. If we can increase their happiness, their joy and their safety, by teaching them these things, it is a sacred duty on our part to do it. Let us never let a son or daughter of ours, who may be found in sin, be able to say to us that either for lack of teaching or by example we are responsible for his or her downfall.

I hope that we may be able to so instill in their hearts a love for these things that such practices as repeatedly come to our notice, where men fail in this respect, will likewise diminish to the vanishing point. I would that every man and woman in the Church were able to bow their heads before God, their Heavenly Father, and swear that they are chaste and upright.

I compliment you fathers and mothers on the great numbers of your boys and girls who can look us, their Presiding Authorities, in the eye, and swear that they are clean, before they go on their missions. I do not know any place in the world where you could find as high a percentage of men and women that can do so. But as near perfect as that may be, we might increase it. We might make that better, with just a little more care given to our young people. I pray that God will give us the strength and the courage and the frankness to meet them on common ground, and teach them the way of life. God bless you. Amen.

ELDER SAMUEL O. BENNIONOf the First Council of the Seventy*

I sincerely trust, my brethren and sisters, that I may enjoy the Spirit of the Lord this afternoon, for no one can hold this position and address an audience without that Spirit which will bear testimony to all of us that this is His work.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR OPPORTUNITIES

In the day and age in which we live the many complicated situations which arise bring us more than ever face to face with the fact that we are all individually responsible for our acts. I believe that I have an individual responsibility as well as an opportunity to do what the Lord would have me do, and that I have also the duty to encourage others to do likewise. They in turn have the same privilege.

I do not believe as many do that the grave is the great common leveler, but rather that as we live and journey through this life, so shall we begin on the other side; that we shall begin where we left off here; that we cannot change the life that we have established; that it will take time for men and women to change their methods of living. I believe in the Prophet Alma's words, that this life is the time for men and women to prepare to meet God:

Yea, behold, the day of this life is the day for men to perform their labors.

Alma continues:

Ye cannot say contrary to this, for that same spirit which doth possess your body at the time of death, at the time that ye go out of this life, that same spirit shall possess your body in the life to come.

It is a mistake for men and women to believe, as many are taught in the world, that when we pass away we will go immediately into the presence of the Lord, there to remain. It is not so written, but it is written that we shall go into that spirit world, and that the life that we have lived, the knowledge that we have acquired, will be with us there, and shall be with us and for us in that life where we shall go.

EARTHLY LIFE A MISSION

We came into this world and took upon ourselves these bodies of flesh and bones willingly. We came here, away from home, to perform a work, and to test our strength. The Lord sent us on this mission. I have always felt that this experience in mortality is more or less a missionary experience. He governs and controls the destinies of the human family, according to their faith in Him and according to their work, and that training they received, and that obedience which they yielded in that eternal world from whence we all came, had much to do with the shaping of their destiny here.

I do not place credence in the thought that things come by chance or by luck. I doubt very much if there is any such thing. I think the Lord's plan is an orderly one, which He made before the foundation of this earth was laid. I believe with all my heart in the testimony of the great prophets, that we were in that world, and that we shouted for joy at the time when the Son of Man was selected to go into the world and preach the Gospel of peace among the children of men, that men who would might have a chance to prove themselves while they were in mortality.

I repeat that I am strong for individuality. I believe in it in business and in government. I believe in it in my Church relationships. I am fully converted to Alma's statement that this is the time for men to prepare to meet God, and that that same spirit which possesses our bodies when we go out of this world, that same spirit and experience and training, will go with us into the world to come. It will be there as an asset unto us. If we have not kept the commandments of God and made good use of our time, then we have failed that much, and we have to that extent retarded His plan, for after all that plan is based upon the faith and works manifested by the sons and daughters of God.

THE KEYS OF AUTHORITY RESTORED

The Lord has established in your day and mine the Gospel of Jesus Christ. He gave it to the Prophet Joseph Smith, who was divinely appointed to become the great Prophet of this dispensation of the fulness of times. It was through him the Gospel was to be taught in all the world. The Lord brought into the world the authority that He gave to Joseph the Prophet, and He established it through those men who appeared unto the Prophet and gave the keys to him. This is the authority to act in the name of God. This is the Holy Priesthood, and to know this and to live in accordance with it is life eternal for the children of men.

There are thousands and millions of good men and fine women in this world. They can only be reached by those who know the truth. A man who does not have a testimony of this Gospel cannot bear it to others. He cannot establish faith in the heart of another man or woman unless he possesses that faith himself. He must have a knowledge that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that this divine plan called Mormonism, was instituted by our Father in Heaven, and that it is the work of God. He must feel this and know it. Then he can have influence with the children of men, and by the power of his example, which often precedes precept, he can establish faith in the hearts of the children of men.

This is the mission of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. If men procrastinate, if they continue to be wicked, they cannot hope to inherit these blessings. Let me read what Alma further says about this:

For behold, if ye have procrastinated the day of your repentance even until death, behold, ye have become subjected to the spirit of the devil, and he doth seal you his; therefore, the Spirit of the Lord hath withdrawn from you, and hath no place in you, and the devil hath all power over you; and this is the final state of the wicked.

EVIL HABITS LEAD MEN ASTRAY

My brethren and sisters, let us look well to the habits we form. If they are evil habits, and if we do not repent of them and put them from us, they become a great part of us and it is not easy to shake them off or to forget them. It is not easy for men and women to get away from the vices of sin. The drinking of alcohol, for example, leads them into terrible conditions, often into destruction. That same principle will apply to every habit or form of sin that a man or a woman may acquire here in mortality. That is the thing I think that our great prophet Alma had in mind.

ADVICE GIVEN BY THE PROPHET ALMA

Alma offers some very encouraging advice in these words:

Counsel with the Lord in all thy doings, and He will direct thee for good; yea, when ye liest down at night lie down unto the Lord, that he may watch over you in your sleep; and when thou risest in the morning let thy heart be full of thanks unto God; and if ye do these things, ye shall be lifted up at the last day.

That is the promise that He offers to men and women who will follow the Lord and counsel with Him, who will attend to prayer, who will attend to their offerings, who will walk uprightly, as carefully as men and women may in mortality. And he said: "Ye shall be lifted up at the last day."

A GREAT PROMISE

As I read these words my mind was drawn, and has been drawn many times to a passage of scripture in the Doctrine and Covenants, in the 93rd section, the first verse. I heard President Joseph F. Smith read it once when I was in Conference, and I believed it was directed to me. I read it to you:

Verily, thus saith the Lord: It shall come to pass that every soul who forsaketh his sins and cometh unto me, and calleth on my name, and obeyeth my voice, and keepeth my commandments, shall see my face and know that I am.

I want to say to you, my brethren and sisters and friends, that is one of the greatest promises the Lord could offer. It is a wonderful thing for us to know that, and to know that it will absolutely come to pass. It fills us with joy to know that the Lord Jesus Christ is the Savior of the world, and that He is our Father's Son; that He established faith among the children of men and raised up a righteous heritage here in the earth, to establish His Cause in the great world in which we live, and that if we are worthy we may one day look upon His face.

THE VALUE OF TRUTH

It is a glorious thing to know the Truth. It is a glorious thing to live it. It is a fine thing to meet men, regardless of where we may travel, and to let them know and feel in their hearts that we believe in the Gospel plan and that we teach it and live it. By it we may bring souls unto Christ.

I have lived in the shadow of the prophets for many years. I have heard their testimonies. It is a marvelous thing to hear the testimony of President Grant. I talked to a person who heard his voice this morning over the radio. He said it was inspiring and that he was deeply touched when, in his humility, the President manifested emotion. The testimony of Jesus was there. What more could men and women ask for or hope for than to know these things? "For this is life eternal," said the Savior in His day, "to know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou has sent."

Brethren and sisters, we are living in a day of great trouble and distress, but we have the power to use our free agency, stand for the things we know are right, and to establish faith among the children of men. Let us not be fearful of saying "No" when we ought to say it. Let us stand for the truth and uphold the hands of the prophet of the living God and those who are associated with him, for this is the work of God. The Lord bless you. Amen.

ELDER JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

This is a most wonderful sight, and this is a most important position which I occupy. In looking into your faces I feel very much my weakness and dependence upon the Spirit of the Lord, and I trust that I may have your faith and prayers in what I may say.

There are a great many principles that concern us very deeply, the principles of the Gospel. We have assembled here for the purpose of being instructed, guided and built up in the faith. It is impossible for one individual, in the limited time, to attempt to cover many of these principles of eternal truth. I have been delighted in all that we have heard. We have heard much already of the greatest importance, which I humbly hope we will put into practice, if we have not already been practicing these principles of righteousness which have been mentioned here this afternoon.

I am inclined, at this particular moment, to continue something along the line of the remarks that were made by Brother Ivins, for I believe that he touched upon one of the most important things that concern the Latter-day Saints—marriage.

KEEPING THE COMMANDMENTS IMPORTANT

We have a great many people in the Church who would not think for a moment of stealing. They would not lie. They would never think of purposely injuring a neighbor, and they might be considered, of course, to be good citizens, because in all their acts they show the spirit of honesty and integrity so far as their dealings with their fellow men are concerned. But they do not feel that they have violated any principle of justice or right, when they violate some of the most important commandments that the Lord has given us.

MARRIAGE FOR TIME NOT APPROVED

Frequently I receive an invitation to attend a wedding. I look in the newspaper and I see the picture of a beautiful young lady, and the announcement made that she is going to be married, and perhaps, she being a member of the Church, she is going to marry also a member of the Church, but that the ceremony is going to be performed at the home of the bride, or at some other place selected by them, outside of the Temple of the Lord.

While the invitation that comes to me no doubt is sent in the spirit of kindness, I always feel that I would rather not receive it, because I do not want to lend to a wedding of that kind even my presence, because I consider marriage, as the Lord has given it to the Church, one of the most vital and one of the most sacred principles that has ever been revealed. And when we violate that covenant, or refuse to enter into that covenant, we are transgressors of the law.

We read in the scriptures that sin is the transgression of the law. Now, these people who marry by what we call civil ceremony, in other words, who are married by the Justice of the Peace, or by an Elder of the Church, the Bishop or the President of the Stake, outside of the Temple of the Lord, can only be married for time. That is all. The Lord has commanded us, as it is recorded in the revelations, that marriage among members of the Church should be performed in His Holy House, and not for time only, but for time and all eternity. Therefore, those who are satisfied to receive a ceremony for time only, uniting them for this life, and are content with that, are ignorant of this fundamental principle of the Gospel and its consequences, or they are in rebellion against the commandments of the Lord.

RESPONSIBILITY OF PARENTS

Now, what I want to say is intended very largely for the parents of the young people. I think the parents, perhaps, are more to be blamed, because, in many instances, very many instances, they have not taught their children the sacredness of the marriage covenant. I want to read to you one or two things that are written in the revelations. I hope that my words will carry to those who contemplate entering into this sacred ordinance, and if they have intended to have the ceremony performed in some other way, rather than that which the Lord has indicated, that they will take heed and repent, that they may receive the blessings.

COVENANTS NOT OF GOD END WITH LIFE

I am the Lord thy God; and I give unto you this commandment—that no man shall come unto the Father but by me or by my word, which is my law, saith the Lord.

And everything that is in the world, whether it be ordained of men, by thrones, or principalities, or powers, or things of name, whatsoever they may be, that are not by me or by my word, saith the Lord, shall be thrown down, and shall not remain after men are dead, neither in nor after the resurrection, saith the Lord your God.

For whatsoever things remain are by me; and whatsoever things are not by me shall be shaken and destroyed.

I have read to you a fundamental truth, a self-evident truth. Any one, it seems to me, who believes in a Supreme Being, must acknowledge the fact that any covenant or obligation, bond, vow or performance, that is not in accord with the law which has been decreed by the Supreme Being, must of necessity come to an end. I can see no grounds for argument in regard to that. That is a fundamental truth.

The Lord continues in this revelation and says:

Therefore, if a man marry him a wife in the world, and he marry her not by me nor by my word, and he covenant with her so long as he is in the world and she with him, their covenant and marriage are not of force when they are dead, and when they are out of the world; therefore they are not bound by any law when they are out of the world.

While the Church, as well as the world, would recognize that marriage while they are in the world, yet the fact remains that when they are dead the marriage comes to an end.

Therefore when they are out of the world they neither marry nor are given in marriage; but are appointed angels in heaven; which angels are ministering servants, to minister for those who are worthy of a far more, and an exceeding and an eternal weight of glory.

I take it that this has reference to those who have been just and honest and have been willing to keep other covenants and commandments the Lord has given them. They are members of the Church, but have not been willing to enter into this great and crowning covenant, if you please, which would exalt them to be the sons and daughters of God. And therefore, as I read further:

For these angels did not abide my law; therefore, they cannot be enlarged, but remain separately and singly, without exaltation, in their saved condition, to all eternity; and from henceforth are not gods, but are angels of God forever and ever.

Forever and ever! Think of it! It fills my heart with sadness when I see in the paper the name of a daughter or a son of members of this Church, and discover that she or he is going to have a ceremony and be married outside of the Temple of the Lord, because I realize what it means, that they are cutting themselves off from exaltation in the Kingdom of God.

Now, again, the Lord continues, in this revelation, to say that if they are married by His word, then they shall pass on to the exaltation, and that exaltation is a fulness and a continuation of the seeds forever. In other words, the family organization is intact throughout all eternity, and there shall be eternal increase,—and that is the crowning glory, if you please, in the Kingdom of God.

Again:

Verily, verily, I say unto you, except ye abide my law ye cannot attain to this glory.

For strait is the gate, and narrow the way that leadeth unto the exaltation and continuation of the lives, and few there be that find it, because ye receive me not in the world, neither do ye know me.

But if ye receive me in the world, then shall ye know me, and shall receive your exaltation; that where I am ye shall be also.

This is eternal lives—to know the only wise and true God, and Jesus Christ, whom He hath sent. I am He. Receive ye, therefore, my law.

ETERNAL LIFE THROUGH KEEPING GOD'S LAWS

What do you get of that? This fact, that the marriage for eternity grants unto us the privilege of eternal lives. It does not have reference to our existence hereafter, for every man will live eternally; it is the continuation of the seeds forever, which constitutes eternal lives.

Broad is the gate, and wide the way that leadeth to the deaths; and many there are that go in thereat, because they receive me not, neither do they abide in my law.

What is meant by the expression "to the deaths"? It means to be stopped, to be shut off, to be denied the privilege of eternal increase. That is the deaths, and a great majority of mankind will go on into the eternity, to partake of the deaths, which means a stoppage, cutting off from these great blessings, which shall be bestowed upon those who are willing to keep the commandments of the Lord.

May the Lord bless the Latter-day Saints. May parents teach their children, that they may understand this thing, that they might walk in the light of the truth, and that this evil that exists among us may come to an end, and that the fathers and mothers may rejoice when their children are married by some one who can seal them for time and for all eternity.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH F. SMITH'S WORDS

President Joseph F. Smith has said—I have heard him say it to the members of his family and elsewhere—that he would rather take his children to the grave, one by one, and lay them away, knowing that they would come forth worthy to receive the fulness of the kingdom of God, than to have them marry outside of the temple of the Lord, and deny themselves these privileges.

Of course, a person who marries outside of the temple may repent, and can come to the temple and have the ceremony performed by one having authority; but how much better it is, as we have already heard, to do the thing right at first. So I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord, Amen.

ELDER JOHN H. TAYLOR

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I am very happy, my brethren and sisters, to have the opportunity of speaking to you this afternoon. Along with the other brethren, I have been very much interested in the remarks, counsel and instructions that have come to us. I trust my Heavenly Father will bless me, that I may be helpful in my remarks, so that our faith and testimony may be increased.

DREAMS AND VISIONS

In reading in the Book of Mormon my attention was attracted to the statement of Lehi, wherein he gives an account of his vision of the iron rod. I was attracted first because, in the words of Lehi, he said: "I have dreamed a dream; in other words, I have seen a vision." It occurred to me that the dreams that one has, if they are at all worth while to the individual, or to the Church, they must be associated with that other word "vision." When one has dreams, and they are of value, they must be associated with vision from God, the Eternal Father.

We do have people in our day, who are dreaming dreams, and they, in some instances, feel that they are very vital, and that they belong in some way to the revelations of the Lord. As a general rule, such dreams have to do with personal desires for things,—perhaps things they should not have. They may be caused by worry or nervousness or an unbalanced ration.

I had an uncle, who was a bachelor, and a lady came to him and said she had had a dream that she should marry him. My uncle said, "That is all right, but will you wait, please, until I have had the same dream?"

There are people who, in order to have the things that they want, assume that they are dreaming, and that these dreams are coming from God. It is only a way of disregarding the word of the Lord, and doing the things that they want to do, whether they be right or whether they be contrary to the word of the Lord.

THE TREE OF LIFE

In this dream of Lehi's he said that he saw the tree of life and that it was the most precious thing above all other things, because "it sheddeth itself abroad in the hearts of all the children of men." An angel who was standing by Nephi as he was receiving the interpretation of his father's dream said, "Yea, and the most joyous to the soul."

The love of God, in the explanation that we have in the scriptures, is the tree of life. The love of God is more precious than anything else, and we can readily judge how much we love God by the way we keep His commandments. We may say we love God, but if we haven't the strength, the faith or the courage to make sacrifices for the truth, then surely we are not loving God as we should love Him.

THE IRON ROD AND THE GREAT BUILDING SEEN BY LEHI

The other thing that attracted my attention was the rod of iron which ran along the bank of a river and led to the tree of life. In the interpretation to Nephi he was made to understand that this rod of iron was the word of God, the Eternal Father, and that many men and women, hosts of them, started on their way to reach the tree of life, that they might partake of this fruit, which was precious above all other fruits. As they came and partook of this fruit, some of them, in looking around, saw a building that seemed to be standing, as it were, in the air. There was a multitude of people in this building, and they were mocking those who had come to eat of the fruit of the tree of life. Many of these people who came and had eaten of the tree of life, because of the attitude of the people who were in this spacious building, felt ashamed of the thing that they were doing, and wandered away and were lost.

RIDICULE OFTEN THE CAUSE OF TURNING FROM THE RIGHT

So the thought has occurred to me that often we partake of the fruit of the tree of life, or we become acquainted with the love of God, and His mercies, and then we are made ashamed by the attitude of other people. I dare say that the majority of our young people who begin to smoke or to drink, do so because in some way other people have made them ashamed of the word of the Lord, as if it were something lacking in value and need not be held to. Because of the mockery and because of the words of ridicule, our young people turn away and commence to do things that other people do. Then it becomes a habit, which makes it that much harder to find their way back again to the road that will lead them to the tree of life.

We have people who fail to go into the house of the Lord because they have been made ashamed of its ordinances and ceremonies and of its requirements in the matter of dress. The argument is used that it is all absurd, that it is foolish and of no importance; therefore boys and girls and other people are made ashamed of the things that we have in the holy house of God, because they lack understanding and courage and because they have not loved God enough. They would rather have the things that seemingly are comfortable and easy for them, and which require no sacrifice. Thus they turn away from the love of God and the path of righteousness.

Awhile ago I came in contact with a man, a young fellow who, attending one of our places of learning, was told that patriarchal blessings were on the same plane as fortune telling and crystal gazing, that there was no truth back of them that would be helpful to anyone. So that young man's faith in one of the precious privileges of the Church was shattered.

May the Lord bless us and be helpful to us. May we seek after the tree of life. May we get hold of the iron rod and as we go through the destructive mists of darkness, may we hold tight to this rod and not be lost in the wilderness, and so be able to reach the tree of life, and love God as we should love Him. I humbly pray for these things. Amen.

ELDER CHARLES A. CALLIS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

The Apostle Peter said: "Jesus went about doing good." In these five words is the epitome of a divine life, spent in the service of humanity.

As I listened to the report which was read this morning, particularly that part of it which referred to the Church Welfare work, I said in my heart, "this great movement is applied religion."

MIGHTY WORKS PERFORMED BY JESUS

It is wonderful to contemplate the care and compassion that Jesus bestowed upon the unfortunate. He healed the sick, made the blind to see and the deaf to hear. He fed the hungry multitudes, "lest they faint." When He raised the little maid to life He commanded the astonished parents "that something should be given her to eat."

When He performed those mighty works in His own country the people were astounded and said: "Is not this the carpenter?" They could not comprehend that Jesus was Deity embodied in human form.

I haven't heard anyone explain the full significance of the profound truth that God Almighty trained His Only Begotten Son in a carpenter shop. The Savior was no weakling. He was a muscular workman; He stood and moved in the pride and strength of manhood when He drove the money changers from the Temple. He was also considerate and kind.

THE YOKE OF CHRIST

He said:

Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me: for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

Jesus in the carpenter shop doubtless made yokes for oxen. But the yokes He made left no sore spots. They made the burden light. The man who bears the yoke of Christ has no sore spots on him. In his heart and life there is real liberty and joy. Yes, Jesus was a carpenter and that Carpenter today is the Captain of the world's only hope.

PRACTICAL ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN

Our young men in Zion should learn handicraft trades; there are too many of them seeking white-collar jobs. If they want to "stand before kings" they should become skilful farmers, craftsmen, mechanics, and be diligent in their work.

Mr. Babson said:

W. J. Cameron, of the Ford Motor Company, told me the other day that the number of students preparing to be mechanics is only about one-seventh the number now employed as mechanics; while the number now studying for the professions is about thirteen times those engaged in the professions.

This does not look good. We should not cease to teach our young men that the mechanic as well as the farmer is necessary for the progress of the community. The world is in need of mechanics, builders, plumbers, carpenters, bricklayers. I felt disappointed in reading in a newspaper, a few days ago, the following statement:

The Ogden Air Depot at Hill Field will need 2,500 to 3,500 machinists and mechanics by the end of this year, it had been reported today by Major R. J. Minty, personnel officer.

He explained that the army hopes to fill at least the lower grade skilled jobs with Utah men, but is certain that many of the more skilled workers must come from outside the state.

I urge the young men to learn trades; to be craftsmen. Then they will be qualified to earn a comfortable living. The middle partition of the incompatibility between labor and culture should be pulled down. There should be no such partition. Labor is honorable. Let us pursue the splendid policy that will bring temporal independence to our young men and that will produce for us more builders, for our people are naturally builders. A new world is being built. Builders and mechanics are in demand. Every effort should be put forth to make our young men employable.

Boys and girls stay in the country, on the farms; do not desert them, for the land is your heritage. When the bulk of the population shifts to the cities there is danger to the nation. For the real bulwark, and the strength of the nation is in the country. President Grant remarked to me the other day that cities would perish if they were not continually nourished with the good, pure blood that comes from the country.

I know of four ranches in this State. The men who founded them were English, German, Swedish and Danish. They were solid men in the community and earned the bold independence that comes from labor. They made themselves well-to-do. But where are their descendants. Most of them wanted white-collar jobs. I have seen them punching time-clocks. They are living from hand to mouth. Strangers, not members of the Church, contented and prosperous, own and live on those ranches.

"Sweet are the uses of adversity." I believe in this too often overlooked truth. Blessings ought not to be wasted: neither should troubles. Oh, if we had had the foresight to have prepared for the defense of this country when we were in the midst of the depression! Men could then have been trained as mechanics. They could have been employed in erecting our defenses. Instead of spending the billions of dollars in ways that probably have not brought the greatest good, work could have been provided for millions of workers who would have been glad to work. There might not have been any war in Europe if this had been done.

THE LORD'S ADVICE TO RICH AND POOR

The Lord gives some advice to the laboring men, and also to the rich men. This is the Carpenter speaking, the Carpenter who was exalted to a throne to sit down on the right hand of God. He it was who was rich and became poor for our sakes. Listen to His divine admonition:

Woe unto you rich men, that will not give your substance to the poor, for your riches will canker your souls; and this shall be your lamentation in the day of visitation, and of judgment, and of indignation: The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and my soul is not saved!

I admire the great captains of industry. They have founded magnificent industries. They should be hailed as saviors of labor in the industrial world. But they should not honor and love mammon more than they love their humble brethren who are working for them.

Now, to the laboring men:

Woe unto you poor men, whose hearts are not broken, whose spirits are not contrite, and whose bellies are not satisfied, and whose hands are not stayed from laying hold upon other men's goods, whose eyes are full of greediness, and who will not labor with your own hands.

No excuse there for sit-down strikes. No encouragement for strikes which are inspired by a spirit of violence. Labor cannot do without capital. God wants both to go together peaceably. Do not blame and envy men because they are rich; do not condemn or look down upon men because they are poor.

The capitalists, the industrialists engaged in the manufacturing industry and the working men should put aside the agitators and the professional trouble-makers and meet around the conference table with their hearts permeated with the Spirit of Christ.

Then in that state of mind, misunderstandings, questions and disputes would be settled in reason and justice. Results would spring from such conferences which would make an end of useless and costly strikes. They would make for practices, conciliation, satisfactory adjustments and happiness that flow from the spirit of the Savior. Thus these outbreaks of violence, the strikes which disfigure and disrupt our industrial life would cease. I pray that the Spirit of the Lord Jesus will rest upon and abide with employer and employed alike.

GRATITUDE EXPRESSED FOR LEADERS

We thank God for President Grant. As he was talking this morning the words of the Apostle Paul came to my mind. He said: "Nevertheless, I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." We see the influence of the spirit of the Savior in the life of our beloved President. That is the reason why he is a blessing to his people.

May I add just one more word. With all my heart I endorse the statesmanlike address delivered by President Clark in this Conference. Every word of it I accept. It is a warning to this nation, a word of light uttered by a prophet-statesman.

I bear testimony to the truth of the Gospel in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER FRANK EVANSFormer President of the Eastern States Mission*

I do not know at this moment what I shall say. I have been in this congregation since the opening of the morning meeting, very much impressed and stimulated by the discourses of the brethren, but not expecting to be called upon myself.

It is a singular privilege to occupy this pulpit. When one reflects upon the history of it, and looks back over the years, when he examines the discourses that have been delivered here, he finds the high points in all the activities of our lives, from the standpoint of religion, of social science or educational principles; in fact, in all that is of importance to us. The finest doctrines known to men have gone out from this pulpit. It is not surprising, therefore, that those who are to speak approach it in a spirit of diffidence, certainly of humility, of deep concern, and of profound respect.

Going back to the records of 1869 and '70, and to the General Conference of April, 1872, I re-read oftentimes the doctrines proclaimed here by President Brigham Young. He urged the people to come together in unity and counsel in all their undertakings. He taught the doctrine of cooperation as we see it today, and even upon a broader scale, and yet it was probably from this pulpit alone that that doctrine was then being taught. He defined clearly the benefits of cooperation and the advantages that it would bring to all the people. Since that time, every State in the Union has declared in favor of the principles which he then advocated.

Today we see also the most advanced step, I believe, that has been taken in the direction of cooperation, in our Church Welfare Program. I trust that no man and no woman who, having the opportunity to engage in this work, will fail to do so. Let not your sons and daughters grow up to a realization of what is now being done in the line of social justice, welfare and service, to discover that you have not taken part in it. The day will come when men will stand here and relate with justifiable pride, what will have been accomplished in the present undertaking and the people will view it with universal approval and with a sense of deep satisfaction.

At the April Conference of 1880, President John Taylor delivered a discourse here which for fundamental righteousness cannot be excelled by any address that I have ever read. It was the Year of Jubilee. He advocated that "we do like the Ancients, and take off the yoke from those who are in debt and unable to pay, and release them from their bondage, and cause a feeling of joy and liberty to abound among the poor." The granaries were opened, and the thirty-five thousand bushels of grain that had been gathered by the women of the Relief Society were released for the benefit of the poor.

In that sermon, President Taylor said:

When the Lord is blessing us, let us bless one another. He will not let us suffer if we take care not to let one another suffer.

It will be recalled that at that time one-half of the sums due to the Perpetual Emigration Fund, amounting to more than $800,000, was turned over for the benefit of the poor—that is, these obligations were forgiven those who were unable to pay. That was, in reality, a year of jubilation.

However, the discourses of that day were not, of course, broadcast as they are today. They reached the ears of ten thousand gathered in this great auditorium and were preserved in written or printed form, but where one thousand were reached then, hundreds of thousands may hear what is being said now. The discourses of this morning, for example, were heard throughout the West and I believe it can be said that they take rank with the noblest utterances that have ever come from this pulpit.

Another thing that has been constantly taught here is the doctrine of thrift; not a thrift that is mean or low or selfish, but a thrift that calls for intelligent saving, for judicious spending, and for wise giving; a thrift that makes one able to be generous. President Grant has constantly emphasized this doctrine and in connection with it the principle of self-discipline, self-control, and avoidance of those things which are injurious to the physical being. While in years gone by these things have not been taken so seriously, today from every college, every medical institution, from all those trained in medical science, from the councils of people generally come an acceptance of these doctrines, especially so since they may now be judged by their fruits. And, above all, lessons of courage have come from this pulpit, both by word and by example—the courage of one's convictions such as our leaders exhibited in years gone by, and such as they exemplify today.

As I was recently leaving the Mission office in New York, for a trip into the field, I passed through an electric gateway at the railway station. As I approached the gate leading to the train, it opened mysteriously before me, and to my mind came the question, "What hand opened that gate for me?" The obvious answer seemed to be: "No hand at all. You simply intercepted the electric current and the power did the rest." But that was not the answer. Many hands and many minds, working over many years, opened that gate for me, and tens of thousands of men, women and children have availed themselves of that convenience which science had given unto us. I thought of the Faradays and of the Edisons and their kind and of how they had been taunted and even ridiculed, as they worked their way upward to bring a blessing to mankind. Courage kept them at their task. But more than all, I thought of the leaders of that Mission in the early days—of Wilford Woodruff, of John Taylor, of Parley P. Pratt and Orson Pratt, and such men as they. They also pointed out a gate which opened to tens of thousands of men and women and children,—a strait gate and a narrow way, one that leads to Life. That is the Way with which we are most concerned. These men, too, were taunted, were ridiculed and even persecuted, but they were never dismayed. They were men of fortitude and of unflinching courage. They were convinced of the rectitude of that for which they stood. They were converted to the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and there was no compromise in their souls or in their minds.

These are the lessons which have been taught from this pulpit during all the years of its history. May we appreciate its importance, its deep significance. May we not fail in our integrity, in our courage, in our devotion to the work of the Lord, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

An anthem, "Be Thou Faithful"—Engel—was sung by the Choir.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

We thank the Choir for the beautiful songs which they have sung to us today. We always know when we have the Brigham Young University Chorus that we will have good music.

I again urge that as you leave here to drive to your homes, you drive carefully, and I ask the pedestrians to walk sensibly as they cross the roads.

The benediction was pronounced by Elder Richard C. May, President of the Minidoka Stake.

Conference adjourned until 10 a. m., Saturday, April 5.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

Conference reconvened Saturday morning, April 5, at 10 o'clock.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

The moment has arrived for opening the third session of this Conference. We are indeed grateful again this morning, notwithstanding the inclement weather, that President Grant is with us and is presiding. He has asked President Clark to conduct the services.

Through the courtesy of Radio Station KSL and of the other Radio Stations cooperating the meetings of this Conference are being broadcast over KFXD at Nampa; KSEI at Pocatello; KTFI at Twin Falls; KID at Idaho Falls; KSUB at Cedar City; and KEUB at Price.

The Presidents of Stakes in these localities are arranging meetings in various of their Ward meeting houses where Ward and Stake congregations can hear the Conference. A direct wire from the Tabernacle to the Los Angeles Stake Tabernacle in Los Angeles, California, will bring the services to that area.

We were advised last evening that the reception was very good in all these areas, and that people were coming together and enjoying the services.

There are present on the stand this morning President Grant and his two Counselors, the eleven Apostles, all of the First Seven Presidents of Seventies, and all of the Presiding Bishopric.

The music today will be furnished by the Blackfoot Stake Choir, Elder Ronald Bitton, Director, Elder Frank W. Asper, Organist.

The congregation and the Blackfoot Stake Choir sang the hymn, "Do What is Right."

Elder Wilford W. Warnick, President of the Timpanogos Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The Choir sang "Lift Up Your Heads"—Taylor.

ELDER JOSEPH F. MERRILL

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Revelation is the rock upon which the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is built. It is the basis of Mormonism—the restored Gospel of Jesus Christ in its fulness. Using the term revelation in a broad sense, it is the means the Lord has always employed to acquaint His children with the plan of salvation, with a knowledge of His existence and of our relationship to Him. We believe the Bible and other scriptures are divinely inspired writings.

JOSEPH SMITH, HEAVEN-TAUGHT

The Prophet Joseph Smith was wonderfully favored by the Lord in the matter of revelation. So far as the records show, it began in what was the most marvelous vision ever given to mortal man. The Father and the Son not only showed themselves to Joseph but actually talked to him. In addition to these personages a number of others of the greatest personages in heaven also appeared and talked to him—Moses, Elias, Elijah, John the Baptist, the Apostles Peter, James and John, and the prophet Moroni—an imposing list of immortals. Thus to a remarkable degree Joseph Smith was heaven-taught by word of mouth as well as by inspiration of the Holy Ghost. We are entirely correct, therefore, when we say that divine revelation is basic to the organization and continued existence of this Church.

REVELATION—FOR THE CHURCH AND FOR INDIVIDUALS

Without revelations other than the inspired teachings of the Bible this Church could never have been organized. There would have been no need for it, because it could not have been essentially different from existing churches. It would have had no more light than they have—no fuller truth to impart.

Revelation is needed not only to guide the organization and teachings of the Church, but also to enable the members to function acceptably in their respective duties. One thing that is characteristic of the Latter-day Saints is their assurance that God lives, that this is His accepted Church and that He helps His children according to their worthiness and needs. Experience has taught them the validity of certain scriptural teachings relative to the individual receiving divine revelations.

We remember what Jesus said to Peter when He asked His disciples "Whom say ye that I am?" The answer came quickly from Peter,

Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father, which is in heaven. (Matt. 16:15-17.)

This indicates that Peter received his knowledge through divine revelation.

THE PRAYER OF FAITH ANSWERED

Joseph Smith's boyhood experience in this matter has been published world-wide. The lad most earnestly wanted to know which church to join. He decided to ask the Lord, for he read in the writings of the Apostle James the following:

If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.

However, James gave a caution in these words:

But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed. For let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the Lord. (James 1:5-7.)

This biblical passage heartened the boy and he went into the nearby woods to pray. The sequel was the most marvelous vision ever given to mortal man. The Father and the Son appeared to Joseph in a column of transcendent light. He not only saw them, he heard their voices, for they spoke to him. He learned the truth that God hears and answers prayers.

Many Latter-day Saints can and do bear witness to the truth of another saying of Jesus recorded by the Apostle John and stated in these words:

If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself. (John 7:17.)

This of course indicates that revelation is the means of getting this knowledge.

I give another scriptural reference on this point. It is clearly and explicitly written and is found in the Book of Mormon, recorded in the tenth chapter of Moroni and is as follows:

And when ye shall receive these things, [those written in the Book of Mormon] I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost. And by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things. (Moroni 10:4-5.)

REVELATION FROM TWO SOURCES

I call attention to this principle of revelation, not that all Latter-day Saints do not accept it, but to point out that there are certain dangers regarding it about which a few of our people seemingly need to be warned. The kind of revelation of which I have spoken is divine revelation. I know of no dangers associated with this kind of revelation. Its source is heaven and most commonly is a manifestation of the power of the Holy Ghost. But using the term in its broadest sense it will include the whisperings that come from evil sources through the power of Satan.

According to our teachings, Satan and an army of supporters were cast down to earth from the premortal spirit world. They are spirit brothers of ours, and are real persons having spirit bodies. As surely as we live they live also. They are trying to handicap and thwart the work of the Lord. Wherever the Saints are found there the devil is also. If Satan can overcome the Saints, he will have all the world subject to him. He is a deceiver, the father of lies, the source of evil, the enemy of all righteousness.

He has great power in the earth. He has deceived, and is deceiving, some people who have been and may now be members of the Church, but members in grave danger. One of his schemes is to give them a type of revelation, inducing them to believe that these come from heaven instead of from the devil. It is these people that are in urgent need of a warning.

In writing to the Corinthians the Apostle Paul speaks of those opposing his labors as:

.....false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works. (II Cor. 11:13-15.)

Do you notice the similarity in method used in Paul's day and in this day by emissaries of Satan?

In Matthew, Chapter 24, Jesus in speaking of the signs and conditions preceding His second coming is reported as saying:

There shall arise false Christs, and false prophets and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. (Matt. 24:24.)

FALSE PROPHETS TODAY

Do you know of any false prophets among us in these days—those misguided, lying, deceitful workers who claim to be the recipients of divine revelation? In the 7th Chapter of Matthew Jesus is again reported as saying:

By their fruits ye shall know them. Not everyone that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity. (Matt. 7:20-23.)

There are many scriptural references, particularly in the Doctrine and Covenants, that might be given of the deceiving power of Satan. One found in the Book of Mormon bears directly upon the point I have in mind. It is found in the 30th Chapter of Alma. Korihor, an anti-Christ, was arrested and brought before Alma, the governor and chief judge, for teaching infidelity and leading the people into wickedness. Before the judge Korihor refused to desist from his position and demanded from Alma a sign that there is a God. When struck dumb Korihor wrote:

The devil hath deceived me; for he appeared unto me in the form of an angel, and said unto me: Go and reclaim this people, for they have all gone astray after an unknown God.... And he taught me that which I should say, and I have taught his words.... (Alma 30:53.)

Are all of us not acquainted with instances essentially like the one Alma relates of Korihor?

THE DECEIVED

Occasionally there comes to my office and presumably to other offices in the building, an individual who claims he has a divine message for the Church or for President Grant. Of course, we give no credence to their claims. But I refer to their claims in illustration of the statement that our belief in modern revelation may be the means of leading away some of the people unless they are on their guard. Perhaps at no time in history did Satan have power as great as he has today. There was no time in the past when so many people believed in revelation as today. Satan tempts us where we are most vulnerable. He misleads a few into believing that the promptings that come from him are divine revelations. These false prophets in turn are seemingly so devout, so humble, so earnest and sincere that they, with Satan's help, are able to deceive and mislead many others—only those, however, who profess a belief in modern revelation. Thus heresies spring up, faith in our leaders is destroyed and the devil laughs because of his successes. The foolish who have been blinded have been led to believe that they are serving the cause of the Master when the fact is they are dupes of the devil. I speak plainly to avoid being misunderstood.

There are adulterous men going about lying to and trying to deceive people into believing that the President and leaders of the Church have lost the spirit of their callings and have repudiated some Gospel principles. This is one of the ways in which the devil is working.

INDIVIDUAL GUIDANCE

We believe that an individual is entitled to divine guidance in his personal and material affairs. President Joseph F. Smith was reported in a Conference sermon as saying the following:

Every man has the privilege to exercise these gifts (of revelation) in the conduct of his own affairs.... in the management of his farm, his flocks, his herds and in the management of his business.

I was once reliably told that President Wilford Woodruff advised going ahead with building the Lehi sugar factory, even though a committee of business men had reported and decided against its feasibility. President Woodruff knew the project would be successful because the Lord had so indicated. But Satan has deceived many Church members by his devilish manifestations in matters of material projects. I called attention to one of those in a recent stake conference. No loyal Church member can logically expect a project to prosper when it has been disapproved by two presidents of the Church.

THE WORTHY MAY DETECT EVIL

Yes, the devil is among the Saints. Let them beware. He uses various means and methods—those that are found to be most effective, depending on many pertinent factors. He catches often those who are off their guard. None of us is secure from his wiles. To be as secure as may be we must have the help of the Lord. This is available if we worthily seek it. Every one in the Church must have it if he does well the work authoritatively assigned him to do. But no officer, no missionary can fully enjoy the work of his calling in the Church without the spirit thereof, which is given through the Holy Ghost.

Brethren and sisters, let us not be deceived. There are many agents of Satan abroad in the land and some of them may be self-deceived, not knowing that they are in the power of the evil one. However, the spirit of the devil among this people may be detected by all honest, sincere members who keep the commandments of the Lord. The spirit of the Lord is comforting, joy-producing, love-inspiring, help-giving. The spirit of the devil is manifested in fault-finding, envy, selfishness, hatred, deceit, dishonesty, and produces misery, sin and crime.

GUIDANCE THROUGH PRAYER

Do the people of the Church want a safe guide to what is well for them to do? It is this: Keep in harmony with the Presidency of this Church. Accept and follow the teachings and advice of the President. At every Conference we raise our hands to sustain the President as prophet, seer and revelator. Is it consistent to do this and then go contrary to his advice? Is anyone so simple as to believe he is serving the Lord when he opposes the President? Of course, the President is not infallible. He makes no claims to infallibility. But when in his official capacity he teaches and advises the members of the Church relative to their duties, let no man who wants to please the Lord say aught against the counsels of the President.

In the spirit of helpfulness let me give you a key. When in doubt go on your knees in humility with an open mind and a pure heart with a real desire to do the Lord's will, and pray earnestly and sincerely for divine guidance. Persist in praying in this way until you get an answer that fills your bosom with joy and satisfaction. It will be God's answer. If obedient to this answer you will always act as the President indicates. You will then be safe. God help us all to act wisely I pray in Christ's name.

ELDER RICHARD L. EVANSOf the First Council of the Seventy*

As always, I declare my dependence upon the Spirit that motivates all of these proceedings.

THE FUTURE AS IT AFFECTS YOUTH

I was happy yesterday to hear President Grant and President Clark address part of their remarks to the young men of my generation who face a breaking up of the pattern of their lives by those events which we now face, and I was happy to hear them remembered, in the opening prayer this morning. We have lived to see the day when the best laid plans of men have gone wrong, and these young men are facing the postponement or abandonment of many of their ambitions and most cherished dreams and plans for their own futures. And as the young men are affected, so are the young women. We sympathize with them greatly.

I met with such a group a week ago today, a group of M Men, and I felt them reaching for a message on this subject. I should like to have the ability briefly to deliver that message to them.

I think it shouldn't be a time for too much pessimism and discouragement, in spite of all the uncertainties. I think we should remind ourselves of the fact that there has always been uncertainty. No one ever lived in a static society. No one has ever had fixed guarantees that his way of life would not be interrupted, and I am sure that it is not a time for disrupting our plans. The time for preparation in the lives of our young men is altogether too short, and I feel in my heart that they should go forward with whatever they have in mind, and let interruption overtake them when and how it will.

It certainly is not a time for living from hand to mouth. It is a time for laying broader foundations than ever before, because no matter what kind of world we find ourselves living in tomorrow, the best qualified men will always be in demand, and whether we are living here or not, we shall be living somewhere, and those intangible things that we acquire we shall take with us wherever we go.

THE CALL TO ARMS

Some of our young men, and some of our mothers who are called upon to send them forth into service, wonder why they have to go. There have been some who have urged the Church and its members to declare themselves conscientious objectors. There may be some merits in this position. Perhaps we should reserve the right so to declare ourselves at some future time. I can think of possibilities and circumstances arising under which there could conceivably come some times and conditions for which we might want to reserve that right. But there are two sides to the question. Traditionally this has not been our position. In the century of our existence there is no people of like numbers that I know of anywhere in the world who have a better record for giving service when the call has come than this people.

No matter how ardently we may agree or disagree with those policies which have been and are being pursued in this regard, we are committed as a people to loyalty to constituted authority. That is true of our people in all the world, no matter what nation they may live in.

There may be another reason why our young men should respond to this call. Many people, and we are among them I am sure, bitterly regret the fact that when war comes it takes the cream of our manhood, it does not take the physically or the mentally unfit. It takes those who are best capable of rendering service, and we regret this fact most gravely.

But there is another side, and I would like to quote a paragraph from one of our nationally known commentators and columnists which appeared in the press a short time ago. Speaking of all our defense preparations and the creation of materials for defense, he stated that it also should be remembered that these things can be used against us by an inside enemy just as easily as we can use them against an outside foe. This means a character-building campaign should be a definite part of our defense program. Now, more than ever before in the history of warfare, it is vital that the people of the strongest character should furnish the men who are to be trained for this new and all-important branch of our national defense. Let religious and civic leaders who are serious in their prayers re-read this last sentence.

I am sure that you and I, since an army appears to be a necessary evil—it has always been so far as history tells us anything, in ancient Israel, in Book of Mormon times, and down to the present—since it appears to be a necessary evil under the conditions in which we live, I am sure that you and I would not care to have an army in our midst made up of the worst elements of our society. And I am sure that our young men who remember who they are and what they are can be a leaven and a wholesome influence in this service into which they go. This applies of course only to those who keep in mind their principles and their ideals and who always conduct themselves in accordance therewith.

A LESSON FROM THE LIFE OF JACOB

I am reminded of the story of Jacob in the Old Testament, in Genesis, when he was traveling in a strange land. Up to that time he had had limited experience and had been held close to home ties. But in this strange place he awoke one night after a dream and said, "Surely the Lord is in this place; and I knew it not." (Genesis 28:16) I would like our young men to remember that wherever they are, God is in that place and they must take Him into their confidence and conduct themselves in His ways.

We cannot departmentalize the eternal record of our lives. It is one continued story. As Latter-day Saints we don't behave one way in the army and one way in business and another in Church. That is, not if we give heed to our principles. We do not behave one way at home and another way away from home. Wherever we are, remember that God is in this place also, and when the final record is written and read, all that we have done and thought, at home and abroad, in all the occupations and in all the pursuits that we may be called upon to undertake, is all a part of the eternal record of all of us, and it stands unalterably for us or against us.

PREPARATION FOR LIFE SHOULD GO FORWARD

And to those young people who are inclined to be discouraged by the course of events, those who are oppressed with the spirit of "What's the use?" we say to them, there will always be a future. Again quoting from Genesis a passage that is a comforting assurance: "While the earth remaineth, seed-time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease." (Genesis 8:22.) And we must not cease in our preparations or in our living of life to the fullest that we are able to do it in accordance with the conditions and opportunities of our own generation. If we make the best of all our circumstances of our own generation and time the Lord will ask no more of us.

Life is not very long, I think. In the normal course of events mine is now half over, and I feel that I have scarcely put my foot in the door. I am sure that it isn't long enough to gamble any of the values of eternity against the values of time. And this thought recalls one of the most impressive passages from the Doctrine and Covenants, in which the Lord spoke to the Prophet Joseph Smith in one of his hours of deepest despair:

My son, peace be unto thy soul; thine adversity and thine afflictions shall be but a small moment; and then, if thou endure it well, God shall exalt thee on high; thou shalt triumph over all thy foes. (Doctrine and Covenants 121:7, 8.)

And so I say to these young men of my generation: Go forth and live your lives in all of the fulness that is possible for you, and remember who you are and what you are, whether you are at home or abroad, in the army or out of it, and the Lord will bless you and prosper you and comfort you and reward you, and bring good out of all the circumstances of your lives.

I leave you my testimony that I know that God lives; that Jesus is the Christ; that Joseph Smith and all of his successors have been prophets of God, and I do it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER RUFUS K. HARDY

Of the First Council of the Seventy

From "away down under" there is this that is said by that people: "A rain drop above and a chrysalis beneath,"—their way of stating that God's beneficent kindness produces a beautiful race of human creatures. I think if that great race of lovely and intelligent people could have the privilege of seeing this gathering, they would know that what their forefathers and immediate ancestors declared to them is absolutely true.

CONFERENCE GATHERINGS IN THE TABERNACLE

We come here twice each year, in April and in October, and have been doing so since 1867, the year this Tabernacle was dedicated, and each Conference since has been fraught with the splendid advice, the wonderful counsel, and the lovely and beautiful testimonies which have been borne here in the past and given to us already in this great April gathering of 1941. We have had one hundred and forty-eight Conferences in this building since we started to hold Conferences here, and I think if there were gathered together that which has been expounded from this pulpit, the world would be greatly enriched as it never has been before, and we would know and understand better that which God desires us to understand, and feel assured of our future safety and of our daily and present actions.

PREPARATIONS FOR WAR

I am prompted somewhat along the line on which Brother Evans has just been speaking, for I have met with many mothers of boys who have been called away, and in my weak way I have tried to comfort them, and I fear all too hopelessly and inadequately.

You know that in this old world and earth of ours today, mankind are running to and fro like ants whose hives have been disturbed, whose homes have been uprooted; and that over the great expanse of the oceans these monstrous steel vessels are zigzagging the lanes of travel, bearing their precious burdens, while underneath dives the submarine to lurk beneath the waves and wait to destroy the floating vessels. Over and above all come the hissing sound and the roar of the bombing planes, which spread destruction and bring to us such fear.

There is, however, a thought which comes in connection with this, and that is this: that in China and Japan, in Italy, in England, in Germany, in Norway, in Rumania, in almost every spot of the earth men are preparing for that which Satan himself desires. He, if possible, would have his own way, and that is the death of mankind. Away down underneath us, in those beautiful jewel-like islands of the Pacific, even in them, men are dressing and robing themselves in the attire of the soldier, and the accouterments of war are being gathered by them. Their faces are stern; smiles have left their countenances, unless it is the smirk; and their hearts are as lead. The cries of their women-folk go up to heaven for the assuaging of their sorrows and the bringing of relief from that which they face.

PROPHECIES OF WARNING AND OF COMFORT

God has said some things in prophecies concerning this. All this evil is done in order that some may acquire that which they do not possess or rightfully claim. To each and every child born upon this earth God gave a portion of it. It has been bestowed upon him by right of heirship from Adam, and even before this earth was formed, the Lord said:

We will go down, for there is space there, and we will take of these materials, and we will make an earth whereon these may dwell; and we will prove them herewith, to see if they will do all things whatsoever the Lord their God shall command them.

Now, out of all this greed and lust for power comes, as I say, this terrible confusion. I am impressed more each day with the fact that God is my refuge.

We, the people of this Church—and I say this not in any way of arrogance, no, but from my youth and from my earliest recollections there has come ringing down to me, through the various voices of the Presidents of this Church whom I have known, this great cry—and I believe that you and I, we all of us have answered it; it is significant that from almost every nation of this earth there are people here assembled who have answered this cry:

Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.

So that, so far as we are concerned, unquestionably we have complied with and listened to the wisdom that is from above, for "the hearing ear and the seeing eye, God hath made them both."

And then declares Isaiah this:

He that walketh righteously and speaketh uprightly; he that despiseth the gain of oppressions, that shaketh his hands from holding of bribes, that stoppeth his ears from hearing of blood, and shutteth his eyes from seeing evil;

He shall dwell on high; his place of defense shall be the munitions of rocks; bread shall be given him; his waters shall be sure.

THE PROMISES OF THE LORD SURE OF FULFILMENT

God is not unmindful of His children. God will do that which in His own way He has seen from the beginning, that which is today and that which has come before, that which He directs and continues to control, as surely as we live upon this earth.

There is a promise, and that promise has been repeated and reiterated from this stand hundreds of times. I would like all the Saints to remember that promise. It is this:

And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it.

And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

So I say, let all of us draw in from our wanderings and distress of mind, and rely upon God and what He has promised. Surely there shall come to us comfort and there should come to us a greater knowledge than to any other people upon this earth, that if we do that which we profess, God is with us, His people, and all others that obey Him, and that all is right in the heavens above and on the earth beneath.

THE STAKE MISSIONARY WORK

We are doing not only all that we can do for our own beloved land, as a nation, but we are doing for those who dwell in our immediate vicinity that which God commanded us to do. Our missionaries are scattering abroad the truths which they have received. It was my pleasure to tell you, a year ago, that during the year 1939 the Stake missionaries had performed 2,220 baptisms; and again I say to you that last year, in 1940, the same missionary group of splendid men and women brought into this Church 2,203 converts.

This work goes on apace, and God is calling more unto the fold each day and doing more for them and for our communities as a whole. With cheerful hearts these missionaries have gone out and performed this labor of love with the help and assistance of the splendid Stake presidencies which we have in the Church. So I say, with grateful hearts let us give unto God the honor and the glory and the praise.

Above everything else may we have that sweet assurance which He has given through His servants to us, from this stand, and from His servant, Joseph Smith, and all the revelations of scripture which have been given to us, that we shall, through obedience to the laws and ordinances of this Gospel, not be destroyed but ultimately gain salvation and our reward. I ask that in Jesus' name, Amen.

The Blackfoot Stake Choir sang an anthem, "Jesu, Priceless Treasure"—Bach.

ELDER MARVIN O. ASHTON

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

Some of you wonder why some of us who have the responsibility which is mine at this particular moment frequently ask for guidance from above. If some of you had this responsibility I believe you would be asking for the same help.

It has just been my pleasure to make a visit to the Hawaiian Islands. I am sure those who have been to this beautiful country will not be at all surprised if, in the few weak words I may say on this particular occasion I refer to these islands and those wonderful people.

A LESSON DRAWN FROM FISHING IN HAWAII

In speaking of guidance from above, I am reminded that some of us take ourselves very seriously, in fact too seriously, sometimes. If we would continually seek for guidance from above, we would all be better off. In the Hawaiian Islands, they catch fish in different ways. One of the parts played in the most popular way of fishing is to have one of the natives go to a precipice or high mountain overlooking the bay, or the place where they fish, and he, from that particular viewpoint, directs the fishing. By the way, as you go over the islands in an airplane and you look down in the water, you find it as clear as crystal. You can see the coral below. Of course, he can see the schools of fish as they move about. This man on the heights scans the water below, locates the school of fish, signals to the natives below. They go out sometimes with a mile of net and corral, if you please, the fish, and, of course, all is accomplished by this continual signalling back and forth. Without this guidance from above the fishermen would make many a false move. Much of his work would be guesswork, there would be much lost motion because of a lack of vision.

That little story of fishing has meant much to me. We can't get very far unless we have communication from above. There must be signalling going on between us on earth and One on high. We are sometimes so close to the forest we don't see the trees. Sometimes if the source of our guidance were farther away, we would see more clearly. Our work would be easier and our catch greater if we had communication from above.

EXPERIENCE BROADENED BY PERSPECTIVE

This trip to Hawaii and our contact with this new people reminded me of the story of a little bird. I think the story was in an old reader. The bird first lived in a pale blue shell and it thought the whole world was pale blue. Its next experience was a nest, and it thought the whole world was feathers and sticks. Its next vision was from the top of the nest. After the mother and father had crowded it out, it thought the whole world was green leaves. One day, in the course of the education by the parents, the children were pushed out of the tree and they found a big world before them. Sometimes I think we are like the little bird. Our thinking apparatus, if you please, works, depending on what our experience is. We sometimes think the whole world is a pale blue shell because our experience is so limited. Our gauge is broadened by the experience we get when we get out of that tree. We have a better perspective of things.

These Hawaiian people—I have had some thrilling moments in my life. I often think back on those things in my life that have been thrilling moments. I want to say very frankly and clearly here that never have I been thrilled more than in the contact with those people. Sometimes we get a notion that all the virtues belong to the white race. We will change our minds some day.

A TRIBUTE TO THE PEOPLE IN HAWAII

Speaking of the Hawaiian Mission under Brother Cox and the Japanese Mission under Jay Jensen, those men are doing a wonderful piece of work. As I have said, I have had a lot of thrills, but I have never been thrilled more than two weeks ago today, at the Fast Meeting of those Japanese people. Boys and girls from fifteen up, two at a time, crowded to the front to bear their testimonies. Those people are wonderful people. Those Chinese people, the Japanese, the Hawaiians, and what not, some of those dark-skinned people have the best blood flowing through their veins of any people that the Lord ever created. Some time we will find it out.

They sing because they have to. It is spontaneous combustion, if you please. They love because they must love. They put a lei around your neck. Love prompts it and in their bestowing the lei they expect only love in return. It gives you a sweat bath by the time they get you decorated the way they do; but better than a sweat bath around your neck is the warmth that comes to your heart. You can't get away from it. There you find nature in the rough, if you please, but not very great emphasis on the "rough." There were some of the highest class, best educated people that I have ever met among those people; they are cultured and refined.

I want to state here that if you ever have had in your philosophy: "God bless me and my wife, and our son John and his wife, us four and no more"—if you have got that in your system, take a trip to the Islands. It will do you a wonderful lot of good. Hawaii is the gateway to the Pacific, the gateway to the Orient. Millions and millions of people, the best people in the world are there.

I sometimes believe in order that our thinking be straight and our conduct right that we have to go up-stream once in a while to the source of the fountain—go back to Christ. What is the Gospel? Do we pervert it sometimes? Do we adulterate it? Do we get away from the original article? My experience with those people taught me that they have a wholesomeness, a piece of that original Gospel spirit that we shouldn't get away from. Sometimes we do pervert it; we change it. With all of our civilization and the advantages that come with it, our thinking is corrupted. We so change the original article that the one looking for the real thing can't recognize the substitute.

I heard this story the other day. It did me good. An antique worshipper—you have them all through this country; some of your wives are antique worshippers. (Laughter.) Maybe I didn't mean that, just the way that you took it. If you think I meant some of your husbands, well, let it go. This antique worshipper was going about in Virginia. He came to a farm where they were doing some advertising of antiques. His eye spied an old man out in the yard chopping wood. In his scrutinizing this thing and that, he went up to the man and the conversation was about as follows: "How do you do?" He said: "It looks like an old axe that you are using." The old man stopped. Said he: "Yes, they have said that this is an axe that George Washington used to use." Of course, the eyes of the antique lover bulged. Exclaimed he, "My dear man, if that is the axe George Washington used, I would give you a right good price for it." The old man grinned. "The only trouble is, if this was the axe that George Washington used, I know this is the third head it has had and the fifth handle."

In the spirit we do things and in our interpretation of the Gospel, that is exactly what we are doing. We have changed the head several times and what we are chopping with has had thrust into it the fifth handle. We have to go back up-stream sometimes to see what the real spirit of the Gospel really is. In those islands you find it. I want to say that.

THE MENACE OF INTOXICANTS

Just one more word in closing: In my observation, in going to and fro, including life on the boat, including conduct going to restaurants, it is my judgment that America never was going at such a pace as she is going right now in this liquor business. We are going fast and furious. It will take stamina of steel to stem the tide. I never was more impressed in my life. We are going drink crazy. The example we are setting the youth is criminal.

We members of the Bishopric are to be forgiven if we continually hammer on this youth question. Speaking again of the youth, I saw a sight that impressed me much. Will you please let me tell you about it? A good bishop was taking me on an inspection trip about the island. In the course of our travels he said, "I want to show you something. You probably haven't seen anything like this before." He was right—I had not. All over the islands everywhere were cocoanut trees. Everywhere they stood erect with their fruit to the sun. They were in most everyone's yard and on many of the highways. He repeated, "I want to show you something." He took me to a yard and there on the ground crawling as it were, like a great 50-foot python snake was a cocoanut tree. It did everything but cut the figure 8 in sprawling and looping the loop. Instead of keeping its head up and majestically filling its destiny in the world, that ten inch monster was crawling in the dust.

I thought to myself: Well, there is the way some of our youth are brought up. Somebody, when that plant was just taking root, gave it a kick. Even then, when yet tender if someone had only given it a kind touch, it would have gone straight. Instead of the tree facing the sun, its fruit toward the sun, there it was sprawled on the ground—too late, the day of correction past.

That is our great problem. It is going to take courage to stem the tide. The enemy are the millions. I often think of that story of the Greek at Thermopylae. When he was told that the arrows of the Persians darkened the sun, he said, "So much the better. We will fight in the shade." Yes, in this fight against this demon, liquor, we'll have to fight in the shade. Let's put on our shield and may we fight on with the same undaunted valor of the Greek youth, whose mother buckled on his shield and said, "Come with it or on it."

May the Lord bless us with courage—if we ever needed it, it is today. Amen.

ELDER JOSEPH L. WIRTHLIN

Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

I sincerely trust, my brethren and sisters, that I shall enjoy a portion of the Spirit of the Lord in the attempt to address you this morning.

THE TEACHINGS OF A GOOD MOTHER

I am ever grateful to an angel mother for the many lessons she taught me with respect to the Gospel of Jesus Christ and the inspired leadership that stands at the head of this Church. I distinctly recall how she took me, as a small child, to her knee and impressed upon me the fact that Joseph Smith was a prophet; and furthermore, she impressed me with her burning testimony that the present leadership of this Church, and for all time, is and would be inspired men of God.

THE LEADERS OF THE CHURCH SERVANTS OF GOD

I am now grateful that I can testify to you that this great organization is being directed by our Heavenly Father through the instrumentality of prophets and apostles of the Lord Jesus Christ. Those of us who listened to President Grant yesterday, had in our hearts a burning feeling that he is, indeed, a prophet of the Lord, that there rests upon him the same mantle of authority that Joseph Smith and Brigham Young enjoyed, and all other Presidents of the Church who have succeeded them as the Lord's mouthpiece here upon earth.

It is a most wonderful privilege to covenant with the Lord periodically that we will sustain these brethren as servants of God and obey the counsel they impart to us. In following their counsel and advice, we will always be found doing those things which will be for our ultimate good and benefit.

OBEDIENCE A SAVING PRINCIPLE

There is one lesson the world needs to learn, namely, the lesson of obedience. Had the children of men been obedient to the commandments of the Lord, the terrible catastrophe that is now taking place in Europe could have been prevented. But through disobedience and the fact that men have forgotten the Lord and what He expects of them, calamity and ruin have come upon the nations.

I would that all of us could learn and understand the principle of obedience as Adam learned and understood it. He was commanded to build altars upon which to offer sacrifices. And upon one occasion, after having complied with this commandment, an angel of the Lord appeared to him and asked him the question:

Why dost thou offer sacrifices unto the Lord? And Adam said unto him: I know not, save the Lord commanded me.

And then the angel spake, saying: This thing is a similitude of the sacrifice of the Only Begotten of the Father, which is full of grace and truth. (Moses 5:6-7.)

In Adam's mind there was no question why he should render obedience, for he knew that whatever the Lord commanded him to do would be for his good and benefit.

It is interesting to note that after Adam had fulfilled the commandment of offering up sacrifices, the Lord rewarded him with a visitation from a divine being, imparting to Adam the knowledge why he was to offer sacrifices. And this applies to each and everyone of us when obeying the commandments of the Gospel. We may not understand them fully; but through obedience, the Lord will reveal to us the reason and the knowledge which will give us a full, clear comprehension of the law or the commandment involved.

This point of obedience without a complete understanding is defined so beautifully by Montaigne. He declared:

The first law that ever God gave to man was a law of pure obedience. It was a commandment, naked and simple, wherein man had nothing to inquire about, after, or dispute for inasmuch as to obey is the proper office of a rational soul, acknowledging a heavenly, superior benefactor, from obedience and submission spring all victory, as all sin does from selfish opinion.

Carlyle declared, too:

Obedience is our uniform duty and destiny, wherein whoso will not bend must break.

The Lord through the Prophet Joseph Smith has plainly indicated that the achievement of any blessing is predicated upon obedience. In the 130th Section of the Doctrine and Covenants, we read:

And if a person gains more knowledge and intelligence in this life through his diligence and obedience than another, he will have so much the advantage in the world to come.

There is a law, irrevocably decreed in heaven before the foundations of this world, upon which all blessings are predicated—

And when we obtain any blessing from God, it is by obedience to that law upon which it is predicated. (D. & C. 130:19-21.)

Success, spiritually and temporally, will only be achieved to the degree that the laws involved are obeyed. The highest degree of success is accomplished by rendering the fullest degree of obedience to the fundamentals and the principles of the Gospel of Jesus Christ; and the same is true in any line of endeavor that we may choose to follow.

DISOBEDIENCE BRINGS ITS OWN PUNISHMENT

Disobedience represents that which is negative. It had its inception in the great council of heaven where one of the sons of God took a negative attitude and stand toward the Lord. Consequently, disobedience leads men away from the Lord and places them in the paths of sin, degradation, and failure. Brother Merrill indicated to us this morning that we should harken unto the affirmative spirit, that spirit being best expressed in obedience to the mind and will of our Heavenly Father.

The Prophet Jeremiah pointed out in unmistakable terms that in disobedience the people brought upon them their own punishment. He declared:

Thine own wickedness shall correct thee, and thy backslidings shall reprove thee: know therefore and see that it is an evil thing and bitter, that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, and that my fear is not in thee, saith the Lord God of hosts. (Jeremiah 2:19.)

This ancient prophet points out plainly that in disobedience the children of men always find a penalty involved, just as much so as there is a reward for rendering obedience to the Lord. The Lord, too, has declared:

And my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer. (D. & C. 105:6.)

Brigham Young declared:

Anything that is impure must sooner or later perish, no matter whether it is in the faith and practice of the individual, town, nation, or government. That kingdom, principality, power, or person that is not controlled by principles that are pure and holy must eventually pass away and perish.

Disobedience begets that which is impure and the penalty involved is that of destruction.

The children of Israel were a chastened people, The Lord harkened unto their cries for deliverance from bondage, and under the leadership of the Prophet Moses, led them out of Egypt across the Red Sea, and into the wilderness. They became disobedient. Unholy practices sprang up among them. They forgot God. They worshiped the golden calf. The penalty for this disobedience was one which forced them to wander for 40 long years in the wilderness before they finally understood the lesson of obedience.

OBEDIENCE SHOWN BY EARLY LATTER-DAY SAINT PIONEERS

Our pioneer fathers and mothers came into this valley, conquered the elements, and subdued the soil, achieving the highest place among American pioneers because they harkened unto the will and the mind of the Lord, made manifest through His servants, the prophets.

Brigham Young said:

The Latter-day Saints, in all their travels, have not been as rebellious as the children of Israel were.

One of the most interesting and intriguing bits of Mormon history is that which had to do with the group of pioneers who made the long, weary trek from the Missouri River to these mountains. Shortly thereafter many of them were called to settle the San Bernardino Valley in southern California. The terrain from the Salt Lake Valley to the San Bernardino Valley is one of waste and desert, particularly the great Mojave Desert. But they were under mandate to make the journey, and obeyed accordingly. This band of devoted Latter-day Saints remained in the San Bernardino district for six years. A large portion of the original purchase of 35,000 acres of land was cultivated, schools were established, store buildings and churches were erected, a flour mill and saw mills were placed in operation; and this area became a thriving, prosperous community.

The New York Herald gleaned from the San Francisco Herald that the Mormon settlement was in a valley—

... unsurpassed for fertility of soil, salubrity of climate, beauty of scenery, and general desirableness, by any portion of the State. Their agricultural interest is larger than that of Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, and San Diego Counties united, and the capabilities of producing are much better.

These people had a bright future. But one day, word was received from Salt Lake City that they were to return immediately. An invading army was on the boundaries of the State of Utah. Without question the members of the San Bernardino colony left their pleasant homes, farms, mills, schools, and once more traversed the barren wastes of the Mojave Desert. And what was their response? Willingly they rendered obedience to the word of the Prophet of God. This quality of obedience laid the foundations for this great intermountain commonwealth in which we live. And it was this type of obedience which made it possible for our Heavenly Father, through His servants, to restore the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ in the last days.

I have often wondered what became of these people after they returned to Utah. I wonder if they were blessed temporally. I have wondered what their attitude was. I am sure that if we could have an expression from them it would be phrased in the words of the Christ:

For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? (Mark 8:36.)

So, again, may I remind you of these words spoken by our Redeemer:

I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise. (D. & C. 82:10.)

Our pioneer fathers leaned on the Lord and rendered obedience; and He has kept His promises in that they and we, their descendants, have been abundantly blessed.

A LAND BLESSED BY THE LORD

Making reference to the valleys of Utah, Brigham Young said:

Talk about these rich valleys, why there is not another people on the earth that could have come here and lived. We prayed over the land, and dedicated it and the water, air and everything pertaining to them unto the Lord, and the smiles of heaven rested on the land and it became productive, and today yields us the best of grain, fruit and vegetables.

The Lord blessed the people who were obedient. Their obedience has brought the blessings of heaven upon this fair land. It has become as a garden, blessed with a varied abundance of all that goes to make life pleasant and comfortable. We of today are the recipients of blessings literally wrought out of the obedience of our forefathers.

PROMISES OF THE LORD SURE OF FULFILMENT

The Lord definitely kept His promise at the time President Snow traveled up and down the State pleading with the people to be obedient to the command of tithing, promising them in the name of Israel's God that the windows of heaven would be literally opened and the blessings of heaven showered down upon them. The crops of the southern part of the State were parching and drying up because of a lack of moisture. The people harkened to the voice of the Prophet of the Lord. They obeyed the commandment of tithing. Rain fell. Crops were saved. And from that day to this, the Church has rested on a strong financial foundation due to the obedience of many of its members to the financial law of God's Kingdom.

President Grant admonishes the membership of the Church to keep the Word of Wisdom, the promise of the Lord being that those who observe the Lord's law of health will be blessed with alert minds and strong bodies. More than that, He has promised to us revelations which will give to the world treasures of hidden knowledge. As a people, we should be the most obedient to the Lord in the whole world because we are a covenant people. We have entered the House of Jacob's God, which House was to be established in the tops of the mountains in the last days; and in this Holy of Holies we have covenanted with the Lord that we will contribute of our time, talents, and resources for the building up of the Kingdom. Like Adam of old we should be willing to obey, for we accept God the Eternal Father as our God, and Jesus Christ as the Redeemer.

OUR OBLIGATION TO THE WORLD

The world needs an example in obedience. The Lord has designated us as that example. Our destiny as a people is one of leadership. And the day is not far distant when the nations now engaged in this bloody struggle will finally come to the conclusion that war is futile, that it is entirely useless to kill men and destroy property. They will seek for a philosophy of life which will bring peace, harmony, and good will among them; and they will find it only in one place and among but one people—that place will be in the tops of these mighty mountains and among this people, the covenant people who call themselves Latter-day Saints.

A great responsibility devolves upon us, individually and collectively—an obligation to exemplify to the world in our lives and through obeying God's commandments, that the Restored Gospel of Jesus Christ is upon the earth in its fulness and simplicity, and obedience to it brings peace, joy, and good will. May we render that degree of obedience which will cause the Lord to say of us as He did the children of ancient Israel:

Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for all the earth is mine. (Exo. 19:5.)

Through the Prophet Joseph Smith He placed upon us the following mandate in the 115th Section of the Doctrine and Covenants:

Verily I say unto you all: Arise and shine forth, that thy light may be a standard for the nations. (D. & C. 115:5.)

This is the destiny of the Church. This is the challenge of the Lord to His people.

May the Lord so strengthen us individually and collectively that we will willingly render the necessary obedience which will exemplify the principles of the Gospel to all men and to all the world, I humbly pray, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

ELDER RICHARD R. LYMAN
Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Christ Himself, that highest authority, said: "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God." (Matt. 5:9) Nothing does the world need more these days than peacemakers. And if out of the conflicts of battle which are now going forward with unprecedented fury can come those who can and do plan a permanent peace, truly all such will be children of God.

THREATENING FORCES

These are not ordinary days. We live in momentous times. A survey of conditions in the troubled world of today reveals the fact that we have made little if any progress toward that peace and good will which the Savior of mankind taught nineteen centuries ago. Civilized nations of the earth are marshalling their man-power and their material resources for war and for defense on a scale the world has never known before. Forces are abroad in the earth which threaten the overthrow of liberty, of democracy and of our way of life, if not of our very civilization. War, devastating, destructive and barbarous, is scourging the air, the sea and the land. These are anxious days for all of us. More than 16½ million of our young men between the ages of 21 and 36 have already registered for service in the United States. I repeat that for all of us these are anxious days.

Two important questions present themselves to those who ponder this situation.

1. What can we do about it?
2. What will come after it?

FAITH, THE ONLY REMEDY

The ingenuity of man seems powerless to stay the dreadful ravages of modern war. The world is in distress, it is struggling in agony because men in their selfishness have forgotten God; they have forsaken the ways of truth, mercy, justice and righteousness. Somehow or other the fate of mankind hangs on faith in the Creator of the world.

The religion of the Latter-day Saints, which is the religion of our Lord and Master Jesus Christ, contains and presents the forces that make for righteousness and peace in the earth. Morality centers in religion. Without its saving power democracy cannot survive. Selfishness, greed, ambition and lust for power always, if they go unbridled, manifest themselves in contention and bloodshed. Unless these tendencies are chastened and controlled by the spirit written in the Sermon on the Mount, unless the unselfish spirit of the Gospel of Jesus Christ finds a place in the hearts of men and manifests itself in their relationship one to another, civilization is sure to decline. Righteousness is fundamental to the peace and progress of the world. How can this spirit be cultivated? What can be done to bring to the world that peace for which we pray? How can we cultivate and make effective the spirit of the Master? These are pertinent questions that should be asked these days.

"SEEK AND YE SHALL FIND"

I shall submit to you good folks for your consideration two very simple but fundamental ways which in the end, if faithfully followed, will help to bring peace of mind and ultimate prosperity by establishing a partnership with Him to whom nothing is impossible. Prayer is the first approach to the Almighty. He is, always has been and forever will continue to be our strength and our refuge. We know that He still lives and that He reigns on high. Christ Himself said:

Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: For everyone that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. (Matthew 7:7-8.)

The religion of the Latter-day Saints brings to the world the bright assurance that God the Eternal Father is still in His Heaven keeping watch over His children. He holds in His hands the destiny of men and the destiny of nations. In His own time and in His own appointed way, He will see that righteousness is rewarded, that justice is meted out, and finally that truth will triumph. I am of the firm conviction that only through a real return to true religion can a permanent peace come to the world. There is no other way.

APPEAL TO ATTEND SACRAMENT MEETINGS

One of the two simple ways in which Latter-day Saints may come into communion and partnership with our Heavenly Father is in our weekly Sacrament meetings. We do not attend these meetings primarily to get knowledge or to be taught, but to worship, to partake of the sacrament, to bow our heads, close our eyes, repent of our wrong doings, feel sorry for our sins, ask to be forgiven and appeal to our Heavenly Father for His help and guidance in our efforts to overcome our weaknesses. These meetings have a specific purpose to build up the spirituality, to increase the faith, to strengthen the testimony, to fill the soul with a zeal for the truth, and hearts with a love for the Redeemer of the world.

I appeal to all Latter-day Saints to come to these places of worship and there in deep humility and with contrite hearts make of the Lord a confidential friend, tell Him of our weaknesses, confess our shortcomings and seek devoutly for forgiveness, remembering that one great glorious and comforting principle of the Gospel is repentance and forgiveness. The scripture tells us:

Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow;
though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool. (Isaiah 1:18.)

When we have truly repented, when we have set our own houses in order, let us remember that if we ask "with faith as a grain of mustard seed" nothing shall be impossible. (Matt. 17:20)

POWER IN PRAYER

The other of the two ways of coming into communion with our Heavenly Father is around the family altar in daily family prayer and in making our secret prayerful appeals. There is power in prayer. Roger W. Babson says that in these days and times some of our men of wealth, some of our great empire builders, ridicule religion, but he adds further that these very men are indebted for all that they possess to the family prayers which were once held daily in the homes of their fathers.

Dr. Alexis Carrel, famous scientific investigator, has said recently (Readers Digest, March, 1941) that prayer is the most powerful form of energy that man can generate, that its effect on the human mind and body is as easily and certainly detected as is the effect of the secretion of the glands that exists in the human system. Its results can be measured in increased physical buoyancy, in greater intellectual vigor, in greater moral stamina and in a deeper understanding of the realities underlying human relationships. Prayer is the beginning of the journey of the soul toward the realm of grace. It supplies human beings with a steady flow of sustaining power in their daily lives. Prayer, like radium, is a source of luminous, self-generating energy. "When we pray we link ourselves with the inexhaustible motive power that spins the universe." We may pray anywhere, in the street, the office, the shop, the school, as well as in the solitude of a secret chamber, or in a church. In conclusion he writes:

Today as never before prayer is a vital necessity in the lives of men and of nations. The lack of emphasis of the religious sense has brought the world to the edge of destruction. Our deepest source of power and perfection has been left miserably undeveloped. Prayer, the basic exercise of the spirit, must be actively practiced in our private lives. The neglected soul of man must be made strong enough to assert itself once more, for if the power of prayer is again released and used in the lives of common men and women, if the spirit declares its aims clearly and boldly, there is yet hope that our prayers for a better world will be answered.

THE TWO SOURCES OF SECURITY

My appeal, therefore, is that we assemble regularly on the Sabbath day in our various Wards and there partake worthily of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and that daily in our homes around our family altars as well as in secret we humbly and sincerely appeal to our Heavenly Father that that peace, for which Christian people everywhere are pleading, that blessing which all men most need today, may by the power of God be brought to all mankind. Then our lives and our motives will be purified and our faith in the Almighty will wax strong. Being thus established in the confidence and fellowship of our Heavenly Father there will come to us a feeling of strength and of silent, satisfying security, of an unselfish determination and desire to serve and to bless those with whom we mingle. As Paul declared:

Let us remember the words of the Lord Jesus how he said, It is more blessed to give than it is to receive. (Acts 20:35.)

When the selfishness of mankind vanishes, peace on earth will come. The way to peace and happiness then is to return to the Almighty, to cultivate His Spirit, to supplicate Him, and to plead for a forgiveness of our sins and shortcomings. Through a consistent attendance at Sacrament meetings, if we partake of the holy Sacrament with clean hands and pure hearts, we renew our covenants with the Almighty with assurance that those who do so acceptably shall have the most precious blessing bestowed upon man, that is "His Spirit to be with them."

WAR'S CONSEQUENCES

Now to the second division of my subject. What will come after? When this great war ends fatigue and famine, bitterness and the memory of wrongs inflicted, and of outrages suffered will make impossible a good and lasting peace unless by divine power those who prepare the terms have in their hearts the spirit of the Prince of Peace and can proceed as did Lincoln, "With malice toward none and with charity for all." As long as a desire for revenge or punishment guides those who prepare the conditions of peace rather than a desire to create conditions of confidence and good will, wars and rumors of wars will scourge the earth. Even in our own beloved land of liberty it seems that in these trying times many prefer the satisfaction of retaliation rather than the spirit of forgiveness and peace with equal consideration for all people. These apparently are unable to understand that great fundamental doctrine that it is more blessed to give than it is to receive.

Far-seeing statesmen and economists are agreed that at the close of this war a depression much greater than those which have followed other wars is sure to come. The world will be compelled to struggle with the financial, economic and social aftermath of the present furious conflicts which are being waged on many battle fronts.

The length and the severity of a war determine the length and the severity of the depression which follows it. The greater the destruction, the greater the depression. Famine, pestilence, plagues, diseases and poverty will no doubt come in a more or less serious degree to the people of all nations when this death struggle comes to its close. And for this reason I repeat the appeal that has been made from the beginning by the leaders of the Church that all the people as far as possible get out of debt and keep out of debt.

PEACE THROUGH JUSTICE AND CHARITY

Truly in these days, at this very hour, the world's greatest need is peacemakers. And I repeat, if out of the conflicts, out of the battles which are now raging, those can come who can and will plan a lasting peace, one with malice toward none and with justice and charity for all, these will be, they must be now and forever numbered among the very choicest, the most select and most richly blessed of all the children of God.

In conclusion, I appeal again to you to do these two things: 1. Attend Sacrament meetings faithfully; 2. Participate regularly in daily family and secret prayers. If we all can and will do these two things, if we can live the unselfish Christian life, the testimony that Jesus is the Christ will burn in our souls and we will walk with confidence among our fellowmen, disseminating the spirit of the Redeemer of the world, which is the spirit of peace and the spirit of good will.

The Blackfoot Stake Choir sang an anthem "And the Glory of the Lord," (Messiah)—by Handel.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I repeat: Please drive carefully, the streets are very slippery; and pedestrians will be good enough to walk cautiously and carefully.

We would like particularly to say a word of commendation to the Blackfoot Stake Choir. Some of the members of this Choir have traveled regularly to their rehearsals a distance of fifty miles, and they have never missed a rehearsal. This represents what the Church Music Committee is trying to do in all of our Stakes. I would like to say to the Utah Valley people and the Brigham Young University that they must look to their laurels for up in the Snake River Valley there is a group that is pressing very hard on their heels.

---

Elder Thomas W. Richards, President of the Malad Stake, pronounced the benediction.

Conference adjourned until 2 p. m.

SECOND DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

Saturday afternoon, April 5.

The fourth session of the Conference convened promptly at 2 p. m.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

The moment has arrived for opening this the fourth session of this Conference. Notwithstanding we have a mild blizzard outside, this house is crowded to capacity. President Grant is resting this afternoon. President Clark is conducting the meeting.

There are present on the stand this afternoon the two Counselors to President Grant, the eleven Apostles, all of the First Seven Presidents of Seventies, and all the Presiding Bishopric.

---

The Blackfoot Stake Choir furnished the music for this session of the Conference.

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "We Thank Thee, O God, For a Prophet."

Elder M. Ezra Sorenson, President of the Bannock Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The Choir sang "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem"—Maunder.

ELDER SYLVESTER Q. CANNON

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I have been greatly impressed, my brethren and sisters, by the important testimony given by President Grant yesterday morning, the fine expression that he gave to us of the things that impressed him and that have influenced him greatly during his life. I realize that the work he has done and the testimony he has borne to us are a source of guidance to all of us, and a realization that he is indeed a servant of the Lord, a prophet of God. He enjoys the power and keys of authority that were given to him some twenty-two years ago, and he has testified to us in clearness and inspiration with regard to the divinity of the work in which we are engaged. I have been greatly impressed by this statement, and not only in regard to the testimony he has borne, but in regard to his life.

President Grant at eighty-four years of age has accomplished a great deal in his life. At twenty-four years of age he was appointed President of the Tooele Stake of Zion—in his youth practically he received that responsibility and carried it forward successfully. Shortly after that he was sustained as a member of the Council of the Twelve, and he has carried on diligently and faithfully in that position from that time to this.

KEYS OF AUTHORITY OF THE PRIESTHOOD

Some twenty-three years ago, I believe it was, he received the keys of authority of the Priesthood to preside over the whole Church and to carry on this responsibility. He has fulfilled it. He has been loyal and faithful in every respect, and achieved a great work. Every duty and responsibility given him has been ably magnified. He has been constant in season and out of season and lived up to every requirement. Full of alertness and initiative in the responsibilities that have come to him he has fully measured up in every respect. I rejoice in the testimony he has borne to us. I am sure all the Latter-day Saints who were present or who listened over the radio have been greatly impressed thereby, and have realized that he is verily a servant of the Lord and stands at the head of the Church upon the earth, and is a power and influence to all who are loyal and true to him and love the work he has accomplished.

I believe that the motto that President Grant has used extensively has had an influence on his life. It reads:

That which we persist in doing becomes easy to do; not that the nature of the thing has changed, but that our power to do has increased.

I believe it expresses very effectively the diligence and the persistence that President Grant has maintained. He has accomplished the work he has been called to do fully and effectively, and there is no one who has any reason to feel otherwise than that he has fulfilled in every respect in his life his great responsibility. I am sure it is a joy to every member of the Church.

FACTORS AFFECTING HUMAN BEHAVIOR

I have been impressed with the idea and feeling that there are certain factors that affect the behavior of men and women here upon the earth. These same factors affect every one of the Latter-day Saints. In the first place we are influenced by our appetites or carnal desires, and thereby we may be led to do good, or we may be led to do evil; we have the choice; we are free agents. Every human soul who lives upon the earth is a free agent to himself to do the will of the Lord or to do wrong, and he will be governed and will be judged for his actions here in mortality and will have to give an accounting of his actions in the world to come.

EVERYONE HAS THE RIGHT OF CHOICE

— We are told by the Apostle John that every human soul will be called up to give an account of his life here in the flesh. The books or records that have been made will be opened and we will be held responsible for our actions. I appreciate the fact that it is a very important thing for every individual to learn the difference between right and wrong, and choose the right, to battle for truth, and righteousness. We shall be blessed if we stand firmly for the same. On the other hand we will be punished for that which we do which may be evil. That is our responsibility and our privilege; every one of us is called to this responsibility; every individual, I say. We are eternal beings spiritually. We have received through the blessing of the Lord the opportunity to come here upon the earth in mortality, to live and to accomplish our mission; and after we leave here we will go into the spirit world. The day will come when we will be resurrected and become immortal beings and will have to account for our deeds. We will receive the blessings that we merit according to our deeds here in the flesh and our preparations for immortality.

I realize that this is a very important question, a very important matter in our lives, and we can be led and guided through light and truth to do that which the Lord desires of us, or we can be led by the influence of evil, the influences that we heard about this morning, the influences of the Adversary who seeks to mislead mankind.

The Savior said to His disciples in the Sermon on the Mount: "Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Many people prefer to take the easier way, the way that brings them trouble and destruction. It is the Adversary who endeavors to lead men away to destruction; that is the broad way, the easy way, and the way which mankind have the power, the right to accept if they so choose, and which the Lord endeavors to influence them against. He wants us to live in harmony with righteousness and truth. That is a very important factor in our lives, the way we live, the desires, the feelings and the habits we have, because we have the power to do as we choose, and we will have to be responsible for everything we do. We should strive to be guided in righteousness, that we might be able to discern between that which the Lord desires and that which is influenced by the other power, which is contrary to truth and righteousness.

HUMAN EMOTIONS AND REASON

There is another factor by which we are affected, and that is the influence of our emotion. We have the power to control ourselves largely in this respect also, and yet we can gain a great deal of satisfaction through proper emotions if we cultivate them and live for them, if we do the right thing. There are emotions that are of a very elevating nature and there are others that are of a character that lead us to destruction and to downfall, and therein also we have a responsibility. There is another influence, and that is in the nature of reason or judgment which guides us in our lives, and we are supposed to use common sense and judgment in all the things we do; we have that power. Of course men are sometimes influenced by the other influence, the emotions and desires, and reason does not govern them altogether, but that is a very important thing for them to cultivate.

We as Latter-day Saints have the opportunity of doing these things and we have the privilege and responsibility of cultivating the attitude and the qualifications, the factor of reason in our lives, that we may thereby be judged righteously in everything that concerns us. The Lord has given us an understanding of these things and how to control them, and to be influenced thereby, and we have the power also, if we live for it—every man has the power, has the understanding, and should be taught principles that will lead us to understand righteousness and the purposes of the Lord.

POWER OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

We have particularly that responsibility and that blessing that the Lord has given to every one who has received the Gospel that we are enabled to grow in the spirit and power and testimony of the truth and learn to know the difference between sound reasoning or judgment, and that which is not for our welfare; and we have the ability also to judge and discern between the influence and emotions which will lead us astray.

And so the Lord desires that we should cultivate the influence and power of His Holy Spirit, and if we do this we shall grow in the spirit and power of the Gospel, love of truth, and understanding of His purposes, and if we continually maintain that attitude we shall develop in power to serve the Lord as He desires us.

You will remember that when the Savior was upon the earth He repeatedly called the attention of His Apostles to the importance of keeping His commandments. He said to them time and again, "If ye love me keep my commandments." Frequently He called it to their attention, showing how important and desirable was the principle He had given them, and every other human soul to serve Him, keep His commandments and do His will. "Thereby," He said, "Ye show that ye love me if ye keep my commandments."

Such an example as the divine influence of the Savior on mankind has been a great power for those who have sought to do His will and have drawn near to Him. To us as Latter-day Saints we have the opportunity and privilege of living up to this principle of serving the Lord and doing His will and if we strive to do that continually we shall grow in influence and power through drawing near to Him and seeking to serve the Lord, and to do so in the name of His Beloved Son. Thereby we may all grow in the spirit and power of this work. That is a responsibility that rests upon all of us, who are members of the Church everywhere, and upon our children, the young people, that thereby everyone of them may grow in the love of the truth, the love of the Lord and the desire to do His will and keep His commandments.

TESTIMONY OF THE TRUTH

I testify of these things to you and pray the Lord to bless you and bless us all in our desires to do right and live His will. I testify and declare that this is the work of the Lord. It is intended for the welfare of mankind, for their eternal salvation and exaltation. I testify also that the Prophet Joseph Smith was indeed a prophet of the Lord. He has set the example to us in this dispensation of the blessings which follow the observance of the commandments of the Lord which he received from God. That same spirit and that same influence is manifested by the brethren who preside over the work now, and all of those who have presided over the Church in former days. I testify to these things and pray the Lord to bless us all, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER RULON S. WELLS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

There are three reasons recorded in the scriptures why Satan was cast out of Heaven, and with him those who rebelled against God and followed after Satan. Those three reasons were, as I recall them: first, that they were in rebellion against God; second, that they sought to arrogate unto themselves the credit, the honor and the glory which belong to God alone; and, third, that Satan sought to destroy the free agency of man, which God has given to every man, as we have heard here from the brethren who have preceded me.

GOOD AND EVIL CANNOT BE DONE UNDER COMPELSION

It is impossible for any man to commit sin under compulsion, and it is impossible for him to do good under compulsion; that is, I mean, this: there is no evil in doing wrong under compulsion, neither is there any virtue in doing good under compulsion. We are only responsible for that which we do willingly in the exercise of our free agency. God will hold us responsible for all that we do of our own volition and He has endowed us with certain gifts that will enable us to distinguish between good and evil.

You will find recorded in the seventh chapter of the Book of Moroni wherein we are told in the sixteenth paragraph, that "the spirit of Christ is given to every man that he might know good from evil," and ever since the days of the Garden of Eden and the partaking of the forbidden fruit by our first parents the eyes of mankind have been opened to a knowledge of good and evil. The Lord has given us that knowledge by bestowing upon all that spirit of Christ that is poured out upon all men, and we know when we do wrong. No man can ever say that he did an evil thing because he had to do it, for if he had to do it there would be no evil in it; but if he does it with the consent of his own mind, then and then only can it be called "committing sin." The same thing will apply to doing good. They are good deeds only when they are done willingly. We will be judged according to the light and knowledge which God has given to us.

Another great blessing that God has given to us for our guidance is that every one who has received the truth and entered into covenant with the Lord through the holy waters of baptism has received the gift of the Holy Ghost, which is the Spirit of Truth that will lead us into all truth, that our minds may be lit up thereby and our understandings enlarged.

Compulsion does not belong to the theory of government in the Kingdom of God. There are many man-made governments where they seek to control the actions of others, even in their religion and everything else. All this is contrary to the mind and will of God. He desires that every man shall be free "to choose his life, and what he'll be, for this eternal truth is given, that God will force no man to heaven."

So you see, my brethren and sisters, the Lord has not left us without divine guidance. We have a battle to fight; Satan was cast out of Heaven because he rebelled against God and sought to lead away and did lead away many of God's children, even one-third of the hosts of Heaven.

THE SAVIOR'S PLAN FOR MANKIND

In reply to the question which God propounded, "Whom shall I send?" (this pertaining to the sending to this world one to carry out the purposes of the Almighty Father) our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, known to ancient Israel as Jehovah said:

Here am I, send me. . . . Father thy will be done, and the glory be thine forever.

What a difference from the attitude of Lucifer, the son of the morning, otherwise called Satan, and sometimes called the devil, more frequently than not! What a difference in the attitude and the spirit! Said Lucifer:

Here am I, send me, I will be thy Son and I will redeem all mankind, that one soul shall not be lost; and surely I will do it, wherefore, give me thine honor.

He was ambitious, he wanted to arrogate to himself all the honor and the glory, and he wanted to use compulsion, and save us whether we wanted to be saved or not. Force will never convert the human mind; this can be done only in the exercise of our free agency and not otherwise.

All through the teachings of our Savior we are taught the wonderful lesson of doing the will of God. The Lord taught us to pray to our Heavenly Father, "Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is in Heaven." When that day comes the will of God will be done, but not under any compulsion whatever. If we ever arrive in Heaven we will find that we have so adapted ourselves to the will of God that our minds will be lit up, we will have the Spirit of God which reveals to us the things of God, and we will know the will of God and act in accordance with it, or we will never get there.

OBEDIENCE TO THE WILL OF GOD REQUIRED IN ALL THINGS

And so I say this, that it is the will of God that we are to obey, and we have the means of ascertaining and learning it without any undue influence or coercion being used with us. "Thy will be done." The order and will of God—there is order in the Kingdom of God; there is order in Heaven; in this whole universe there is order; law prevails throughout the universe. There is an equilibrium in all this universe which is upheld and sustained by the will and power of God, by His laws, and sometimes we refer to them as the laws of nature. Let one of those laws be suspended and there will be confusion and disaster. Either there would be violent collisions among the heavenly bodies, or the members of this sidereal universe would fly off into an endless space, never again to return. There is order everywhere prevailing. I think it was Aristotle or one of the great philosophers who made the remark that order was the first law of heaven. I heard that contradicted the first time by President George Q. Cannon. I do not know whether it was original with him or not, but this is what he said: "No, order is not the first law of Heaven; obedience is the first law of Heaven, and order is the result." That is what I like, that coincides with my view. Obedience, then, of which we have heard so much, is the thing that will set us in order and will set the world in order. The universe renders obedience to the will of God, obedience to the law of Heaven, obedience to the Divine powers that preside over the universe. That is the way to unify ourselves and to find access to God. There will be no compulsion in it.

The order as we find it in the universe prevails in Heaven, and therefore we should seek to know what the order and will of God are in all things pertaining to our lives here upon the earth, and we will have the Spirit of the Lord to guide us and the revelations of the Lord that have been given to men, that we might know good from evil. This Spirit pervades the universe, and it was by this Spirit that the universe was made—the Heavens and the earth.

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

The same was in the beginning with God.

All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made.

In him was life; and the life was the light of men. (John 1:1-4.)

That is the true light which lighteth every man which cometh into the world, the light of Christ. "Let us walk in the light even as He is in the light," and we are told we shall then "have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ will cleanse us from all sin."

THE COVENANT MADE BY GOD

The Gospel provides the plan of life and salvation to every one that will render obedience to it.

The Lord makes covenant with His chosen people. The people of God have always been called a covenant people. We first entered into covenant with God in that primeval day before the world was made when God assembled before Him His sons and daughters and revealed unto them the plan of life and salvation—the glorious plan that has been revealed from Heaven, known as the New and Everlasting Covenant, which means the same thing as the Gospel of Jesus Christ in its fulness.

Under the terms of this covenant God requires us to keep His commandments. As it is set forth in the Book of Abraham, and translated by Joseph Smith, the Prophet, through the gift and power of God: "We will go down and make an earth whereon these may dwell," (thus says the Lord referring to His assembled children) "And we will try them herewith to see if they will do all things whatsoever the Lord their God shall command them. They who keep their first estate shall be added upon * * * * and they who keep their second estate shall have glory added upon their heads forever and ever."

We are now in our second estate, and if we do "all things" whatsoever the Lord our God shall command us, then we are promised in the covenant that we shall have glory added upon our heads forever and ever—a never-ending glory that shall continue to come to us throughout all the eternities that lie before us; a never-ending glory and life in the presence of God and His sons and His daughters, being heirs of God, even joint heirs with Jesus Christ, and with Him inherit all things that the Father hath. In other words, we shall be glorified and enter into the Celestial kingdom of God, and obtain that highest and greatest gift of God unto men—eternal life in His Celestial kingdom—or as Elder Joseph Fielding Smith told us, "eternal lives."

When we speak of the New and Everlasting Covenant our minds immediately turn to the marriage covenant. This is truly a very important part of it, but it is only a part. The fulness of the Gospel of Jesus Christ is the everlasting covenant (See D. & C. 66:2.) They mean one and the same thing. Obedience, then, to the Gospel of Jesus Christ in its fulness and primitive purity as restored to the earth in these last days through the instrumentality of Joseph Smith, the Prophet, is our part in the Everlasting Covenant, and if we render this obedience by doing all things which the Lord, our God, has commanded us, then He is bound under the terms of the Covenant to do His part which He has promised to do, which is adding "glory upon our heads forever and ever." This simply means a never-ending glory that shall be added upon our heads throughout all the eternities that are to come. This is salvation, as contemplated under the New and Everlasting Covenant, for which our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ made the supreme sacrifice, redeeming us from death and the grave (both natural death of the body and spiritual death which was banishment from the presence of God.) It will be obvious therefore that when salvation comes it is through Him and Him only.

We cannot save ourselves for the "greatest gift of God to man is the gift of salvation," "for by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God."

THE SAVIOR'S PART IN THE PLAN OF SALVATION

Again let me emphasize that we need a Savior. After the transgression in the Garden of Eden the Lord said:

Behold, the man is become as one of us to know good and evil; and now lest he put forth his hand and partake also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever (in his sins), therefore I, the Lord God will send him forth from the Garden of Eden.

And he was literally driven out of the Garden of Eden. But, God did not forsake him; nevertheless he was banished from the presence of God, a condition which still prevails. We no longer see the face of God; we do not talk with Him face to face as did Moses and others, including Joseph Smith the Prophet, but we are banished, and it came upon Adam and all of his posterity. That is one phase then of salvation, to have that overcome. The other phase is the natural death of the body—"In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die," and when that day comes and we shall attain to the allotted age of man, which is sometimes called seventy years—it may go to a hundred or even beyond that, I myself have gone nearly seventeen years beyond that allotted age—the time will come when we will shuffle off this mortal coil, and our bodies will be laid in the silent tomb; there to mingle with mother earth and to return to that mother earth from whence we came, but our spirits shall go back to God in His paradise if we are faithful, but anyway to the spirit world to await that glorious day when the trump shall sound and the dead shall arise and be clothed upon, if they have been faithful, with immortality and eternal life, but with immortality in any event in the due time of the Lord.

So don't you see we are wholly and totally dependent upon the Lord to save us from these conditions; they are wholly beyond the power of any man. Which one of us can bring his own body out of the grave? How can we be brought back to God? How can these things be? The Savior answers that in very terse terms. Said He: "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." Neither is there any name given under Heaven save the name of Jesus Christ whereby man must be saved.

May the Lord help us, therefore, to seek the counsels that come from God and be guided by the Holy Spirit to enter into covenant with the Lord and keep ourselves sweet and clean and unspotted from the sins of the world. Just as surely as the day follows the night we shall be brought back to God to inherit all these wonderful blessings which He has promised unto them that love Him and keep His commandments. May God grant it, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy and President of the New England Mission

My brethren and sisters, I have traveled a long way to attend this Conference. Boston is about the farthest point East on the Atlantic seaboard, and is a beautiful and historic city, but there is no joy like the joy of coming home.

ASSOCIATE MISSION PRESIDENTS PRAISED

I have the honor of being associated with some fifteen other Mission Presidents, who are fine and capable men. They are fearless and have taken hold of this work with all the power of fine manhood, of truth, and everything that is noble. They sit here before us in this congregation, unassuming, God-fearing men, and I want them to know that I am happy to be counted with them. It is an honor, for they have done me so much good, and my Mission as well, for naturally we call the Missions "Our Missions."

EARLY MISSIONARY WORK IN NEW ENGLAND

The New England Mission is in a sense the oldest Mission of the Church. President Brigham Young and Heber C. Kimball were missionaries a hundred years ago and from that time to the present some of the greatest men of the Church have carried the Gospel to that part of the United States. Vermont, as you know, is the "cradle" of Mormonism, for in that State was born the Prophet Joseph Smith and President Brigham Young, and many others who have been the stalwart bearers of truth in this Church.

We have a band of very fine and noble men and women, your boys and girls. It is very hard on them the first winter in New England, as the climate is very severe, but they face their difficulties bravely. Everything is so new, and we have only a few Saints comparatively. We have about 1,180 in the New England States and in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia in Canada. This entire section of America is very beautiful.

MISSIONARIES MAKING HEADWAY

In New England the people as never before are respecting this latter-day work. Our missionaries are allowed to speak and lecture upon Mormonism in many of the large churches. One of our brethren recently gave one of the most intelligent talks on the history of the restored Gospel that I have ever heard, and he did it fearlessly and with courage, and with beautiful English. He had studied his work and he bore testimony of the restoration of the Gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

We are working together, and the nobility of our work is equal to the demands of the people there. You must remember New England has many colleges and universities. There are twenty-seven universities and colleges in and around Boston alone; and therefore we come in contact with the students and faculties. Down in New Haven we have a group of fine boys in Yale University. In Cambridge, we have eighty Utah students in Harvard College, and they are all doing fine work. Up at Dartmouth and down at Brown University in Providence, and over in Smith College, not to mention other colleges, we have Utah students. We try to keep track of them and this work alone is very important.

We teach the missionaries to study certain historical facts of New England. For example, December 20th of last year they spoke on the mission of the Pilgrim fathers, and read to hundreds of people the thirteenth chapter of 1 Nephi, which foretells the settlement of the shores of New England. We have held Priesthood meetings at Plymouth Rock and at the little town of Whitingham, Vermont, the birthplace of President Brigham Young. Many meetings have been held at South Royalton, where the Joseph Smith Memorial farm is located. President Heber C. Kimball was born at Sheldon, Vermont, and President Wilford Woodruff's birthplace was at Avon, Connecticut. Apostle Willard Richards was of New England lineage, as were Apostles Orson Hyde, Ezra T. Benson, Erastus Snow, and Franklin D. Richards. Many other historical characters of the Church were born in New England. The Elders have joy in visiting the old homes of our leaders, and some day the people will take pride that so many of the founders of the Latter-day work came out of New England and were of Puritan descent.

ITEMS OF EARLY HISTORY IN NEW ENGLAND

New England has the oldest churches in the United States, and hundreds of church buildings. We respect these church buildings, for whenever anyone with a clean purpose builds a church in honor of God, good is being done. The Elders of our Mission have cooperated with me in making a study of the history of the religions of New England with a view of being able to converse better on the subject of the Gospel. A number of books have moulded the thought of the people since the rise and growth of Puritanism, and as a result of our study, the Elders are able to draw comparisons in an intelligent manner. To illustrate just what I mean: In the year 1536, John Calvin published a noted work on religion that moulded the thought of Protestantism possibly more than any other work. It was his famous Institutes of the Christian Religion. It was a clear exposition of Protestant doctrine and a forceful refutation of the opposing Catholic views. It also laid down the laws of Church government, later known by the name of Presbyterianism. An eminent modern Catholic scholar has called Calvin's book "the finest work of Reformation literature." In it Calvin gave his program for reform in religion, and when the book was translated into English, it moulded the thought of the Puritans of England. Copies of it were brought to America, and in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries it was used in many of the colleges where religion was taught. We missionaries have made careful study of the religious principles laid down by Calvin.

Another work issued from the press about the same time as the Institutes was the work of Ignatius Loyola entitled Spiritual Exercises, which was a manual of religious drill designed to lead the sinner to concentrate all his faculties upon the task of realizing his sinfulness and God's abounding grace.

One hundred years ago, there was a great uncertainty about the Christian faith, and of later years that uncertainty has grown so that to-day thousands, yes, I might say millions of the youth of America have little or no church allegiance, and are without foundation of religious home life or knowledge of the Bible. Even among those who call themselves Christian, there is an uncertainty as to what to believe. The deep discontent with the achievements of Christianity itself in dealing with social, economic, and international relations is weakening the sense of assurance of Christianity's value to the world.

JOSEPH SMITH'S OWN STORY AND ARTICLES OF FAITH OF GREAT WORTH

There are two documents that our missionaries are coming to know, documents that the world will have to reckon with. They are Joseph Smith's Own Story and the Articles of Faith. Had the Prophet Joseph Smith never issued anything else but his own story and the Articles of Faith, his work would in time have revolutionized religious thought. They refute the tragic mistake of the Calvin and Loyola documents, for they announce to the world the large fundamentals on which the restored Gospel is based. In the Prophet's writings you never find any pretense or bombast, but everything he writes is simple and direct. The reader is always impressed with his truthfulness and honesty. We are using these two documents with fine success in our mission.

We are feeling the effects of the war in New England. Factories have been re-opened and thousands of men and women have found work. People differ on the policies of the administration at Washington. One thing I hope and that is that our country may keep out of this war and free from the terrible hatreds of the world. May we place our hands in His hand and go into the future with larger hopes and greater faith in His holy laws, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

BISHOP LeGRAND RICHARDS

Presiding Bishop of the Church

Considerable has been said at this Conference concerning the value of a testimony of the Gospel. Some years ago I had a discussion with an associate of mine in the Church, an educator, who said he believed the day had come when we would have to appeal to the young people of the Church through reason rather than through that which we customarily call a testimony of the Gospel. I answered that if we had reached that stage, then I feared for the future of the Church, as all that we had accomplished as a people had been because of the testimonies that the Lord had given unto us.

A TESTIMONY BRINGS WITH IT WILLINGNESS TO SACRIFICE

I am sure we shall never forget the testimony we listened to yesterday from President Grant. I recall having been in this building as a boy and having heard President Woodruff's testimony of how the Lord had guided and inspired him all his life. I am not sure but what it was the last address he delivered here, and that testimony has always remained with me. When I think of President Grant's life and all he has accomplished, of his beautiful soul, his inspiration, and the sacrifices he has made in order to answer the calls that have been made of him in this great Church, I realize what his testimony has done for him.

Many of us remember having heard President Ivins from this stand tell how many times he had sold all he had and burned his bridges behind him to answer the call of the brethren to serve in some other part of the Church. Those of us who have labored in the mission field know how many of the Saints have forsaken all they had in this world in order that they might be obedient to the testimonies the Lord had planted in their hearts.

President Clark said in his address that in events that are yet to come we would find our testimonies of the Gospel our greatest solace. I feel as we are sending our boys at the present time into the service of their country if we can send them with a testimony of the Gospel in their hearts, that it will give them power to live their lives sweet and clean before God and all men, as they have been taught in their Latter-day Saint homes.

The Savior of the world indicated that if we would be His disciples we must be willing to forsake all that we have in this world, even to fathers and mothers, lands and herds, and I want to say to you that I do not believe men and women will forsake all they have because of any reasoning power they possess. They will do it when their souls are touched by the inspiration and power of the Spirit of the living God, which is the testimony of the truth, and then it is that men can love God more than they love anything else in this world, and hence forsake all because of their love of Him.

I wish we could send our boys into the service of their country with the faith and testimony the two thousand Lamanite boys had in the time of Helaman of old when they went forth to battle and came back every man because of his faith.

THE PROMISES OF THE LORD SURE OF FULFILMENT

We have great promises resting upon us as a people and as individuals through obeying and keeping the commandments of God. Reference has been made to the promise of the Lord through observance of the Word of Wisdom, not only that we should run and not be weary, walk and not faint, and that we should receive hidden treasures of knowledge, but the destroying angel should pass by us and not slay us even as the children of Israel.

It has been said that man's extremities are God's opportunities. We have all known that in our day should come the judgments of God, the great and dreadful day of the Lord, when all the proud, yea, all who do wickedly, should be as stubble, and that day should burn them up that it should leave them neither root nor branch. We have reason, if we have faith in God and keep His commandments, to believe that the destroying angel might pass us by as a people, and individually, and not slay us, and that we might stand as a light and an ensign to the world, and an evidence that God does not forget His promises. I hope every one of us believes in these promises the Lord has made to us.

A PATRIARCHAL BLESSING AND ITS FULFILMENT

Two weeks ago while I was visiting in Arizona a counselor to a Stake President told me of an experience he had which typifies many similar experiences of the members of this Church. He said that during the World War he was drafted. He was a young man and did not want to go to war; he felt if he ever went into action he would never return alive. So he went to the Patriarch, (and I met that Patriarch on the same trip) and the Patriarch came in from his field and said to this good brother: "You sit down at the table and write as I dictate." He laid his hands upon the head of this young man and pronounced a blessing upon him, and I took the time to write it down as he gave it to me. I would like to read a few words from that blessing here today:

Inasmuch as ye have been called to go to the defense of your country, I promise you if you will be humble and faithful and prayerful, that if your life is ever brought into danger, the way will be opened for your escape, and you will yet be given in marriage and have sons and daughters of good repute and be the means of doing much missionary work in the world.

You see all this was conditioned upon his being faithful and prayerful and humble. It is a grand and glorious thing to bind the God of Israel to us through obeying and keeping His commandments. You will remember that He said to the Prophet Joseph:

I, the Lord am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise.

This man had a promise from the Lord that was worth living for.

I want to say to you, brethren and sisters, I would rather have the promise of God resting upon me than that of any mortal man, just as this brother who went forth to battle for his country. Within ninety days after he received his patriarchal blessing he was going over the top in France, and in his company were 250 men to which were added thirty replacements. On the day that the Armistice was signed, at 10 o'clock in the morning, there were eighty men left out of the 280, and they were told they should cease firing. The men gathered around, three of them in one hole, including this brother of whom I speak. Two hundred yards away he saw the army kitchen, and he invited his companions to go with him to get something to eat. They had had no supper or breakfast and were sure they would get nothing if they went, so he went alone. Just as he was being handed a stack of hot cakes, a bomb fell in the midst of the little company of eighty he had left behind and thirty of them were killed and fifty were left. When he returned, there were the two men that were in the hole with him, with the tops of their heads blown off. The Patriarch had said:

If your life is ever brought into danger, the way will be opened for your escape and you will yet be given in marriage and have sons and daughters of good repute.

He now has six children, one in the mission field.

THE SAINTS STANDING IN HOLY PLACES

Now the Lord made also this statement regarding the judgments that are to come in these latter days:

But my disciples shall stand in holy places, and shall not be moved; but among the wicked, men shall lift up their voices and curse God and die.

I do not know what you think about this promise. So far as I am concerned I think the Lord did not mean that we should stand on this Temple Block or back in Independence; I think He meant that His children should live such lives that wherever they stand the ground upon which they stand should be holy and sanctified because of their presence.

THE ELEMENTS REBUKED BY FAITH

You will recall that in the early days of the gathering of the Saints it was considered as good as an insurance policy when a company of Latter-day Saints embarked on a vessel crossing the Atlantic. I recall reading in my grandfather's diary of a time when the boat upon which he was sailing was in great jeopardy, so much so that the captain of the boat came to him and pleaded with him to intercede with the Lord in behalf of the boat and her passengers; and Grandfather, remembering that he had been promised that he should have power over the elements, walked out on the deck of the boat and raised his hands to high heaven and rebuked the sea and the waves, and they were immediately calmed, and the appreciation of the captain of the boat was so great that he offered him the use of his private quarters during the balance of the journey.

Now, brethren and sisters, I believe that in the experiences that are ahead of us through the judgments that are to befall the nations, God will stand by our side, and by the side of our boys even though they go forth to battle, if they take with them a testimony of the truth and the kind of faith they ought to have in the living God and in this great latter day work.

I pray God to bless you all, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ALBERT E. BOWEN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

The teachings of Jesus, with the testimonies of the prophets concerning Him and concerning His death and resurrection, constitute the Gospel message. That is a universal message, not limited to any time nor to any people, but applicable to all peoples of all times. It purports to lay down correct principles of living life in mortality, upon which in turn depends man's condition of living in immortality. In short, it becomes the law of life valid for time and for eternity. In that view it must be regarded as the embodiment of absolute human and spiritual values, not subject to alteration with the aberrations of changing times, nor to variation with the vagrant shiftings of prevailing opinion.

Those courses of behavior which harmonize with and conform to absolute spiritual values must be eternally right just as their opposites must be eternally wrong. Between the two there is undying conflict. They cannot accommodate themselves one to the other. If it were attempted to make adjustments between them by having each yield something to the other you might succeed in tempering the wrong but what you had left would not be the right. It could at best be right debased by an admixture of wrong, a counterfeit.

FUNDAMENTALS MUST REMAIN UNALTERED

The Church as the teacher and interpreter of the Gospel message cannot countenance any dilution. There may be new techniques of exposition, improved approaches, expanding understanding of interpretation and application and even a weeding out of extraneous accretions which have fastened themselves upon the basic principles, but in the fundamentals of the message itself there can be no alterations. Wherever the majority opinion may for the moment lie, or however the conflict may swirl and lash about it the eternal right must still stand unshaken and unmoved as the fixed base to which men may with assurance and safety anchor their lives. That which is right does not become wrong merely because it may be deserted by the majority, neither does that which is wrong today become right tomorrow by the chance circumstance that it has won the approval or been adopted by overwhelmingly predominant numbers. Principles cannot be changed by nor accommodate themselves to the vagaries of popular sentiment.

TODAY'S TEST OF GOSPEL MESSAGE

If, as I have already said, the Gospel message has, as in the very nature of the case it must have, a universality of application, without limit as to time or locality or people, then it must have in it a specific cure for the ills of every age. In all circumstances, in every time we should, if it fills the requirement of its claim, be able to turn to it and find a direction suited to the needs of the hour. For it is not divorced from life but on the contrary is concerned solely with the lives of men and so must instruct and fortify them for life's requirements. Let us consider whether it meets that test as related to the conditions of today.

The mischief against which there is presently the most insistent complaint is the reign of violence with its train of accompanying evils. This grows out of the arrogance and egotism of rulers and leaders who seek to establish their supremacy at whatever cost, and without regard to consequences to humanity at large or to nations or individuals in particular. The Gospel message on the contrary admonishes men to humility.

Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven.

But when thou art bidden, go and sit down in the lowest room; that when he that bade thee cometh, he may say unto thee, Friend, go up higher: then shalt thou have worship in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee.

For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

But he that is greatest among you, shall be your servant.

HUMILITY WOULD WIPE OUT VIOLENCE

Let these sayings characterize the desires of men and oppression would vanish away. There is no nation today whose leaders would not be immeasurably benefitted by a lesson in humility.

One of the results of a reign of violence is the denial of justice, but justice is a cardinal part of the Gospel law.

What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God.

Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.

In any land where that law prevailed there could never be the plundering, the robbing, the despoiling and the murdering that invariably accompany the rule of force. I have spent a large part of my mature life in dealing with and trying to adjust people's disputes. I have learned that there would be very little trouble between men in this world if only every one wanted to do about what is right—to be fair and just. The trouble grows out of the unjust advantage taken of situations which throw unfair opportunities into the hands of those who are willing to exploit them. The discouraging part about it lies in the difficulty of getting reciprocal willingness among disputants to yield to the principle of fairness. As one may be disposed to yield the other increases already unjust demands. But that has nothing to do with the existence of the principle about which we are just now inquiring. It only signifies rejection of the message.

WAR NEVER ENDS WAR

Another evil consequence of the rule of force is that it begets reprisals, which lead to interminable conflicts. We are all familiar with the feuds of families and clans and the wars of tongs carrying down through long generations. The victim of a wrong suffered or a grievance borne waits the day of revenge and then takes it with interest compounded. The new sufferer in turn retaliates when a change of fortune favors him and so the mischief endlessly spirals.

"Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord." Its exercise cannot safely be left to mortals. In nothing is the futility of war more surely revealed than in the inevitable consequence of reprisals. The victor despoils the vanquished. The latter with an undimmed memory waits the day of retribution and when the time of reckoning comes takes back what was before lost with something more besides, thus sowing the seed of a future war. Seemingly the memory of nations is long; they never forget and war never ends war.

THE SPIRIT OF REPRISAL

We see the same vicious evil at work in all the contested relations of men. We may take an illustration from current happenings. Laboring men, by which we mean those who toil with their hands in the service of others, have complained that they have been unfairly treated. I have not any doubt that their complaint is a just one. They have striven for correction. Through unionization and a combination of circumstances they have possessed themselves of vast powers. Their direction unfortunately has fallen far too largely into the hands of unscrupulous exploiters and the spirit of reprisal is set in operation. They now in many ways seek to punish those against whom they have nursed their grievances. These offer resistance and useless quarrels grow.

The simple law is that a wrong is never righted by the commission of another wrong. The expressive common phrase is "Two wrongs never make a right." Those who have so bitterly inveighed against injustice now deny their fellow workmen who do not wish to join with them the right peaceably by their honest toil to earn their daily bread. Rival unions quarrel among themselves and in promotion of their feuds stop work to the irreparable loss of non-contending parties and the public at large. By violence property is destroyed, men maimed and murdered and anarchy supplants the rule of law and order.

DEFENSE PREPARATIONS DELAYED THROUGH GREED

We read daily reminders that a national peril hangs over us, which can be averted only by straining every productive power we have while at the same time plants are shut down and men forced to idleness as the alleged danger creeps steadily upon us. Boys by the thousands have been taken from their employment to prepare themselves for the fighting service where they receive twenty-one dollars a month. No one knows how soon they may be in armed battle, but the implements of war they shall need are not being provided because those who remain undisturbed in their employment, and who are already drawing from two to three times as much in a week as the soldier gets in a month, strike for higher pay and as a means of enforcing their demands not only refuse to work themselves but by violence prevent others who are willing to work from doing so. If the soldier boys go into war unequipped somebody will be answerable.

THE WAY TO INDUSTRIAL PEACE

And how useless it all is. Instead of reprisals or vengeance the Gospel message teaches forgiveness and peace.

Let not the sun go down upon thy wrath.

But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you.

For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you.

But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

In these principles of the Gospel message lies the way to industrial peace. I appeal to the laboring men to forego the methods of force and vengeance for they will never bring you peace of mind, contentment of spirit nor the rewards you seek. I think I am in a position from experience and observation to understand your aspirations. I have a deep sympathy with your desire to improve your conditions. It is a laudable ambition for every one. But vituperation and violence and hatred and reprisal will bring you in the end only disillusionment, disappointed hopes and the bitterness of remorse. The peaceful way of counsel and persuasion and a willingness to show justice and observe the right are the ways that will win. I make the same appeal to the industrialist, to the man of agriculture and to the whole race.

PEACE IS DRIVEN FROM OUR BORDERS

This goodly land of ours, the boasted refuge of the oppressed and the guarantor of freedom, is seething with unrest. Strife, class rancors, uncertainty, hatreds, greed, deception, demagoguery have driven peace from our borders. The simple truth is that the interests of all classes are inseparably bound up together. There is no legitimate basis for antagonisms between industrialists and laborers or between agriculturists and either of the others. They are kept apart by distrust, suspicion and a reciprocal lack of faith and confidence. Each is essential to the other. Neither can prosper alone, but they are set in conflict by stupid name calling, epithet hurling, and intemperate denunciations. These procedures have always failed. The healing for wounds is not more wounds but a soothing balm.

The final resort of a nation which seeks to impose its unbridled will upon others is war. War is always evil. It has always been so and never can be anything else.

WARS SETTLE NOTHING

If you read your Hebrew scriptures you will see that the destructions which befell the people were heralded by wars and slaughters. War was the scourge by which the land was devastated as told in the Book of Mormon story. And when Jesus was describing to His disciples the sorrows and tribulations which were to be so terrible that except they should be cut short there should no flesh be saved, prominent among the initiating terrors were wars—nation rising against nation and kingdom against kingdom.

A war of defense may be justifiable. It may be the only means of saving from utter extinction those institutions and sanctions through which the ways of peace by conversion to a better way may be implemented. But so far as any lasting enduring results are concerned wars themselves settle nothing. It is their history that the settlements imposed at the close of one contain the seeds of another to follow.

But I need not pursue the point. The thesis I laid down at the beginning, namely, that the Gospel message is universal and has in it, all the necessary curative agents for the ills of the day, is clearly demonstrable. Your own reflection will carry you far beyond any place to which in the limits of my time I have been able to take you.

GOSPEL MESSAGE MUST BE TAUGHT

Let me in closing refer again to the second phase of my theme, namely, that in the eternal conflict between right and wrong there can be no compromise. The Gospel message cannot change its principles to accommodate itself to the caprice of the hour. Among the great unchangeables are the truth that God lives; that Jesus Christ is His Son, the Messiah, the Savior of the world; that He died, was buried and was raised from the dead; that man is a child of God, destined to immortality; that he is therefore a sacred being and that it is unalterably wrong to enslave him or to coerce the human spirit; that there is a moral law by which man must, through disciplined self-control, govern himself which finds its faithful expression in the Ten Commandments as given by Moses and reiterated and reinforced by the Master, and which cannot be rejected without destroying the foundations of civilized life. These convictions are the essential conditions to the incorporation of the principles of the Gospel message into the lives of men by which alone may be satisfied the hunger of the world for tranquility and peace. These truths the Church can never cease to teach.

It is for you leaders to see that they are taught. That God may give you power to do so, I pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

ELDER DAVID A. BROADBENT

Former President of the North Central States Mission

My brethren and sisters, I was notified before noon that I would be given five minutes in which to bear my testimony, and I have been worrying about it ever since.

I had the privilege, with my family, under the good graces of our leadership and the blessings of the Lord to preside in the North Central States Mission for a little more than three years. We are very grateful for that opportunity. I think I shall leave the report of that mission to my worthy successor, who I believe is the best man in the Church to succeed me in that position, Elder George F. Richards, Jr., who for the past six months has been presiding in that field of labor. We were released from that glorious opportunity to come and take his position in the Temple, he having been Second Counselor to President Chipman there while we presided in the mission.

While in the North Central States, I considered that to be the best position in the Church. Now I will say without hesitancy that I believe that any position in which we may have the privilege of serving in this Church is the best place that we can be appointed to labor, it matters not where, only let us remain active in the Church.

We are just now in the midst of what our people are considering rather a tightening up on the question of recommendations to get into the Temple. I have no disposition to speak at length to that particular point, but to illustrate with an incident that occurred only a few weeks ago when a member from a very worthy family came and said: "Are you going to keep me out of the Temple for the sake of a cup of coffee?"

The attendant who met that sister replied, "Are you going to let a cup of coffee keep you out of the Temple?" I think that is the position we must take in our testimony, as I find myself fully in accord with all that has been said at this Conference thus far.

I find myself committed to the thought that my testimony is my life. I believe the day will never come when this Church can move forward without the divinity of the testimony of Jesus Christ, but I am sure that there is a practical side to that testimony. There is no virtue in a mere assent to a confession of belief in the Gospel of Jesus Christ. We really have to do something about it. There are two purposes as I see it in the Gospel plan and in service of the Church. First, the great mission of seeing that this Gospel reaches mankind throughout the world. We must teach mankind in every nation, kindred, tongue and people; and the second mission of this message is that we shall perfect ourselves as individuals through activity in the Church, in applying its every teaching.

There is no testimony in the heart of any man, as I understand a real testimony, who declares that he believes in the Word of Wisdom if he continues to desecrate it; to break that law in any way. I am very positive in my mind that no man can have a full testimony of the law of tithing who does not honestly pay a full tithing. I am very well committed to the thought that in the homes of the Latter-day Saints there are none who have a full and complete testimony of the Gospel, who neglect their daily prayers with the family. I cannot conceive as a fact that a Latter-day Saint with a testimony, will let his children grow up in idleness without having them understand that there is a great educational institution all around us,—I mean the entire educational system provided by the State from the grades through the university,—that they could be receiving the benefits of, instead of leaving them to grow up in ignorance. I am convinced that there is no real testimony in the homes of the Latter-day Saints where the parents do not lead their children into the organizations of the Church, to train and teach them the benefits and blessings of this great program. The plan of salvation, the Gospel of Jesus Christ is the greatest university that has ever been instituted in all the world.

I am very sure that if we had a full and complete testimony of the Gospel of Christ in 100% of the homes of the 806,000 Latter-day Saints, and if we were living according to our teaching, that we would need no other missionary work in the world. The whole world would be at our feet and ask "How did you do it?" for it would produce such a superior race of men and women as has never been known in the earth up to the present time.

If we had a full and complete testimony of the Gospel of Christ in our homes our young men and maidens would not be seeking either the Bishop or the President of the Stake, a constable or Judge, or any other officer of the land to consummate their marriage at the proper age in life; but they would come into the House of the Lord to be sealed for time and for all eternity, knowing that this is the only real type of marriage instituted by God and designed to be eternal.

I am just as sure if we might detail all the other activities of the Church that my testimony, your testimony, is measured by my actions, by your actions, and in no other way. I may give assent, but that is not a testimony. The testimony as I see it is illustrated largely as a result of what is said of the two great Greek orators, Demosthenes and Cicero.

When Cicero spoke everyone said: "He speaks well." But when Demosthenes spoke the audience declared, "Let us go against Philip." Philip to us is the sins of this hour; Philip to us is the desecration of the Sabbath Day and the breaking of any and all the other moral and religious laws of God. I may have this testimony in knowledge, but it is as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal unless my life responds to it in all the affairs that I am responsible for.

God give me the power to move in the circles where I am appointed, to the end that I may show by my works that I do know the Gospel of Jesus Christ is true, I pray earnestly in His name, even so. Amen.

ELDER MERRILL D. CLAYSON

Former President of the Southern States Mission

It has been a great opportunity to have had the privilege of filling a mission in the Southern States, as well as a previous one in England.

The introduction of the Gospel of Jesus Christ into the Southern States, like the beginning of most new movements, was accompanied by gross misunderstanding, hatred and bitter persecution. The history of this mission is filled with incidents of persecution that our missionaries went through in order to introduce the Gospel into that land. From 1875 to 1900 there is recorded over 135 mobbings experienced by the missionaries. More than ten churches were either torn down or burned by the mobs. Four Elders lost their lives while carrying the Gospel to their fellowmen and it took years to break down this great wall of persecution.

History is replete with evidences which show that through all of this the Lord was back of this great work in prompting, inspiring and building the lives of men and women who stood for truth. Today the scene presents a completely different picture. Persecution has vanished and the missionaries are given the opportunity of preaching the Gospel in all cities of the Southern States Mission extending from the Mississippi River to the Atlantic Ocean, and from the South Tennessee line to Key West, Florida.

As an example of this great change in the attitude of the people of the South toward our Church may I relate just one experience. Sometime ago the chairman of a council of religions made the request that the President of the Southern States Mission appear before the ministers and executives of more than twenty-five churches and tell them the philosophy and story of Mormonism. Naturally this request was granted, and when the day arrived the large Mormon Church in Jacksonville, Florida, was filled to overflowing. A few Latter-day Saints were on the side, but most of the people in that great hall were ministers and religious executives of Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish churches.

It was a great opportunity. I never felt more keenly in my life the responsibility of representing my Church and my God than I did on that occasion. It was peculiarly interesting to be introduced to such a congregation as that by the wife of a Jewish Rabbi. After the meeting was over, Catholics, Protestants, and Jews came up to the speaker with as much enthusiasm and appreciation for the truths of Mormonism that had been presented, as if they had been members of the Church.

There never has been a time in the Southern States Mission when conditions have been more ideal for the spread of the Gospel than today. The number of souls accepting the Gospel in that land is rising to greater heights continually. The future of this Mission presents a most promising outlook. The people of the South are naturally religious. They are great believers in the Bible, and the assertion that they are sincere and hospitable cannot be overestimated.

I believe that the time is coming and not far off when this Mission is to be one of the strongest and most powerful units of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. God has endowed this great southern country richly in natural beauty, with shrubs, with the oak and the sweet magnolia, with the dogwood, and many, many other types of her creation. I am grateful for the opportunities I have had of filling this mission. I appreciate the opportunity that the First Presidency of the Church has given me and believe from the bottom of my heart that these men are called by God and are working in His behalf in this great kingdom.

Whenever I have had an element of doubt in my life regarding their instructions I have lived to see the time when I was wrong and they were right. This has convinced me more than ever that their vision of this great Church of ours is unusual, that they are called of God, that they are inspired by God, and that men and women who follow their advice will be happier, more progressive, and reach greater heights than those who stoop to complain and find fault with God's servants.

And so I bear you this testimony today. We may not always think as they think, but they are God's servants. If a time should come that any of them are not in line with their duty we shall not need to worry about removing them. The Lord will remove them from their positions as He did Saul and others in days of old.

God bless us to stand back of them solidly as a unit for the progress of this great Church, and for our personal happiness in life, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

An anthem, "O Divine Redeemer," was sung by the Choir.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I should like again to express our gratitude and appreciation to this wonderful chorus that has come to us from Idaho. We are grateful to them for all the work they have done in preparing to do this singing for us. They are a splendid group of young people, and we certainly pray that the Lord will bless them in their labors.

Please drive carefully, brethren and sisters. I do not know how widespread this storm may be, but be careful, and if any of these young people in the choir are returning home tonight I hope they and their drivers will be particularly careful. You who are walking on the streets, please be good enough to walk carefully and observe the signals.

Elder Clifford E. Young, President of the Alpine Stake, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until ten o'clock Sunday morning, April 6.

THIRD DAY

MORNING MEETING

Sunday morning, April 6.

The great Tabernacle was crowded with people many of whom had assembled far in advance of the time to begin this session of the Conference. The large Assembly Hall immediately south of the Tabernacle was also filled with people, and other thousands assembled on the Tabernacle grounds. Those who were in the Assembly Hall and on the grounds listened to the services as they were broadcast from the Tabernacle, by means of amplifying equipment that had been installed.

The meeting commenced promptly at 10 o'clock.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

The hour has come for the opening of this the fifth session of this Conference. President Heber J. Grant is present and presiding. He has asked President Clark to conduct the meeting.

There are present on the stand this morning President Grant and his two Counselors, the eleven Apostles, all of the First Seven Presidents of Seventies, and all of the Presiding Bishopric.

The music for both of the sessions today will be by the Tabernacle Choir; Elder J. Spencer Cornwall is Director, and Elder Frank W. Asper is organist.

The congregation and Choir sang the hymn, "Now Let Us Rejoice"—William W. Phelps.

Elder George Ariel Bean, President of the Union Stake, offered the opening prayer.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH SUSTAINED

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., First Counselor in the First Presidency, presented for the vote of the Conference the General Authorities and General Officers of the Church, also the General Auxiliary Officers, and they were sustained by the unanimous vote of the congregation, as follows:

FIRST PRESIDENCY

Heber J. Grant, Prophet, Seer and Revelator and President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

J. Reuben Clark, Jr., First Counselor in the First Presidency.

David O. McKay, Second Counselor in the First Presidency.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Rudger Clawson

COUNCIL OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Charles A. Callis

Albert E. Bowen

Sylvester Q. Cannon

Harold B. Lee

ACTING PATRIARCH TO THE CHURCH

George F. Richards

The Counselors in the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles, and the Acting Patriarch to the Church as Prophets, Seers, and Revelators.

President Clark then made the following statement for the First Presidency:

In the past history of the Church, especially in President Brigham Young's time, it was found necessary for the First Presidency or the Twelve, or both, to call brethren, frequently designated as Counselors, to help carry on their assigned work in the Church.

The rapid growth of the Church in recent times, the constantly increasing establishment of new Wards and Stakes, the ever widening geographical area covered by Wards and Stakes, the steadily pressing necessity for increasing our missions in numbers and efficiency that the Gospel may be brought to all men, the continual multiplying of Church interests and activities calling for more rigid and frequent observation, supervision, and direction—all have built up an apostolic service of the greatest magnitude.

The First Presidency and Twelve feel that to meet adequately their great responsibilities and to carry on efficiently this service for the Lord, they should have some help.

Accordingly it has been decided to appoint Assistants to the Twelve, who shall be High Priests, who shall be set apart to act under the direction of the Twelve in the performance of such work as the First Presidency and the Twelve may place upon them.

There will be no fixed number of these Assistants. Their number will be increased or otherwise from time to time as the necessity of carrying on the Lord's work seems to dictate to be wise.

It is proposed that we sustain as Assistants to the Twelve, the following named High Priests, who will labor under the supervision and direction of the First Presidency and of the Twelve:

Marion G. Romney, President of Bonneville Stake.

Thomas E. McKay, former President of Ogden Stake and Acting President of the European Mission.

Clifford E. Young, President of the Alpine Stake.

Alma Sonne, President of Cache Stake.

Nicholas G. Smith, President of the Northwestern States Mission.

TRUSTEE-IN-TRUST

Heber J. Grant

As Trustee-in-Trust for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

TABERNACLE CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

During the period from 10:30 to 11:00 a. m., the regular weekly nation-wide broadcast of choral and organ music and brief spoken comment was presented as part of the General Conference proceedings. This program, which will have completed its twelfth year of continuous nation-wide broadcasting in July of this year, was presented by the Tabernacle Choir and Organ, and broadcast through the courtesy and facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System's coast-to-coast network, throughout the United States and Canada, and by short wave transmission to many foreign lands. This broadcast originated with Radio Station KSL, Salt Lake City, and, exclusive of routine introductory and closing announcements, was as follows:

Announcer, Richard L. Evans: As another week of life begins for all men, we pause again within these hallowed walls to welcome you once more to the Everlasting Hills of the West. This traditional Temple Square performance, now in its twelfth year of continuous nation-wide broadcasting, is brought to you each week at this hour through the facilities of the Columbia network and its affiliated stations.

We begin with a song written upon one of the most beloved incidents of the New Testament: "I think when I read that sweet story of old, when Jesus was here among men, how He called little children as lambs to His fold, I should like to have been with Him then."

"The Story of Old"—Parks .....Choir
 "Grand Choeur in D"—Spence .....Organ

Announcer, Richard L. Evans: The hymn now to be sung by the Tabernacle Choir has come down to us from those whose courage and conviction conquered the western desert nearly a century ago: "Come, come ye Saints, no toil nor labor fear . . . and should we die before our journey's through, happy day, all is well."

"Come, Come Ye Saints"—Clayton .....Choir
 "Live by my Side"—Bach .....Organ

Announcer, Richard L. Evans: Ofttimes in the face of some eventuality that has overtaken us, we find ourselves saying regretfully: "If I had only known, I would have done differently." Sometimes this is true, but more often it is not the fact that we do not know that gets us into difficulties, but rather that we choose to ignore what we do know. We mix so little wisdom with our knowledge. We know the facts of history. We know what causes have produced what results in the past—but time has a way of making the past seem different from the present. We may believe that Babylon and Rome fell because of their moral and spiritual dissolution. It seems so easy to believe this because it is all far in the past. But it does not seem so easy to believe such probabilities of our own time and our own generation, however true they may be. From history and from scripture it seems quite easy to believe that men have always paid a price for disobedience; that the breaking of a law has always exacted its penalty; that the terrible luxury of over-indebtedness has always brought a day of disastrous reckoning. It seems easy to believe of the past that the Lord God has often permitted evil men to pursue their purposes for a short season before over-ruling their evil works. It seems easy to believe of the past that those who would rather mortgage the future than curtail their appetites, have always been brought low in remorse. But what is not so easy to believe, but is also solemnly true, is that these same causes will still lead to these same results even in our day. We have no charmed immunity from the consequences of our own doing. On this point the Father of the spirits of all men has said:

I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say; but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise. (D. and C. 82:10.)

Knowledge of the past we have—both of scripture and of history. It would be well to transmit that knowledge into wisdom, by believing of our own generation what we so readily believe of other times.

"Gloria"—Mozart .....	Choir
"How Great the Wisdom and the Love"—McIntyre.....	Organ
"Abide With Me"—Monk .....	Choir

The singing was directed by J. Spencer Cornwall. Dr. Frank W. Asper was at the Tabernacle Organ. The spoken word was by Richard L. Evans.

CHURCH OF THE AIR BROADCAST

Immediately after the conclusion of the traditional Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast, an additional thirty minute period, regularly known as the Columbia Broadcasting System's Church of the Air program, was presented from 11:00 to 11:30 a. m. as a part of the proceedings of this session of the Conference, and was also released over nation-wide and international network facilities. The program was conducted by Elder Richard L. Evans; music was by the congregation of more than 10,000 voices and by the Tabernacle Choir and Organ, with J. Spencer Cornwall directing and Dr. Frank W. Asper at the Organ, and Elder Stephen L. Richards of the Council of the Twelve delivered the following address:

ELDER STEPHEN L RICHARDS

DESCRIPTION OF THE TABERNACLE

For the benefit of those who listen over the air, perhaps I should first say something about my surroundings at this broadcast. I stand in the historic Tabernacle in Salt Lake City. The vast auditorium is completely filled by the congregation. Thousands are standing in the aisles and in the spacious doorways and more thousands are in the grounds about the building, unable to gain admittance. There are more men than women in the audience, which, I believe, is rather exceptional in church gatherings throughout the country. The people here assembled have come from many parts of the United States, chiefly from the West, from Canada, Mexico, and some islands of the Pacific. War disturbances have prevented travel from Europe and other distant countries.

Behind the upper pulpit where I stand are seated the Tabernacle Choir composed of about 300 singers who serve without pay and who, for more than a decade, have gratuitously furnished weekly programs to the radio listeners of America. You have just heard the voice of their faithful, capable announcer, Richard L. Evans. The great Organ of the Tabernacle towers over the Choir in the background,—its massive, ornamented structure almost presenting the appearance of another building within the main building.

The Tabernacle has unusual acoustical properties, as some of you may have learned. To demonstrate these properties a pin is dropped on a table near the rostrum and those who listen in the other end of the building, 200 or more feet away, are able to hear it. These remarkable sound effects are obtained largely through the elliptical dome-like roof which was erected by the Pioneers in early days before the railroads came to this section of the country. Steel girders were not available, bolts and even nails were hard to obtain. So the roof is supported by wooden truss-work made of timbers taken from the nearby mountains and in lieu of bolts and metal commonly used in such construction, wooden pins were employed as fasteners and strips of rawhide used to secure the pins and prevent splitting of the timbers.

The Tabernacle is but one of many enterprises undertaken and successfully completed by the Pioneers, during the time they were isolated from production centers. They were of necessity forced to be resourceful and they were not without ambition and skill. They came to this then forbidding land of desert and mountains, driven by a great religious urge and a still greater religious intolerance on the part of others. The story of their persecutions, their drivings and migrations is pretty well known. It is doubtful, however, that their motives and their lives have ever been generally understood. It is from their motivating concepts that I desire to draw the theme of this hour.

RELIGIOUS IDEALS OF THE PIONEERS

These Pioneers, who were the progenitors of many who sit in this audience and others who hear my voice this day, had the idea that religion is the most important and vital thing in the world. They subordinated all things to it. They construed it to be broad and comprehensive enough to cover every aspect of living. They gave to temporal things spiritual significance. They accepted divine law as the standard by which all things are rightly determined. They consecrated themselves to the doing of God's will and the establishment of His Kingdom.

So resolute and intent were they upon this latter objective that they stood ready to devote time, talent and property to the advancement of the Cause in which they believed, often with untold sacrifice to themselves and their families. In response to the call of their leaders they frequently undertook hazardous colonization projects which deprived them of the security and comfort of homes they had built and communities they had helped to establish. Then, too, the menfolk would leave their newly formed homes with the bare subsistence obtained for their families and again at the call of their religious leaders undertake, at their own expense, missions for the Church, frequently retraversing the path of their migration to distant lands from which they had come or to other countries, seeking to carry to others, perhaps their kinsmen, neighbors and friends of the Old World, the message in which they believed; so that in the early days of the settlement of this country there were always two armies on the march,—one made up of men and women coming from the eastern States and from lands across the sea, converts of the new faith, making the long, weary trek across the prairies to the land and people of their adoption,—and the other made up of missionaries, many of whom came from the ranks of these same converts, winding their way back across the prairies to expand the knowledge of the truth they had found. It was one continuous round from convert to missionary and missionary to convert.

This was the demonstration of the vitality of their religion to these people. No one who knew their sacrifices ever questioned their sincerity. They had been taught to make sacrifices and endure hardships for the Cause they had espoused by their first leader. His devotion, his perseverance, and his loyalty through the unspeakable persecutions heaped upon him, finally resulting in his cruel martyrdom, had served to make the hardships and deprivations of his followers seem small by comparison. So these men and women of the early days did not complain. They welcomed opportunities for service and they counted themselves fortunate to be chosen for great undertakings.

EARLY MISSIONARIES AND THEIR MESSAGE

These missionaries of whom I speak were not trained theologians and preachers. They were almost entirely made up of men from the ordinary walks of life who made their own living by their own work. Not many of them had enjoyed the privilege of extensive schooling because schools were rare in those days, but they were hard-headed men of practical experience who knew the value of industry and who prized education, even though they may not have had much of it. Many of them came from the New England States. Their fathers had fought in the Revolutionary War, so they knew the meaning and the value of freedom and democracy. They believed the Constitution to have been framed by divinely inspired men and they loved their country with a greater love than in some instances it had deserved at their hands. So these missionaries for the most part were loyal, free Americans who went forth with conviction in their hearts to preach a religion and a Gospel which they believed would make all men free. They had no eloquence but the eloquence of their message, but people everywhere listened to them and believed in their sincerity and many thousands embraced the truth which they taught.

Perhaps the principal thing which made them feel that their religion was so vital and their responsibility in it so great was that they believed that Jesus Christ had set in the earth anew His holy Gospel with a new interpretation of it for all mankind. They considered themselves under obligation to present this new interpretation of the Gospel to every person possible for them to reach that he might have the opportunity of accepting or rejecting the message. I think perhaps you might be interested to know what some of these new interpretations which the early missionaries carried to the people of the world are.

They taught that since every man is a son of God, each man is entitled, if he lives worthily, to receive and exercise the power of God in the form of the holy Priesthood. They believed that this divine gift and its bestowal was not reserved merely for a few selected men, but that it was essential for every man who would do Christ's work effectively and prepare himself for eternal life with the Savior of the world. They taught that each one receiving this power should use it to bless the lives of others by performing the ordinances of the Gospel and by carrying with him the inspiring and comforting spirit which emanates from the Priesthood. They bore witness of the authentic bestowal of the Priesthood in their generation and of innumerable demonstrations of its efficacy. They interpreted the Priesthood as a divine force coming to men on whom it is bestowed to be exercised only in mercy and by persuasive means, without any compulsion whatsoever. They taught that anyone who sought to use his Priesthood for ulterior purposes or self aggrandizement or in any degree of unrighteousness should lose it. It was recognized as a Christ-like endowment, thriving only in Christian virtue.

NEW CONCEPTS IN THE RESTORED GOSPEL

They set forth a new concept of man's body, that it is the tabernacle wherein is housed the spirit of man which is the literal child of God, the Father, and that no man can knowingly take into his body poisons and other deleterious substances without offending God, the Father of his spirit,—so that infractions of the true laws of health have spiritual as well as temporal significance. They endeavored to persuade men to refrain from indulgence in intoxicating liquors, tobacco, coffee, tea and other narcotics, not alone for reasons of health but because they believed that such practices would militate against faith and spiritual growth and consequently against true worship of God. As a health measure, these early teachings of more than a century ago have been amply vindicated by modern science and their spiritual value has likewise been substantiated.

Another new concept which these men taught related to the matrimonial status. They set forth that marital unions, through the performance of proper ordinances under divine authority, may be made to endure not for time and earthly life only, but for all eternity; that a man and woman properly married by the holy Priesthood may establish a home which will be the basis for their exaltation and happiness in the world to come; that all children born to them in this holy compact of marriage shall belong to and be with them hereafter; that death does not break such bonds and that sin only can sever such ties,—the epitome of such teaching being that our heaven is little more than the projection of our home into eternity.

They gave to the world a new idea about salvation. The interpretation which they promulgated was that through the atonement of the Lord Jesus Christ all men would be resurrected from the grave and come forth in a new life hereafter—and this irrespective of the creed they might profess or without belief in or acceptance of any religion whatsoever. They made clear distinction between general salvation or resurrection from the grave and individual salvation or exaltation earned by a man through his compliance with the laws of God. They taught that there are preferential places in heaven as there are on earth and that the highest place or Celestial Kingdom could be attained only by those who faithfully subscribe to and keep all the laws and ordinances of the Gospel of Jesus Christ and thereby entitle themselves to come into the presence of our God and Jesus Christ, His Son.

They taught, too, that holy Temples dedicated to the Lord are essential for the administration of some of the necessary ordinances of the Gospel to prepare for the highest blessings to which man may aspire and that these Temples are also necessary for the accomplishment of certain vicarious work to be performed for our ancestors who have passed away without knowledge of the Gospel plan, so that ultimately none of God's children will be treated unfairly but that each shall have opportunity to accept the principles of the Gospel and earn our Father's blessings. So confident were these early missionaries as to the necessity and vitality of this Temple work that they and their people made almost incomprehensible sacrifices for the erection of beautiful buildings to be dedicated to the Lord for these holy purposes. One such building built at Nauvoo, Illinois, at a cost of a million dollars, entailing years of labor and untold deprivation to poor people was wantonly destroyed by a mob within sight of the people fleeing from their cruelty in evacuation of the city. Wherever the adherents to the faith have gathered in sufficient numbers they have always caused to be erected as their most expensive establishment a Temple of the Lord for the performance of sacred ordinances and ceremonies.

These missionaries also carried the word that new revelations had come from the Lord, setting forth, among other things, these new concepts of which I have told you and bearing new and additional witness of the divinity of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. They acknowledged these new revelations as additional scripture to the Bible and as the Word of God. They heralded them as a supreme blessing in the resolution of doubt and uncertainty and the acquisition of deep and abiding faith in the Gospel of Christ. In these revelations are such important statements as these:

Truth is knowledge of things as they are, and as they were and as they are to come.

The spirit of truth is of God.

And no man receiveth a fullness unless he keepeth His commandments.

The glory of God is intelligence, or in other words light and truth.

No man can be saved in ignorance. A man is saved no faster than he learns. Whatever knowledge a man acquires in this life he will take with him into the world to come.

On the basis of such statements the doctrine of eternal progression was deduced and taught. Men were given to understand that through obedience to the laws of the Gospel they might continue to grow and develop in knowledge and power until in eternity they would come to divinity itself; that the highest order of intelligence is that intelligence which comprehends the things of God and eternity; that, "It is the glory of God to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man," and that "men are that they might have joy." The place of good and evil in the world and their necessity for the exercise of man's free agency were all set forth in this new interpretation of the Gospel of Christ.

A VITAL FAITH THE NEED OF THE WORLD

I have, of course, only outlined very briefly the distinctive doctrines and principles which these early missionaries carried to many countries of the earth. My purpose in telling you of this almost incomparable devotion to a cause is to emphasize the necessity I feel exists in the Christian world for a living, vital faith that truly works. Surely all observers must be convinced that mere protestation of faith in Christ is wholly inadequate to carry forward His work and set up His Kingdom in the earth. "Faith without works is dead." Lip service is futile. No man truly loves Christ unless he obeys the laws of His Gospel. We never have the truth until we adopt it in our lives. No man learns true worship of Christ without truly giving himself to Christian service and I believe that no man is a true disciple of Christ who does not acknowledge Him for what He really is, the Savior and the divine God of this earth.

Equivocation about His divinity not only would rob the Christ of His real power but it likewise robs the professed Christian of the concept and the loyalty which alone make him a true disciple. What the world most needs today is not so much adoration of the attributes of Christ, however beautiful and beneficent they are, as the true worship and acknowledgment of the sovereignty of the Lord and His divine power. When men and nations look to Him as the arbiter of all questions and the principles of His Gospel as the criteria by which all considerations shall be judged, then, and then only, will the world be the beneficiary of the true Christian influence and power.

IRREVERENCE WEAKENS FAITH

This will not come about so long as men mock God and set at naught His holy laws. No man can love God and damn Him. Irreverence expressed in profanity is an all too important factor in weakening Christian influence. I call upon men everywhere, for the most part thoughtless men, to cease taking the name of God and Christ in vain and to seek to establish, among the youth particularly, a sincere reverence for these holy Beings. Why do we have to endure such profanity in our military establishments? I should think the Commander-in-Chief would exercise his great influence to stop it.

I am sure that disrespect for sacred names and sacred things has in large measure contributed to widespread disregard of law, authority and established institutions throughout the land. If a boy is taught to revere God and respect his father, we may be pretty well assured of a loyal, law abiding citizen, whereas those who blaspheme holy names and speak of their parents as "the old man" and "the old woman" are very apt to be a liability rather than an asset to society.

RESPONSIBILITY OF EDUCATORS

I decry the tendency manifest among certain educators who are still greatly in the minority, I am happy to believe, and among other sophisticated people to tear down the faith of youth and their confidence in eternal verities. I can scarcely think of anything more cruel and mean than for one who has had extended educational opportunities and the advantage of a position in an institution of learning to impose upon the credulity and immaturity of a student and rob the young mind of a faith and confidence that will support him at least until he has had experience sufficient to make wise decisions.

Would not the fathers and mothers of America today take great comfort if they could have the assurance that all their boys in the training camps were fortified and directed by faith in God? I believe they would, and anyone who has robbed them of that faith has cause for regret and repentance.

It is therefore living faith in the eternal God and in Jesus Christ, His Son and faith in man, too, as the son of God which is so imperative today in the advancement of Christian civilization. Such faith will clarify and not mystify our thinking, our relationships and our aspirations.

I firmly believe that true science has no quarrel with faith of this order. The scientists who are frank enough to admit the limitations of their fields of research and demonstration will impugn neither the motives nor convictions of the spiritual man of true faith. If they themselves do not share such faith, their very scientific attitude should prompt them to say of the faithful, "They may be right,—we do not know. The province of the spiritual is beyond the scope of our investigations."

Now I realize, my friends, that this is a subject on which the experiences and the convictions of each man determine his attitude and conclusion. Faith is individual. No one can acquire it for another. About all one can do for another is to voice his testimony and substantiate it by consistent living.

THE VALUE OF A LIVING FAITH

I take the liberty, in conclusion, to give to you my humble assurance that the living faith in Jesus Christ which dominated the lives and work of our Pioneer progenitors is alive in the hearts of our people today. I know that there is vitality and power in that faith. I have had ample demonstration of its efficacy in my own life and I commend it with all the power of my soul to men and women of all countries, tongues and creeds the world over. It will resolve doubt and uncertainties. It will give high purpose to living. It will fortify against temptation. It will promote love and charity. It will assuage sorrow, and rob death of its sting. It will bring contentment, peace, enduring happiness, and a spirit that passes understanding.

God grant that such faith may be the portion of men and nations and that divine truth may quickly triumph, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ, the Lord of this earth. Amen.

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "O Ye Mountains High"—Charles W. Penrose.

An anthem, "Praise Ye the Lord"—Evan Stephens—was sung by the Choir.

(End of Church of the Air Program)

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY
Second Counselor in the First Presidency

From among the sublime teachings of the Savior in the Sermon on the Mount I quote the following:

Seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.

This admonition and promise I have chosen for my theme this morning because (1) it seems so aptly to epitomize generally the timely instructions given at this Conference. Then, too, it expresses the ideal to which every man who holds the Priesthood has subscribed. Again, if heeded, it will be the greatest and best safeguard to our sons who are called to serve their country. And, finally, I firmly believe that if rulers of nations followed that admonition contention and war would be banished from among men.

What the kingdom of God is, is answered by the Prophet Joseph Smith as follows:

Where there is a prophet, a priest, or a righteous man unto whom God gives His oracles, there is the kingdom of God.

Seeking first the Kingdom means subordinating to the principles of the Gospel all other aims and pursuits.

WHAT THE KINGDOM OF GOD IMPLIES

The term implies divine rule in the hearts and wills of men and in society. Man acknowledges a power and authority superior to his own. "It is not the arbitrary rule of a despotic Deity, but is based upon man's voluntary submission of his will to that of God's." On one occasion Jesus said, "The kingdom of God is within you." That is true, for it is in the heart of man that membership in the outward kingdom has its origin. Devotion and loyalty that spring thus from the heart "for the common Father of all mankind is the strongest and only universal bond that can bind all men together." Only such a group looking as one mind to heaven for guidance can eventually transform human society.

The Kingdom of God implies also a universal brotherhood in which all men acknowledge God as their Supreme Ruler and cherish the desire to obey His divine will.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The mission of the Church is to prepare the way for the final establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth. Its purpose is, first, to develop in men's lives Christ-like attributes; and, second, to transform society so that the world may be a better and more peaceful place in which to live.

HOW THE CHURCH CONTRIBUTES TO CHARACTER BUILDING

In the changing of men's lives the Church recognizes certain fundamental factors so essentially important that they are constantly called to our attention, and have been impressively emphasized by the speakers in this Conference. For example, recognizing the reality of the divine edict "the sins of the fathers will be visited upon the children to the third and fourth generation" the Church emphasizes the necessity of moral and physical fitness for parenthood. Hence the constant plea that young men and women live clean, chaste lives prior to their assuming the responsibility of marriage, and their remaining true to that sacred covenant. Hence is constantly held before us the ideal of Temple marriage, where the sanctity of the marriage covenant is sealed and ratified by the highest divine authority given of God to man. Hence the emphasis laid upon the Word of Wisdom wherein tobacco, stimulants, and narcotics are eschewed, and temperance and obedience to the laws of health encouraged and admonished. Hence the teachings from childhood to be "honest, true, chaste, benevolent, virtuous, and to do good to all men."

The Church, recognizing the potency of other influences besides the home in the growing child's life before he reaches self-determination, offers a religious environment almost from the time of birth. The Sunday School, the Primary, the Mutual Improvement Association arrange suitable instruction, entertainment, and proper guidance from the cradle roll to maturity.

FIVE FATEFUL YEARS

Says one social writer:

The most fateful years in life are the first five, and this is the time when life is subject to its environment, and before self-consciousness and self-direction are aroused. In a large sense man's life has its bent and direction, its color and tone before it has begun to reason and choose.

Believing the adage, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart therefrom," the Church fosters Quorums and Auxiliaries in which over fifty thousand officers and teachers willingly and gratuitously devote their time, ability, and means for the development of character among the children and youth of the Church. Parents who fail to encourage their boys to attend their Quorum duties, who fail to encourage their children to take advantage of the Sunday School, the Primary, and the Mutual are recreant to their duties and to their parental responsibilities.

These are but a few of the aspects of the Church devoted to the phase of character building, and to something which is even more precious—a testimony of the truth of the restored Gospel of Jesus Christ.

The first duty of the citizens of the Kingdom is to live exemplary lives.

TRANSFORMING SOCIETY

But as I have said, the betterment of the individual is only one aim of the Church. The complete ideal of Mormonism is to make upright citizens in an ideal society.

On the night of Gethsemane, in the Upper Room, before Jesus and the Apostles left for the garden, He prayed:

I am now no more in the world, but these are in the world . . . I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from evil.

The mission of the Church is to minimize and if possible eliminate these "evils" from the world. The need of such a unifying force is expressed by a leading writer (Samuel Z. Batten) as follows:

The world has many good people in it today, more who are ready to believe than ever before, but these people possess no unifying ideals, no organic principles, no coherent view of life, no synthetic program of action. Society is coming to self-consciousness, and is beginning to take note of its troubles and needs, but it has no clear sense of direction, no organizing impulse, no all-inclusive ideals, no mighty impulsion. . . . Is there anything by which our nature can gain its unity; our race acknowledge its brotherhood, our humanity order its affairs as a whole?

We answer, yes—such a uniting force, such an ideal is the Gospel of Jesus Christ as restored through the Prophet Joseph Smith. It explains man's life and its purpose, and has within it the vital saving elements, noble ideals, and spiritual uplift for which the heart of man today is yearning.

Right thinking, upright men and women everywhere are desirous of eliminating from our communities evil elements that are constantly disintegrating society—the liquor problem with its drunkenness, poverty, and misery; immorality with all its attendant evils; war, which is literally hell on earth, and which is now devastating Europe and Asia; and threatening our own land.

SOCIAL ATTITUDE

What should be our attitude towards these social conditions? First, see to it that as individuals we do not by our acts contribute to their existence, and, second, put forth every righteous effort to eradicate them from our communities.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is seeking through its Welfare Plan, through increased Quorum consciousness and responsibility, to make both home and community environment better and brighter.

Cooperation and mutual helpfulness are virtues characteristic of the Church of Christ. Its watchwords are unity, efficiency, brotherhood—a brotherhood in which justice and mercy prompt the actions of all men.

President Young once said:

Whoever lives to see the Kingdom of God fully established upon the earth, will see a Government that will protect every person in his rights.

And again:

If the Kingdom of God were established on earth . . . one community would not be permitted to array itself in opposition to another to coerce them to their standard. One denomination would not be suffered to persecute another because they differed in religious belief and mode of worship. Everyone would be fully protected in the enjoyment of all religious and social rights, and no State, no Government, no community, no person would have the privilege of infringing on the rights of another.

HONEST LABOR ENCOURAGED

The arrogance of wealth, and the bitterness of soul that springs from poverty would find no place in a society made up of men and women who truly believed and put forth sincere effort to live in accordance with the Gospel.

The present strife between capital and labor, which in its enmity threatens to undermine the very foundation of the Government, would cease, for the spirit and actions of coercion, intimidation, and violence are contrary to the teachings of Jesus and by Him would be most vehemently denounced. Intimidation and dictatorship are elements foreign to the spirit and government of the Church. The Church encourages and recognizes honest labor whenever and wherever it presents itself, but it must condemn the spirit of oppression, of compulsion, of intimidation wherever it rears its head.

No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the Priesthood only by persuasion, by long suffering, by meekness, and by love unfeigned.

Says Beverley Nichols:

Economic problems, racial problems, sexual problems, unemployment problems, war problems, are myths, ugly phantoms created by minds that are not washed with the Spirit of Christ, absurd chimeræ that could only flourish in deserts across which the shadow of the cross has never fallen. I know that our lives have no "problems" as long as we trust in Christ, and the fact that my own life is full of problems at the moment is only a proof of the distance that I still have to travel before reaching perfection.

There are those in the world who say that jealousy, enmity, selfishness in men's hearts will always preclude the establishing of the ideal society known as the Kingdom of God. No matter what doubters and scoffers say, the mission of the Church of Christ is to eliminate sin and wickedness from the hearts of men, and so to transform society that peace and good-will will prevail on this earth.

The whole purpose of Christ's existence on this earth was to change human nature. And if you deny the possibility, you are saying to him, by implication, "Go back . . . we don't want you . . . you're attempting the impossible." Some brave men have said this, but it was the grey uniform of the atheist that they were wearing, and not the shining robes of the servant of Christ.

HUMAN NATURE

You CAN change human nature. No man who has felt in him the spirit of Christ, even for half a minute, can deny this truth, the one great truth in a world of little lies. You DO change human nature, your own human nature, if you surrender it to Him. To deny this is to proclaim yourself as an uneducated fool.

Human nature CAN be changed, here and now.

Human nature HAS been changed, in the past.

Human nature MUST be changed, on an enormous scale, in the future, unless the world is to be drowned in its own blood.

And only Christ can change it. . . .

Twelve men did a lot to change the world, nineteen hundred years ago. Twelve simple men, with only the wind to bear them over the seas, with only a few pence in their pockets, and a shining faith in their hearts. They fell far short of their ideal, their words were twisted and mocked, and false temples were built over their bones, in praise of a Christ they would have rejected. And yet, by the light of their inspiration many of the world's loveliest things were created and many of the world's finest minds inspired.

If twelve men did that, nineteen hundred years ago, what might not twelve men do today? For God has now given us the power of whispering across space, or transmitting our thoughts from one end of the earth to another. What shall we whisper—what shall we think? That is the question?

Every true Latter-day Saint will not only whisper but proclaim that "a marvelous work is about to come forth among the children of men." I most sincerely bear witness that the Church of Jesus Christ is that marvelous work.

PRESS EVER ONWARD

Therefore, O ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart, mind and strength, that ye may stand blameless before God at the last day.

With faith, charity and love in our hearts let us press ever onward inspired by the hope and assurance that—

There shall come a time when brotherhood shows stronger
Than the narrow bonds which now distract the world,
When cannons roar and trumpets blare no longer,
And the ironclad rusts, and battle flags are furled;
When the bars of creed and speech and race, which sever
Shall be fused in one humanity forever.

That God may give everyone a desire to help hasten that day by example as well as by precept, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

We are honored this morning by the presence of Dr. James E. West, celebrating his thirtieth year as Chief Scout Executive of the Boy Scouts of America. In his time nine and a half millions of boys have been members; now one and a half million Boy Scouts are enrolled. We have in the L. D. S. Church 25,000 Scouts. Tomorrow at the Hotel Utah there will be a conference of Utah Scout leaders.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "Let the Mountains Shout for Joy"—Evan Stephens.

The benediction was offered by Elder Archie R. Boyack, President of the Big Horn Stake.

Conference adjourned until 2 p. m.

THIRD DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The concluding session of the Conference convened Sunday afternoon, April 6, at 2 o'clock.

Again the great Tabernacle was crowded to capacity; in addition, the Assembly Hall immediately south of the Tabernacle, was filled to capacity, and thousands of others congregated on the Tabernacle grounds, where they listened to the services as they were broadcast from the Tabernacle.

The Tabernacle Choir furnished the music for this session of the Conference—Elder J. Spencer Cornwall, Director; Elder Alexander Schreiner, Organist.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

The time has arrived to open the sixth and last session of this General Conference. President Heber J. Grant is presiding and he has asked President Clark to conduct the services.

Again I repeat, through the courtesy of KSL and other stations cooperating, this service is being broadcast to four stations in Idaho, one in Price, and one in Cedar City. The Presidents of Stakes in these localities have arranged meetings in various of their Ward meeting houses. We have already heard from some of them saying they are having a good time. A direct wire from the Tabernacle here to the Los Angeles Tabernacle is also carrying the services to that area.

There are present on the stand this afternoon President Grant and his two Counselors, the full quorum of the Twelve, all of the First Seven Presidents of Seventies, and all of the Presiding Bishopric.

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "We Thank Thee, O God, For a Prophet."

Elder J. Percy Goddard, President of the Liberty Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "By Babylon's Wave"—Gounod.

ELDER GEORGE F. RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I have been very happy during this Conference, barring the anxiety that I have felt and feel, knowing that I would be expected to speak and to lead in intelligent, profitable thought the many people assembled and those who are on the air listening. The thought of it is almost appalling. If it were not for the faith that I have in the Lord through His Spirit coming to my assistance, I feel that I would wilt.

A MANIFESTATION OF INTEREST

I can say that my feelings have been in perfect accord with the business that has been transacted in this Conference, and with all that has gone before. I rejoice exceedingly in the blessing of the Lord that has been upon us in these various meetings. The attendance at each session, including the Priesthood meeting held in this building last evening, has far exceeded the seating capacity. Many hundreds of people have had to stand. One of the Mission Presidents told me last evening after the meeting that he had to stand all through the Priesthood meeting, that he could not find an unoccupied seat.

This is a glorious condition. It gives great satisfaction to the Presidency of this Church, the General Authorities, and I am sure it is pleasing to the Lord,—a manifestation of interest in the work of the Lord, in which we are engaged.

JOY IN THE MINISTRY

I have enjoyed my labors as much during the last six months in the ministry as at any other period of my life and experience. I rejoice in going out into the Stakes of Zion and the Missions and meeting leaders of the people, and the faithful of the people who attend our conference meetings. I find as I get better acquainted with members of the Church and leaders of the Church, that my love for them increases, and my appreciation for them and for the Gospel, increases also. The only difference between the love that I have for these leaders and the other part of the Church membership is that I do not know the others so well. There are just as good men and women, they are numbered by the thousands in this Church, whose acquaintance I do not have, who are just as good and faithful as those with whom I am acquainted.

I love the Latter-day Saints, and I hope that they can give me their love and support in return. I believe I have the confidence of the people. I am trying to live my religion as a teacher, to set a good example, and to encourage others to live their religion, and to faithfully serve the Lord.

REVELATION BROUGHT TRUE KNOWLEDGE OF GOD

In speaking of the Gospel I have in mind now what the Lord said of ancient Israel:

I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

Thou shalt have no other gods before me.

Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth.

Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, or serve them: for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God.

I am sure that it is displeasing to our Heavenly Father that His sons and daughters should worship anything else, or in any other way than that which He has designed and taught. The scriptures are replete with information pertaining to God the eternal Father, His existence,

His attributes, His personality, and qualities, so that there should be no question in the minds of intelligent men and women as to what kind of a being the God of this world is, the God of Abraham, of Isaac and Jacob. Yet the world has been in darkness for ages, with respect to the knowledge of God. In His loving mercy, in the opening of this Gospel dispensation of the fulness of times He revealed Himself anew to the world of mankind, He and His Son Jesus Christ, our Savior, appearing to the boy Joseph Smith, whom He raised up to be a mighty prophet of the last days, for the restoration of the Gospel and the establishment anew of His Church and kingdom here upon the earth, in preparation for the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ to reign as King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

ONE FATHER OF THE SPIRITS OF MEN

There is a responsibility on the membership of this Church to make known to the people of the world this wonderful revelation of the Father and the Son, as a part of the restored Gospel. We are told by scripture that a belief in God the eternal Father is vitally necessary to all intelligent beings. Their faith is centered in Him, and of necessity they must have a correct understanding of Him, and know Him as He is, a glorified and exalted being in whose image and likeness we are in very deed born sons and daughters of God.

Furthermore we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence. Shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, and live?

Many fathers of the flesh, but one Father of the spirits of all men, the eternal Father of us all. So every man and every woman under the sound of my voice is either a son of God or a daughter of God. He is our eternal Father. And as things earthly are typical of things heavenly, when we think of Father we naturally think of Mother. We think of being born. So we have been born of our heavenly parents in the spirit, and in our spirit birth have inherited attributes and qualities of a God-like character. What a noble parentage! What a noble ancestry we are of! What manner of men and women ought we to be? In the language of the scripture we might say:

Look unto the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged.

The love which our Father in heaven bears for us is divine love, a perfect love. Jesus said:

For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

He gave His Son to a life of sorrow and to a death upon the cross. What that meant of sorrow to the Son and to the Father we shall never fully know while we are in mortality. We read how that in the Garden of Gethsemane He sweat great drops of blood, so great was the anguish of His soul because of the wickedness and abominations of the people.

THE GREATEST GIFT

Then we read about His death upon the cross. His was the greatest gift that ever was given. It is a proof of love, divine, the Father for His children, a sacrifice, the greatest ever made; a service, the greatest ever rendered. And as He has loved us and done so much for us in providing for our salvation, He has asked us, in return, to love Him, even with all our heart, soul and mind, and then to love one another, our neighbor as ourselves. If we could obey those two commandments, what peace there would be in the earth. If all mankind could live up to those two principles there would be no more bloodshed, no widows and orphans caused through wars rampant in the nations of the earth. There would be no hatred in our souls, but love would abound.

That is what our Father in heaven would like of us above all other things, that we love Him first, and that we love one another. In our home in heaven there was peace, there was love. After Lucifer was cast out, and those with him, there was no more contention. When we come to earth, though our recollection of the past is withheld, why should we not love one another here?

Do we hate those men in high places responsible for war and bloodshed, killing and maiming and making widows and orphans? If we love them as we should we would not hate them. The mother doesn't hate the wayward son or the wayward daughter. A mother's love, next to the love that our Father in heaven bears for us, is the kind of love that should actuate us, one toward another. Whether we are in the Church or out of the Church, we are our Father's children, all of us, and the Lord loves us, and no doubt sorrows over the sins and the wickedness of some, and rejoices over the righteousness of others.

SACRIFICE REWARDED

I trust and pray, brethren and sisters, that we may live up to the light of the Gospel which has come to us, for it is a glorious truth. It is appealing. There is no question but what the reward in this life and the life to come will amply pay for every sacrifice that we make. And brethren and sisters, if we ever lose out in the end, and meet with disappointment, it will be because we have not done the things which we know that we ought to do, and that we have done things that we know we ought not to do. In other words, if we live up to the light which we have we will not meet with condemnation, but with the favor of heaven.

May the Lord help us to so live and to labor, in return for the love which is extended unto us by our Father in Heaven, and His Son Jesus Christ. May we return love and show by our actions that we do love the Lord, and let us show by our actions that we do love our fellow-men, and that we are going to keep the commandments of God.

May the Lord bless us and help us to this end, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER JOHN A. WIDTSOE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren and sisters: We welcome with all our hearts Brother Harold B. Lee and the other brethren who have been called to new service in the Church and Kingdom of God.

This has been a profitable and inspiring Conference. The sweet spirit of the Lord has brooded over the sessions of the Conference, from the first when President Grant delivered his remarkably impressive opening address.

I desire to speak to a simple and well worn subject, one which has been touched upon by every speaker at this splendid Conference, and which of necessity is approached in every Stake or Ward Conference. Yet, it bears repetition.

TOLERANCE FOR THE OPINIONS OF OTHERS

I have chosen a theme which seems vital in the lives of Latter-day Saints.

Among the principles of beauty and power which make up the Gospel, none is more conducive to peace than the Mormon doctrine of tolerance. We are taught to give due respect to the opinions and mode of life of our fellow beings. This accepted principle was formulated concisely by the Prophet Joseph Smith:

We claim the privilege of worshipping Almighty God according to the dictates of our own conscience, and allow all men the same privilege, let them worship how, where or what they may. (11th Article of Faith.)

That is, men may believe and act as seems to them good so long as they do not infringe upon our rights or transgress the law. They may cherish false beliefs, yet we mingle with them in friendliness. Thereby the association of mankind is made tolerable.

THE CHURCH HAS SUFFERED FROM INTOLERANCE

We of this Church have reason to be tolerant; for we know the lawless cruelty of intolerance. For over a century we suffered a religious persecution of Satanic fury, unparalleled in modern times, and seldom if ever surpassed in former days. Often helpless in the face of intolerant fury, the Latter-day Saints have only been able to say, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." If the Lord had not been our captain, and truth our chart, men would long since have destroyed the Church. We know that tolerance is of God; intolerance of the devil. We are and must remain a tolerant people.

TRUE MEANING OF TOLERANCE

However, the true meaning of tolerance is often misunderstood. Tolerance has its distinct limits. To allow our neighbors the privilege to believe and live as they choose, under the law, does not mean that to keep peace we must live as they do.

Tolerance is not conformity to the world's view and practices. We must not surrender our beliefs to get along with people, however beloved or influential they may be. Too high a price may be paid for social standing or even for harmony. Appeasement was recently tried in the world, and the most hideous war of history is the result. The Gospel rests upon eternal truth; and truth can never be deserted safely. Allegiance to truth, as well as tolerance, is of the Lord.

True, there are matters of minor importance to which all may wisely conform. Such are the constantly changing conventions or fashions in dress, speech and etiquette. Whether a woman wears her hair long or short, or a man a soft or a starched collar, are not vital matters. They do not violate the law of God, and no one takes them seriously. Wisdom dictates to all in the words of Pope:

Be not the first on whom the new is tried
Nor yet the last to lay the old aside.

DANGER IN NOT LIVING UP TO STANDARDS

But, deviations, however slight, from the straight Gospel path, become major matters in life. Whatever is contrary to the doctrine or regulations of the Church or in violation of our covenants with the Lord, in baptism, in the Temple, or elsewhere, is of evil and therefore should be spurned. It is dangerous to play fast and loose with truth and our sacred covenants. Spiritual and moral disintegration begins when we sacrifice truth to conform with the way of the crowd. The creeping evil that then sets in begets indifference and often ends in apostasy. It leads to certain unhappiness.

Clearly, in a world of many men of many minds, it requires at times some courage to be true to our convictions. The non-smoker, or non-drinker, or non-card player, may feel alone in a smoking company, or in a cocktail or card or gambling party. The coward within us always shrinks from being a target for observation or criticism. In fact, however, the person who stands by his honest convictions wins the respect of all decent people. Honest courage is always admired. On the contrary, he who is untrue to his professions, to win the favor of the crowd, is held in contempt, often unspoken but equally real, by his associates. Smoking or drinking young men of Latter-day Saint parentage are seldom welcomed by smoking and drinking employers. He who is untrue to his convictions may fail in his business integrity. So reasons the wise man of the world.

THE GOSPEL OF CHRIST FOUNDED IN TRUTH

Latter-day Saints have no reason to forsake their beliefs for the plaudits of the crowd. Rather, there should be a vast gratitude in the hearts of the Latter-day Saints. The Gospel is founded in unshakeable truth; it sheds light upon that which is dark; it is unsurpassed for answering the deep questions of the human soul; its authority to act, the Priesthood, sets this people apart from all others in their power to perform work for private and public good. Every principle is divinely devised for human good. Experience has shown that men are better off for keeping the Word of Wisdom, or paying tithes to the Lord, or complying with any other Gospel practice. In the midst of the world's philosophies, the Gospel of Jesus Christ stands unconquered. We should be so proud of our membership in the Church of Christ, that we would refuse, with disdain, to disobey, for public acclaim or personal appetite, any principle of action within the Church.

THOSE VALIANT FOR TRUTH ARE CONQUERORS

Latter-day Saints should be thoroughly loyal to the course of life laid out in the Gospel plan. A milk-and-water allegiance kills; while a passionate devotion gives life and soul to any cause and its adherents. The troubles of the world may largely be laid at the doors of those who are neither hot nor cold; who always follow the line of least resistance; whose timid hearts flutter at taking sides for truth. As in the great Council in the heavens, so in the Church of Christ on earth, there can be no neutrality. We are, or we are not, on the side of the Lord. An unrelenting faith, contemptuous of all compromise, will lead the Church and every member of it, to triumph and the achievement of our high destiny.

The final conquerors of the world will be the men and women, few or many matters not, who fearlessly and unflinchingly cling to truth, who are able to say no, as well as yes, on whose lofty banner is inscribed: No compromise with error. At the present moment it is a flaming faith in liberty, a phase of truth, that enables England to withstand her enemies despite the rain of powder and steel.

THE SPIRIT OF EVIL RAMPANT

Our world is sick. Millions of men have surrendered or have been made to surrender to an evil spirit—the spirit of Satan. Those who are attacked with the malady foam with a brutal, snarling ferocity. They have forgotten the kingship of man; they have descended below the beasts. They invoke and use the law of the jungle. The prince of darkness has world-girdling ambitions. The leaders of the nations, stupefied by the incredible prostration of our hard-won civilization, stand helplessly among their bombs, airships and submarines. They know that the issue is not material, but spiritual. They know that the changed heart alone can restore peace to earth. In their inmost selves they are calling for men of truth, who will not sell their birthright for a mess of pottage, who do not know the meaning of compromise. And all the world, the hosts of common men, beckon for such leadership. Humanity does not care to live in, and bring children into, a world ruled by ignorance, hate, perfidy and blasphemy.

BELIEVERS IN CHRIST THE ULTIMATE LEADERS IN THE WORLD

That leadership, the world's prime need, must come, as we know, from those who accept the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and who, courageously and without apology, cling to its truth and practice. They will be the leaven in the lump; they will be the world's wonder workers; they will be the ultimate conquerors, though they may be but a handful in numbers. Goliath's man-made sword was no match for David's faith-directed pebble.

This places a heavy burden upon us, members of the restored Church of Christ; the authorized holders of the Priesthood; the light-bearers and truth-givers of the world. To assume leadership in pointing the way to peace has always been the high commission, perhaps the highest, of the Church of Christ. In the end, the world's peace depends on us. This seems a stupendous claim; we make it humbly; but, the word of the Lord does not fail. Out of Zion shall issue the power that will change swords into plowshares, and make the earth a happy dwelling place for men.

We, the members of the Church, now far-flung over the earth, must make and keep ourselves fit by obedience for the mission assigned us—the regeneration of the world. It is a call to every member of the Church. As we obey the commandments, so will the strength of the Church be. As we fearlessly live the law, the influence of the Church will cover the earth and prepare it for peace. Delay and vexation, sorrow and bloodshed, will overtake us if we surrender our convictions, and enter into compromise with the world. It is better to observe the law, even in its lesser details. Then we shall have the greater claim for personal satisfaction in the days of our years.

All this was said by our Lord, the Redeemer of mankind. Shortly before His sacrificial death He prayed to His Father for those who should remain after Him, to carry on the work which He had established. The burden of that immortal prayer was, that His disciples should not be taken out of the world, for their message was to the world, but that though they were in the world, they should not be of the world.

I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from evil. They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. (John 17:15, 16.)

That is the problem of every Latter-day Saint, especially as we spread over the earth, and as mankind calls for help: To be in the world, but not of the world! To be ever a unique people, a peculiar people, in the observance of righteousness. They who fail to do so, will suffer cankered souls, will question the value of life, and eventually will face spiritual death.

We all look with trepidation into the future. No land is wholly safe. Disaster may overtake any or all. It is folly to trade the permanent joys of the Gospel for man-made, transient, unsatisfying and often injurious offerings. Israel would show the higher wisdom if all of us laid away the things that are not in harmony with Gospel law, that distract us, take our time, and leave us empty when the day is done; if every man of us would set his house in order until he could say with Joshua of old, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Today, as perhaps never before, the battle-cry of modern Israel, the people of the Lord, must be, with respect to the truths of the Gospel: "No Compromise."

May the Lord bless us and give us faith, courage, clearness of vision, and strength of will to live His law, to keep our covenants, and to be wholly acceptable servants in His great cause, I pray in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

All of the brethren who have spoken have indicated there are two terrors which we up here suffer. One is the anxiety which runs along until we are called, and the other is the fear which we have when we are called. We cannot relieve Brother Lee of the first, but we will relieve him of the second by calling him now, following Elder John A. Widtsoe of the Council of the Twelve who has just spoken.

Our next speaker will be Elder Harold B. Lee whom we sustained this morning as a member of the Council of the Twelve.

ELDER HAROLD B. LEE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

This morning before I came to the meeting I wound my watch, and when the meeting closed I took it out to look at the time. I discovered that it had stopped at twenty minutes after ten. I was numb and dumb. I am not sure, when I finish here, that I shall not find my watch completely put out of commission.

THOUGHTS STIRRED BY NEW ASSIGNMENT

Since nine o'clock last night I have lived an entire lifetime in retrospect and in prospect. I spent a sleepless night. I never closed my eyes one moment, and neither would you if you had been in my place. Throughout the night, as I thought of this most appalling and soul-stirring assignment, there kept coming to me the words of the Apostle Paul, that he spoke in explanation of the human qualities that were to be found in the Lord and Savior:

For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.

Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.

One could not have listened to the soul-stirring testimony of President Grant, in bearing testimony as to his feelings when he was called to the apostleship, or his experiences in calling others to similar positions, without realizing that he has been close to his Heavenly Father in this experience. Therefore I shall take the word of the Apostle

Paul. I shall come boldly unto the throne of grace, and ask for mercy and His grace to help me in my time of need. With that help I cannot fail. Without it I cannot succeed.

A TRIBUTE TO FATHER, MOTHER, AND WIFE

Since my childhood I have looked upon these men as the greatest men on the face of the earth, and now the contemplation of an intimate association with them, is overwhelming and beyond my comprehension.

I thank God today for my parentage. My father and mother are listening, either in this great assembly or on the radio, if perchance they did not get into this meeting. I think perhaps this is my way of paying tribute to the two family names they gave me at my birth, Bingham and Lee. I trust I shall not disgrace those names. I have been blessed with a splendid father and a grand and lovely mother, one who didn't display often her affection, but showed her love in tangible ways that, as a child, I came early to recognize as true mother love.

As just a high school boy I went away on a high school debating team. We won the debate. I came back and called mother on the telephone only to have her say: "Never mind, Son. I know all about it. I will tell you when you come home at the end of the week." When I came home she took me aside and said: "When I knew it was just time for this performance to start I went out among the willows by the creek side, and there, all by myself, I remembered you and prayed God you would not fail." I have come to know that that kind of love is necessary for every son and daughter who seek to achieve in this world: My tribute to my parents.

Last night, when I left here, as my little family with me knelt down for our family prayers, I tested their faith. I found them true. They have given me their assurance, their strength. They are willing to make the sacrifice and have accepted this as their call, along with me. I have come to know, in these last few years, in my brief service in this Church, that without such help from a lovely, devoted wife, willing to sacrifice and to keep the home, no man can hold a position in this Church and hope to continue to serve as he has been called. To her, likewise, as she listens this afternoon and before you I acknowledge her loveliness, her sweetness, her devotion and sacrifice.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE CHURCH WELFARE PLAN

For the last five glorious, strenuous years, I have labored, under a call from the First Presidency, with a group of men in the development of and the unfolding of what we have called the Church Welfare Plan. I felt that I should bear my testimony to you concerning that work as I close. It was on April 20th, 1935, when I was called to the office of the First Presidency. That was a year before official announcement of the Welfare Plan was made in this Tabernacle. There, after an entire half day session, at which President Grant and President McKay were present, President Clark then being in the East—they had some communications with him, so that all members of the Presidency were in agreement—I was astounded to learn that for years there had been before them, as a result of their thinking and planning and as the result of the inspiration of Almighty God, the genius of the very plan that is being carried out and was in waiting and in preparation for a time when in their judgment the faith of the Latter-day Saints was such that they were willing to follow the counsel of the men who lead and preside in this Church.

STRENGTHENED THROUGH HUMBLE PRAYER

My humble place in this program at that time was described. I left there about noon-time, feeling quite as I do now. I drove with my car up to the head of City Creek Canyon. I got out, after I had driven as far as I could, and I walked up through the trees. I sought my Heavenly Father. As I sat down to pore over this matter, wondering about an organization to be perfected to carry on this work, I received a testimony, on that beautiful spring afternoon, that God had already revealed the greatest organization that ever could be given to mankind, and that all that was needed now was that that organization be set to work, and the temporal welfare of the Latter-day Saints would be safeguarded.

Yesterday morning in the special Welfare meeting in the Assembly Hall, we saw a portrayal of what can be accomplished in one Ward where the Lord's organization does work according to His plan. With twelve hundred times the kind of demonstration you observed in that Welfare meeting, the present problem would cease to be a problem. We would be living the Lord's way, for unless we are one we are not His.

GOD'S WILL MADE MANIFEST

It was in August of that same year that with Brother Mark Austin of the General Committee, I had driven down to St. George and then back across the mountains to Richfield, for an early morning meeting. At that time there was an upturn in business, so much so that some were questioning the wisdom of this kind of activity, and why hadn't the Church done it before now? There came to me, in that early morning hour, a distinct impression that was as real as though someone had spoken audibly, and this was the impression that came, and has stayed with me through these years: There is no individual in the Church that knows the real purpose for which the program then launched had been intended, but hardly before the Church has made sufficient preparation, that reason will be made manifest, and when it comes it will challenge every resource of the Church to meet it. I trembled at the feeling that came over me. Since that day that feeling has driven me on, night and day, hardly resting, knowing that this is God's will, this is His plan. The only thing necessary today is that the Latter-day Saints everywhere recognize these men, who sit here on the stand, as the fountainheads of truth, through whom God will reveal His will, that His Saints might be preserved through an evil day.

A TESTIMONY OF THE TRUTH OBTAINED THROUGH EXPERIENCE

I bear you my testimony that I know that God lives. I know that He has spoken in this day. I know that the work that we are now advancing and unfolding has still greater potential possibilities. They will come to the extent that the Latter-day Saints will learn to do what they are told, but not until; and some of the grandest things yet to come can only come if and when we learn to listen to these men who preside as prophets, seers and revelators.

I ask for your faith and prayers, that as the years come and go I may be the witness that one who is called to this position is expected to be. Will you pray that that might be a fruition of my activity among you. I have loved you. I have come to know you intimately. Your problems, thank the Lord, have been my problems, because I know, as you know, what it means to walk when you have not the money to ride. I know what it means to go without meals to buy a book to go to the University. I thank God now for these experiences. I have loved you because of your devotion and faith. God bless you that you won't fail, but that with this Church you and it will go on to a glorious future, I pray, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

The Tabernacle Choir sang an anthem, "I Waited for the Lord"—Mendelssohn. Soloists: Ruth Jensen Clawson and Dorothy Kimball Keddington.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

We shall now have the privilege of hearing a few words from each of the brethren who this morning were sustained as Assistants to the Council of the Twelve. We shall first hear from President Marion G. Romney, now President of the Bonneville Stake.

ELDER MARION G. ROMNEY

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My beloved brethren and sisters, I know I have your sympathy and your interest, and I now earnestly beseech you to give me your active faith that the few moments I stand here shall not be wasted.

I have stood before a General Conference but once before in my life. That was at the opening session in October, 1938. I was called from the audience and had to find my way through the scenery which had been set up for the staging of the oratorio Elijah. It seemed as if it took me an eternity but as I came on to the stand, President Grant gave me an understanding smile and I was able to get through that opening prayer.

RESPONSE REGARDING THE NEW CALL TO SERVICE

I respond to this call as I have responded to all calls that have come to me in the Church, although I do not know just what I shall be asked to do. You who were here this morning had the same notice that I had and know just as much about what the call is as I do; but whatever it is, I know as well as did Nephi of old:

.... that the Lord giveth no commandments unto the children of men, save He shall prepare a way for them that they may accomplish the thing which He commandeth them.

I assume that this call will mean some closer association with the leaders of the Church; for that I am very grateful. One of the principal compensations that have come to me as a worker in the Church has been the opportunity to occasionally meet and shake hands with these leaders. I accept them and always have accepted them as prophets of the living God. I have never been very particular to determine when they were speaking as prophets of God and when they were speaking as men. It has never occurred to me that I had the ability to determine that. It has been the rule of my life to find out if I could, by listening closely to what they said and by asking the Lord to help me interpret it, what they had in mind for the Latter-day Saints to do and then do it. I am happy to say, not boastfully but gratefully, that I have never hesitated to follow the counsel of the Authorities of the Church even though it crossed my social, professional or political life. I am very grateful now that I may have some opportunity to associate more closely with them.

SAFETY IN FOLLOWING THE COUNSEL OF OUR LEADERS

Recently I have read biographies of all the past presidents of the Church except President Snow—his I have not had available—as well as biographies of Heber C. Kimball, Parley P. Pratt and other leaders of the Church. In all the experiences of my life, including this reading, I have never learned of a single instance where a person who has followed the advice and counsel of the leaders of the Church suffered therefrom. On the other hand the record of the past is full of instances where men have refused to follow such advice and counsel and as a result have lost the Spirit of the Lord and the companionship of His people. These observations have persuaded me that the Church leaders speak under the inspiration of the Lord regardless of the subject under consideration, and have strengthened my determination not to try too closely to discriminate between when they speak as prophets and when they speak as men. I should like very much to avoid the consequence of making a mistake for it is a terrible thing to lose the Spirit of the Lord. One of the reasons why I have always paid an honest tithing, and a little more, is because in one of the revelations the Lord has said that those who were not tithed should not have place with those who were tithed, and I have desired with all my heart to have a place with the faithful Saints of God. I can understand now why it was that my father could pay tithing in the days of his distress. After we were driven from Mexico I saw the time when he supported a family of seven or eight children—ten at the end—on an income of about $45.00 a month, and I saw him go to the Bishop every month and pay $4.50 tithing. I used to wonder why it was, but I know, now that I have the witness of the Gospel in my own heart.

God grant that I may not fail in whatever my responsibilities may be, and that when I have finished this calling I may be worthy to be released honorably and still stand among the faithful of God's servants, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen,

ELDER THOMAS E. MCKAYAssistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

I feel very humble, my brethren and sisters, in accepting this call to this new position. It is a great honor, but at the same time I realize that it is a tremendous responsibility.

ADVICE OF PARENTS RECALLED

A little over forty years ago I was at the station in Ogden with my parents and a few friends just before I boarded the train leaving for my first mission. My mother kissed me goodbye, and as she did so said, "My boy, come home clean." I have never forgotten that injunction and I hope when I am released from this earthly mission and return to that heavenly home where my angel mother now is I can say, as I can say today, "Mother, I have come home clean."

At that same parting my father placed his hand upon my shoulder and said, "Remember, my son, it doesn't matter so much where you work, it is how you work. You go where the Lord wants you and try to say what the Lord wants you to say." I am thinking of those parents today, and I wish to express my appreciation for them and for my brothers and sisters and my friends. I wish to express my appreciation for the association of President Grant and his Counselors and the other General Authorities of the Church. I love these men and I am grateful for this position that will give me the opportunity of more intimate association with them.

HAPPINESS IN THE GOSPEL OF JESUS CHRIST

I am more grateful than I can express for the Gospel, for the testimony I have of its truthfulness. I wish to testify to you, my brethren and sisters, that this is the Gospel of Jesus Christ, that every principle of the Gospel has been given to us to make us better and happier here in this life. God is our Father. We are all His children, and He has given us the principles of the Gospel to make us happy here in this life. "Man is that he might have joy." We do not have to wait for the other life, the life beyond, to enjoy true happiness; if we live the principles of the Gospel, we can have heaven here on this earth.

A TRIBUTE TO PRESIDENT GRANT

I desire to testify to you also that I know that Joseph Smith was and is a Prophet of God and that those who have succeeded him have been called of God. I wish to express also that same testimony with reference to President Heber J. Grant. No one can estimate the good that he has accomplished during his Presidency. Think for a minute of the change in the attitude of the world today towards this Church compared to the time he was called and accepted the Presidency. I testify especially to his influence in Europe, which changed prejudice to admiration. How grateful I am today that he visited those good people in the European Mission and that so many of them heard his testimony. What a comfort it is to them in their present sufferings and trials that they have seen the President of the Church and spoken to him and heard his testimony. I am thankful to have the opportunity of laboring with them, still keeping in touch with them, trying to encourage them. But their letters are more of an encouragement to me because of their faith, I am sure, than what I can do or say to encourage them in their faith. God bless them. I am grateful that we have a Presidency and other General Authorities who appreciate them and are doing everything they can to help them.

ARMY CHAPLAINS APPOINTED

I am also grateful that we have men at the head who are taking an interest in our soldier boys. God bless these young soldiers. The First Presidency is very much concerned about the kind of Latter-day Saint chaplains that are sent among them, and have been very fortunate to date in having at least eight very fine men appointed; and through the kind cooperation of the Chief of Chaplains of the Army, Col. William R. Arnold, these chaplains have been placed where the majority of our Mormon boys are located. Remember those boys also in your prayers, my brethren and sisters, just as you remember the missionaries and our people abroad.

God bless you, and God bless me that I may be faithful to this added responsibility. I appreciate it with all my heart as I appreciate the Gospel, and may I always be worthy of the Spirit of God to help me in all my work, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER CLIFFORD E. YOUNG

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren and sisters, a little over twelve years ago I was surprised, and I might say shocked, to be called to succeed President Stephen L. Chipman as President of the Alpine Stake. I remember well a lesson that he taught me then. In being released he and his counselor, President James H. Clark, who remained in our Stake, came to the new presidency and in assuring us of their support said they wanted to work wherever we wanted them to work. And then President Chipman gave us some counsel which I have always remembered, and that was to find out what was expected of us and then to do it to the best of our ability. I have learned to appreciate that counsel, and while I do not know now what is expected, (this is entirely new as far as I am concerned, and perhaps it is a new departure) I assure my brethren and the Authorities of the Church that I will meet this responsibility to the best of my ability and will give it the best I have. My one prayer is that I may be able to make the right adjustment, that I may not be hampered in any way in doing that which shall be expected of me.

I appreciate my membership in this Church. I am thankful for my parents who implanted in their children faith and confidence in this great work, and I humbly pray that I may not fail in this responsibility, that I may be able to measure up to every requirement and to every expectation that you and the Brethren who preside have a right to expect. May God help us all to sustain each other and to uphold this work of God I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ALMA SONNE

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren and sisters, I am sure no one can arise for the first time on an occasion like this without feeling a thrill of emotion. I have spent many hours in the service of our great Church and I want to testify to you this afternoon that the compensation for that service has been very great. I rejoice in the testimony which I have of the Truth. I know God's work has been established on the earth; I know that the Gospel is true; that Joseph Smith was a Prophet of God. I have confidence in the leadership of this Church. If we follow their advice we shall never go astray. May God bless them, and may He bless us that our eyes may be open to appreciate and understand the everlasting things which will not perish.

I accept this responsibility with fear and trembling, but I have confidence in the promises of God. God bless you. Amen.

ELDER NICHOLAS G. SMITH

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brothers and sisters, I come before you in humility this day. This Conference to me has been a thrilling one. Friday morning as I sat and wept as President Grant was giving us his testimony, I was so grateful to my Heavenly Father that my life had come so close to his, that from my infancy I had known him, that I had been permitted to travel with him, to sleep with him, to be in his home, to have him in my home. I love him, and above all other men on earth I owe him most. Each of the General Authorities of the Church I know intimately. I love every one of them, I have never seen one of them do a thing or heard one of them say a thing but what was of an uplifting nature. And I am so grateful for my association with them.

MISSIONARY WORK IN THE NORTHWESTERN STATES

I am grateful to have had the privilege to serve in the mission field, grateful for the opportunity that is mine now to be in the Northwest. I bring you the greetings of one hundred forty missionaries, lovely young men and women, and eleven thousand members of the Church, Latter-day Saints scattered all over the Northwest. It is reported that President Nibley said, "You can walk up to any old bush in the Northwest and give it a kick and out jumps a Jack Mormon." (Laughter.) It is strange how far our people have traveled. We find them everywhere,—way up in Alaska, in Fairbanks, 100 of them. In Anchorage, now that the soldiers are gathering there, there will be many of them. In Ft.

Lewis and Camp Murray there are over a thousand of our boys that have come from Idaho points. We have been holding meetings with them, fine, clean, lovely young men, and it has been a joy to be with them. We have there too the careless ones, but there are the fine ones—true Latter-day Saints. Their example has been glorious and lovely.

EXAMPLE OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

I had an accident going up into the Northwest with my automobile, and had it fixed, and after the garage man had finished I handed him a check in payment of $60.00. He took the check and looked at it, on a Salt Lake City bank. He said, "You are a Mormon?" I said, "Yes." He said, "I will take your check." I could not have done that in Salt Lake City. (Laughter.) Why could I do that? Because of the nature of our people who are living in the Northwest—the true Latter-day Saints. They have lived a life that means so much, and this little poem by Whitney Montgomery exemplifies their lives:

I knelt to pray when day was done,
And prayed, "Oh Lord, bless everyone.
Lift from each saddened heart the pain
And let the sick be well again."

And when I woke another day
And carelessly went on my way,
The whole day long I did not try
To wipe a tear from any eye.
I did not try to share the load
Of any brother on my road.
I didn't even go to see
The sick man just next door to me.

Yet once again when day was done,
I prayed, "Oh Lord, bless everyone."
But as I prayed, into my ear
There came a voice that whispered clear.
"Pause, hypocrite, before you pray,
Whom have you tried to bless today?
God's sweetest blessings always go
By hands that serve Him here below."

And then I hid my face and cried,
"Forgive me, God, for I have lied.
Let me but live another day
And I will live the way I pray."

Truly that has been the situation in the Northwest. This people love President Nibley and the brethren who have presided there. It is a lovely mission and people.

THE CALL TO NEW DUTIES

Now with respect to this call that has come to me here today—as the others have said, it was a complete surprise. I do not know what it means, but these Brethren have never touched my life but what it has turned into a blessing, and I am grateful to do anything that I can. I do not know just what it means to be an Assistant to the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, but I am glad there are twelve men in that Quorum to give me a going over and help me out.

God bless us all to really appreciate what this Church stands for and what it means, that we may be true to it, that we may sustain the General Authorities and each other in our lives, is my prayer in Jesus' name. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I understand that if my voice is weak, it can be arranged with this amplifying equipment so that it will be strong.

HAPPINESS EXPRESSED IN ATTENDING CONFERENCE

I am very happy indeed to be here to extend to you good people and to all the Latter-day Saints my prayers and love and blessings at the close of this Conference. It seems to me that all during my life since I first became an Apostle, way back when I was twenty-six years of age—so of course I have had almost sixty years of it—that every Conference is a little bit better than the previous one, but it seems to me that this has been the best that we have ever had up to date, and I am grateful for it. We certainly have never had anything to compare with the attendance Friday and Saturday at any other Friday or Saturday session of Conference that I have attended. The people filled this building at each of our sessions.

I was very much disappointed not to have the privilege of attending the Priesthood meeting six months ago, but I was very happy to be here last night, and it was a wonderful sight, and a marvelous portion of the Spirit of the Lord was present with us. I rejoiced in having the opportunity of speaking to the people. I was a little bit afraid that perhaps I got a little bit too anxious when I pounded the stand, and maybe if my doctor were here I would get a scolding, but I want you to know that although my improvement is very slow, each and every day I believe I can say truthfully, when people ask me how I am: "A little better than yesterday."

CONDITION OF HEALTH TRYING

I am perfectly willing to go along as slowly as the Lord wants, but the quicker I get so that I can talk faster and get more accustomed to these false teeth, the better I will like it. (Laughter.)

I am free to confess that I do not like the sound of my own voice worth a cent. (Laughter.)

I am very sorry, after laboring more diligently, I believe, than anybody else ever did to try to learn to sing a song, that I cannot sing any more. But I have been practicing bass sitting next to Brother McKay here today, and I have concluded that I had better join the bass choir, (Laughter) and say goodbye to the lead.

Of course it has been quite a trial to me, spending hours without sleeping every night, that when I am awake in the night I cannot sing to myself, which would help me out a good deal, but I have not been able to do so. I am inclined to think, knowing from my experience years ago when I suffered intensely from insomnia and was ordered to go to the Coast, or I might go crazy for lack of sleep, that I can always sleep in California and Arizona on the sea level. I think that I shall go away from home now for a short time in the hope of improving more rapidly than I have improved since I came from California.

CAUSES FOR GRATITUDE

I have not the language with which to express my gratitude to the people for their faith and their prayers. I know that some people thought I never would be able to use my arm again or my left leg, but I can use them pretty well. I feel well, and I am very happy in having a couple of Counselors who can do all the work that I ought to do, and all that I have to do is to sign my name and let it go at that. I have Brother Anderson tell me what is in the letter in just a word or two, and then I sign my name.

I have been very, very grateful for the attendance at our meetings, and I wish to leave with the people my faith and my prayers for their welfare. I would like to say to you good people that the Lord never makes any promises but what He fulfills them, and He has promised that when we do His will He will bless us, that He will guide us, that He will help us, and I am anxious always to try to get the Latter-day Saints to do the will of the Lord.

ANTHONY W. IVINS' CALL TO MEXICO

I am going to tell you a little experience. I was one of the committee that recommended my cousin Anthony W. Ivins to go to Mexico, and it was a great shock to me to do so, because I was heavily involved. I was receiving 25 per cent per annum on an investment in a cattle ranch, that I had refused time and again to take $18,750 for my $12,500 interest; but you know that little $12,500 paid interest at 6 per cent on $50,000 of my debts, and gave me 1 per cent over. I was alarmed about having my cousin go to Mexico, and I had refused, as I say, $18,750 for my interest in this ranch. When he had to leave the ranch, we could not find anybody who wanted it, and we got 60 cents on the dollar. We made a very handsome sacrifice, but in the kind providences of the Lord, matters pertaining to my affairs changed immediately, and I soon made up the loss, and the Lord blessed him down in Mexico. He made a nice little sale there of a few million acres of land to Mr. McCornick, Mr. Wood, Mr. Hagenbarth and others, and got a nice little commission of $40,000, and he paid $2,000 tithing down there, and $2,000 to Bishop Empey here. He died thinking that I had supposed that all he had made was $20,000, because he told the Bishop: "You must not say anything about this, I just kind of thought I would like to pay some tithing up here." And so I did not give it away to my cousin. The Bishop had never dreamed of such a thing as that Tone would not tell me about it. Otherwise, I suppose that he would not have told me.

But the Lord blessed him and magnified him, and I want you to know that as plain as any words that were ever spoken to me in my life I heard, when I was feeling very blue—blue as indigo, as the saying is—about his going, I heard in the Salt Lake Temple: "He is going where the Lord wants him to go, and you shall have the pleasure of welcoming him back into this Temple as an Apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ of this last dispensation." I turned my head so that my companions could not see me, and I shed tears of gratitude for the blessing that was coming to my cousin.

He went there and he made a marvelous record, and that statement to me was fulfilled. Finally my associates, as near as I could judge, were all very anxious for him to be chosen as one of my counselors.

The Lord always rewards us and blesses us.

A PROPHECY FULFILLED

Never but once in all my life have I stood up in a meeting and prophesied in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and that once was many, many years ago up in Idaho, at Paris. I was preaching that we should judge things not by the exception but by the general average, and that the most prosperous, the most successful, the best financial men were those that were honest with God. And it seemed as though a voice said to me: "You lie, you lie. You will never live to pay your debts, although you have been an honest tithe-payer." If I had had a bucket of cold water poured over me, it could not have made a greater impression.

I stopped a moment, then I said, "I prophesy in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ that what I have said to you people is true, and that the Lord rewards us when we do our duty, and I prophesy that although I am a ruined man in the estimation of many men, I will yet live to pay my debts." And I was just $91,000 worse off than nothing, had two wives to support and the children of a dead wife. But from that very day my prophecy was fulfilled. The Lord blessed everything I touched, and in only three short years I was even with the world, financially speaking.

BLESSING AND TESTIMONY

I leave my testimony with you that this is God's work, and that it is by men responding as these five men have done that the work progresses. They say they do not know what they have to do. I will tell them what they have to do: They will have to work right straight along for the Church the way the Apostles work, they will have to make some changes in their lives, and they will have to devote themselves more to the work of God than they have ever done before, and they will have joy in doing so.

I pray God to bless you good people. I bless the honest the world over. I pray you to have no hard feelings in your hearts toward many of the people who are in the war, who are fighting against England, because many of them would give their lives, almost, if they could get out of that kind of fighting. I want you to know that from Holland and Germany some of the choicest and finest men that have ever been members of this Church, came. Karl G. Maeser's name will always live among us. He was a marvel of spirituality and he impressed and blessed the youth of Zion. I want you not to feel hard toward the Germans, even though they are fighting, because there are many of them that would be grateful and thank the Lord Almighty if they did not have to fight.

Let us do our best to encourage our boys in the army to live the Gospel of Jesus Christ as perfectly as though they were in the mission field, and to seek God for the guidance of His Spirit and its protecting care. Encourage your loved ones. I regret beyond all my powers of expression that we have to send our boys to war, and I feel that we would not have needed to do it if we had been governed properly.

I beg pardon, the doctor will get after me for sure. (Laughter.)

I was going to say some more, but I had better keep still or it will be called politics. You know, I have contempt for politics, because, as I have said for many years, they are like the measles, if you will just take a little saffron tea and keep the measles on the surface, they will not hurt you, but if they set in on you they turn your hide yellow and make you cross-eyed. (Laughter.)

Well now, I would like us to close on time. I want to bless the Latter-day Saints the world over and the honest the world over. I want to thank this choir from the bottom of my heart for what they are doing for us. I want to thank the choir and the orchestra that came from Provo, also the choir that came from Blackfoot. May the Lord bless them all. They are doing a great work, a great missionary work. I am grateful for all the blessings of the Lord to me. I have been blessed more than I could have hoped or expected. All that I have and all that I amount to I owe to my sainted mother.

I pray the people to remember to honor their parents, follow that commandment. It is one of the greatest in all the world. Children, honor your parents.

God bless you. Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

May I for President McKay and myself say what I am sure you know must be true, that we make no important decision without consulting President Grant, and his mind is as clear and concise and accurate as it ever was.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "Hallelujah" (Messiah)—Handel.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I should like to add my thanks to those expressed by President Grant for this wonderful music by the Choir.

Drive carefully, please, going home; pedestrians walk cautiously.

After the benediction this Conference will stand adjourned sine die.

The benediction was pronounced by Elder M. Howard Randall, President of the Morgan Stake.

Conference adjourned sine die.

The musical exercises at the Friday sessions were furnished by the Brigham Young University Chorus and members of the Provo Duo Stake Choir, Drs. Franklin W. Madsen and Florence Madsen, Directors; at the Saturday sessions, by the Blackfoot Stake Choir, Elder Ronald Bitton, Director; and at the Sunday meetings by the Tabernacle Choir, J. Spencer Cornwall, Director.

The congregational singing was directed by J. Spencer Cornwall and Richard P. Condie.

Accompaniments and interludes on the great organ were played by Alexander Schreiner and Frank W. Asper. Organ accompaniments and solo presentations for the Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast, as also the Church of the Air program, Sunday morning, were played by Frank W. Asper.

---

Stenographic notes of the Conference were taken by Frank W. Otterstrom and Joseph Anderson.

Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith

Taken from his sermons and writings as they are found in the Documentary History and other publications of the Church and written or published in the days of the Prophet's ministry

Selected and arranged by the Historian, Joseph Fielding Smith, and his Assistants in the Historian's Office of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Many of these discourses and writings appear in the Documentary History of the Church, but others have not been included in these volumes, but are scattered through the early publications of the Church. It has been difficult even for the student to obtain these because the old publications are not accessible for general use.

Mission Presidents: John H. Taylor, Temple Square, Salt Lake City, Utah; Levi Edgar Young, New England; Nicholas G. Smith, Northwestern States. All other Mission Presidents were excused from attendance at this Conference, having been requested to remain in their various mission fields.

FIRST DAY MORNING MEETING

The opening session of the Conference convened Friday morning, October 3, at 10 o'clock.

President Heber J. Grant was present and presided. President David O. McKay, Second Counselor in the First Presidency, conducted the services.

The music for this session was furnished by the combined choruses of the Relief Society Singing Mothers of Bonneville, Cottonwood, Emigration, Ensign, Highland, and Wells Stakes. Brother Frank W. Asper was at the organ.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. MCKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

At the request of President Grant, who is presiding on this occasion, and also President Clark, I now announce the opening of the 112th Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. I know that I express your feelings and the loving sentiments of the entire Church when I say that we are thankful and grateful that President Grant has sufficiently recovered from his recent illness to be present at this Conference.

All official meetings are announced in the Conference Folder. Copies of the Folder are obtainable at the Tabernacle entrances, and all persons interested are requested to provide themselves with a copy and become acquainted with the announcements therein contained.

Notice of all unofficial gatherings will be given in the Deseret News.

Through the courtesy of Radio Station KSL, the proceedings of this Conference are being broadcast. It will be necessary, therefore, to make some announcements which to you who are present might seem unimportant or non-essential.

There are present on the stand this morning President Grant and his two Counselors, all the members of the Council of the Twelve, all the Assistants to the Twelve, six of the First Council of the Seventy, and all the Presiding Bishopric.

The combined choruses and the congregation sang the hymn, "O Ye Mountains High"—Penrose.

Elder J. Emmett Bird, President of the Kolob Stake, offered the invocation.

The combined choruses of Relief Society Singing Mothers sang "Holiness Becometh the House of the Lord"—Evan Stephens. (Arranged for Singing Mothers by Wade N. Stephens) Director: Josephine Brower of the Wells Stake.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAYSecond Counselor in the First Presidency*

With gratification to our Father in Heaven for the preservation of the life of our beloved President, it is now my supreme joy to announce our next speaker, President Heber J. Grant.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I shall not speak loud, I would like the people at the rear of the room, if they are hearing me now, to raise their hands. (Many hands were raised.) Thank you.

EXPLAINS CONDITION OF HEALTH

The doctor gave me only twenty minutes, but I have concluded to take a lot more than twenty minutes. By not speaking loud I do not believe it will hurt me; I hope not at least.

I have been asked for a year and a half, in fact a little longer than that, "How do you feel?" I have said, "Better than yesterday," and I believe it is true, but the improvement has been limited, and I am not yet in good health. Judging from the newspapers one would think I was in first class condition, but they overdid it.

I am very, very happy to be here this morning, grateful beyond my power of expression for the blessings of the Lord, when I realize that I could not move my left arm at all, nor my left leg; that I could not possibly touch my chin with my fingers; that one of my eyes was crooked; and that my mouth was twisted. I feel very happy that I look quite natural, in fact I think I look better than I am.

I thought I was better than I am, and the doctor had only allowed me two hours a day. I spent four hours and twenty minutes one day, and I felt so fine that after dinner I went down to the doctor's office to insist on having four hours a day, only to be sent home and sent to bed. He discovered that my blood pressure had gone out of sight, and so I have not tried to fool him since. However, I am glad to say that he has now given me two and a half hours a day instead of two, to attend to the duties that devolve upon me.

I went to the wonderful banquet that was held in Provo for fifty-year students at the Brigham Young University, and it lasted over three hours. I did not get to sleep until about one o'clock in the morning. Then I attended the Commencement exercises which lasted another three hours the following day. I tried my best to go to sleep in the back seat of a car while driving from Provo to Salt Lake, and failed. The following day I got a sentence of ten days in bed. So I am not looking for a sentence today. The doctor told me that he thought twenty minutes should be my limit, and that I ought to go to one meeting a day only during this Conference. I telephoned to him this morning that I had had a very strenuous day yesterday, but I had had a wonderfully good night last night, and I wanted more than twenty minutes.

He said: "I will come to your house at twelve o'clock today to see how you are. I am not going to take a chance."

A SERMON DELIVERED IN THE PAST

Instead of trying to prepare a sermon I have decided, as Brother Preston Nibley gave me on the first Sunday of September his book, Presidents of the Church, which he has just published,—he told me this was the first copy off the press—to read something from it. I have read it through since then; that is, I have read part of it, and had my family read the rest to me. I am very pleased with the book, and I find there are several long-winded talks of mine in it. I have decided that the talk which I made when I became the President of the Church is as good, if not better, than I can possibly make in my present condition of health, so I am going to read from that, and I am going to read slowly; I am not going to read loudly, and if the people in any part of the house are not hearing me I wish they would raise their hands, and I shall try to raise my voice a little, but not very much.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH F. SMITH'S BLESSING

President Joseph F. Smith as you know died on November 19, 1918, and the night that he died I visited him. His hand was strong, and he shook hands with me vigorously and freely and made the following statement:

The Lord bless you, my boy, the Lord bless you, you have a great responsibility. Always remember this is the Lord's work, and not man's.

I wish to the Lord that all the people would remember that, who are members of the Church, and try to seek the Lord first and not something else.

The Lord is greater than any man. He knows who he wants to lead his Church and never makes any mistake. The Lord bless you.

These are the last words that Joseph F. Smith spoke to anybody.

PLEDGES MADE IN FIRST ADDRESS

In my first address I said:

I feel humble beyond any language with which God has endowed me to express it, in standing before you here this morning, occupying the position in which you have just voted to sustain me. I recall standing before an audience in Tooele, after having been sustained as president of that Stake when I was a young man 23 years of age, pledging to that audience the best that was in me. I stand here today in all humility, acknowledging my own weakness, my own lack of wisdom and information, and my lack of ability to occupy the exalted position in which you have voted to sustain me. But as I said as a boy in Tooele, I say here today, that by and with the help of the Lord, I shall do the best that I can to fulfill every obligation that shall rest upon me as President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, to the full extent of my ability.

I will ask no man to be more liberal with his means than I am with mine, in proportion to what he possesses, for the advancement of God's Kingdom. I will ask no man to observe the Word of Wisdom any more closely than I will observe it. I will ask no man to be any more conscientious and prompt in the payment of his tithes and his offerings than I will be. I will ask no man to be more willing to come early and go late, and to labor with full power of mind and body, than I will labor, always in humility. I hope and pray for the blessings of the Lord, acknowledging freely and frankly that without the Lord's blessings it will be an impossibility for me to make a success of the high calling whereunto I have been called. But, like Nephi of old, I know the Lord makes no requirement of the children of men save He will prepare a way for them, whereby they can accomplish the thing which he has required. With this knowledge in my heart I accept the great responsibility without fear of the consequences, knowing that God will sustain me as He has sustained all of my predecessors who have occupied this position, provided always, that I shall labor in humility and in diligence, ever seeking for the guidance of His Holy Spirit; and this I shall endeavor to do.

GRATEFUL FOR THE SPIRIT OF GOOD WILL EXISTING

I think that we as a people have very great cause to rejoice in the era of good will and fellowship that is existing towards us as a people among those who are not of our faith, in comparison with the conditions that existed some years ago. I do not know of any single thing that has happened in my experience during the long time that I have been one of the General Authorities of the Church [46 years at that time] that has impressed me more profoundly with the change in sentiment towards the Latter-day Saints than the reception that was accorded to me December last when I went to Kansas City and delivered a speech upon the accomplishments of Mormonism. When I reflect upon the fact that in the leading hotel in that wonderful and progressive city . . . I was permitted to stand up within ten miles of Independence, the place from which the Latter-day Saints were expelled, by an expulsion and exterminating order of the governor of the State, Governor Boggs, and to proclaim the accomplishments of the Latter-day Saints; to relate the prophecies of Joseph Smith, to give to those men that were there assembled—over 300 of the leading influential business men of the city—the testimony of Josiah Quincy regarding the Prophet Joseph Smith—

KANSAS CITY SPEECH

You are all aware of that wonderful testimony to the effect that of all the men whom he had ever met, the Prophet was one of the greatest, etc. It takes over a page and a half to relate it, so I shall not read any part of it.

To repeat to them the great pioneer hymn, "Come, Come, Ye Saints;" to relate the hardships, the drivings and the persecutions of the Latter-day Saints, and to have that body of representative men receive that address with approval, applaud it in many places, and many of them come to me after the meeting and shake hands and congratulate me upon the address; and to have some of the members of the Board of Directors of that great club—the Knife and Fork Club of Kansas City—(which I understood is second only to the Gridiron Club at Washington)—to have them say that they hoped for a return date so that they could hear more of our people—

I was requested afterwards to return and make a speech before the Chamber of Commerce. I was requested in the first speech to tell only of the accomplishments of the Church financially and otherwise, but the request came afterwards to return and tell of our faith, and later I delivered an address quoting the Articles of Faith and giving the best that was in me. The secretary said that he wished that the six thousand members of the Chamber of Commerce could have a copy of the speech. I told him we had a printing office ten miles away, and that he should have six thousand copies. I do not know whether he ever delivered them or not, but I mailed them.

To have them say that they hoped for a return date so that they could hear more of our people; and then stop to reflect upon the fact that the Prophet and his followers in the early days were expelled from Missouri; that many of them were murdered; that all kinds of crimes were committed upon the people; that their property was confiscated; that we have never received anything for our property that belonged to us in that section, that today some of the valuable country we traveled over there is the very property that our people owned, (for when you follow up many abstracts of valuable property you will find that the title centers in the bishop of the Mormon Church)—

I told them I owned indirectly through the Church half of Kansas City, but I could not get any of it.

I say to stop and reflect that the drivings and the persecutions of the Latter-day Saints, of which no tongue can tell and no pen can paint the conditions; and then to realize that there is a feeling in that community now, among the people residing in the very place, so to speak, from which President Joseph Smith, the Prophet of the Living God and others were driven out; to be invited to go there and be asked to talk of the accomplishments of Mormonism, and to have that talk received with open arms, shows the most wonderful change in sentiment.

HONORED AT A DINNER

And to have a dinner given to me three years ago by the leading people of this city, and to have telegrams from New York to San Francisco of good will and congratulations; to have our newspapers, all of them, give splendid accounts, and to have the paper that used to abuse us give us the finest kind of treatment today—the change that has come about, I am grateful for beyond all my power of expression.

OFFICERS OF THE CHURCH ADVISED TO KEEP COMMANDMENTS

I announced here at the Priesthood meeting last night, and I have decided to announce it again, that we expect all the General Officers of the Church—[and when I say all I mean all], each and every one of them, from this very day, to be absolute full tithe-payers, to really and truly observe the Word of Wisdom; and we ask all of the officers of the Church and all members of the General Boards, and all Stake and Ward officers, if they are not living the Gospel and honestly and conscientiously paying their tithing, to kindly step aside unless from this day they live up to these provisions.

I repeat it and emphasize it today, we do not want any man or any woman occupying a position who is not keeping the commandments of God.

We feel that in all the Stakes, every Stake President, every counselor to a Stake President, every Stake Clerk, and every High Councilor, standing at the head of the people in the Stake—we ask them to kindly step aside unless they are living up to these laws. They are given the responsibility of presiding, and every officer who is a presiding officer should say from today: I am going to serve the Lord, so that my example will be worthy of imitation.

No man can teach the Word of Wisdom by the Spirit of God who does not live it. No man can proclaim this Gospel by the Spirit of the Living God unless that man is living his religion; and with this great undertaking that we have before us now we must renew our loyalty to God, and I believe beyond a shadow of doubt that God inspires and blesses, and multiplies our substance when we are honest with Him.

I not only believe it, but I know it. The great majority of all the Latter-day Saints that are honest tithepayers are the most prosperous of all the people. I am not talking of individual exceptions. God says that "When you do what I say, I am bound," and He has said that people rob Him in their tithes and their offerings, and we want it stopped.

I want to leave with this vast audience my deep appreciation of all that has been said here. I endorse it with all my heart, and I renew again everything that I said in the ten or fifteen minutes at the close of our Conference six months ago, and I renew it again today. I ask every man and woman occupying a place of responsibility whose duty it is to teach the Gospel of Jesus Christ to live it and to keep the commandments of God, so that their example will teach it; and if they cannot do it we will go on loving them, we will go on putting our arms around them, we will go on praying for them that they may become strong enough to live it. But unless they are able to live it we ask them to please step aside so that those who are living it can teach it. No man can teach the Gospel of Jesus Christ under the inspiration of the living God and with power from on high unless he is living it. He can go on as a member and we will never put a block in his way, because the Gospel is one of love and of forgiveness, but we want true men and women as our officers in the Priesthood and in the Relief Societies, and in all the organizations, and a man has no right to be in a High Council who cannot stand up and say that he knows the Gospel is true and that he is living it.

TESTIMONY AS TO THE BOOK OF MORMON

Now I have a lot more. The doctor said I was to speak but once. I am going to speak again, so I think I will quit for this time. I rejoice beyond all the power of expression which God has given me that I know the Gospel is true. I rejoice that there came into my heart as a boy, probably not quite sixteen, when I read the Book of Mormon faithfully and diligently and prayerfully, a perfect assurance that it was true and I have never met anything since then, and that is nearly seventy years ago, that has ever weakened my faith in the Book of Mormon.

I am grateful that there came into my heart a love and admiration for Nephi, and I am grateful that that man believed and taught and declared that God asked nothing of men but what He prepared the way whereby they could do that thing that He required. There is nothing that God asks of you or of me but what you could do, and do easily, and if you do it God will bless you, and if you do not do it you will lose your faith and we will have to labor with you to try to warm up your hearts and get you back again.

PRAISES PAST LEADERS

God lives. God directs the affairs of this Church. This is the work of God. And the men whom the Lord has chosen, as recorded in this book, Joseph Smith, Brigham Young, John Taylor, Wilford Woodruff, Lorenzo Snow, Joseph F. Smith—I knew and loved them all except the Prophet, and I loved him with all my heart because of the testimony of my dear mother that he was the finest man that ever lived; and the same testimony time and again was given by Sisters Eliza R. Snow and Emmeline B. Wells and the other leading women of the Relief Society. My mother was president for thirty years of the Thirteenth Ward Relief Society. I grew up as a little boy in the Relief Society meetings, and the sisters who knew the Prophet Joseph, fine, lovely, intelligent, wonderful women, all stated that he was the most noble, splendid man that ever lived.

I was intimate from the time I was a child of six with Brigham Young. I attended many times his prayer meetings in the Lion House. On two occasions when he was praying I turned and looked. It seemed as though he had the Lord right there talking to him and asking him what he wanted and telling him what he needed.

I was very glad the last time I saw him and shook hands with him to have him smile and make me a promise. I had been elected Assistant Cashier of Zion's Savings Bank. I was not only the assistant cashier, but I was the janitor, the paying and receiving teller, the bookkeeper and the whole thing. I closed the bank Wednesday evenings and put a sign on the door, "This bank will open at 12:30 tomorrow. The assistant cashier has gone to Fast meeting."

BLESSED THROUGH MAKING A GENEROUS DONATION

We used to have Fast meetings on Thursdays, and while I happen to think of it I will tell you about one of those Fast meetings.

Bishop Edwin D. Woolley made an exceptional talk and he pleaded with the people to be honest with the Lord and to be generous with their money, and he was generous with his. I know it because I used to help him in keeping his books. Among other things he said, "The Lord rewards men four-fold." I happened to have fifty dollars in my pocket. The bank had not opened and I could not deposit it. After the meeting I handed the money to the Bishop and he said, "My boy, why five dollars would be your share of this." I said, "Brother Woolley, didn't you say the Lord rewards four-fold? My dear mother needs a couple of hundred dollars." (Laughter). He smiled and said, "My boy, do you expect to get it quicker if I take that other forty-five dollars?" He had taken the five and shoved forty-five back to me. I said, "I certainly do. I thought you were inspired in your talk and I believe every word you said."

Walking to the bank an idea popped into my head. I went into Wells-Fargo Bank, where I had worked, and made arrangements for them to cash my draft on New York for a sum sufficiently large to take care of all I could possibly buy of certain bonds within forty-eight hours.

They said, "Certainly your credit will be good if you get authority from the man to whom you are shipping the bonds." So I wired the man in New York, whom I knew, and I made $218.50 in two days. I went to the Bishop and told him that the Lord did not give me sufficient in addition to pay all the tithing, that I had to dig up the difference between twenty-one and a fraction dollars and eighteen dollars and fifty cents to pay my tithing. I got my two hundred dollars.

I have had my prayers answered time and time again, and not only have I had my prayers answered but I know as I know that I live that God hears and answers the prayers of honest people. I know He saved the life of my little girl when she was dying, who is now the head of the Young Women's Mutual Improvement Association.

AN INSPIRED PATRIARCHAL BLESSING

I know that He inspired John Rowberry to give me a blessing that I should leave Tooele and become one of the leading men in the Church, and it came true. And he said, "I saw something while blessing you that I dare not put in your blessing," and it came to me as plain as though a voice had said it, "He saw you as the President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints." I afterwards thought, "My gracious, I must be silly to think that that is true," and I never breathed it or said a word about it until that came to me. He gave me a marvelous blessing.

And he blessed that little girl. She was very, very sick, a child just a few months old. He gave her a fine blessing, and then he turned to me and said, "While we were blessing the child did you get the inspiration of the Lord that she should live?" I said "No." He said: "I did. Go to that desk and get a piece of paper, and let me give this child her patriarchal blessing." He promised her many, many things, and he promised her life. She lived and those things have been fulfilled.

DAUGHTER HEALED BY THE POWER OF THE PRIESTHOOD

When she was dying in Washington and I was praying to the Lord to spare her life, it came to me as plain as any voice ever spoke, although I heard nothing: "Send for the Elders to rebuke the destroyer, and your child shall live."

Brother George Q. Cannon and Brother Hiram B. Clawson were in Washington at the time. I sent for them, they blessed her and promised her life and many things, all of which have been fulfilled; and among other things, they announced that the adversary had decreed her death, but by the authority of the Priesthood of the living God they rebuked this decree and promised her life.

Before leaving Washington I was in the boarding house where the children had been sick, and the lady who kept the boarding house had left for the day. Her husband was there and he said to me: "I will have to tell you a joke on my wife. She believes in spiritualistic mediums." So do I but I believe they are inspired of the devil. I said to the man, "I am glad to hear your message." He told me that his wife went to the medium, and the medium said: "I see two little girls in your home, and I see that the older one is taken sick. I now see that the next one is sick. And I see them sick nigh unto death. I now see the younger girl die. I see her body put in a coffin, and I see it taken to a railroad station. I see it go through great cities, I now see it cross a great river, I now see it go through some more great cities, and I see it cross another great river. Now I see it travel through a sparsely settled country." You all know that forty years ago, after crossing the Mississippi and the Missouri rivers, the country this side of Omaha was a sparsely settled country. "I see it go west, west, climbing mountains, mountains, mountains. I see it stop and go south a little way"—from Ogden to Salt Lake. "I see the coffin taken off the train, then taken to a side hill and buried, in a place almost completely surrounded by mountains."

Thank God for the authority of the Priesthood of the living God that rebuked the decree of death! The medium who told what was going to happen, told what the devil would like. But thank God for the Priesthood, and she is alive and well, and is the mother of seven fine children and the grandmother of eight more.

God bless you one and all, I ask it in the name of our Redeemer. Amen.

The combined choruses of the Relief Society Singing Mothers sang "Cradle Song"—Brahms. Director Meryl T. Cardall of the Emigration Stake.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

My brothers and sisters: In common with you, I have been inspired and made grateful by the message which has been delivered by President Heber J. Grant, the representative of God on this earth. May we hearken to what he has said, may we obey his counsel in all things. I know him to be a righteous man, a man whom God loves, and to whom God reveals His mind and His will, and this is my testimony to you and to the world. May God spare him yet many years to guide and direct this people.

THE CHURCH IN A PROSPEROUS CONDITION

I thought perhaps I might begin my remarks by saying to you a few things about the Church in general. As I have explained to you before, we build at the beginning of each year a budget in which we allocate to the various activities of the Church certain funds which we hope—and as to which our hopes have always been realized—you brethren and sisters will furnish by your tithes and offerings. And may I say here, with gratitude to our Heavenly Father, and with congratulations to you and to the Church generally, that this promises to be the banner year of the Church in the matter of tithes and offerings. We are living within our budget, and we are doing this so far, notwithstanding the fact that the cost of building and of materials generally which we have to use in our work has considerably advanced.

Our great building projects completed during the year, or which are now going on, are the Idaho Falls Temple, which we are pushing rapidly to a conclusion; the Joseph Smith Memorial building down at the Brigham Young University which is finished and will be dedicated soon, and the various Ward buildings which we are building all over the Church.

We have been most grateful for your work in carrying on the beautification program. All over the Church it is noticeable that we are improving our yards, cleaning them up, painting our buildings, repairing the fences, things that we should do, because the Lord loves order and He loves us to live in orderly places.

The Relief Society just now is making a drive, as you know, to reach one hundred thousand members. We hope that all Bishops will cooperate with the presidents of the Relief Societies of their Wards in helping to attain this desired end.

THE TRUE MEANING OF FAST OFFERINGS

There has been some good deal of talk among the people with reference to Fast offerings, and I should like to repeat here what was said yesterday, both by President McKay and by myself, before the Bishops: Do not, brethren and sisters, and members of the Church generally, get the impression that a dollar is the ceiling on Fast offerings. A dollar is the ceiling which we said we hoped you might at least reach for one year, but the real ceiling of the Fast offering is the price of two meals per month for the twelve months; not a dollar, but the price of the meals. If you have a five cent meal, then twelve times ten would be one dollar-twenty cents; if you have a ten cent meal it would be two-forty a year; if you have a fifteen cent meal, it would be three dollars and sixty cents; and if you have a twenty cent meal—and most of you eat that kind of meal—then you owe the Lord and the poor four dollars and eighty cents as your Fast offering.

WORK GOING ON IN FOREIGN LANDS

We are glad to say that the missionary work is going forward in these war times in foreign countries. We are having some difficulty in getting missionaries into some countries, but we hope and shall try to carry on to the full extent possible this missionary work in foreign lands.

CHURCH ACTIVITIES IN ARMY CAMPS AND DEFENSE INDUSTRIES

You have already heard of the appointment of Brother Hugh B. Brown to help in the army camps. We may say that Brother Brown is being received most kindly. He is going around to the different camps, he is trying to get in touch with the sons whom you have sent into those camps. He is trying to arrange so that these boys who are there can, if they wish, carry on their work as Latter-day Saints.

Recently we asked the Bishops to notify you that we could supply, through the Deseret Book Company, three books that you might send to your sons who are in the army camps, at cost. You can send the Book of Mormon, the Articles of Faith by Brother Talmage, and a Song Book, for one dollar and three cents, or if you send another Song Book it costs one dollar thirty-three cents. I think there are few if any Latter-day Saints who could not send their boys in the camps these books properly inscribed. I can assure you from the reports that we have received that practically nothing you can do will do more to hold these boys along the road that you want them to travel than for you to send these books. We have arranged that where the people are too poor to spend a dollar on their sons, we can take care of it.

We are also trying to organize the defense workers who are working in defense industries, particularly on the Western Coast; we are arranging with the Presidents of the Stakes in that section to cooperate together and coordinate their labors to bring these young boys into the Wards, where they are in the Stakes, and into the Branches, where they are in the Missions, so that they can participate in Church activities. We are trying to arrange so that no one will be neglected or be forgotten, and that everybody will have an opportunity, every young man who wishes it, to continue his activities in Church work to the utmost limit that is possible under the conditions.

SEES PERILOUS TIMES

We come here today, my brethren and sisters, all of us, with faith, we hope with testimony. We come here in the hope that the Lord will inspire those who speak to us, so to speak that we may gain strength, increased knowledge, that our testimonies will be intensified and made stronger to the end always that we may be able to live the Gospel and enjoy its blessings. We all know how we ought to live, I do not need to tell you about that, but I do perhaps need to exhort myself and to exhort you to live as we know we ought to live.

I have in the past, for the last eight years, talked about the perilous times that were coming, and now about the perilous times that we are in. I do not intend to go over that ground again, but I do call your attention to the fact that we urge upon you thrift, economy, getting out of debt, and keeping out of debt. We have told you about the bad effects of interest; we have told you about the war prosperity, and the depression which is to come. All that has been said in the past, all that I have said, I want to incorporate here by reference. We said these things when it was unpopular to say them, when we were thought to be going against the course we should go, but now everybody is talking about these things, and we do hope that the people will realize that, after all, the old virtues are the sound ones, the old virtues are the things upon which we must build.

I have also talked about our participation in the war, and I told you years ago that there was to be an effort to take our boys across the Water. You do not need to have any doubt about it now, I suppose.

It is not only being sought for on the other side, but it is being planned for on this side.

I have also spoken about what I will call commodity insurance, remembering that sometime you may be ill, that sometime you may be thrown out of employment, sometime you may have death in your homes; remembering that your crops may sometimes fail. We have urged you to get enough material together so that you would have some insurance against those conditions. I am talking about foodstuffs and the things that are necessary in our living. I renew that suggestion.

WARNING AGAINST COMMUNISM

I have been preaching against Communism for twenty years. I still warn you against it, and I tell you that we are drifting toward it more rapidly than some of us understand, and I tell you that when Communism comes, the ownership of the things which are necessary to feed your families is going to be taken away from us. I tell you freedom of speech will go, freedom of the press will go, and freedom of religion will go.

I have warned you against propaganda and hate. We are in the midst of the greatest exhibition of propaganda that the world has ever seen, and all directed toward one end. Just do not believe all you read.

EARLY LEADERS REBUKED BY THE LORD

The First Presidency was organized in March of 1833. In May of that year the Lord gave a revelation to the Prophet, and I am going to read a few verses from that revelation, because I think the instructions and the admonition and the command here given are of the last and ultimate importance today.

But I have commanded you to bring up your children in light and truth.

But verily I say unto you, my servant Frederick G. Williams, you have continued under this condemnation;

You have not taught your children light and truth, according to the commandments; and that wicked one hath power, as yet, over you, and this is the cause of your affliction.

I am reading from the 93rd section of the Doctrine and Covenants.

And now a commandment I give unto you—if you will be delivered you shall set in order your own house, for there are many things that are not right in your house.

Verily, I say unto my servant Sidney Rigdon, that in some things he has not kept the commandments concerning his children; therefore, first set in order thy house.

Verily, I say unto my servant Joseph Smith Junior, or in other words, I will call you friends, for you are my friends, and ye shall have an inheritance with me—

I called you servants for the world's sake, and ye are their servants for my sake—

And now, verily I say unto Joseph Smith Junior,—you have not kept the commandments, and must needs stand rebuked before the Lord;

Your family must needs repent and forsake some things, and give more earnest heed unto your sayings, or be removed out of their place.

What I say unto one I say unto all; pray always lest that wicked one have power in you, and remove you out of your place.

My servant Newel K. Whitney also, a bishop in my Church, hath need to be chastened, and set in order his family, and see that they are more diligent and concerned at home, and pray always, or they shall be removed out of their place.

OUR RESPONSIBILITY TO TEACH CHILDREN

Now, as I see it, my brethren and sisters, that is the crying need of the Church today. We must set in order our own houses, we must see that our children are properly taught; they must understand what the commandments of the Lord are, and we shall not have our skirts clear if we do not do all that is in our power, not alone by precept, but by example, in bringing them to live according to the principles of the Gospel. In no other way can salvation and exaltation come, and our troubles will be great, even as the Lord told the First Presidency over a hundred years ago, our troubles will be great if we fail in teaching our children properly. We are coming too much to the point where we condone sin instead of forgiving the repentant sinner, and there is a great difference between those two things. The Lord has said He cannot look upon sin with the least degree of allowance, and yet He has proclaimed time and time again His willingness to extend mercy, to extend forgiveness, to receive back that person who, sinning, has sincerely repented, and by this ye shall know that they have repented, namely, that they confess their sins and forsake them.

It is becoming a practice today to try to coax, cajole, buy children to be good. We hesitate, some of us, to say to children, you must not do this, you must not do that, and to our young people we hesitate to do this, because we may offend them. The Lord has made it perfectly clear, from Adam until now, and has told us in no unmistaken words, that there are certain things "thou shalt not" do. Adam fell because he violated one "Thou shalt not." Moses from Sinai gave a whole series of commandments, only one of which has not "Thou shalt not" in it.

My brethren and sisters, our young people welcome, they expect that we shall tell them what to do and what not to do, and what not to do must be told them in such language, in such terms, and with such emphasis that they are not left in doubt. Try this on your young people and you will be amazed at the response you will get. They are hungering for the Gospel. See to it that we do not starve them; they must be fed.

My time is up. May the Lord bless you. May He bless all of us. May He increase our faith, our testimony. May He give us all of the things that we need spiritually and temporally, so that we can perform our duties, so that we can set our houses in order, so that we can save our children, for their sakes, for our own sakes, because otherwise the Lord will not bless us, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER CLIFFORD E. YOUNGAssistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

My brethren and sisters, I am sure that you appreciate my position here this morning. I have been impressed as you have with the spirit of this Conference thus far, particularly to have our leader talk to us as he has. We do believe that which we have heard.

FOLLOWING GOOD ADVICE BRINGS SECURITY

If we could carry to our homes the counsel that President Clark has given, and if we could carry out this advice in our administrative work in the Ward and the Stakes, I am sure we would find a reawakening.

On one occasion the Lord said to His disciples:

My doctrine is not mine, but His that sent me. If any man will do His will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.

This has a far-sweeping significance. In the last five years, perhaps six, we have been advised of steps we should take to make ourselves economically secure. We have passed through one economic tragedy we were not prepared to meet, for we had been laboring in some degree of lethargy; so I repeat that we were not prepared to take care of the economic needs of our people. The result was that we became more or less confused in our thinking and lost sight of some of the old standards that had been set up in the Church.

PRESIDENT YOUNG'S EPISTLE TO SAMUEL BRANNAN

I am reminded now of an epistle that President Young sent to the Saints in California by Samuel Brannan. Brother Brannan intercepted the Mormon people on their way westward out on Green River. You remember he had instructions to take a group of Saints then residing in the eastern part of the United States around Cape Horn and up to San Francisco, and it was originally intended that they should later join the Saints in the Rocky Mountains. They settled in 1846 around San Francisco Bay, and in 1847, when Samuel Brannan learned of the coming of the pioneers under the leadership of Brigham Young, he, with two others set out across the mountains and over the Oregon Trail, and about the last of June, 1847, met the Mormon leader on Green River. He remained with the pioneers and came into the Valley with them, and as he was about to leave, President Young gave some very definite instructions in an epistle which Brother Brannan was to take back to the Saints.

Among other things, the President wrote this:

We feel to say to those who are unitedly engaged with Brother Brannan in laboring for the good of the whole, that the poor, the widow, and fatherless may not want, that you will be blessed if you keep your contracts to the end of the two years, and labor diligently in your several occupations; and when that time shall expire, we hope you will be able to cancel all your obligations and have enough to give each family an inheritance or stewardship, that he may commence, as it were, anew in the world, just as we are commencing here at this place (Salt Lake City). We do not believe in having all things in common and on general principles, as some have taught, both in the Church and out, but we believe that it is right for every man to have his stewardship, according to the ability that God has given him.

Now the reason he said that at that time was that he wanted the Saints to understand that they should be individualistic, should stand on their own foundation, and that they should work for what they got, giving full value, maintaining an integrity consistent with their standing as members of the Church.

The epistle is an interesting one and all of it is worth our reading, but the point I wish to emphasize is the point that President Young made with Samuel Brannan, that the Saints must be consistent, must be loyal to their trust, but must stand independently and aloof except for the help that they themselves might contribute to a common cause.

SUCCESS OF THE WELFARE PLAN DEPENDS UPON LOYALTY

The President pointed out that it was the duty of the leading brethren to look after those who were unfortunate, and who could not make their contribution because of illness or physical defect or otherwise, that all the membership of the Church should contribute their part and do their part. In this instruction, as I see it, is the very essence of the success of our Welfare Program. Not in what we receive, but in what we do, in what we contribute in our own Wards and Stakes. We have not been so successful in the production of commodities, not so successful as we would like to be, and yet we feel there has been attained a degree of success because of the loyalty of the men and women who have sought to do their part. When men and women will go down on projects and work in the mornings and the evenings; will assemble at our storehouses, women who are busy in their homes, yet are willing to assemble in the storehouses and do their part in furthering this great program—I say when men and women will do that we need not fear the outcome, although the material things may not be so plentiful as we would like. It is in the spirit of the thing that we feel the power and the strength of this effort.

So my brethren and sisters—my time is limited—if I may just say this: if we will DO, we will know of the doctrines. If we will contribute of our energies, and our efforts, we can accomplish much. Brother Clark has pointed out what may be accomplished in the Fast if we do our part, and then concentrate, centralize that in the great divisions of the Stakes and the Regions, and finally the central storehouse. What may we not be able to do to help meet that which confronts the Latter-Day Saints, and may confront them when the time of need comes!

So I repeat the words of the Savior; "My doctrine is not mine, but His that sent me. If any man will do His will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." The doctrine He was teaching was not His, but belonged to God, as every bit of energy and effort that is put forth under the Welfare Plan for the benefit and blessing of the people is in harmony with the will and purposes of God. If we do His will, we will know of its effectiveness and of its blessings. And may God help us to do this, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER GEORGE F. RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I am sure, brethren and sisters, we were all pleased to hear the President of the Church, and to know that he was able to stand before us and address us in the opening of this Conference. If I were to undertake to comment on his remarks I would say that the principles that he laid down when he became the President of the Church have actuated his life in the years that have succeeded. He has been an example unto the members of the Church. He has been full of persuasion, and has taught us well as a people. I believe we are so well taught that if we should do as well as we know, and leave undone the things we know we ought not to do, we would be in the way of salvation. We have need therefore of being impressed with the necessity of doing things we know we ought to do.

A WAR FOUGHT FOR A PRINCIPLE

Our Savior has been an example to us in all things. I call attention to the war that took place in heaven of which we read in the Bible, the 12th chapter of Revelation, and the Pearl of Great Price, where one of our Father's sons who was regarded as a noble and great one, presented a plan for our salvation that would oblige us to comply with the law without the exercise of our agency, and he would take away from our Father in heaven His honor and His glory. In that council in heaven the Firstborn of the Father in the spirit came forward with a simple but forceful declaration: "Father, thy will be done, and the glory be thine forever."

The battle was fought, whatever its nature, upon this platform of principles, and we have reason to believe that we were among those who stood with the Savior, our Elder Brother, true and faithful, and those who rebelled were cast out and down, and God's purposes and His will are made to obtain in the plan of man's salvation. The Savior is our great exemplar and we are instructed by Scripture that we should walk in the light as He is in the light, with the promise that we will have fellowship one with another, and His blood will cleanse us from all sin. We have good reason to believe that the principle which the Savior presented in the council of heaven, pertained not to the spirit life alone, but to our existence here on the earth.

Of course the earth was not framed at that time, but the end is known unto God even from the beginning. Provision was made even at that time for redeeming mankind from a fall that had not yet taken place, through the atonement of Christ, and that was one of the purposes of His being chosen, and that we might all have forgiveness of sin through obedience to the laws and ordinances of the Gospel. The Father gave the Son, and the Son gave Himself, the greatest gift that ever was given, the greatest sacrifice that ever was made, the greatest service that ever was rendered. We are asked to follow in His footsteps, and I think that means that we should be willing to give all we have, if need be, and our lives, if necessary, for the Cause, to aid in the purpose of our Heavenly Father in the saving of His children.

We are not so much interested in our own welfare as we should be, and we can apply this spirit of the Christ to our individual lives in this respect.

"Thy will be done" meant of course that we will do the things that will please our Father in heaven, and when we are doing His will we are pleasing Him. I want to tell you, brethren and sisters, it is apparent that many of us are doing things that are not pleasing to our Father in heaven, and we know it, so we have need to be reminded.

The Scriptures tell us that faith is the first principle of revealed religion, the foundation of all righteousness, and the moving cause in all action. Faith being the foundation of all righteousness, we may conclude logically that our unrighteousness is due to a lack of faith. I am sure, brethren and sisters, if we had the faith that we should have, that our Father in heaven expects of us, there is no requirement made of us but that we would gladly respond to it; and the blessings held out to us we would take advantage of.

TEMPLE MARRIAGE A GREAT BLESSING

It is a matter of great disappointment to the Authorities of the Church and to the Lord that many of its members will satisfy themselves to be married with a ceremony until death separates them—a time marriage. We call those marriages performed in the Church outside of the Temples civil marriages, and those in the Temple, Temple marriages. I want to explain to you that the Temple marriages have all the elements of a civil marriage, that a man performing a Temple marriage has authority of law the same as those who perform the civil marriages outside of the Temple, and also has authority in the holy Priesthood, by special appointment, the sealing power by which the man and woman are sealed as husband and wife for time and for all eternity, and not only that, but some of the greatest blessings our Father has for His children, intended for the very elect of the Lord, are pronounced upon them through their faithfulness in the keeping of their covenants, blessings that are attainable in no other way but in the marriage relation in the new and everlasting covenant.

The leaders in the Wards, particularly the Bishops have the principal responsibility of teaching the young people, or seeing that they are taught what their opportunities are in the matter of marriage and of receiving the sacred ordinances of the holy endowments in the Temple of the Lord which are to prepare them to enter into and receive an exaltation in the kingdom of God. They should be so well instructed that when a young man comes to the Bishop for a recommend who has not complied with the prescribed conditions so as to be worthy to go to the Temple, he could consistently deny him the privilege.

BLESSINGS TO BE SOUGHT THROUGH WORTHINESS

There are a great many members of the Church who have been married in the Temple who have not been worthy of the Temple blessings. They have need of repentance.

We have others who have not gone to the Temple because they could not have a recommend. They know they are not living the Gospel so as to be worthy to receive those great blessings pertaining to the endowment and the sealing of husband and wife, and this is displeasing in the sight of the Lord.

And there are others who could have a recommend to go to the Temple, but choose to be married for time and in civil marriage rather than a marriage in the Temple of the Lord.

NEGLECT OF OPPORTUNITIES BRINGS REGRET

Now let me tell you of an experience I had while presiding in the Salt Lake Temple. A lady came to me as the President of the Temple, sobbing in her sorrow, in her disappointment. I heard her story. She said that she and her husband were members of the Church, and could have gone to the Temple; but they did not give serious thought to it, and after they had two children the husband died. Later, she married a man not a member of the Church, and these two children—a boy and a girl—had now arrived to their teens, and in the genealogical class where they were studying they had learned that those who had not been born under the new and everlasting covenant must of necessity be sealed to their parents, and so they came to their mother and wanted to know if they could be sealed to the father and the mother. The facts are that the parents had neglected being sealed in life, and after the death of the husband, and father, the wife had neglected going to the Temple to be sealed to the husband and have the children sealed to their parents, she has now married outside of the Church, and the doors of the Temple are closed against her. Not only is she deprived of the blessings of the holy endowment and of being a sealed wife to a man for eternity, but her children have not the privilege of being sealed to their parents. These parents have done their children a very great injustice in not having been married in the Temple that the children might be born under the new and everlasting covenant.

And that represents but one class, brethren and sisters.

I had a letter at one time from one of our northern settlements, I think it came from a Ward Teacher who made representations that a couple could have gone to the Temple, but they lived a long distance from the Temple; they intended to go but they kept putting it off until they had three children, and then the husband was taken sick and died. Later on a good brother came along and courted this widow and she married him for time, with the understanding that he would go to the Temple with her and stand as proxy for her husband, that she might be sealed to her husband and have her children sealed to them. The time went by and this promise was neglected, until now she has three children by her second husband, and the second husband thinks now that he has just as much right to that woman as the first husband, and the woman seemed to be in doubt as to what was the right thing to do, or what her privileges were. Of course, she not having been sealed to any man, has her choice. She can be sealed to whichever one she likes. When she mourned the loss of her husband I suppose she thought she could never love another, but time heals the wound, and another man comes into her life, and now she is in a position where she must judge between a live man and a dead man, and usually they prefer a live man, (laughter) and the live man has the advantage over the dead man, he is present to plead his cause. And so if the woman decides in favor of the second husband which is her right, if she desires it, and is sealed to him, the only way she can have her children is to have them sealed to her and to the man to whom she is sealed. The children having been young while their father lived, and this man, if he has been a good stepfather, the children have learned to love him and respect him as such and they want to be sealed to their mother. The only way to be sealed to her is to be sealed to this man. They are perfectly willing, even when they are grown up and can decide for themselves.

How about the first husband, the father of those children? He has lost his wife; he has lost his children, through neglect, being indifferent to his own interests and the mind and the will of the Lord concerning him. As I have said, it is a displeasure to the Lord if any of these members of the Church should not be living so as to get a recommend to the Temple, or if those who are worthy do not go to the Temple for those blessings.

These represent certain classes. I want to tell you there are in this Church today more than 30,000 men over twenty years of age that hold some office in the Aaronic Priesthood that have never been advanced to the Melchizedek Priesthood. That means they have never been to the Temple and received their endowments. It means that if they are married they have married outside of the Temple. It means they are in danger of losing their wives and their children, and they are doing an injustice to their children, bringing up their family without giving them the privilege of being born under the new and everlasting covenant.

And so the Prophet Joseph has left of record this statement, that whenever the Lord offers a man a blessing and he rejects that offer, that man is damned.

We cannot ignore the fact that there are incentives held out to us to do the things we know we ought to do to obtain salvation, and condemnation awaits us if we neglect those duties.

I see my time has expired. I thank the Lord for the help He has given me, for I believe, brethren and sisters, I have spoken under the influence of the Spirit of the Lord and the will of the Lord concerning us. There are many other things just as important as those of which I have been speaking and wherein we are showing some neglect. So in the spirit of humility, and in love, faith, hope, and charity I would call upon the Latter-day Saints who have need of it to repent while they have the opportunity and make their calling and election sure, and may God help us all, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

Before we close this session I think it appropriate to read an appeal that has come to the First Presidency from the Chief of Police of Salt Lake City.

My Dear Brethren: The Ward Teachers pamphlet for August, 1941, appealed to Latter-day Saints to obey traffic laws, to stop the waste of human life and property resulting from a disregard of these laws. What a timely, important message.

May I urge that this matter again be brought to the attention of all those who attend this Conference.

We stress the importance of keeping our bodies healthy and strong through observance of the Word of Wisdom. It is almost as important to achieve the same results by obviating accidents, both to ourselves and to others. There is a definite responsibility resting upon the shoulders of each Latter-day Saint.

Our problem is to try to convince everyone as to the seriousness of this situation. This is difficult, for deaths and accidents have increased despite numerous safety campaigns. Fewer than 24,000 were killed by bombs in Britain during 1940. More than 34,000 were killed by automobiles in the United States during 1940.

The 1940 record for accidents and fatalities was appalling; but the 1941 figures to date are staggering. There is a more wanton disregard for life and property than ever before. Hence this personal appeal, for we have our share locally.

We desire that everyone may have a time of rejoicing at Conference and we earnestly hope that all may be able to return to their respective homes, free from all accidents and harm.

EDUCATION, ENFORCEMENT, ENGINEERING, all play their part in a safety program. However, the human equation is the most important of all. Therefore, particularly during Conference please be careful.

Keep mentally alert while walking or driving. Remember, 150 pounds or so of human flesh is certainly not a fit antagonist for 3000 pounds of steel.

Human life is sacred. It should be preserved in every way possible. In this, as in all other things, let us be real Latter-day Saints.

One other reminder. Please do not leave clothing or other valuable property in your automobiles unless you are there to watch over it.

With the kindest of personal regards, I remain,

Respectfully,

REED E. VETTERLI,
Chief of Police

That is an appeal which needs no comment. Let us heed it.

The combined choruses of the Relief Society Singing Mothers will now sing, "Holy Art Thou," by Handel; Director: Mrs. Olive Rich of the Bonneville Stake. The solo part will be sung by Sister Ruth Jensen Clawson.

May I express to you our sincere appreciation and gratitude to the Singing Mothers for the inspirational service they have rendered this session.

The benediction will be offered by Elder German E. Ellsworth, after which this Conference will be adjourned until this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The combined choruses of Relief Society Singing Mothers sang "Holy Art Thou"—Handel. Director: Olive Rich of the Bonneville Stake. Soloist: Ruth Jensen Clawson.

The benediction was pronounced by Elder German E. Ellsworth. Conference adjourned until 2 p. m.

FIRST DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference reconvened at 2 o'clock p. m., Friday, October 3.

President David O. McKay, Second Counselor in the First Presidency, conducted the services.

The combined choruses of the Relief Society Singing Mothers of Bonneville, Cottonwood, Emigration, Ensign, Highland, and Wells Stakes furnished the music for this session. Brother Frank W. Asper was at the organ.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. MCKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

President Grant thought it advisable for him to rest this afternoon. His two Counselors are present, all the Twelve Apostles, five Assistants to the Twelve, six of the First Council of the Seventy, and all of the Presiding Bishopric.

The combined choruses and the congregation sang the hymn, "Redeemer of Israel"—Words by Phelps.

Elder Henry C. Jacobs, President of the North Sanpete Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The combined choruses of the Relief Society Singing Mothers sang "America, the Beautiful"—Ward. Director: Ila Wheelright of the Ensign Stake.

ELDER RICHARD R. LYMAN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

The lawyer said:

Master, which is the great commandment in the law? Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. (Matthew 22:36:39)

The world's greatest need in this its most tragic and its most terrible hour is spiritual regeneration and applied religion. And it is concerning this need that I desire to speak today. I appeal to you for serious consideration of those great fundamental religious ideals, those basic laws of God which from the beginning all good people have had a desire and an ambition to obey. Those who appreciate and really understand modern Christian civilization believe in being honest, they believe in being true, and they believe in doing good to all men.

LOVE YOUR ENEMIES

Anciently it was said:

An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.

Only the beast-like, those not endowed with that gift of reason and feeling with which man is endowed can practice such a revengeful and selfish teaching. The words of the Savior are:

But I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you.

And he adds:

Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect. (Matthew 5:38-48)

This is real religion. Measured by this perfect standard which the Savior laid down and in accordance with which He Himself lived, where will you and where will I be classified?

Again Paul says:

Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive. (Acts 20:35)

And the Psalmist records:

Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile. (Psalms 34:13.)

This again is real religion. Measured by such a standard where would a fair classification put you and me? Again:

If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, that man's religion is vain. Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world. (James 1:26-27.)

In this most tragic and terrible hour, will all good people not agree that this is real religion? And judged by these high and perfect standards let me ask again, where would a calm and a fair judgment put you and me?

NO CHILD HUNGRY OR COLD

While the Gospel plan is perfect and we mortals may not be able to live that plan perfectly, we can make an effort in that direction, and the greater the effort, the more nearly perfect will be the result. What a glorious condition would prevail in the world if we could practice in high degree these teachings of real religion, the love of God, and the brotherhood of man. What a glorious condition would prevail if no child anywhere were hungry, barefooted, or poorly clothed; if every child had a well-balanced diet, and a comfortable home in which to live, with ample health and educational opportunities; if all who are able-bodied could secure work so as to make it possible for them, by the sweat of the brow, to earn their living; if those who are unable to work and earn could, with genuine willingness and love, be cared for in real comfort, then truly the conditions prevailing would be glorious. And let us remember and realize that real practical, unselfish, applied religion can bring about this greatly desired condition.

We all need that genuine Christian spirit which not only acts so effectively as a spur to promote human happiness, comfort and welfare, but which reacts upon ourselves, stimulates our growth and development and encourages in us a general community spirit of cooperation and well doing. Man thus actuated will not only lead a better individual life but he will help to build a stronger and a better nation.

MAN TO HAVE DOMINION

Man was made to be free, to rule and to have dominion. And this does not mean a dominion to be gained by military power or by brute force but by the power of love, unselfishness and understanding.

It is because some of the leaders of men today lack spirituality and proper adherence to religious ideals and standards that the whole world is filled with war and cries of war. Men may call out peace, peace, but there is no peace. The whole world, every nation therein, is preparing for war, or for so-called defense, at a rate and at a cost unknown and unheard of before even in man's wildest imagination. And all this has come about because of the selfishness, greed, envy, hate, ambition and the tyranny of some of the leaders of mankind. Nothing but spiritual regeneration, and a return to the religion of justice, fairness and love can remove from the world the causes of this mighty, this unparalleled conflict.

RIDING DRUNKENLY TO A FALL

Let me ask you if the training given to our young people these days is providing a solution to the great problems with which our beloved country and all other nations are confronted? Was Agnes Bryson right when she said:

Crime is increasing, poverty is increasing, indecency is flaunting itself, dishonesty in private life and in public life in these days oftentimes causes but little comment.

And she concludes:

We are riding drunkenly to a fall.

You know that those moral and religious standards which civilized people have looked upon throughout the ages as well founded and as controlling principles are, in some quarters today, treated with disdain and with contempt. In many places cruel and merciless brute force has replaced reason and a feeling of fair dealing. The ruling agency of some leaders is violent and irrational emotion. One civilized and free nation after another has been conquered by the use of force as devoid of reason as is that force the tiger uses when he devours a lamb. We are seeing in these days how it may be possible for force unguided by religion, morals or honor to conquer the world:

POWERFUL BEAST, HELPLESS PREY

What some are calling a "New Order" follows the oldest order known. It is not unlike the practice of the powerful beast devouring its helpless prey. It is an order whose motives are prompted by envy, hatred and malice. It is an order that takes from man his freedom and makes it impossible for the individual, however righteous, trustworthy, talented, ambitious or competent, to work effectively, to rise and to make his contribution to the good of mankind by rendering the highest human service of which he is capable. This so-called new order is distinctly, yes, violently against the progress and welfare of the masses of the people. It would destroy the very foundations of free government. This plan displaces the rule of moral principle with that of selfishness, force and greed.

PEACE THAT PASSETH UNDERSTANDING

Compare such a condition with the spirit of real religion expressed in the scriptures as "The love of Christ which passeth knowledge" (Eph. 3:19) "and the peace of God which passeth all understanding." (Phil. 4:7)

APPALLING ATTACK ON INNOCENTS

As an illustration of what has come into the world for lack of justice, honor and religion, we need only remember that it is but thirteen years since in the City of Paris the governments of nearly all the nations of the world united with their fellow governments in a pledge, covenant and treaty to renounce war and to proceed to the settlement of international differences and disputes by means of peaceful discussion and arbitration. The leaders of some nations, contrary to these their solemn and sacred pledges, began at once extensive preparations for war. The democratic nations, taking it for granted that the other powers were honest and would keep faith, did little in the way of making military preparations and thus brought about the unfortunate situation which has led to the downfall of France and to the appalling attack that is now being made on Great Britain and its people.

HOLDING PISTOL AT NEIGHBOR'S HEAD

Is using force the wise way of proceeding to get even that which may be fairly and justly due? All truly civilized peoples around the world will unitedly answer, "No." Babson is probably right when he says:

Anything gained today by holding a pistol at your neighbor's head will surely be lost tomorrow.

We must in our country do away with those activities which are carried on for selfish and for personal interests with little or no regard for human personality or for the good and welfare of the people or of the nation. Pressure methods, mob rule, whatever its form, must be overcome if we are to preserve our form of government. It was internal dissension, lack of unity, yes, it was the lack of the spiritual values of which I am speaking that brought ruin to that once great, powerful and glorious French Republic.

PLEDGES FLAGRANTLY DISHONORED

What a sorry condition our world is in when in it there are nations whose promises and pledges are flagrantly and openly dishonored! Such actions lead only to the making of new agreements whose terms contain provisions of ever-increasing severity and harshness. There appears to be no limit to the demands which some government officials make of their victims. Conditions today in many conquered countries are bad, but it appears they will continue to grow worse. The rights promised to the conquered people may, at any moment, be taken away because of the lack of integrity on the part of the conquerors. The plan seems to be to so lower the morale of these unfortunate ones as to make them positively helpless.

FUNDAMENTALS OF FREEDOM

Our national defense program sets forth the idea of our giving assistance to those who are struggling to secure a world order built on such moral foundations of justice, cooperation, freedom and unselfishness that war will be impossible and will be done away with forever; that the light of liberty shall not be extinguished, that the blessings of peace and freedom shall be preserved, and that all people shall have the privilege of living together as equals. We are struggling to maintain our five great fundamental individual liberties, namely, freedom of religion, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of assembly, and freedom to petition the government for redress of grievances.

NATURAL ABILITY RICHLY REWARDED

Our country has had an unparalleled development and growth because here in this land of freedom men and women who exhibit exceptional ability and capacity for achievement are given an opportunity to rise quickly to positions and opportunities of ever-increasing importance.

President Nicholas Murray Butler says that of the chief administrative officers of twelve of the greatest railway companies in our country, five began their services as clerks, two as office boys, one as fireman, one as locomotive engineer, one as a track laborer, one as a stenographer, one as a telegraph operator, and one as a rodman in a surveying party. This indicates how in a free country opportunities and positions of the highest order are open to those who possess exceptional native ability.

LEADERS COMPETENT AND RIGHTEOUS

The right to work, to earn and to save, and the right by the use of savings to increase productive power and thus to provide the ever-increasing number of human needs is a fundamental of our form of government which we must preserve. The liberty of which I speak and the Christian ideals which are its foundation will carry civilization forward swiftly generation after generation if we can but have the leadership of those who as leaders are the most competent and the most righteous. Progress and development depend upon the ability, the capability for achievement and the high moral and religious standards of those who lead.

WHICH? FIGHT OR ARBITRATE

Need I ask you or people generally which is right and righteous, which is wise, which conforms to the methods of modern education and civilization,—to fight or to arbitrate? One is the method of force, the other the method of intelligence and reason; one the method of the brainless beast, the other the method of man who is created in the image of God.

LEAST MAY BE GREATEST

Our own Church is a well-nigh perfect example of true democracy. Our Bishops, our Stake Presidents, other Ward and Stake officials, the General Authorities of the Church, and our missionaries may come from any or all of the various walks of life. No one in the Church occupies a place so humble that he cannot find ample opportunity somewhere in this organization to exercise his leadership if he has a good character and if by nature he has been blessed with unusual ability to lead.

IN UNITY THERE IS STRENGTH

And it is not only the right but the duty of the officials in the Church to use the ability and intelligence the Creator has given them. These leaders are expected when matters are being discussed to express their own personal views fully and completely. But when a majority of any Church group has reached a decision, that decision becomes the decision of the whole group and all are expected to sustain that decision whether or not it agrees with their original views. Our Church people realize that in unity there is strength and that a house divided against itself cannot stand.

FREEDOM AND JUSTICE FOR ALL

Let us therefore forever unite in our prayers and in our efforts to preserve that great principle of "freedom and justice for all" for which our forefathers so nobly fought, so freely bled and in many cases gave their lives so gloriously on the field of honor. Let us stand for and practice that dependability which Dr. Thomas Nixon Carver calls the greatest modern saving device. Let us be honest, let us be true, let us try to be unselfish and struggle always to do good to all men. According to the standard set for the Boy Scouts, let us do our daily good turn, let us help other people at all times and may we by thus practicing the teachings of real religion acquire truly a genuine spiritual regeneration and know and feel in our hearts that love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that peace of God which passeth all understanding, I humbly pray.

ELDER SAMUEL O. BENNION

Of the First Council of the Seventy

Thanks to President McKay for the few moments of warning. It is said that to be forewarned is to be forearmed, but I am a little doubtful about it now.

APPRECIATION OF PRESIDENT GRANT

I was very much impressed this morning with that rich testimony that came to us from President Heber J. Grant. I do not know how many of us regard his testimony as we should do—the testimony of a prophet of God. As I looked at him I thought of the prophets of old. They occupied no greater position than does he, if as great, for in these the latter days many, many wonderful things have been revealed and inaugurated that were not heard of in the ancient order of the Church, in the centuries that are past. To me his message was most impressive, and I marveled at his strength.

I believe if there ever was a time when men and women should hold to the principles of truth and be absolutely genuine in their endeavors and in their appeals to the Lord, it is now. And it gives us all renewed faith and courage to behold a man like President Grant, whose many years of righteous living have made him so valuable to the children of men, not only in this Church, but out of the Church; all men must be profited by listening to him.

PREPARATION FOR COMING EVENTS STRESSED

I was greatly impressed by those words of President Clark that we should prepare for the great things that are coming. There are organizations that are formed now, that, it is claimed, will serve as a cushion when the fall comes, and it will come, for there cannot be a continuation of conditions as they now exist, there never can be a government of peace under the present propaganda. It is the thing that has rocked the old world and put it in the war, and, unless a change takes place, it will throw this country into conflict just as surely as we are here. Nothing but the supreme power of God can withstand the blow that is to come, and I take it He will very likely allow men to carry on as they will. But here in this Church we know the truth. Here we sit in council and in conference. Here we are well informed, and we do not need to do any guessing about it. We know that just as surely as the world is at war, just so surely will this country be thrown into conflict, unless the power of right prevails. Only those who are prepared will be able to stand.

This Church must be held as a unit of the great commonwealth of the country. Men and women must stand by the principles and ideals of this Church, and they must know the things whereof they speak. The Prophet Joseph Smith said that nothing but pure knowledge will save a man, and that means there is a great deal of knowledge in this world that is not pure or good or genuine. But the wise use of pure knowledge will save men.

THE GOSPEL RESTORED IN POWER

The plan of salvation has been outlined carefully for us. There is not a man or a woman who holds membership in this Church but who knows in his heart, with all the surety that can be crowded into a mind and heart, that the Lord appeared to Joseph Smith; that that boy received the revelations that he said he did, and the visitation of the Father and the Son; and that he was so filled with the power of God that he carried with him that influence so long as he lived in the earth. He left his testimony, he left the written word, he gave to the children of men so much doctrine that as long as the earth stands they will not be able to consume or understand it all, for those principles were pertaining to eternal life, as well as here. This is the preparatory state.

QUOTATIONS FROM PRESIDENTS OF THE CHURCH

I want to read something that President Joseph F. Smith said from this stand some years ago:

"Men and women should become settled in the truth and founded in a knowledge of the Gospel, depending upon no person for borrowed light, but trusting only upon the Holy Spirit, who is ever the same, shining forth and forever testifying to the endurance of the Priesthood, who live in harmony with the laws of the Gospel, of the glory and will of the Father. They will then have light everlasting which cannot be obscured. By its shining in their lives they will cause others to glorify God, and by their well-doing put to silence the ignorance of foolish men, and show forth the praises of Him who hath called them out of darkness into His marvelous light."

President Heber J. Grant said not long ago:

"No people upon the face of the earth have ever been blessed as have been the Latter-day Saints. No other people have ever had the manifestations of kindness and mercy and long-suffering of God, that have been bestowed upon us, and we, above all men and women upon the earth, should live God-like and upright lives.

STUDY OF THE WORD OF GOD URGED

Now, brethren and sisters, these principles of salvation which the Lord has revealed, and which He renews constantly unto us, through the voices of His prophets, are the word of God unto us. I am wondering if this group of people known as the Latter-day Saints read the doctrines of Christ as they ought to read them. I am wondering if we put in as much time studying and re-reading as we should.

Jesus said:

I am the way, the truth and the light. No man cometh unto the Father but by me.

And He also said:

Search the scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me.

I wonder how many of us read the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants, the Pearl of Great Price, and the revelations of God that come to us by way of speech and sermon and in song.

KNOWLEDGE OF CHURCH HISTORY IMPORTANT

I think we are facing today a crisis that the Church has never faced before. There are so many things in this world that lead men and women astray, that lead the youth of Zion away from us—propaganda and vicious habits, things that have not had such sway in the world before as they do at the present time. I wonder if men with families have provided themselves with enough reading matter so that their sons and daughters may be informed as to the conditions of things that have happened and that will happen, according to the revelations of God. How many of us have the History of the Church in our homes, the documentary evidence of the Church. In that history we shall find a record of the hand dealing of God with this people, from the days of the appearance of the Father and the Son, until the time of Brigham Young; the foundation principles that brought into existence the revelations contained in the Doctrine and Covenants, the organization of the Church, the trials of the members of the Church in Nauvoo and in Missouri, and their trips back and forth into Kirtland.

Many boys and girls there are who are attending the schools of our country, who pay no attention at all to these wonderful references. The history of the Church, which records the manifestations of God and the revelations which He has given, should be where young people can read it, and where men and women can review it.

In their reading they should seek the Holy Spirit, it is the power of God; it is the thing that gives unto the children of men knowledge. "No man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed; and no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost."

The Holy Ghost ministers unto the children of men, and it will bear testimony to any boy or girl who will read the doctrines of the Church and the scriptures, and who will do it soberly, with a desire to know. It will give unto them a testimony, even though they be young. And to those who are old, it will enlarge their circle of understanding. It will establish faith in our hearts, and by that faith we will prepare for the future that awaits us in this life, and will be made strong to meet the trials ahead. It will be the thing that will help each and every one of us to say, I listen and I obey the leadership of this Church. I will do my very best to sustain and establish the cause of Christ.

Out of this knowledge comes power, and when men have knowledge and they want to use that power that comes from it, they can do it in their homes, in their fields, in places of business, and in places where they are thrown together among men who do not believe as we do. We will have the power of truth and cannot be swerved.

A TESTIMONY AS TO THE LEADERS OF THE CHURCH

Brothers and sisters, my time, I am sure, is gone. I am happy to be here. I know that this is the work of God. I know that Jesus is the Christ, and that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God. I know that Heber J. Grant stands at the head of the Church as the anointed one of our Eternal Father, to give and to lead and to guide; and associated with him are his Counselors and the Twelve, and all who are assisting in the leadership of the Church. If we stand by them we will carry out the plan of our eternal Father, and I pray that we may do it, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

ELDER SYLVESTER Q. CANNON

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

It is a great source of joy, my brethren and sisters, to be with you today and enjoy the spirit of the Conference. I pray that the power of the Holy Spirit may attend me in what I shall say, that I may say those things that are in harmony with the principles of the Gospel which we have espoused. I rejoice greatly in this conference. It is a great pleasure to be with you today, and to hear the fine testimonies that have been borne, the wonderful instructions that have been given by those who have spoken.

I have been greatly impressed, especially by the testimony of President Heber J. Grant, a very remarkable testimony, it seems to me, that he has given to us today, and the work that he has accomplished. He is indeed a servant of the Lord, and has declared unto us the principles of truth which we have had occasion to espouse, and which we are attempting to carry out to the very best of our ability. I rejoice in all the things that have been said and done.

EXPRESSES DESIRE TO LIVE THE GOSPEL

I am with you, my brethren and sisters, in the observance of every principle of the Gospel, to the very best of my ability, in harmony with the purposes of the Lord. I desire, as far as it is in my power, to do my part for the advancement of this work. I rejoice with you today. I have a great desire to live the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ in its fulness, to the very best of my ability. I realize the fact that the Lord has given instructions so that we may understand and carry out in our lives these principles. I am heartily in accord with everything that has been said, every instruction that has been given to us.

I endeavor, to the very best of my understanding and power, to live up to every commandment, every principle of the Gospel. I have great faith and testimony in every revelation the Lord has given to us. I appreciate the fact that the law of tithing is indeed a principle of promise and blessing, a principle that should be fully espoused and carried out by the Latter-day Saints. My desire is to live the Gospel in every respect, to be careful and faithful in the observance of the principle of Fast offering, and everything that the Lord has made plain to us, because I am sure that every principle of the Gospel that the Lord has given is so easy to live, if we but have a desire and willingness to conform to it. We have no occasion to be backward or careless in the observance of these principles.

TESTIMONY AS TO THE OBSERVANCE OF THE LAW OF TITHING

I can state that the law of tithing is a very easy principle, in my opinion. I have never had any difficulty in observing that principle, because I know it is true. I know the blessings of the Lord accompany the observance of the principle of tithing. The Lord gives great blessings to every one who observes it, and I am sure that we, as a people, can appreciate the benefits and blessings that come to us by the observance of this principle and every other principle that the Lord has given, because they are intended for our welfare.

OBSERVANCE OF THE LAWS OF THE GOSPEL BRINGS BLESSINGS

I have never had the least difficulty in observing the Word of Wisdom. I realize that there are great blessings attached to the observance of that principle. The Lord desires us so to live that we may have His blessings continually, to walk in His paths, to live His laws. To live these principles is so easy, comparatively, and yet so important and so vital to our welfare and progress. Every member of the Church should be willing to observe these things readily, promptly and faithfully, and realize the blessings that follow the observance of these things.

Now I desire to say to you again that in the matter of every other principle the Lord has given, I am desirous of living each principle. I have never had difficulty in observing them. I am trying to do that which the Lord has asked of us, as fully as possible, as faithfully as possible. I realize that these blessings are to be given to every Latter-day Saint and his family, and I have endeavored, to the very best of my ability, with my family, to live in harmony with the observance of all these principles.

I have experienced great joy and satisfaction through the observance of these things to the very best of my ability. To Sister Cannon it has been a very easy thing to observe the principle of tithing, to fully observe it and carry it out, and she has had great blessings in doing it, also our children, every one of the family, who tries to do these things. We have endeavored to teach all of our children so they will realize the great blessings that will come to them through these things. Inasmuch as they will do right, the blessings of the Lord will attend them. These are eternal principles. They are divine, and are intended for our welfare and progress.

RESTORATION OF THE AARONIC PRIESTHOOD

I would like to read to you a few words from section thirteen of the Doctrine and Covenants. In the beginning of the work which the Prophet Joseph Smith did, under instructions from the Lord, he was given the opportunity to receive the Aaronic Priesthood. We read, in the introduction to Section 13, of the ordination of Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery to the Aaronic Priesthood, in Harmony, Susquehanna County, Pennsylvania, May 15th, 1829, under the hands of an angel, who announced himself as John, the same that is called John the Baptist in the New Testament. The angelic visitant averred that he was acting under the direction of Peter, James and John, the ancient Apostles who held the keys of the Higher Priesthood, which was called the Priesthood of Melchizedek.

The promise was given to Joseph and Oliver that in due time the Priesthood of Melchizedek would be conferred upon them. John the Baptist conferred the authority of the Aaronic Priesthood upon these men in the following words:

Upon you, my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah I confer the Priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; and this shall never be taken again from the earth, until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness.

That great blessing was given to them at that time, and was followed by the restoration of the Melchizedek Priesthood.

THE CHURCH ORGANIZED BY DIVINE INSTRUCTION

In the twentieth section of the Doctrine and Covenants the following revelation was given to the brethren:

"Revelation on Church Government, given through Joseph the Prophet, in April, 1830."

Preceding the giving of this revelation the Prophet wrote:

We obtained of Him (Jesus Christ) the following, by the spirit of prophecy and revelation, which not only gave us much information, but also pointed out to us the precise day upon which, according to His will and commandment, we should proceed to organize His Church once more here upon the earth.

The Lord again attested the genuineness of the Book of Mormon. He gives commandments respecting baptism. We find descriptions of duties of the special officers of the Priesthood, the mode of baptism, the keeping of records of the Church. The revelation begins with the following words:

The rise of the Church of Christ in these last days, being one thousand eight hundred and thirty years since the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in the flesh, it being regularly organized and established agreeable to the laws of our country, by the will and commandments of God, in the fourth month, and on the sixth day of the month which is called April—

Which commandments were given to Joseph Smith, Junior, who was called of God, and ordained an apostle of Jesus Christ, to be the first Elder of this Church;

And to Oliver Cowdery, who was also called of God, an Apostle of Jesus Christ, to be the second Elder of this Church, and ordained under his hand;

And this according to the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, to whom be all glory, both now and forever. Amen.

After it was truly manifested unto this first Elder that he had received a remission of his sins, he was entangled again in the vanities of the world;

But after repenting, and humbling himself sincerely, through faith, God ministered unto him by an holy angel, whose countenance was as lightning, and whose garments were pure and white above all other whiteness;

And gave unto him commandments which inspired him;

And gave him power from on high, by the means which were before prepared, to translate the Book of Mormon,

Which contains a record of a fallen people, and the fulness of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles and to the Jews also,

Which was given by inspiration, and is confirmed to others by the ministering of angels, and is declared unto the world by them—

Proving to the world that the Holy Scriptures are true, and that God does inspire men and call them to his holy work in this age and generation, as well as in generations of old, Thereby showing that he is the same God yesterday, today and forever. Amen.

Therefore, having so great witnesses, by them shall the world be judged, even as many as shall hereafter come to a knowledge of this work;

And those who receive it in faith, and work righteousness, shall receive a crown of eternal life;

But those who harden their hearts in unbelief, and reject it, it shall turn to their own condemnation—

For the Lord God has spoken it; and we, the elders of the Church, have heard and bear witness to the words of the glorious Majesty on high, to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

By these things we know that there is a God in heaven, who is infinite and eternal, from everlasting to everlasting the same unchangeable God, the framer of heaven and earth, and all things which are in them;

And that he created man, male and female, after his own image and in his own likeness, created he them,

And gave unto them commandments that they should love and serve him, the only living and true God, and that he should be the only being whom they should worship.

But by the transgression of these holy laws, man became sensual and devilish, and became fallen man.

Wherefore the Almighty God gave his Only Begotten Son, as it is written in those scriptures which have been given of him.

He suffered temptations but gave no heed unto them;

He was crucified, died, and rose again the third day;

And ascended into heaven, to sit down on the right hand of the Father, to reign with almighty power according to the will of the Father.

That as many as would believe and be baptized in his holy name, and endure in faith to the end, should be saved.

That leads to a revelation given in a section, where some very important instructions are given.

REVELATION GIVEN IN LIBERTY JAIL

Brethren and sisters, I would like to read to you from a revelation given by the Lord in the hundred and twenty-first section. It is called "A Prayer and Prophecies, written by Joseph the Seer, while in Liberty Jail, Clay County, Missouri, March 20th, 1839," where he was suffering terrible experiences, and where he had to endure many hardships, many indignities. He was true and faithful through it all, and he received many instructions at that time, which are of great concern to the Latter-day Saints and all those who have in their hearts a love of truth, justice, freedom and righteousness. Let me read you part of that section:

A Prayer and Prophecies written by Joseph Smith, the prophet, while a prisoner in the jail at Liberty, Missouri, dated March 20th, 1839.

The Prophet with several companions had been months in prison. Their petitions and appeals directed to the executive officers and the judiciary had failed to bring them relief. Fervent appeals to the Lord in behalf of the suffering Saints—The curse of the Lord to fall upon those who contend against His will—Men though called may not be chosen—The rights of the Priesthood inseparably connected with the powers of heaven—Unrighteous exercise of the powers of the Priesthood leads to apostasy—Powers of the Priesthood to be exercised in justice and mercy.

O God; where art thou? And where is the pavilion that covereth thy hiding place?

How long shall thy hand be stayed, and thine eye, yea thy pure eye, behold from the eternal heavens the wrongs of thy people, and of thy servants, and thine ear be penetrated with their cries?

Yea, O Lord, how long shall they suffer these wrongs and unlawful oppressions, before thine heart shall be softened toward them, and thy bowels be moved with compassion toward them?

O Lord God Almighty, Maker of heaven, earth, and seas, and of all things that in them are, and who controllest and subjectest the devil, and the dark and benighted dominion of Sheol—stretch forth thy hand; let thine eye pierce; let thy pavilion be taken up; let thy hiding place no longer be covered; let thine ear be inclined; let thine heart be softened, and thy bowels moved with compassion toward us;

Let thine anger be kindled against our enemies; and in the fury of thine heart, with thy sword avenge us of our wrongs.

Remember thy suffering saints, O our God! and thy servants will rejoice in thy name forever.

My son, peace be unto thy soul; thine adversity and thine afflictions shall be but a small moment;

And then, if thou endure it well, God shall exalt thee on high; thou shalt triumph over all thy foes;

Thy friends do stand by thee, and they shall hail thee again with warm hearts and friendly hands.

Thou art not yet as Job; thy friends do not contend against thee, neither charge thee with transgression, as they did Job;

And they who do charge thee with transgression, their hope shall be blasted, and their prospects shall melt away as the hoar frost melteth before the burning rays of the rising sun;

And also that God hath set to his hand and seal to change the times and seasons, and to blind their minds, that they may not understand his marvelous workings; that he may prove them also and take them in their own craftiness;

Also, because their hearts are corrupted, and the things which they are willing to bring upon others, and love to have others suffer, may come upon themselves, to the very uttermost;

That they may be disappointed also, and their hopes may be cut off;

And not many years hence, that they and their posterity shall be swept from under heaven, saith God, that not one of them is left to stand by the wall.

Cursed are all those that shall lift up the heel against mine anointed, saith the Lord, and cry they have sinned when they have not sinned before me, saith the Lord, but have done that which was meet in mine eyes, and which I command them.

But those who cry transgression, do it because they are the servants of sin, and are the children of disobedience themselves.

And those who swear falsely against my servants, that they might bring them into bondage, and death—

Woe unto them, because they have offended my little ones, they shall be severed from the ordinances of mine house.

Their basket shall not be full, their houses and their barns shall perish, and they themselves shall be despised by those that flattered them.

They shall not have right to the Priesthood, nor their posterity after them, from generation to generation.

It had been better for them that a millstone had been hanged about their necks, and they drowned in the depth of the sea.

Woe unto all those that discomfort my people, and drive, and murder, and testify against them, saith the Lord of Hosts; a generation of vipers shall not escape the damnation of hell.

Behold, mine eyes see and know all their works, and I have in reserve a swift judgment in the season thereof, for them all;

For there is a time appointed for every man, according as his works shall be.

God shall give unto you (the saints) knowledge, by his Holy Spirit, yea, by the unspeakable gift of the Holy Ghost, that has not been revealed since the world was, until now;

Which our forefathers have awaited with anxious expectation to be revealed in the last times, which their minds were pointed to, by the angels, as held in reserve for the fulness of their glory.

A time to come in the which nothing shall be withheld, whether there be one God or many Gods, they shall be manifest.

All thrones and dominions, principalities and powers, shall be revealed and set forth upon all who have endured valiantly for the gospel of Jesus Christ.

A number of things more were said in the section.
I will read a little further:

How long can rolling waters remain impure? What power shall stay the heavens? As well might man stretch forth his puny arm to stop the Missouri River in its decreed course, or to turn it up-stream, as to hinder the Almighty from pouring down knowledge from heaven, upon the heads of the Latter-day Saints.

Behold, there are many called, but few are chosen. And why are they not chosen?

Because their hearts are set so much upon the things of this world, and aspire to the honors of men, that they do not learn this one lesson—

That the rights of the Priesthood are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven, and that the powers of heaven cannot be controlled nor handled only upon the principles of righteousness.

That they may be conferred upon us, it is true; but when we undertake to cover our sins, or to gratify our pride, our vain ambition, or to exercise control or dominion or compulsion upon the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness, behold, the heavens withdraw themselves; the Spirit of the Lord is grieved; and when it is withdrawn, Amen to the Priesthood or the authority of that man.

Behold, ere he is aware, he is left unto himself, to kick against the pricks, to persecute the saints, and to fight against God.

We have learned, by sad experience, that it is the nature and disposition of almost all men, as soon as they get a little authority, as they suppose, they will immediately begin to exercise unrighteous dominion.

Hence many are called, but few are chosen.

No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the Priesthood, only by persuasion, by long suffering, by gentleness, and meekness, and by love unfeigned;

By kindness, and pure knowledge, which shall greatly enlarge the soul without hypocrisy, and without guile. . . .

Let thy bowels also be full of charity towards all men, and to the household of faith, and let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly, then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God; and the doctrine of the Priesthood shall distil upon thy soul as the dews from heaven.

The Holy Ghost shall be thy constant companion, and thy scepter an unchanging scepter of righteousness and truth; and thy dominion shall be an everlasting dominion, and without compulsory means it shall flow unto thee for ever and ever.

My brethren and sisters, I testify to you that the instructions given are of very great concern to us all. Latter-day Saints, they are as important as they were when they were first given. They are of great interest, just as much as they were when the revelation was first given.

I pray the blessings of the Lord to be with you, and His choice mercy to attend us all, and I ask it in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers sang "Songs My Mother Taught Me"—Dvorak. Director: Erma Steffensen of the Highland Stake.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAYSecond Counselor in the First Presidency*

We should like to hear from Elder Hilton A. Robertson, former President of the Japanese Mission. He was recently in the hospital. We hope he has sufficiently recovered; and if he is in the audience will he please come forward and occupy one of these seats on the platform, near the pulpit. He performed an excellent mission in reopening the Japanese Mission, and we have not heard his report since he returned home.

ELDER JAMES JUDDFormer President of the Australian Mission*

I feel very humble, but yet I am grateful for this opportunity of reporting the Australian Mission. Sister Judd and I are thankful to our Father in heaven, and to the Presiding Authorities of this Church, that they saw fit to call us to go into that foreign land as their representatives.

I am grateful for the young men that were sent there to preach the Gospel, the sacrifices that their parents made, that they might be ambassadors of truth. They were real representatives of their families. They were true disciples of our Father in Heaven, and they took advantage of every opportunity that was given them to deliver their message to those people who were sitting in darkness, or who had been misled by men and women who were not familiar with our teachings. It was surprising to me to see the courage that these young men had. They would meet up with men and women who had had years of experience, who had spent their life in studying the Bible, but yet they would approach them and explain our principles in a very clear and convincing way, and would leave an impression upon the minds of those people.

I doubt very much whether, since this Church was organized, we have had the publicity in the Australian Mission that we have had the past three years, through the efforts of the Elders, and through the help which we have received from the various organizations here in Salt Lake. The Elders were very active in basketball, and by so doing it afforded them an opportunity to associate with hundreds of young men. The Australian people are very broadminded. They take to every kind of sports, and as basketball was new to them they were anxious to learn the fundamentals of that game. Even the police force of the city of Sydney was anxious that their younger members be taught this game; and the Chief of Police, in addressing about three hundred young men whom the Elders were going to teach the game, said:

"These young Mormon gentlemen have come from America. They do not smoke; they do not partake of intoxicating drinks; they do not profane; they do not make vulgar statements, and when you are in their presence see that you do likewise."

Just before I left Australia, when I was completing my necessary papers to leave that foreign land, Chief Connor said to me:

Friday, October 3First Day

"Do you know when your Elders are going to return? When they do, the police force of Sydney wants to be the first to welcome them back to the shores of Australia"—and the police force is composed of about twenty-two hundred men.

Our teaching of the Word of Wisdom is having a great effect upon the minds of those people. On one occasion there—it was on Boxing Day, which is the day after Christmas, and one of their most popular holidays, and being summer-time the people go to the ocean shores and the beaches by the thousands—we were on Manly Beach. The water was rough, and the life-guards were very active in saving many that were being drifted out into the current. While a number were being drifted out Sister Judd tried to take a moving picture. Thousands on the shore were watching the scene, and while so doing a young gentleman bumped into her. And he turned around and said:

"Pardon me! Ah, an American, huh?" (If she had been an Australian she would have said: "I am sorry.")

She said: "Yes, and there are a number of others standing right over there."

He came over, thinking that he was going to give us a real treat. He had a package of American cigarettes.

He said, "Have a cigarette."

One of the Elders said: "I never smoke." The man made the same offer to the second, and to the third. The same reply: "I never smoke." He withdrew the package of cigarettes, threw down the one he was smoking, and said:

"Yes, Latter-day Saints," and he put out his hand and shook the hands of the Elders, and was more pleased to meet them, because they did not smoke, than if they had accepted his cigarettes. This young man had met, on the shores of England, with some of our Mormon Elders. He knew our principles.

At the time the cablegram was received from the First Presidency of the Church for the evacuation of all the Elders from Australia,—five days after that message was received all but a very few were on their way home. At that time most of the Branches were in charge of the Elders. Due to their departure it left most of our Branches in a disorganized condition, but the local brethren realized the responsibility which was resting upon them. Every Branch was completely organized, and they are at the present time very active in carrying on their duties. We have some of the finest tithe-payers there that there are in the Church. They pay their other offerings; they attend their meetings; they keep the Word of Wisdom.

The Australian people are a very polite people. They are hospitable and friendly. They are determined, and when they start out to accomplish anything they are going to accomplish it. I think that that has been well proven, due to their wonderful fighting in the World War, and also that which they are doing at the present time. Due to the war we have been robbed of a great many of our Priesthood. At the present time more than twenty-five percent of the Priesthood are in the service of their country, and one who was acting as a member of a Branch presidency at the commencement of the war is at the present time a Major in the Australian Army, and is in active service in Lybia.

The Mission is under the leadership of President and Sister Elvon Orme and the members there are going to carry on. Sister Judd did a wonderful work in the Relief Society there. She made a great many friends, not only members of our Church, but also outside. One of her very closest friends was a granddaughter of the Prophet Joseph Smith, who was not a member of our Church, but she came to our home quite frequently. Sister Judd gave her a book, The Way to Perfection, of which Brother Joseph Fielding Smith is the author, and when she saw the name of the author she said: "Why, that is my cousin." During a number of conversations she said: "I have learned more of the Church through my visits to your home than I ever did before."

I pray that God will bless us, that we may all be able to accept any position we may be called upon to fill by those who are placed to preside over us. I know that they are men of God. I know that they are inspired to give us the counsel and advice that they are giving us in these meetings. May we accept it in the same spirit in which it is given, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER W. W. SEEGMILLER

Former President of the Western States Mission

When Elder Sylvester Cannon talked about a revelation having been received in Liberty Jail, I thought, what a paradoxical name—Liberty Jail! Then I was reminded that it is no more paradoxical than many things we do today in the name of liberty. Again I thought, sin is bondage, and righteousness is liberty, so all who would be free need only obey the principles of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, given by the Prince of Peace and the Author of Liberty.

When I received a telegram in Denver, notifying me that my successor had been appointed, I confess that I read it with disconsolate feelings. It was not a pleasant thing to contemplate leaving the thousands of friends and hundreds of missionaries in the Western States Mission. I loved my work. I was engrossed in it. I felt that it was my life, and so I confess disappointment. But on more mature consideration I became firmly convinced that the decision of the Brethren that Mission Presidents shall be often rotated, released and exchanged, is the proper order, and I am sure that President Elbert R. Curtis will be a blessing to that Mission, and that the Mission will grow and advance more rapidly because of his coming.

It was hard to leave Denver. I wondered just how we would go through with it. But I am happy to be here. This is a great privilege. I am happy to be in our humble little cottage. I am happy to be in the Bonneville Ward. When the Bishop asked me what I wanted to do there I said: "Whatever you want me to do," and he notified me in a few days that I was the Adult Aaronic Priesthood supervisor of that Ward. I had rather have that position than any other position in the Ward, had I felt at liberty to take my choice, because I feel a great opportunity has come to me to continue missionary work.

When I met with the Priesthood of Bonneville Ward and Bonneville Stake I said to Sister Seegmiller: "Is there a finer body of men in the world? If there is, I don't know where to find it." Could a man be associated with any men, anywhere, that it would be such a privilege? I cannot conceive of a place where they could be.

The new Bonneville Ward is where I live, and I am happy to be there. I am happy to be here. I know that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is true. Sometimes I wonder, in the varied activities of missionaries, if we forget that our calling is to bear testimony that the Gospel has again been revealed, that it is here, and realize full well that we missionaries are disciples of Jesus Christ, just the same as was Peter, James, and John.

So, my brethren and sisters, the thing I hope all new missionaries will remember is that they are called to preach the Gospel, that they are called to bear witness. It is a simple thing to preach truth, because truth is simple, truth is convincing. That is all we have to do, as missionaries, is to be faithful and true and diligent and preach the truth.

I know that the Gospel is true. I hope that I shall always have strength to endure and be active in it, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER THOMAS E. McKAY

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I feel very humble, my brethren and sisters, in standing before you this afternoon. While President Grant was giving his wonderful testimony this morning, I thought how happy our members and friends in the European Missions would be if they could have the privilege that we now have of being in this historic Tabernacle and listening to the Prophet of God.

PROGRESS BEING MADE IN EUROPEAN MISSIONS

In reporting for these European Missions I am happy to state that headquarters continue to be maintained in ten of the twelve Missions. The headquarters of the French Mission at Paris has been closed, but we have district headquarters in Belgium and the French part of Switzerland, where more than ninety percent of our French members reside.

The Palestine-Syrian Mission is also in charge of two district presidents, one at Aleppo, Syria, and the other at Beirut, Lebanon. These district presidents and acting Mission Presidents are all local brethren. They, with their counselors or committees assisting them, are doing an exceptionally fine work. With the exception of a few of the smaller Branches, all meetings are being held as usual. District conferences are held twice a year in addition to an annual gathering. These yearly conferences or conventions generally last two or three days.

SUCCESSFUL CONFERENCE OF DANISH MISSION

The one held at Copenhagen, headquarters of the Danish Mission, this year continued throughout the entire week. We quote from the acting President's report:

We have now completed our tenth annual M. I. A. Convention which this time covered a period of one week. The convention was opened on June 22 with two very well attended meetings at 10 a.m. and 7 p. m. Many Saints and friends had gathered from near and far. In spite of the difficulties the Saints willingly responded to the invitation to attend the convention. The railway fares have been raised 25 per cent, it thus being a rather heavy expense on the young people.

The program for the various arrangements included very wonderful meetings, music, dance, excursions, a theater evening where the King and Queen honored us with their attendance; this was a great experience for many of the visitors, who had never seen the Sovereigns.

When our visitors left Copenhagen many of them shed tears for joy, expressing their appreciation for the privilege which had been theirs to attend the best and most spiritual convention in the Danish Mission. I am sure they went home to their Branches filled with this one thought: To do better in the future and labor with greater zeal and interest for the marvelous cause in which they are engaged.

CONFERENCE AT LIEGE

The following paragraph is taken from a letter from the French Mission:

On June 8 we held the semi-annual District Conference in Liege. We held three meetings. After one, a light meal (soup, with meat, vegetables, and potatoes) was offered free of cost to each member and friend, thanks to members' gifts. This little thing is gold now.

We welcomed eleven new members, who were baptized and confirmed—four men, five women, one boy and one girl—making a total of thirteen baptisms since January. It was a spiritual conference, and we all felt the Holy Spirit among us.

This little meat that they had at this free meal was as gold to them now. You know, all their letters are censored, so they cannot write all they would like to. Those few words tell volumes.

These two reports are typical of the encouraging news that comes from all our European Missions. Nearly all of them report baptisms. The amount of tithing and Fast offerings is quite generally maintained and in at least two of the Missions an increase is shown. Considerable missionary work is still being carried on, especially is this true in the British Mission, where, it is reported in a letter just recently received, there are twenty-seven regular missionaries working. Besides, over three hundred home missionaries have been called in the various Branches and are devoting at least one or two evenings each week in tracting, visiting inactive members, selling and obtaining subscriptions to the Star, etc.

CONFERENCES IN BELFAST AND DUBLIN

In this letter also we are given a report from our members in Ireland, from which we quote the following:

Have just returned from a visit to north and south Ireland, and was able to hold two separate conferences in Belfast and Dublin. The Dublin Saints are all very fine, and are supporting continually one missionary in the field.

The Belfast Saints have suffered somewhat badly in a recent air raid. None of them has suffered any injury or death; some of them, however, lost some of their belongings. In one case a complete home was destroyed. Some of our members have had miraculous escapes. Members in England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland are all well. Slight damage was done by enemy action to premises No. 16.

The district conferences held in the Swiss Mission were, considering the unusual conditions that prevail, especially well attended. At Zurich there were over 600 present; at Berne about 500; and at Basel, 650. The mission publications from the British, Norwegian, Swedish, Danish, Netherlands, and South African Missions are being received quite regularly. We also receive letters, but not quite so often, from the East and West German Missions, Czechoslovakian and Palestine-Syrian Missions. All letters come air mail, via the Clipper, and with the exception of those from the French-Swiss district and the Swiss Mission, all are censored.

PRAISE FOR ACTING MISSION PRESIDENTS

The acting Mission Presidents, the District Presidents, and our brethren and sisters assisting them are all doing exceptionally fine work. We are proud of them. They express appreciation to all, and especially are they grateful to the First Presidency for what they have done and are doing in their behalf.

PRESIDENT GRANT'S VISIT

They appreciated very much the visit of President Grant. Oh, how grateful I am now that he visited all of those Missions, that our people there had the opportunity, many of them, of meeting him and shaking hands with him, and all of them—including hundreds of friends—of hearing his wonderful testimony! What a comfort and what a strength that is to them now in this time of trial!

LOVE OF THE GOSPEL IN THE HEARTS OF THE EUROPEAN SAINTS

I believe sometimes that they even appreciate the Gospel more than we do here at home, the way they attend their meetings, their sacrament meetings, their testimony meetings. No time is wasted there, when they have an opportunity to bear testimony. They love the Gospel and are doing their very best to live it. They not only say: "We believe in being honest, true, chaste, benevolent, virtuous, and in doing good to all men," but they are trying to live those principles in their lives. What a wonderful influence for good in the world it would be if all Latter-day Saints could not only say "We believe these things," but could truthfully say, "We are honest; we are true; we are chaste; we are benevolent; we are doing good to all men," if we could in very truth say, "If there is anything virtuous, lovely, or of good report, or praiseworthy, we seek after these things; we are keeping the Word of Wisdom; we are keeping the Sabbath Day holy; we are paying our tithes and our offerings." Such an example would do more good than all the preaching we are now doing.

Oh, Latter-day Saints, where much is given, it is said, much is required. These principles have been given to us, and if we could only live them; you cannot estimate the good that it would do throughout the world if truthfully it could be said we are living these principles. They are given to us for our happiness here upon this earth.

A SINCERE TESTIMONY

God lives, brethren and sisters. He is our Father. We are all His children. He loves us, even as we love our children, only He has a greater capacity for love. Because He loves us He has given us these principles to make us happy here in this life. "Man is that he might have joy," we are told. I want to testify to you brethren and sisters this afternoon that if we lived the Gospel of Jesus Christ as revealed in these days we would have joy in this life; we would have a heaven here upon this earth, because all these principles are given to us for our happiness and our joy in this life, and it is not necessary to wait until the life to come. We would have love at home, and "there is beauty all around when there's love at home."

I testify to you in all sincerity that I know that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and that all those who have succeeded him have been prophets of God to His people in this day. How grateful I am for the association of President Grant! No one can estimate the good that he has done, not only here among his people, but throughout the world; the better public relations that have been brought about by his contact with thousands of business men in all capacities, at gatherings of all kinds, conventions, meetings, and banquets given by Chambers of Commerce, where after his talks all have arisen in a body and cheered at length because of his faith-inspiring remarks. I want to tell you, brethren and sisters, that he is appreciated and loved, not only here at home but abroad, and especially by our brethren and sisters in our European Missions.

May our Father in Heaven continue to bless him, our people in war-torn Europe, and all of us, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ELRAY L. CHRISTIANSEN

Former President of the Texas Mission

To stand in this position before this tremendous audience, subdues one's spirit and one's feelings. I cannot stand here and behold this great building, without thinking of the sacrifice, and the wisdom and the genius that went into it, by that generation which preceded us. It is still a commodious, pleasant, wonderful place to meet. I don't know where we can go and find more spiritual uplift, more inspiration, than we can receive here from time to time in these wonderful Conferences.

As my wife, Sister Christiansen, and I approached this Block this morning, and saw silhouetted against the sky the form of the Angel Moroni, I said to her: "Think of the significance! Doesn't he look majestic?" My brethren and sisters, if we go away and then return to Zion and participate here we learn to appreciate more deeply the significance of the things upon this Block. I couldn't help but think of what that figure represents,—the restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ for the last time, for the benefit of man, for his edification and for his salvation.

Joseph Smith, a simple, humble boy, was the servant of God in filling this great mission. He was an ordinary young man, with a very ordinary name—Smith—and yet the work that he did was not at all ordinary, for he was an instrument in the hands of God in bringing about one of the greatest episodes that has ever come to the children of men since the time of the Savior—I suppose the greatest since that time. His name is honored and revered. Also his name is talked against. But, my brethren and sisters, we can very well sing:

Praise to the man who communed with Jehovah!

Jesus anointed that Prophet and Seer—

Blessed to open the last dispensation;

Kings shall extol him, and nations revere.

Some people ask: "If what Joseph Smith did, and what you claim, is divine and of God, why is it that there was so much persecution, and has been so much ridicule in the past? Why is it that this thing had such a struggle, and has been so despised?"

To answer that question all we need to do is to ask another: Why was Wycliffe tormented and driven and persecuted, and why were his books found and burned? Wycliffe, as you know, translated the Bible into the English language. Why was Tyndale, who also translated it from the Greek language, hunted and persecuted by his enemies? Why should there be such a tremendous force against the work of these two men? Surely there was nothing in the Bible that would destroy any one, or their faith or their integrity. Why were the bones of the man I first named, finally dug up and thrown into the river? Why was Tyndale burned at the stake for what he did? They suffered the martyr's crown for doing the work that God had foreordained them to do.

So with Joseph Smith and his work in translating the Book of Mormon. He suffered the martyr's crown, as did these great men, and because this happened to him is no reason that the work he did is not of God. If I were on the outside and knew what I know now, I would begin to investigate because of the drivings and the persecutions that this people had in the early days, and because Joseph Smith and his brother were martyred for the cause that they espoused; because wherever there is driving of any extent you might look and find that it is the work of God that is being driven by the adversary of all good.

And so it was with the Church, and so it was with the Book of Mormon, which has been so much ridiculed.

My brethren and sisters, this report that I make at this time is the last official report I shall make as former President of the Texas Mission. I do it in all humility and with thanks to my Heavenly Father for the blessings unnumbered that He has given to me and my wife and my family. I was overwhelmed when the call came, but I have always believed that the Lord would make us ready for those things which He calls us to do, if we are willing to accept the call.

We have formed a great and beautiful association of and a friendship with those wonderful people in Texas and Louisiana. I too can say that they love the Gospel most dearly. They will travel miles and miles to hear it and to partake of it and to listen to the word of the Lord spoken by the Elders. We have one branch away out in the west plains of Texas, where we found one family and soon located others, that meets every Sunday. Five of these families travel from thirty-five to sixty miles every Sunday, and return. One of these men used to live in the Stakes of Zion, and he told me the last time I saw him: "It was difficult for us to go about six blocks to Church when I was out there, but I will tell you that we appreciate going sixty miles and return to Fort Stockton now, in order to partake of the sacrament and renew our covenants and hear the word of the Lord."

In the Rio Grande Valley, those people living in that beautiful paradise there travel at least twenty-five miles every Sunday morning, have their sacrament meeting following Sunday School, and Priesthood meeting previous to Sunday School. Their Relief Society meets also along with the Mutual, on Tuesday evenings.

The people in the Texas Mission have been diligent in trying to build up their places of meeting. They have succeeded in building eight buildings in which to meet, since we have been down there, in addition to a mission home. Two of these buildings were built and the ground provided, without calling upon the Church for any aid, and I tell you those buildings, modest as they are, are a compliment to the Church. That is the way they love to meet, the way they love to work for the Lord, and cherish that which is of most worth to them. This is manifested also in a steady increase in tithes and offerings and in the number observing these commandments.

I don't know where one could look for a finer experience, a more sweet experience, than to labor with your sons and your daughters. To hear them bear testimony of the help that the Lord has given them from time to time, manifesting His power and His spirit through them, in the Priesthood which they hold; to have them stand with tears in their eyes and thank their Heavenly Father for their parents, and for the privilege that they have of finding life anew in the work of the Lord, would touch your hearts, as it has mine, deeply, time and time again. I think there is nothing more holy, more sacred, almost, than a young man or a young woman who has been rejuvenated, who has been transformed after coming in contact with the Lord through prayer and through manifestations such as I have spoken of.

My brethren and sisters, there are only a few in the Church who are called to do regular missionary work, but all of us are called to live our religion. I believe that those thousands who come to see the things of interest upon this Block are entitled, when they meet up with us here in the cities and places in Utah and other States where the Mormons predominate, to expect and to find just the same type of devotion to our religion among us as they find invariably among your boys and girls in the mission field.

I have said it once before, but I have reason to repeat it: I believe that more good can come from having one of these strangers from without our gates come here and find us living the principles of the Gospel that we have espoused; and that Gospel which we send these thousands of young men out to have them accept—than from many eloquent sermons from those who are qualified to speak. I know this, because I have met many men and women who visit here and return. Most of them have been deeply impressed. A few of them have registered some disappointment in some of the things that they have beheld. We can't afford to have that done. I am sure that if we would have the faith and the strength to live our religion, our progress would be doubled, at least, and we would be known the world over, more rapidly than we are now, for good, and for being a people great among the people of the world. We can't afford to be indifferent to the principles of the Gospel that we hold. From 2nd Nephi may I read this verse, where he says:

Woe unto him that has the law given, yea, that has all the commandments of God, like unto us, and that transgresseth them and that wasteth the days of his probation, for awful is his state.

Those of us who have received the Gospel are expected to more closely account for our actions and our lives, I believe, than those who have never come in contact with it. Let us live so that we may merit the choice blessings of the Lord. Let us be thankful and grateful that the greatest blessings that He has offered, those of eternal life and exaltation in His kingdom, are not at all dependent upon the business conditions of the world, nor upon man's poor power to direct and govern the affairs of men here upon the earth. They are given to us and are receivable upon obedience to the laws of God.

I wish here to bear testimony to the truth of the Gospel. I know that Joseph Smith was an instrument in God's hands, and that these men sitting here on the stand are servants of the Lord, endowed with the holy power of the Priesthood to direct this people. I am grateful for the association that I have had with these men, and for the devotion that I see in them, the unselfish motives that they have in the work that they do. I have been edified in their presence when they have come into our mission and into our various meetings here at home.

May I say this—I have never said it before, and I know that Sister Christiansen would not approve of it—I hope she doesn't hear me—but, my brethren and sisters, I want to pay tribute to my dear wife for the good that she has done among the members and missionaries in Texas and Louisiana, and for the help that she has given me and my children, who I feel filled their mission as they should have done. I thank God for them, and I thank Him for the privilege that I have had.

Now I am ready to do as I have told our missionaries to do when they get home: Preach the Gospel whenever you talk, and if the Bishop asks you to be janitor, be janitor. Accept any call that is given you, if it comes from those presiding over you. I now stand in the same position; I am ready; I am anxious now to teach the fundamental principles of the Gospel to the hundred and fifty young men and women that I meet every day. I have delighted in it the past month, and I find them delighting in learning. Why? This is the work of God. It is the truth!

May God bless us all, I pray, in His name, Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

Will you please keep in mind the Chief of Police's appeal and admonition to keep mentally alert while walking or driving.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers sang "The Lord Is My Light"—Allitson. Director: Nellie Bennion of the Cottonwood Stake.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

Again I express our gratitude and sincere appreciation of the rich contribution to our services by our Singing Mothers. God bless them.

Elder Edward J. Wood, President of the Alberta Temple, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until Saturday, October 4, at 10 a. m.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

The third session of the Conference was held Saturday morning, October 4, at 10 o'clock.

President Heber J. Grant was present and presided. President David O. McKay, Second Counselor in the First Presidency, conducted the exercises.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

We are pleased to announce the presence of President Heber J. Grant at this session. The exercises will be conducted under his presidency and supervision.

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

Yesterday, when the list of those who have passed away was read, one name was omitted because her demise took place after the list was made up. I very sorrowfully announce the passing of Sister Joseph F. Merrill, beloved wife of Elder Joseph F. Merrill of the Council of the Twelve. She passed away Monday, September 29, 1941. Our hearts beat as one in sympathy with our fellow-worker in his bereavement.

So far as I can observe, all the General Authorities who are in the city are present on the stand in their places this morning.

The congregation sang the hymn, "High On The Mountain Top"—Beesley.

Elder Albert L. Larsen, President of the San Bernardino Stake, offered the invocation.

The Pasadena Stake male quartet, A. M. Gish, director, sang "Lead Kindly Light"—Dudley Buck.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. (John 14:1)

Such were the words given by Jesus to His Apostles just at the conclusion of the Last Supper. If He could offer such consolation on that solemn occasion, facing betrayal and death as He was, I am sure that He would say the same to the people today, many of whom feel discouraged and distressed. The Savior also gave an antidote to trouble, which is belief in God. Absolute faith in Christ will drive out fear and will alleviate sorrow. We have a beautiful hymn written by Sister Woodmansee, that expresses that thought:

When dark and drear the skies appear,
And doubt and dread would thee enthrall,
Look up, nor fear, the day is near,
And Providence is over all.

It is true the world is passing through a period of transition, of sorrow, and to many of despair. Nations are being subjected to tyranny. The four devastating Horsemen—War, Famine, Pestilence, and Death—are galloping seemingly unchecked. The daily press announced recently—"The greatest battle of annihilation in all history." Freedom of the individual to speak, to act, and to work is being shackled. Systems of government heretofore advocated as the best and safest for mankind are being questioned. Religious truths, once held sacred, are now doubted, ridiculed, or rejected. In some parts of the world, even hell itself seems to have broken loose, spreading hatred, terror and death in its wake. Now as never before we should put our trust in God, "stand fast in the faith, quit ourselves like men, be strong."

THE CHURCH WELFARE PLAN

Many of you heard this morning the program given by the Church Welfare Committee. The Church Welfare Plan was organized just five and a half years ago, the underlying purpose of which is three-fold, viz:

1. To supply in a helpful and dignified manner food, clothing and shelter to every person so in need.

2. To assist men and women who, through misfortune, ill luck, or disaster, find themselves without gainful employment, to become once again self-supporting; and

3. To increase among the members of the Church the true spirit of the brotherhood of Christ, having in mind in all their service the divine saying, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

The plan is not something new, but rather a means of uniting along well established lines quorum, auxiliary, and ecclesiastical groups in their efforts to serve one another and the Church. Presidencies of Stakes, Bishoprics of Wards, quorum officials, Relief Society officers, now work unitedly instead of independently in giving relief and helpfulness to those who merit assistance. The only modification or addition in the ecclesiastical organizations of the Church is the uniting of several Stakes in what is called a Region.

NUMBER OF PERSONS NOW ENGAGED

The latest report (furnished upon request by Elder Roscoe Eardley), shows that there are now serving on Welfare Committees 9,754 persons; that there are 83 storehouses already completed or in process of being built; that during 1941, and still active, there are 1,590 quorum projects; that 173 homes were built during 1939-40 with quorum assistance, and 92 thus far during 1941.

An interesting development of the Welfare Plan during 1941 was:

- First. The number of persons who had been working on Church-directed projects who found employment in defense and private industry.

- Second. The increased number of faithful quorum members, Relief Society sisters, and others who donated their labors to carry the Welfare Plan forward.

Of such voluntary service you heard some encouraging examples this morning. Here are others:

During the first eight months of 1941 in the Salt Lake Region 1,055 persons were assisted by Personal Welfare committees of Priesthood quorums, Ward Work directors, and Church Welfare employment departments. Proportionately good records have been made by other Regions, including northern Utah, which centers at Ogden; southern California, which centers at Los Angeles, and eastern Idaho, which centers at Idaho Falls.

In addition to the 1,590 quorum projects already named, Priesthood groups have been organized to assist at storehouse centers and on other projects under the direction of the Regions. Assistance has been given

BRINGS NEW CHEER

Notwithstanding the topsy-turviness of the world generally, I bring to you this morning a word of encouragement, a note of cheer, a message of hope and faith. I say this first because I have faith in the overruling power of Providence. Man, through his littleness, through his rejection of the Gospel, his selfishness and weakness, brings contention and strife upon himself. He is, as Emerson says:

A divinity in disguise. A god playing the fool. It seems as if heaven had sent its insane angels into our world as to an asylum, and here they will break out into their native music and utter at intervals the words they have heard in heaven. Then the mad fit returns and they mope and wallow like dogs.

But a wise Father will work out of men's mistakes and blunders greater blessings than they might have obtained with their own wisest foresight. Gloomy clouds often hang heavily about us, but the rains that descend from them often prove a blessing. So it may be with the ominous clouds lowering today over civilization.

I do not believe in the advocacy of discouragement and gloom; better, the gospel of Hope. Remember, the Church of Christ is established never more to be thrown down or given to another people. The Gospel has not yet been preached to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, and I am sure that the Lord will open up the way for the consummation of His purposes.

There are many things as a Church for which we should be grateful and hopeful, and I am going to name some of these this morning.

CHURCH CONDITIONS

Conditions were never more favorable or more promising in the Church than today. Priesthood quorums were never more active as groups than they are today. More presidencies of quorums are sensing their responsibilities as presiding officers, and as a result are striving more earnestly to set their quorums in order.

The Auxiliary associations show progress all along the line.

The Relief Society, numbering over ninety thousand, now extends to all Latter-day Saint women the opportunity for service and development which comes through membership in this society, and the officers hope that at the end of the year 1941 nine thousand more women will join their ranks, thus increasing their membership to one hundred thousand by the Centennial year.

TITHING

As we heard yesterday, the tithes of the people show a most encouraging increase over last year, and indeed, over any previous year.

FAST OFFERINGS

Fast offerings also reflect a more general adherence to this important phase of Church policy and true Christian practice.

in the building of meeting houses, the renovating of buildings already erected, and in beautifying public grounds.

During the past three months, in the Salt Lake Region, 926 Priesthood quorum members have donated labor at Welfare Square, and 1,500 Relief Society workers have assisted in preserving foods for storing. Men and women, eager to help, have sometimes traveled great distances. For example, five Relief Society workers living 136 miles distant from the regional cannery, came at their own expense. Sisters from another Stake, 35 to 60 miles away from the cannery, came on a number of occasions, supplying their own transportation and bringing their own lunches. This group included not only the Relief Society workers but a number of younger women of the Young Women's Mutual Improvement Association, accompanied by their Stake and Ward officers.

EXCELLENT RESULTS

During the past summer, Stake Presidents, accompanied by Priesthood quorum members have come to Welfare Square to work on Welfare projects. The same procedure has been followed by a number of bishops with excellent results. Part of the work accomplished by these men has been the loading and unloading of more than 200 cars of wheat. As a result of these activities, it is estimated that fully one-third more has been produced during 1941 than during other years since the Welfare Plan was inaugurated.

A further important development has been the closer cooperation between the Relief Society organizations, the Ward Welfare committees, and the Priesthood quorums. Closer association of the brethren and sisters in Welfare Work has prepared the way to meet more efficiently any emergencies that may arise in the future.

EUROPEAN MISSIONS

As we heard yesterday, encouraging word comes even from our branches in war-torn Europe. In Great Britain the historic publication, The Millennial Star, is issued every week, as it has been practically every week since 1840.

We might go on enumerating conditions evidencing the progress in the Church, but time will not permit.

In the light of all these facts, and many others we might mention, are we not justified in having our souls lifted, our hearts encouraged, and our hopes brightened? Our plain duty is to move forward with a determination to do what the Lord requires of us, "to deal justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with our God."

THE GOSPEL OF LOVE

Absolute trust in the Lord will awaken a desire, at least, to try to live in accordance with Christ's teachings, chief of which is to LOVE, not hate one another. Now, as perhaps never before, all men and especially Latter-day Saints should preach and practice the gospel of love, and decry, as well as deplore, manifestations of ill-will and hate.

He that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes.

In answer to a lawyer's question, which is the great commandment in the law, Jesus answered in one word, "Love," and then He specifically stated whom we should love; first, the Lord "with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind;" and, second, "thy neighbor as thyself."

The opposite of Love is Hate. As Christ is the personification of love, so Satan is the embodiment of hate.

Hate is cruel and vicious; even when unexpressed and smouldering, it consumes the individual as surely as when it bursts into flame. Hate feeds on envy. It prompts and justifies unrighteous conquest; it looks for weaknesses in others; lives in the realm of iniquity and feeds on falsehood and slander; it injures the hater even more than the hated. It "is of all things the mightiest divider, nay, is division itself."

WAR A RESULT OF REJECTING THE GOSPEL

Rejection of the Gospel of Love, which is the Gospel of Jesus Christ, brought on the World War that began in 1914, with what result?

Seven million men killed, twenty million wounded, five million of whom were maimed and crippled for life. Six million men imprisoned. Twenty million women in Europe deprived of a home of their own. Countless millions who suffered privations in the trenches, and in lonely homes of the poor. Fifty billion dollars worth of material and property destroyed. One hundred billion dollars to provide for the cost of the war and interest.

Hatred smouldering in the hearts of Germans against men and nations who imposed upon Germany what to the Germans were unjust terms of peace is the cause of the present world-wide conflict. As a result, millions of men are again being slaughtered, homes broken up, property destroyed, women and children massacred, nations subjugated or practically obliterated, the right of self-government destroyed, and liberty itself threatened.

Terrible as things are, I repeat, I still have faith that God will overrule all for the good of humanity.

EVILS TO BE CONDEMNED

There are things in the world which we may and should despise, but we can condemn the evil without hating the man. We should develop an aversion for the things which we ourselves can and should resist or overcome, and for the things which Christ hated. We can have an aversion for the works of the flesh as enumerated by Paul, among which are adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, hatred, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings and such like; "of the which I tell you before as I have also told you in times past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

ATTENTION TO LITTLE THINGS VITAL IN ERADICATING HATE

When the rich young ruler asked Jesus "what great thing may I do to obtain eternal life?" the Master called his attention not to any one great thing, but to several specific commandments.

So there may not be any great act we may do to eradicate hate, war, and suffering in the world; but there are many little but very important duties within our power and province to accomplish.

This is a time when men and women should curb their tempers, and when prompted to condemn others, to hold their tongues. In national affairs, for example, there are those who think actual participation in the European conflict will be necessary to end the struggle and to bring about peace. There are others who think such a step would be most tragic. The interventionist and the isolationist each has equal rights to his views, and each may be equally sincere in expressing them. My message, therefore, today, is to keep hate and enmity out of the controversy.

Then, too, an election is approaching. Candidates and policies will come before us for consideration. In times past, political campaigns have engendered animosity and sometimes personal hatred. Hate thus harbored indicates an inferior grade of intelligence, a low degree of culture.

ELIMINATE HATRED

I know of no better way to bring about harmony in the home, in the neighborhood, in organizations, peace in our country, and in the world than for every man and woman first to eliminate from his or her heart the enemies of harmony and peace such as hatred, selfishness, greed, animosity and envy.

Why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

Pertinent to this thought, Charles Wagner, author of The Simple Life, makes this comment:

Each person's base of operations is the field of his immediate duty, neglect this field, and all you undertake at a distance is compromised. First, then, be of your own country, your own city, your own home, your own church, your own work-shop; then, if you can, set out from this to go beyond it. That is the plain and natural order, and a man must fortify himself with very bad reasons to arrive at reversing it.

Brethren and sisters: "Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God," believe also in the Gospel of Jesus Christ—a belief such as the Savior had in mind on that solemn occasion will express itself in action. So in conclusion:

Keep your faith in the God above,
And faith in His righteous truth;
'Twill bring you back to your absent love
And the joys of a vanished youth.

You'll smile once more when your tears are shed,
Meet trouble and swiftly rout it;
For faith is the strength of the soul inside,
And lost is the man without it.

May increased faith and trust in the Lord and in the Gospel of Jesus Christ supplant the spirit of contention and hate now so rampant, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy and President of the New England Mission

It is a joy to me to come across the Continent from Boston to attend this Conference of the Church, and I humbly pray that I may say something that will be helpful to us all.

A TRIBUTE TO MISSIONARIES LABORING IN NEW ENGLAND

The parents of some of our missionaries in New England are present here to-day, and you may be assured that your boys and girls are doing a fine work in the cities where they have been called to labor. They are clean, honest, and true; and have become fine students of the Gospel. They would hardly like me to speak about their work, for they have learned the secret of success because they have forgotten themselves and think only of the work of God. They realize their call to the service of the Church, and they know that there is no sphere of life in which a man can more certainly lay out all his talents than in the service of his Maker. They come in contact with all kinds of people, human beings in every conceivable relation, and there is no life so rich or so full of those joys which come from serving people at the point of their greatest need. They realize that the Master is calling and they give answer. He calls not to comfort nor to power, as the world reckons power: He calls for heroic service. Your sons and daughters have taken up the cross to follow Him, and this they are doing nobly. You are very happy, I know, in having them in the field, and you may rest assured that we will do all we can for them. They will honor the call, for they are working under the direction of the Spirit of the Lord, and their lives are made beautiful in consequence.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE SEVENTY

I should like to say a few words to the Seventies assembled here this morning, because we are interested in you and the great work which the Lord has appointed you to do. We are the men who are ordained to go forth to give the message of the Master to the world. You have discovered that the most significant factor in human life is to be found in the ability to make response to great principles and great ideals; in you is power for great action by faith, and hope, and love. In a word, you are to show yourselves responsive to the Spirit of the living God who speaks through all of you to the souls of men. The message is a word of duty uttered from above, it is also the word of highest privilege uttered from within. "If thou wilt enter into LIFE, keep the commandments." "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy mind, and with all thy strength." This is the first imperative which you, my brother Seventies, must abide by if you would "enter into life." Be sure of God! By simple living and loving worship, by purifying yourselves, by continual moral obedience keep close to Him. You are giving help in ushering in the Kingdom of God. The King is calling and you are answering. It is a great living duty, a duty of love and thanksgiving. From now on more than ever before, you are to hear the admonition of Paul: "Wherefore, I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God which is in thee by the putting on of my hands. For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." You are responsible to teach the Restoration of the Gospel to the world, and your hearts must be prepared for this great responsibility.

You recall from your history that the Prophet Joseph Smith brought the Seventies into existence in February, 1835. It was a glorious occasion for it followed within a few days the calling of the Twelve Apostles in fulfillment of the revelation given before the organization of the Church. These twelve men were chosen from those who went up in Zion's Camp and the Three Witnesses to the Book of Mormon were to select and ordain them. Another meeting was called for February 28, and the brethren were chosen from those who went to Missouri in Zion's Camp and these brethren constituted the first Quorum of Seventy. Hazen Aldrich, Joseph Young, Levi W. Hancock, Leonard Rich, Zebedee Coltrin, Lyman Sherman, and Sylvester Smith were called to the office of the President of this Quorum of Seventy. These brethren and those appointed to form the first Quorum were ordained under the hands of the First Presidency. And says the Book of Doctrine and Covenants:

The Seventy are also called to preach the Gospel, and to be especial witnesses unto the Gentiles and in all the world; thus differing from other officers in the Church in the duties of their calling.

POWER IN THE PRIESTHOOD TO BRING ABOUT CHANGES

We do not have any individual organizations of the Priesthood in the New England Mission, but we are teaching the few members we have the meaning and power of the various offices of the Priesthood, and in our Youth organizations we are emphasizing the restoration of the Gospel and the coming of John the Baptist and Peter, James, and John who restored the full power of God to the Prophet Joseph and his brethren. This power we have to-day, and it is the one thing that is to bring a new life of Faith into the world. It is a truth of the highest importance, for man is made in the image of God. "God created man in His own image; in the image of God created He him." Man is divine; and in this day when people are speaking of the hours of doom, we must stir that gift of God within us and within the world, for man can rise above sin and wrong and bring about the supremacy of Truth. We recall the last words that Jesus uttered when He sent His disciples forth:

Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you.

That is the message that must ring true in our hearts to go forth into the world and preach the Gospel. We are told to keep the commandments of God, we who are divine in the sight of God sent into this life for a divine and holy purpose. If we will remember these divine words of Paul the Apostle we will keep the commandments of God, for we will look up and not down; and we will not leave this awful feeling of doom and despair, in our hearts, for God lives, and we have everything of beauty and truth and goodness.

UNITED EFFORT NECESSARY TO SUCCESS

Let me say in conclusion to all of us Seventies. We will be united as never before for this great cause. And if we are united, we will keep in mind these words of Paul:

For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God.

It is in God's love that we will be able to love mankind and in loving mankind we will love God, and it is with this spirit, my brethren and sisters, that the Elders, the missionaries, your sons and your daughters are going forth in the New England Mission; never with hate, never with unkindness, never with anything false, but with Truth, with kindness, with hope, and with a knowledge in their hearts that they are the servants of the living God. This is what I wanted to say to you as your servant and fellow-laborer and brother, and as a co-laborer with our fine boys and girls in New England.

God bless us all that the truth of this message of the living God may live in our hearts forever, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER JOHN H. TAYLOR

Of the First Council of the Seventy and President of the Temple Square Mission

As you are aware, I am laboring in the Temple Square Mission.

EARLY GUIDE SERVICE

My first contact with guide service was when I was a young boy running up and down the dusty streets in my bare feet. We were living in one of the houses of Grandfather Taylor, and because of the interest in him, strangers who came to visit Salt Lake City were taken by the hack driver past grandfather's homes. The hack driver would always stop and make explanations of who lived in the house or houses and something about the doctrines and practices of the Church. We boys used to line up quite near to the carriage and listen to the stories that were told by the driver. When the driver was through and commenced his way up the street, we trotted along in the dust and said in our indignation: "Liar, liar, liar." Mother didn't approve of it very much, not because we weren't telling the truth but because of the company we were keeping. She had the fine philosophy of life that it is never worthwhile to get even or to hurt people, when trying to put over your own cause. She also had in mind the good people who were riding in the carriage who had to listen to what was told them.

BEGINNING OF THE BUREAU OF INFORMATION

It was in 1901 that the thought came to some of the brethren that it would be a good thing if the Church would provide an organization to take care of this situation and enable our visiting friends to hear the story from our point of view instead of allowing men who were prejudiced and who were not familiar with the ways of life and doctrines of the Church to do all of the teaching. The matter was presented to the M. I. A. General Board and it resulted in a committee being organized to look after the strangers, especially those who were visiting within this sacred Block. Later it was taken over by the First Presidency, and a number of missionaries were called to labor on the Block. In the commencement of any new type of work the servants of the Lord are not only inspired in effecting its organization but they also have the inspiration to choose the type of men who will pioneer the movement. Even though the organization is important, it is just as important to select the right man to commence it. Brother Benjamin Goddard was chosen to do this work, and he laid a splendid foundation on which others who followed him might build. Others might continue to add to the building and perhaps to polish the stones but without such a solid foundation and introduction, I am quite sure that it would not be going along as efficiently as it is today.

Succeeding Brother Goddard was President Levi Edgar Young; after him, Joseph S. Peery, and then Joseph J. Cannon. Each one has done a magnificent work in this Temple Square Mission.

INTEREST IN THE WORK MANIFESTED

The guides are all interested in the work. They are real missionaries. They are trying to do everything they can to inspire and put into the hearts of men and women a knowledge and testimony of the truthfulness of this great work. Sometimes when we discuss releasing missionaries they come and ask that extensions might be made in their case because they love the work and do not desire to be released.

This year we have had around 416,000 people come to the Block as visitors. This is something like 89,000 more people than we had last year. Today, because of war conditions and employment possibilities in different parts of the country, and because Europe is not open to travel, people are traveling extensively in this country.

Among some of the interesting things to the tourists as they visit the Block are the way we handle our young people, both in a religious and a social way; our Temple work and the conception we have of the justice of God in requiring both the living and dead to do the same things in order to receive the same rewards; that men and women are able to obtain help and assistance, even though they may be on the other side. To them it is a new and thought-provoking doctrine. They are interested in our conception of marriage and family relationship, both here and hereafter. The doctrine that men and women, if they are faithful and true, may have each other, may have their children, may have their fathers and mothers in the eternities, is startling but satisfying. In speaking to a group one time, mention was made that women might have their husbands on the other side. A woman spoke up and said, "What! No rest in heaven"? Undoubtedly this lady had not had such a happy married life, but as we talk about the Temple work and its possibilities, I notice that the older people who are in the crowd look at each other and draw a bit closer and one can almost hear them say, "That is what we would like to have happen to us." And the young couples who are traveling, perhaps on their honeymoon, hold each other's hand more firmly and one can almost hear them say, "God being willing, we will live this life righteously and have each other forever and ever."

May the Lord bless us and keep us as we walk through life, that the inspiration and power of God shall always be with us and that we shall take a happy interest in men and women not of our faith, that they, too, might see and understand the beauty of the Gospel and eventually, because of the righteousness of their lives, find their way back into the presence of God, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ, our Redeemer, Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

We shall now be favored with another selection from the Pasadena Stake Male Quartet. You will perhaps be interested to know that this quartet is made up of Brother George Waite, first tenor, from Eastmont Ward; Brother Monte Green, baritone, from the Montibello Ward; Brother Geert Hulshoff, basso, of Belvedere Ward; Albert Gish, second tenor, Monrovia Ward. All are High Priests in Pasadena Stake. They call the quartet Melkomen, which contains, you will recognize, the first syllable of the Melchizedek Priesthood. The brethren will now sing for us, "The Story of Old," by Parks; director, Brother A. M. Gish.

The male quartet from Pasadena Stake sang "The Story of Old."
—Parks.

ELDER NICHOLAS G. SMITH

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles and President of the Northwestern States Mission

All my life I have looked with the spirit of reverence upon this building. I never dreamed that one day I should be privileged to sit upon these red plush seats. Since living within a stone's throw of Temple Block, my mother was always anxious that we attend the two o'clock afternoon session each Sunday, and as a boy I used to say:

Mother, it does not do any good for me to go over there, I just go to sleep. I cannot stay awake in the Tabernacle.

Well, son, that shows there's a good spirit there. (Laughter)
There is nothing to be afraid of, and I want you to go.

But she was not speaking of today; for I am afraid.

CONDITIONS IN THE NORTHWEST

I come from the great Northwest where I am laboring with young men and women that are gloriously fine. There are about 130 of them in our Mission, and about 11,000 members of the Church that we have on record scattered throughout the Northwestern States—a glorious part of the world, the most beautiful perhaps of all the world. They are busy now because of the conditions that prevail in creating armament and ships, erecting airports and providing facilities so that the United States will be ready. There is not very much unemployment in the Northwest. Our farmers are having some difficulties up around the Missoula district, the rains have been so copious that the wheat is sprouting in the shocks; they are unable to thresh it. This has been a wet year.

The Saints in the Mission are living the Gospel. The tithes have almost doubled this year over last year, and the missionaries have distributed more Books of Mormon than ever before. The people are open-minded and kind to us. Rarely do we hear anyone criticise.

VISIT TO ALASKA

Recently it was my privilege to travel to the far north and visit Alaska, which is part of the Northwestern States Mission. We have established there in Fairbanks a nice Branch of the Church. The missionaries went there last winter. During the summer months we had six missionaries laboring in Alaska. The two that were assigned to Anchorage have been very successful in establishing a Branch which now is functioning on its own. The Branch President, Brother Joseph Tibbitts, is in charge, and the soldier boys, those of the airport, many of them members of our Church, are in attendance, and they find a great deal of comfort in being permitted to go to a Branch of the Church and participate there in the Sunday School and the Mutual Improvement organization.

The Government is doing a tremendous job in that part of the world. There is a great airbase at Fairbanks, hangars the like of which I have never seen in my life. Likewise in Anchorage, a city of 2500 people, now they have 12,000 people living there. In three or four days they erect themselves little homes, hammering together some two-by-fours and nailing cellotex on the sides. They are taking their families into these places and are rearing them. Rents are very high and the Government is paying tremendous wages to the workers there.

As Brother Greenwood was talking this morning in the Welfare meeting, warning our people about leaving home and security to go away to work at jobs that will perhaps last but a few months, I thought of what happened when I was in Alaska. One man had taken his family all the way to Anchorage, and it takes a week on the ocean to get there—to get one of those big paying jobs that of course would be shortlived. He passed away and left his wife and three little children there with his mother-in-law, with no visible means of support, but thank God she had found a little Branch of the Church. We were able to finance her trip back to the States, where she was provided for, and where she had friends who could help her become located.

HAPPINESS IN THE GOSPEL

I am grateful for a Church that is practical, grateful for a Church that reaches into our everyday lives and makes us happy. No one can live the Gospel of Jesus Christ and not be happy. No matter what our difficulties may be or what our trials may be, there is always someone near by in our Church to help us. I found it to be true in Europe; in South Africa likewise, and in the far north of Alaska; always the same spirit, always the same love; always the desire upon the part of the presiding Authorities to bless and encourage and protect. What a Church is ours! What love goes out to the people! What love and devotion are expressed by the people and shown by the people for their leadership! How glorious it is to have men who are willing to sacrifice and give, as our leaders do, to be with us and to bless us!

I am grateful for the opportunity that has come to me and mine to associate with the young people of the Church.

FULFILMENT OF A PATRIARCHAL BLESSING

When I was a lad, the Patriarch, placing his hands upon my head, said that my life should be cast with the youth of the Church. As a Bishop I took that to be my responsibility and labored with the young people. I labored for some thirteen years on the General Board of the Mutual Improvement Association, and as a Mission President. The work with these lovely young men and women who come out into the mission field has been the joy of my life, and they keep my wife and myself buoyant in our spirits and feeling every day to thank the Lord for our opportunities. And so the Lord has blessed us and helped us in the work that has been ours to do, and we are so grateful.

THE TEMPLE AT CARDSTON PRAISED

I would like to mention that in the Northwestern States Mission there is an institution that bears a great influence among the people there, especially the membership of our Church. The leader of that institution is President Edward J. Wood. I am speaking of the Cardston Temple. I have discovered that permitting the missionaries to have one trip to the Cardston Temple has revitalized their lives, for they have not realized just what temple activity meant until they came under the spell of that man.

A MISSIONARY HEALED THROUGH FAITH

Not so very long ago a group of our missionaries were leaving Vancouver to take this trip over to Cardston to the Temple. One of these missionaries had had a drooping eyelid from his birth, and had been operated upon by the doctors, and had come under doctors' care, but had never been helped in the slightest degree. In talking with his District President he was talking about that eye, it worried him a bit. The District President said:

Well, you know what happened to me. I had a blessing here last May and my eyesight has been restored and I do not even wear my glasses any more. Why don't you have your eye fixed while you are over there this time? Why not have President Wood give you a blessing?

The missionaries went over to the Temple and finished their visit and were just on the point of leaving. President Wood came into the room just before they were going out of the temple and said:

I understand there are some people here who want blessings. The spirit of healing is in the Temple, and if your faith is right, and if the Lord is willing, you may have the blessing you desire.

That young Elder stood there and heard those remarks, and then President Wood bowed his head and began to pray. This Elder said to me:

President Smith, while he was praying the most wonderful feeling came over me I shall never forget it all the days of my life. That eyelid went up, and I walked out of the temple with my eye healed.

As I stood and looked at him and noticed that that eye was more open than the left one, I marveled at his condition. A month had passed since the occurrence, I had heard about it and was wondering whether it would remain so, but it has remained so, and he has called in all his one-eyed photographs from the missionaries and says he wants to give them one with his two eyes open instead of just the one.

And so, my brethren and sisters, no matter what difficulties and trials come to us we always have access to our Heavenly Father who will always reward us if we are humble. Remember, when we do what He says then we have a promise.

May God bless us all to remember this fact, that it is through our faith and through our works that our blessings come, and not through what others may do for us. May peace be in your homes, and joy and happiness be with you always, is my prayer, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER KENNETH R. STEVENSFormer President of the Tahitian Mission*

My brethren and sisters: This is an unusual surprise to me, for I had not expected that the opportunity would be provided for me to occupy this position. Neither, however, did I anticipate that a call would place me in charge of one of the Missions of this Church.

I bring you greetings from our brethren and sisters in the Gospel in the land of Tahiti, in the South Pacific. They are some 1500 strong, and in addition to those who claim membership in our Church, I also bring you greetings from some more than 20,000 residents of those islands who have an appreciation of our program, and though they do not claim membership in our Church, principally because of the habits which make it impossible for them to conform to our standards, yet they appreciate the value of our program in their midst and would hesitate to see it taken out entirely. They truly mourned the loss of the missionaries when they were withdrawn from those islands, and they look forward to the time when they may return.

I rejoice that while being in the midst of that people I came to learn through their legends that there was a time when they believed in the Gods of heaven as we do, even a plurality of Gods, and that they believed in the creation of this earth even as our doctrine teaches. This, however, has been explained away and replaced by modern Christian doctrine which teaches of a God who is everywhere present, and so small He dwells in the human heart, but who has no parts nor passions, and by a different story of the creation. And so it thrilled me when our missionaries preached Mormonism to have those people nod their heads and say, "It sounds like the old doctrine which was common to our people."

I bear you my testimony in humility that I appreciate my membership in the Church. I hold it dearly sacred, and trust that I may continue to be favored with activity in the Church, because I realize that only in that service is there safety for each of us.

My testimony helps me to understand that it is God's Church to which we belong, that it was established under His own immediate supervision, and that the Church membership will be held individually responsible for its degree of adherence to the principles, ordinances, and covenants which we accept.

And may I express my appreciation to my parents who helped me establish a foundation for the testimony I have of the Gospel. My father gave his life for the Gospel in the missionary service of the Church while laboring in New Zealand; and this sacrifice, while he was but a young man, made an indelible impression on my mind that our Church must have the Truth. The teachings of my widowed mother and the close and intimate friendship and association which we have been permitted to enjoy, have further aided me in standing by the Truth when I might have been tempted to do wrong. I am thankful that she still lives and continues to find joy and happiness in the program of the Church.

God bless us all. Amen.

PRESIDENT ANTOINE R. IVINS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My beloved brethren and sisters: It is a pleasure for me to stand before you and bear my testimony in this General Conference. I have been delighted with the spirit of the Conference thus far and with the messages we have heard. I am more than pleased that our beloved President is able to be with us and that God has given him the measure of health which he enjoys. I want to assure him that my prayer for him daily is that God will prolong his life so long as it is sweet for him and within the purposes of God that he should stand at the head of the Church. I enjoyed the message of each of his Counselors, and recommend to all of us that we carry those messages in our hearts and strive to live their import and purpose.

I was very much pleased with what President McKay gave us this morning, with the message of cheer and comfort. He indicated that while we should be cheerful we should recognize the presence of certain evil practices within our midst. Some of those practices have come down to us from the past, and one hundred years of our life have not been sufficient to eradicate them from our midst.

LATTER-DAY SAINT BELIEF REGARDING GOD

In all our history we have claimed the right to worship God according to the dictates of our conscience, and we have added we extend to other people the same privilege. We have done that, we have offered in many instances the facilities of the Church for the worship of other denominations. We are a tolerant people, but I wish to suggest this morning that in the idea of toleration which we foster we should never think of adopting the practices of other people which are not according to our standards and beliefs.

We can never for a moment fail to recognize the fact that we do worship God in a different manner from most people; that the type of God to which reference was just made is not the one we worship. We must always teach our children that the revelation to Joseph Smith of the identity and personality of God and Jesus Christ was real, and that as Latter-day Saints we should accept it as such. We should always teach them the necessity of living the standards of the Church—honesty, uprightness, integrity and virtues of many kinds, and chastity.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN RIGHT AND WRONG SHOULD BE TAUGHT

Many people believe that naturally and inherently we know the difference between right and wrong. I am not a psychologist, but I have grown up with the belief that we have a God-given conscience that teaches us to do what we know to be right and restrains us from doing what we know to be wrong, but I am a firm believer in the fact that our idea of right and wrong has grown out of the revelations of God to mankind, and that it is established in the minds of our children by the teachings of their mothers and their fathers. If they fail to learn through our neglect that certain things are wrong and do them, there is then the responsibility lying at the doors of their fathers and mothers. It is our duty as fathers and mothers to teach them frankly these things. It is our duty as leaders in the Priesthood quorums to discuss these things, to come to a mutual understanding of what is right and what is wrong, and to avail ourselves of public opportunity to teach our children so that no child growing up in our midst can say he has never been taught.

I reiterate what I said here at one time, that when a person can go to an officer of the Church and say, "Nobody has ever taught me that a certain grievous sin that we decry is a sin," somebody is at fault, for every man and woman in our communities should know that adultery and fornication and kindred practices are sinful in the sight of God and in the sight of this community. And in all our liberality and in all the concession that we may make to the belief of other people, allowing them to worship how, when, where, and what they may, we can never recede from our standards and adopt theirs, and be true to the trust that God has placed in us, and true to the heritage that we have received from our fathers and our mothers.

A TESTIMONY OF THE GOSPEL ADDS STRENGTH AGAINST TEMPTATION

I believe it is a fortunate thing and a truth that we are superior in our private lives to our ancestors, and I believe that superiority has grown out of the testimony that has been handed down to us from our parents, and through the inspiration of God our Heavenly Father that this work is true, that it has given us a devotion which other people lack for the standards of righteousness and uprightness, of truth and integrity.

I believe that we should stress them more, I believe that we should lay special stress upon the necessity of honesty in our dealings one with another, for the love of a man for his fellowmen cannot be fostered when he takes advantage of him in business relations or social contact.

I pray that God will give us His Holy Spirit, that we may live these standards, that we may keep them dear to our hearts, that we may have the grace and the gift of appealing to our young people with confidence. When a boy comes to me and says, "I have done a certain thing, but I could not tell it to my father; I could not tell it to my Bishop," I feel that there has been a barrier raised between those people and him that ought to be removed, that never should have existed. And when another boy comes to me and says, "I have stopped this practice because my Bishop and came to me and put his arm around me, he is my friend," I know that in that instance at least there was no barrier and the Spirit of God had full play between those two, and that boy is well upon his way. That is my feeling, brethren and sisters, I believe it sincerely and honestly. I believe we should teach these things more carefully, more intimately in our homes, in our quorums, and in our contacts socially one with another. I may even be the keeper of my neighbor's son in that respect, and if I see an opportunity to help I have an obligation and duty to do so.

May God help us to meet these responsibilities fully, completely.

honorably, that the generation that grows up at our feet may call us blessed because of the light that we have held to them in the battle of life, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER JOSEPH L. WIRTHLIN

Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

I sincerely trust, my brethren and sisters, that the Spirit of the Lord will guide and direct me in my remarks this morning.

THE AMERICAN CONSTITUTION INSPIRED

As the Bible is referred to as "the law and the testimony" in a religious sense, the Constitution of the United States is "the law and the testimony" of American democracy. Its framers were inspired men, and the membership of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints accepts it as such in view of the revelations given to the Prophet Joseph Smith indicating that the Lord had a hand in the framing of this great document. I quote from Section 101 of the Doctrine and Covenants, Verse 77, wherein the Lord declares:

According to the laws and constitution of the people, which I have suffered to be established, and should be maintained for the rights and protection of all flesh, according to just and holy principles.

The American Constitution or Bill of Rights was paid for with the life blood of our Revolutionary fathers, and men for generations before them fought kings, died in battle, suffered imprisonment, and in some instances were executed in order to win personal freedom.

EVENTS FORETOLD BY JEFFERSON

The chief author of the Declaration of Independence, Thomas Jefferson, was not only an inspired man in what he advocated, but I believe he was blessed with the gift of prophecy. I should like to read a Jeffersonian prophecy to you:

The spirit of the times may alter, will alter. Our rulers will become corrupt, our people careless. A single zealot may become persecutor, and better men be his victims. It can never be too often repeated, that the time for fixing every essential right, on a legal basis, is while our rulers are honest, and ourselves united. From the conclusion of this war (of the Revolution) we shall be going down hill. It will not then be necessary to resort every moment to the people for support. They will be forgotten, therefore, and their rights disregarded. They will forget themselves, but in the sole faculty of making money, and will never think of uniting to effect a due respect for their rights. The shackles, therefore, which shall not be knocked off at the conclusion of the war, will remain on us long, will be made heavier and heavier, till our rights shall revive or expire in a convulsion.

AN APOSTASY FROM TRUE DEMOCRACY

And as I view conditions today in the light of Jefferson's prophecy, a great apostasy has taken place from "the law and the testimony" of American democracy, or the Constitution of the United States. Just as there has been an apostasy from the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, there has been an apostasy from those divinely given principles of Government which have been transmitted to us by the inspired men who founded this great nation.

What is apostasy? Webster defines apostasy as being: "Abandonment of what one has voluntarily professed; total desertion of principles or faith."

Stop and think for a moment if you will, of the statement of Jefferson and then of what is transpiring today. "A single zealot may become persecutor." And a situation of this kind is evidenced in our Government today wherein bureaucrats call free men before them, try them, and sentence them. In addition thereto, bureaucrats have assumed the right or taken the privilege of enacting law, depriving the national assembly and representatives of the people of the sole right to legislate, and have deprived the judiciary of its right to try offenders of the law.

The people have been forgotten by the administrators of their Government. There is no question about it. Many Governmental policies now in operation are being imposed upon the people without their consent or knowledge. In contemplation of these conditions, it can readily be seen that a great apostasy from "the law and the testimony" of the American democracy, the Constitution, is taking shape and form.

Furthermore, the people are being lulled to sleep by an opiate called "borrowed prosperity." As Jefferson indicated, the people are so inclined toward the gaining of wealth they are forsaking the fundamental law of this great republic.

A new danger—American being arrayed against American in a new line of class demarkation which will divide this great nation, and, as has been said, "a house divided against itself cannot stand."

One of these groups in the face of a national emergency is literally lying down on the job, while our boys are in the military camps without proper weapons in their hands to learn the science of war. In the days of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln such a situation would have been handled as rebellion, and it should be handled as such today if America and American institutions are to continue.

One of the great fundamentals advocated by the founders of this American nation was that of frugal administration of government affairs. Never before in the history of the world has there been such an extravagant expenditure of the people's money.

Someone made reference to four or five freedoms. We have had more than four or five freedoms, for I think of at least the sixth one—the right under the Constitution of the United States for every man to work how, when, or where he will—and that right has disappeared. It is gone and now lies in the hands of a group who rule the laboring class of the United States.

I point out these few facts to you in substantiation of the point that as a people and a government we are on the high road of apostasy from that inspired Bill of Rights bequeathed to us by the founders of this great republic.

SOUTH CAROLINA POLITICS

One of the most insidious practices was again drawn to our attention during the last two weeks, with reference to a Senatorial primary held in South Carolina. There were three candidates in the field for the office of United States Senator; and as usual there was the favored candidate. He called upon the "powers that be," returning to his State with the announcement to the voters that $28,000,000 would soon be spent for the development of certain power projects.

This grant transmuted into votes, did not quite win the nomination. A run-off was required. The favored candidate's 48 per cent of the total vote was close to a majority, but to make it doubly sure, another $1,056,000 P. W. A. grant was made in favor of the capital of the State. (Time, September 29, 1941)

I say this candidate will be an expensive senator. He will have cost the voters of his State and of the United States $29,056,000. More than that, he is not worth one cent as a representative of the people of his State, for he is responsible to those who made it possible for the Federal Government to spend $29,056,000 for his State. He will become nothing more or less than a rubber stamp.

In the light of the above practice, a new form of apostasy is taking place, in that politicians and government agencies bid for the votes of the people; and when the votes of the people are placed on the auction block to be purchased by the highest bidder, what will the outcome be?

DESTRUCTION OF FOOD DECRIED

The founders of this great country believed in thrift and in conserving all of the country's resources, but again apostasy has been in the hearts of men. During the last ten years funds have been expended without regard to amounts, to use, or to the benefits derived from such wild expenditures—food was destroyed when there were hungry mouths that should have been provided with it. But thank God, in the Kingdom of the Christ now upon the earth, there are some modern Josephs of Egypt who during the time of wild spending and destruction of food advised this people to conserve their resources against the day of need. The day of need has arrived, as had been predicted. Millions of people in stricken Europe will feel the pangs of hunger. This day is now recognized by those who were responsible for the destruction of food, advising us to produce more, to practice the principle of conservation. Would it not have been a wiser policy to have heeded the inspired servants of God seven or eight years ago and saved that which was destroyed?

While the policy of producing more food and conserving it is being advocated on one hand, yet on the other hand those who are responsible for national finances continue to spend lavishly and without reservation on projects which, in the ultimate, will be of but little benefit to the people as a whole.

What will be the ultimate outcome of it all? Thomas Jefferson has predicted what it will be, and may I repeat his statement to you:

The shackles, therefore, which shall not be knocked off at the conclusion of the war, will remain on us long, will be made heavier and heavier, until our rights shall * * * expire in a convulsion.

If our rights expire in a convulsion, the body politic now being slowly drugged by the opiate of a borrowed prosperity, will suffer a major financial operation, which will cause the death of the world's greatest democracy; and the vultures and the buzzards of some foreign "ism" will be waiting the moment to step in and devour the carcass.

THE POSITION OF THE CHURCH

There should be no question with reference to the stand of the members of the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ with reference to the principles of American democracy, for Brigham Young declared:

I expect to see the day when the Elders of Israel will assist civil and religious liberty and every constitutional liberty bequeathed to us by our fathers, and spread these rights abroad in connection with the Gospel for the salvation of all nations. I shall see this whether I live or die. (J. of D. p. 553)

Again he declared:

I do not lift my voice against the great and glorious Government guaranteed to every citizen by our Constitution, but against those corrupt administrators who trample the Constitution and just laws under their feet. (J. of D. p. 555)

And in making an effort for the preservation of our great Bill of Rights, may we do so energetically and willingly that others seeing our example will be inspired to follow after us and not for one moment to continue in the lethargy we are now in, for we may find ourselves in the position of a conquered and trampled France, best stated in the words of old Marshal Petain when he pronounced the following requiem over his stricken country:

Our spirit of enjoyment was stronger than our spirit of sacrifice. We wanted to have more than we wanted to give. We tried to spare effort, and met disaster.

After apostasy there is always an opportunity of restitution and restoration. I would to God that another angel could fly through the midst of heaven, as did that angel that John the Revelator saw, that angel which returned to earth and brought the Gospel of Jesus Christ! Oh, if such an angel could now fly through the midst of the heavens, warning and forewarning the American people of what ultimately lies before them, what a blessing it would be! But, on the other hand, I wish to assure you the Lord will not send an angel. It is not necessary, for His restored Church is upon the earth, and at its head there stands a Prophet, a Revelator, and a Seer who has warned this people and the American people over a period of many years.

And now, I pray that those who belong to this Church will hearken to that warning. I sincerely hope the American nation will turn for counsel toward these great mountains where the House of the Lord is established, where His inspired servants may be found, and, above all, that this nation's people will hearken to that counsel, to achieve the place that Thomas Jefferson predicted would be our blessing if we followed the fundamentals of government as laid down by the founders of this great nation, and to avoid the catastrophe that now lies immediately ahead:

Let us then with courage and confidence pursue our own Federal and republican principles, our attachment to our Union and representative government. Kindly separated by Nature and a wide ocean from the exterminating havoc of one quarter of the globe; too high minded to endure the degradations of the others; possessing a chosen country, with room enough for our descendants to the hundredth and thousandth generation; entertaining a due sense of our equal rights to the use of our own faculties, to the acquisitions of our industry, to honor and confidence from our fellow-citizens, resulting, not from birth, but from our actions and their sense of them; enlightened by a benign religion, professed, indeed and practised in various forms, yet all of them including honesty, truth, temperance, gratitude, and the love of man; acknowledging and adoring an overruling Providence which by all its dispensations proves that it delights in the happiness of man here and his greater happiness hereafter; and with all these blessings, what more is necessary to make us a happy and a prosperous people? Still one thing more, fellow citizens, a wise and frugal government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another, which shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned. This is the sum of good government, and this is necessary to close the circle of our felicities.

As members of this Church we know what our relationship to the Government of the United States is. We know what our responsibilities are, for God has revealed them to us. I sincerely pray as citizens of the United States, as members of this great Church, we will set an example which will create, if it is possible, a restitution of all those glorious privileges and blessings that we have lost and are losing—and we will arouse America by our example.

I testify to you that the destiny of this Church is leadership; it is God's Church, it is His work, and as Brigham Young declared, the Elders of the Church will not only carry the Gospel of Jesus Christ to the nations of the earth, but they will also carry those principles of freedom and equal rights, which will be beneficial to all flesh.

May we, in the spirit of the martyred Emancipator, approach this task:

With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow and his orphan, to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations.

that in the end, "this Government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

This I humbly pray will be its blessing, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

The singers from the Pasadena Stake have contributed to the inspiration of this very important meeting. We appreciate the service they have rendered and sincerely thank them.

The congregation sang the hymn, "How Firm A Foundation."

Elder William H. Reeder, Jr., President of the Mount Ogden Stake, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2 p. m.

SECOND DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference reconvened promptly at 2 p. m., Saturday afternoon, October 4.

President David O. McKay, Second Counselor in the First Presidency, conducted the services.

The music for this session of the Conference was furnished by the Tabernacle Choir, J. Spencer Cornwall, director; Alexander Schreiner, organist.

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "Praise to the Man"—Phelps.

Elder Leland E. Anderson, President of the South Sanpete Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The Tabernacle Choir sang an anthem, "Jesus, Word of God"—Mozart.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

I am pleased to announce that again the Tabernacle is filled to capacity. I can see people standing in the gallery and in the doorways. We welcome you to this the fourth session of this the 112th Semi-Annual Conference of the Church.

ELDER JOHN A. WIDTSOE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My dear brethren and sisters, I rejoice in having again the opportunity of attending one of the great General Conferences of the Church. I pray that I may be directed by the Holy Spirit of God, so that whatever I may say may be acceptable to Him and profitable to you.

PRESIDENT GRANT'S COVENANTS

I listened with a great deal of interest to the sermon of the President of the Church yesterday, and ever since I have had in my heart the feeling to say to my assembled brethren and sisters that they would do well to memorize, or at least learn very carefully, the first extract that he read from his sermons, the one in which, when assuming the presidency of the Church, he made as it were a covenant with God and the people as to how his conduct would be. It would be well, I think, if every one of us, in our respective callings and activities, would make just such a covenant with the Lord and with those whom we are called to serve.

THE CONFERENCE GATHERINGS REMARKABLE

I am always, on occasions like this, and many other occasions, made to marvel at the vitality and the steady growth of the restored Church of Christ. Two evenings ago I attended the Aaronic Priesthood pageant in this great building. It was filled to overflowing, and thousands were turned away. As announced by President McKay, in the four sessions of this Conference, all held on week days, the Tabernacle has been filled to capacity, with many standing. It is remarkable, an evidence of that which binds together this great kingdom of God on earth.

Perhaps the most remarkable thing about these great gatherings is that there are so many men here. A friend, not of this State, nor of our faith, who has been visiting some of the meetings of this Conference, told me yesterday of the deep impression made upon him by these gatherings, and emphasized the fact that there were so many men present. It is a unique thing in the history of religion, at least in the history of modern religion. In this Church, at least, it seems that the men are catching up with the women, and that is some accomplishment!

PROGRESS OF THE CHURCH

I have been thinking today, as I looked over this vast body of Priesthood, officers of the Church, that if Brigham Young and those associated with him, who laid the foundations of this structure could see, as I believe they do see, this building with its main floor chiefly filled with Bishops and their counselors and Stake Presidents with their counselors, they would and must feel the thrill that we feel. Their dreams are being realized. I really wish that all of you could be on this stand and see the faces of this vast assemblage of Latter-day Saints. Yet I suppose none should be filled with marvel, or wonder, at the growth of the Church. After all, we have something precious to offer the world. Our traffic is in truth; and truth is the strongest cement for holding human organizations together. We offer the world truth; and truth so organized for human needs, and so brought within human understanding, that it becomes the answer to the deep questions which lie in every human heart, in every human soul. We answer these questions. We offer that for which humanity is hungering. I look forward to the time when this Church, because it is founded in truth, shall lead in all matters of righteousness throughout the world, until the very end, when every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Jesus is the Lord.

Now, whenever I think about the progress of the Church I think also about the devoted thousands who make our progress possible. The statement made by President McKay this morning was certainly thrilling to all of us, with respect to the progress of the Church. It has come about because thousands and thousands of Latter-day Saints have devotedly performed their duties, done their work, lived the law as they understood it. Consequently the Church is growing, and I believe is acceptable to our Heavenly Father, even though not all are doing the best they might do in behalf of the Lord's great cause.

PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY

That leads me to a principle which I would like to lay before you,—a very simple one, known to all; but sometimes the simplest things are the most important; and sometimes, too, the simplest things are those which are most easily forgotten. Membership in this Church involves personal responsibility. The Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ presents the doctrine of individual salvation. There is no mass salvation in the Kingdom of God. One by one we enter into the glory of the Lord. I make my covenants alone. I go into the waters of baptism. No one can do that for me if I live on earth. Faith, repentance, baptism, the gift of the Holy Ghost, and all the things that pertain to the Gospel; I must accept myself. I cannot place the burden upon any one else. One of the simplest, as I have said, of all the principles of the Gospel, and one of the most important, is that we accept personal responsibility for the work of God's kingdom.

This is, I think, illustrated nowhere better than in our Temple work. We have thousands of names on our records, but we must do the work for them name by name, name by name; and even then, after that has been done, each one of the dead, having this work done for him here, must, upon his own volition, accept the work done, before it becomes effective.

We should all try to cultivate the feeling of personal responsibility for the work of these latter days. A church is but a collection of individuals. Any organization, a nation, is but a collection of individuals. The church is no greater than the sum total of the activities of the individuals belonging to it; the nation is no greater. We should accept this personal responsibility: This is my Church, not my Bishop's Church, my Stake President's Church, President Grant's Church. In my field of activity, within my calling, I am just as responsible for the welfare of this Church as any one of the brethren who may preside over the different divisions of the Church. Only as we understand that principle and practice it are we going to make, really, this splendid organization into one fully acceptable to our Heavenly Father.

With respect to this great Conference the same principle applies. Are the instructions given from this stand for me or for my neighbor? There is a temptation, as we sit here and hear the old principles of the Gospel discussed over and over again to say to ourselves, "Why, that is for my neighbor. Brother Jones, just around the corner, needs this instruction. I will pass it on to him when I get home." But the counsel is meant for me. These Conference instructions have no virtue, no value, to me unless I accept them as if they were directed to me, to be built into my life, to be used by me in my daily work.

No person can accept full responsibility, personal responsibility, as he should, for the welfare of this work, unless he learns the great secret art of self-forgetfulness. We must learn to forget ourselves in a great cause, to submerge ourselves in that great cause, to surrender to that great cause. The soul of man never grows to its full stature if the individual stands up before us while we are thinking: What am I getting out of this thing? Only those who have learned to give themselves to a cause enable their souls to grow to full stature. That also is of important consideration for us here.

VISIT TO THE CANADIAN MISSION

I have just returned from the Canadian Mission, a splendid Mission, in good condition, presided over by our colleague and good friend, David A. Smith. I met the missionaries there, and over and over again they said: "This is the happiest time of our lives. We never had as good a time." The reason is, of course, that they were practicing the very art of self-forgetfulness. They were giving themselves to a cause. After we return from our missions if we give ourselves to the great cause of the Lord at home, we shall have equal satisfaction, equal joy. There is no reason why our missionary service should be any happier than any other Church service, if we but learn the great principle of self-forgetfulness, or surrendering to a great cause.

RESPONSIBILITY OF CITIZENSHIP

I wonder if I dare to say that if we dig down into the motives of humanity we shall find that the horrors of this day, the war, and all the troubles that surround us at this time, both at home and abroad, are rooted in the failure of men to assume personal responsibility for the organization to which they belong. In democratic governments, at least—and all the European nations now at warfare have a democratic basis, though they have departed from it—if every man in those countries had sensed his personal responsibility for his nation, I doubt whether this warfare, these bloody horrors, would be upon the world as they are at the present time.

We are too prone, I think, to look for complex causes, for things far away, when in fact the issues strike home into our firesides within the simplicity of life and action. Life is not very complex, after all, if we analyze it thoroughly and well. This is not President Roosevelt's country. It is my country, and I must help to make it what it should be. This is not President Grant's Church. It is mine, and I have to help make it what it should be. That is my message to you here today.

LOVE FOR THE LORD SHOWN IN KEEPING THE COMMANDMENTS

Now, in the minute or two left for me let us just bring these thoughts together by saying that to be personally responsible for the welfare of this Church we must do what President Grant has told us to do, to keep the commandments, to speak well of the Church, to find no fault, to look for the good, and to perform the duties assigned to us. In our little field of labor, whatever it may be, let us do our work as faithfully as President Grant does it in his field. Then all together we shall be able to build a marvelous institution, one acceptable to our Father in heaven, the Kingdom of God on earth.

Keeping the commandments has been President Grant's message to this Church from the beginning. I jotted down here, as I thought of this subject, that the Lord said to the Prophet Joseph Smith: "If thou lovest me"—and this morning we had a marvelous sermon on love as against hate, one that will linger long in our memories—"If thou lovest me thou shalt serve me and keep my commandments." Then we have the promise given through the same latter-day Prophet:

"He that is faithful, the same shall be kept."—That means a great deal: "He that is faithful, the same shall be kept and blessed with much truth." And then the saying of the ancient prophet comes back to me, that if we do all these things, brethren and sisters, men and women of the Church, accepting our responsibility as individual members of the Church, the promise by the prophet of old will come true:

One man of you shall chase a thousand, for the Lord your God, he it is that fighteth for you.

NEPHI'S WORDS TO HIS BRETHREN

I think perhaps I can take one minute more, then I am through. Nephi had his difficulties. His brothers did not support him, did not support their father, Lehi, were in rebellion against the Lord. Then, one day their brother Nephi took them in hand and tried to remedy the situation, to convert them:

And I said unto them: Have ye inquired of the Lord?

And they said unto me: We have not; for the Lord maketh no such thing known unto us.

Behold, I said unto them: How is it that ye do not keep the commandments of the Lord? How is it that ye will perish, because of the hardness of your hearts?

Do ye not remember the things which the Lord hath said? If ye will not harden your hearts, and ask me in faith, believing that ye shall receive, with diligence in keeping my commandments, surely these things shall be made known unto you.

This is the simplest of all formulas to win the Lord's favor handed down from ancient days—to reach out to the Lord, to trust Him, to keep His commandments. If we do this, all that we need shall be given us, and all shall be well with us, as individuals and as builders of the Lord's latter-day kingdom.

God bless us and make us faithful in these things, and help us to understand more fully the meaning of the Gospel, I pray, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER RUFUS K. HARDY

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My brethren and sisters, I think I have felt just as you have felt during this Conference, but particularly so during the remarks of President Grant, for I have watched him as long as I have memory, and as he was talking there kept occurring and recurring to me an incident that I want to pass on.

INCIDENTS FROM PRESIDENT GRANT'S EARLY LIFE

It has been my privilege, during the last few days, to examine the records of the Thirtieth Quorum of Seventy, and in my examination of this quorum of Seventy I discovered that it is the quorum to which President Grant belonged, and that sixty-six years ago, when he was but nineteen years of age, he joined this quorum of Seventy, and then one of the first things that President Grant said I copied down, and I want to read to you just what he did say. This was on June 16, 1876.

President Grant stated he was pleased to meet with the brethren; bore an excellent testimony in regard to paying tithing, and felt well in the work of God, and felt to do his duty in the kingdom.

Then again this statement: March 29th, 1877—and remember now, President Grant was but twenty years of age.

He was gratified at being present; realized that the consideration of religion should be uppermost in our minds; desired means and wealth to do good, and not to use in damning himself; wished always to have this spirit with him.

There are many other things that were said by him that I shall not read, but that, in and of itself, is enough to give to us the real, true insight of this great man. It seems to me that God has continued His method of appointing leaders. You recall how David was called. God seems to have had His desires answered, in putting His fingers on the youth who He knew would go forward with the work in a way that would please Him.

.A VALIANT SOLDIER

Now, today I received a letter from the far-off regions of New Zealand, and in that letter I received some very cheering news to me. Our boys in New Zealand who belong to this Church, who are in the war, were not lost as reported. They have been found, nearly all, or all of them, and taken into prison camps. Brother George Katene, one of the stalwart Elders in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in that land far from his home has been signally honored. He has been marked with the decoration of Great Britain, for his valor—and may I say that he is one of the graduates of our Maori Agricultural College.

GRATITUDE EXPRESSED FOR BLESSINGS

I jotted down a few things that I thought I would like to mention here, and if I can get through with them in just a few minutes I will be very, very happy.

When I read of the sorrow and distress that is abroad upon the earth today I hold as the most precious gift God may give to me my citizenship in these United States, this blessed land of Joseph. My heart is poured out in constant gratitude for this glorious Gospel upon which we are feasting here today. But for it I should not be here, and perhaps should not have had earthly tabernacle. In humble gratitude I thank my Heavenly Father that I was born a generation removed from the terrible onslaught made by Satan to destroy this work in its inception, and that those heroes who preceded me so discouraged the Evil One, by their holy faith and devotion, that there came a lull in the persecution, and in that lull I was born. I think I have in my veins some of the blood of those who suffered and were tempted, so I have obtained my physical persecution in an easy way. But come what will, I hope I may never deny that knowledge which is in my heart today.

SATAN'S POWER TO TEMPT

Abraham Lincoln is quoted as stating this:

I believe we are all agents and instruments of Divine Providence. I hold myself in my present position, and with the authority invested in me, as an instrument of Providence. I am conscious every moment that all I am and all I have are subject to the control of a Higher Power, and that Power can use me in any manner and at any time as in His wisdom might be pleasing to Him.

I believe, however, that one so suave and so cunning as his Satanic Majesty, in order to induce our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ as he did, with his offer if He would bow down and worship him, is capable of bringing to us other temptations and other trials than physical trials, and I rely wholly and solely upon the answer of Christ to Satan. It is a comfort to me: "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." Thereupon the devil left Him, and angels came and ministered to Him.

GOD'S POWER MADE MANIFEST

So in this rocky fastness, and in this great desert land of ours, God established this Church. To our forefathers be the glory. I want to say to you that there came to them, if not angelic inferences, help, sustaining power. It was the power, at least, of God, that made them continue on in what they did, until we find ourselves as we are today. So the Lord brought about exactly what the Prophet Isaiah declared would be brought to pass:

For as the earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the garden causes the things that are sown in it to spring forth; so the Lord God will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations.

This has been literally fulfilled in my lifetime, so with gratitude in my heart I praise my Heavenly Father. I thank Him for all that has come to me, and all that has come and is coming and will continue to come to this great Church.

LINCOLN'S WORDS FULFILLED

God the eternal Father, I thank Thee that we have men, even in these great warring armies, who may go forth with this Gospel of ours in their hearts, because those men will scatter peace, comfort and cheer to all with whom they come in contact.

Let me again tell you what Lincoln said, and he said this just before Congress convened in 1862:

Fellow citizens, we cannot escape history. We of this Congress and of this administration will be remembered in spite of ourselves. No personal significance or insignificance can spare one or the other of us. The fiery trials through which we pass will light us down with honor or dishonor, to the last generation.

That is true. What was true then is true of this Church today. The history of this up-till-now fearless people, who have made the Church what it is, shows that they have done so on a few fundamental things, some of which are the following: Implicit faith in God; confidence and trust in each other; scrupulous honor and integrity; thrift, and the God-given privilege of industrious labor, and a feeling of repugnance that is akin to disgrace, when any of us must carry the burden of debt.

These are some of the glorious things for which I am thankful to my Heavenly Father today.

ADMONITIONS OF THE SAVIOR

These are some of the glorious things that our fathers practiced. That is why we are here today, enjoying all the blessings of health and strength, wealth and power, but above all these temporal blessings, a spiritual contentment which solaces us from day to day.

It is also the reason we can draw near to Christ's admonition recorded in St. Matthew, Chapter 5, verses 43-48.

Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy.

But I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you;

That ye may be the children of your Father which is in Heaven: for He maketh His sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust.

For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? Do not even the publicans the same?

And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? Do not even the publicans so?

Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.

THE WORK OF STAKE MISSIONARIES

During the first eight months of 1941, your Stake missionaries disposed of 4,812 Standard Works of the Church and 3,873 other books; performed 1,776 baptisms; and brought into communion with the Church 3,695 inactive members.

My time is up. I offer a sincere prayer to God that He will not only bless us, but bless every nation and every people and every tribe of people that exists upon the earth, and prepare the backs for the stripes that some shall receive; and to those who receive nothing but plaudits, let them receive them in humility and in all praise to God for His mercies to us, all of which I ask in Jesus' name, Amen.

ELDER CHARLES A. CALLIS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

The prophet Azariah said to young and old:

The Lord is with you while ye be with him, and if ye seek him ye will be found of him. But if ye forsake him, he will forsake you.

THE COST OF TRANSGRESSION

This is partnership with God. I wish you would consider with me, for a few moments, this question: What does it cost not to serve Jesus Christ? The figures to me are astronomical. With my poor mathematical mind I cannot soar to their heights. But I can go and look at the wretched inmates of the prison; I can look at men and women who are crushed beneath sin; I can visualize those battlefields over the waters, those valleys that are running red with human blood,—and I ask myself what does it cost not to serve Jesus Christ? The answer is before me. Beneath the stars of heaven there is no sight so pathetic as the wreck of a human being, and a home covered with shame is a tragedy.

The Lord said:

Behold, the world is ripening in iniquity; and it must needs be that the children of men are stirred up unto repentance, both the Gentiles and also the house of Israel.

Old-fashioned, you will say. Yes, they may seem so. They are not the empty words of philosophy, so called, but they are the true words of God.

And again:

And the whole world lieth in sin, and groaneth under darkness and under the bondage of sin.

Is that true? Are we not under bondage, with these billions of dollars of national debt over us like a dark shadow? The Lord says every man who is in debt is in bondage. Do you not think that the word of the Lord should be heeded, and that we, as individuals, should get out of debt, and then we will have more force with our Government? But the world is in bondage. The world is ripening in iniquity, and therefore the Lord said: "Say nothing but repentance unto this generation."

Speaking of our country, I think the business men are largely to blame for these chaotic conditions. The Lord says: "Search out good and wise men"—not of any party; not of any church, but search out these good men and put them in charge of our civil affairs. But if you ask a business man to run for office, he becomes a Pharisee, a political Pharisee. He says: "I don't like to enter into the slime of politics." But who has made it a slime? The men who were unworthy to hold office. Business men say: "We can't be elected." Well, when, in the name of heaven, will you be any stronger? Why not enter the conflict? There ought to be common ground where good and wise men may stand, and their influence will be felt at headquarters in Washington.

"Isn't repentance," as Carlyle says, "of all acts of men, the most divine?" The reward of repentance is a new man, a new birth. Think of the sweet influence that repentance brings. It changes the heart. It makes us feel that we have no more disposition to do evil, but to do good continually. Our Heavenly Father entreats us to be correct in manner, proper in our conduct, and an example and a light unto all mankind. Oh, the strength, the beauty there is in purity of heart! Emerson said: "My strength is as the strength of ten, because my heart is pure."

You know the old story of the student who created a monstrous being from materials gathered in the tomb and the dissecting-room. Of course, it is a fable. The monster acquired life. The student was unable to control him. This monstrosity strangled the student, killed his bride and others of his loved ones, and finally found an end in the North Sea. By permitting this intemperance are we not constructing a monstrous being that will prove to be our master; and this monster of adultery—for unchastity is the dominant evil of the age. These great evils will strangle our youth and kill all that we cherish most dear, and yet we are responsible.

If we had done our full duty our people in the tops of these mountains would not be afflicted with these beer stands and liquor stores. We had the power—we have the power now to prevent it. Should we not, in the majesty and strength of a free people, rise up and crush this destroyer, before it crushes us?

WARNING TO AMERICA

About our nation Moroni said—and his word is greater than all the statesmen of ancient or modern times—he is speaking of the United States of America:

And this cometh unto you, O ye Gentiles, that ye may know the decrees of God—that ye may repent, and not continue in your iniquities until the fulness come, that ye may not bring down the fulness of the wrath of God upon you as the inhabitants of the land have hitherto done.

Then Webster, the great expounder of the Constitution, catches the inspiration of the Nephite prophet, and in his matchless eloquence he adds to this warning:

But if we and our posterity reject religious instruction and authority, violate the rules of eternal justice, trifle with the injunctions of morality, and recklessly destroy the political Constitution which holds us together, no man can tell how sudden a catastrophe may overwhelm us, that shall bury all our glory in profound obscurity. Should that catastrophe happen, let it have no history! Let the horrible narrative never be written! Let its fate be like that of the lost books of Livy, which no human eye shall ever read; or the missing Pleiad, of which no man can ever know more than that it is lost, and lost forever.

FAITH EXPRESSED IN THE FUTURE

If America falls, we will be the ones who have robbed ourselves of our glorious heritage, but I am not afraid that this republic will fall. I believe the Constitution is going to endure until the King of Kings comes in glory. He shall reign over the earth, from the rivers to the ends of the earth. The Book of Mormon is filled with divine prophecies, and divine promises to this American nation. Speaking of it the Lord says:

And this land shall be a land of liberty unto the Gentiles, and there shall be no kings upon the land, who shall raise up unto the Gentiles.

And I will fortify this land against all other nations.

For he that raiseth up a king against me shall perish, for I, the Lord, the king of heaven, will be their king, and I will be a light unto them forever, that hear my words. (II Nephi 10:11, 12, 14.)

I am not afraid of any dictator coming over and conquering us. I cherish, in the fondest and deepest faith, the belief that the Star Spangled Banner shall reign over this land, and that no alien flag shall ever be permitted to be the "abomination and desolation" in free America. But all that depends upon the people serving Jesus Christ, who is the God of the land. If we serve Him—and here is our glorious opportunity—He will fortify us against all nations, and though the world combine in arms and attempt to invade us, every true American will meet them in battle array and send them back in the confusion of retreat, for when God is with us, who can be against us?

And the Star Spangled Banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free, and the home of the brave, if we remember God and seek Him while He may be found. This is my prayer, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

The Choir sang an anthem, "My Redeemer Lives"—B. Cecil Gates.
Richard P. Condie, soloist.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

You will agree, I am sure, that that is one of the most beautiful musical compositions ever written. The Choir sang it impressively.

ELDER ALMA SONNE

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren and sisters: I am conscious at this moment of a tremendous responsibility. I am full of fear and apprehension, and I confess to you that when the call came to me to serve in a high position in this Church I was full of doubts and misgivings. Yet I pledge to you my best efforts, with the help of God.

RECOLLECTIONS OF PAST TEACHINGS

When President Grant spoke yesterday there came out of my boyhood three stimulating memories. One of these was the visit of President Wilford Woodruff to Logan when I was a boy. I remember his testimony. He spoke of Joseph Smith the Prophet, as one of his associates, and he told us that Joseph Smith was a mighty man, full of faith, full of courage, and full of integrity, but he said when Joseph Smith assumed his responsibility as a leader of the people, he was meek and humble as a child. I shall never forget the fervent testimony of President Woodruff.

The second memory that came to me was President Heber J. Grant's visit to Logan, also when I was a boy. I remember his sermon on temperance and the Word of Wisdom. I shall never forget what he said on that occasion.

The third memory is a recollection of seeing and hearing that venerable, scholarly and cultured leader, President Lorenzo Snow. He spoke of the law of the tithe, and urged the people to honor that great law, and he said if they would do so the Lord would lift them out of their economic distress. There are many people living in the Church who can remember the admonition of this great leader.

QUOTATION FROM "RAYS OF LIVING LIGHT"

Thirty odd years ago I was a missionary over in England. I remember distributing a tract written by President Charles W. Penrose. That tract was called "Rays of Living Light." To me it has always been a masterpiece, for Brother Penrose explained the Gospel magnificently in that little booklet. I have frequently pondered the last paragraph in this Gospel tract, and I am taking the liberty of reading it to you this afternoon, in view of the many things which we have heard concerning the trouble and gloom of these last days.

Said President Penrose:

"This is a day of warning. It will be followed by a time of judgments. The Lord is about to shake terribly the kingdoms of this world. War, pestilence, famine, earthquake, whirlwind, and the devouring fire, with signs in the heavens and on the earth, will immediately precede the great consummation which is close at hand. These are the last days. All that has been foretold by the holy prophets concerning them is about to be literally fulfilled. The everlasting Gospel has been restored to the earth as one of the signs of the latter days. Israel is being gathered. The elect of God are assembling from the four quarters of the earth. The way is opening for the redemption of Judah. Soon all things will be in commotion: 'men's hearts failing them for fear and looking for the things that are coming on the earth.' The places of refuge appointed are in Zion and in Jerusalem. The Lord, even Jesus the Messiah, will come to His holy Temple. He will be glorified in His Saints, but will 'take vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the Gospel.' He will break in pieces the nations as a potter's vessel. He will sweep the earth as with a besom of destruction. He will establish righteousness upon it and give dominion to His people. 'The meek shall inherit the earth and the wicked be cut off forever.' Therefore, repent and turn unto Him, all ye nations, and obey Him, all ye people, for these words are true and faithful and are given by His Spirit! Salvation has come unto you; reject it not lest ye fall and perish. The time is at hand!"

THE EXAMPLE OF THE PIONEERS

Brethren and sisters, this great Gospel tract has found place in many homes in this nation and in old England. And so I say we are living in the last days, and when these events are transpiring. There is confusion in the world. We are beset with difficulties, and sometimes I think it is well for us to hark back to the days of the pioneers to get our bearings and to learn the principles upon which they succeeded. Those sturdy people who laid the foundation of all we have and are, were men and women of faith. They were obedient to the commandments of the Lord. They knew that freedom is a priceless treasure. How could they fail?

In conclusion, I want to say that freedom in the earth must be safeguarded, and it will be safeguarded, brethren and sisters, because Jesus Christ was the great advocate of equal rights, and His precepts will eventually prevail. I firmly believe that Thomas Jefferson received his inspiration to write the Declaration of Independence from the Holy Scriptures, and that he was familiar with the life of Jesus Christ as told in the New Testament.

May God bless you. May He bless this Church. May He prosper the cause of truth in all the earth, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER MARION G. ROMNEY

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My dear brethren and sisters: It is a great relief when one's name is announced. The Prophet Joseph Smith once said that "There is no pain so awful as that of suspense." I quoted that to President Clark once and he answered in substance, "Well, you ought to be pretty well purified by now, then." But if being held in suspense will help to purify a person then I do not object to being so held.

I want to qualify under the teachings of the Apostle John, who—when explaining that when the Lord should appear "we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is"—said, "And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as He is pure." (1st John 3:2-3)

A TESTIMONY BRINGS RESPONSIBILITY

I am grateful beyond my power to express, for the confidence of the Brethren and the great mercy and blessings of the Lord to me, and I appreciate the opportunity to bear my testimony to you from this stand for I know, with you, that God lives; that Adam fell that man might be; that Jesus Christ was and is the Son of God, the Redeemer of the world; that by suffering in a manner beyond our power to understand, He wrought out the great atonement, thereby paying for the sin of Adam unconditionally and for the sins of all men upon condition of their individual repentance; and that by reason thereof all men shall be resurrected and stand before the judgment bar of God to be judged upon their individual records made during their life upon this earth; that when all the excuses, explanations and protestations are made and brushed aside, the final all-important question for every one of us to measure ourselves against will be, "How nearly did I in the living of my life upon the earth conform to the principles of the Gospel of Jesus Christ." I know, too, that a righteous judgment will be made, and that if through righteous living we have brought ourselves within reach of the great plan of mercy, then we shall, through the atoning blood of the Savior, be washed clean and received into the mansions of our Father. We all know these things and we each have a testimony of the divinity of the mission of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and a knowledge that through him the Lord restored the Gospel in these last days and again organized His Church upon the earth; that the men who now stand at the head of the Church hold the keys of the holy Priesthood and that they have been chosen by the Lord to lead His people and are sustained and upheld by Him in their ministry. It is the knowledge of these things that makes us brothers and sisters.

THE TRUE MEANING OF BROTHERHOOD

There are many people who admire the activities and accomplishments of the Church; who, when they see the results obtained through, and by the Church, think that fellowship with such an organization would be desirable, but who have no idea of what binds us together. Even among us, as members of the Church, there are those desiring to be known as members and willing to take some part in our activities, who as yet do not know wherein lies the power which sustains this people. Therefore, they do not care to be known as a peculiar people. They accept and fellowship with the Church so long as their standing in the world is not interfered with. They are our brothers and sisters, in fact all people are, but not in the same peculiar sense as are those who have the testimony and knowledge of which we have spoken.

ALMA'S EXPERIENCE

Mormon speaks of Alma and the sons of Mosiah as still being "brethren in the Lord" after having been separated for fourteen years. Let us recall for a moment their experience to determine what it was that made them "brethren in the Lord." As young men, they "went about to destroy the Church of God" and "to lead astray the people of the Lord." As they pursued their evil course, an angel of the Lord appeared unto them, his voice shook the earth; he questioned, and instructed Alma about many things. But the last words which Alma heard and the most impressive were, "And now I say unto thee, Alma, go thy way, and seek to destroy the Church no more . . . and this even if thou wilt of thyself be cast off." The angel spoke other words which Alma did not hear because he was overcome with fear. His soul was racked with eternal torment and he wandered through much tribulation. Repenting nigh unto death, he remembered all his sins and of this experience he says:

So great had been my iniquities, that the very thought of coming into the presence of my God did rack my soul with inexpressible horror.

Oh, thought I, that I could be banished and become extinct both soul and body, that I might not be brought to stand in the presence of my God, to be judged of my deeds.

And now, for three days and for three nights was I racked, even with the pains of a damned soul.

And it came to pass that as I was thus racked with torment, while I was harrowed up by the memory of my many sins, behold, I remembered also to have heard my father prophesy unto the people concerning the coming of one Jesus Christ, a Son of God, to atone for the sins of the world.

Now, as my mind caught hold upon this thought, I cried within my heart: O Jesus, thou Son of God, have mercy on me, who am in the gall of bitterness, and am encircled about by the everlasting chains of death. (Alma 36:14-18.)

He was then granted forgiveness, his pain left and he was harrowed up by the memory of his sins no more. The light of the Gospel broke in upon his vision and joy entered his soul. His statement to those who stood around him was,

I have repented of my sins, and have been redeemed of the Lord; behold I am born of the spirit.

And the Lord said unto me: Marvel not that all mankind, yea, men and women, all nations, kindreds, tongues and people, must be born again; yea, born of God, changed from their carnal and fallen state, to a state of righteousness, being redeemed of God, becoming his sons and daughters;

And thus they become new creatures; and unless they do this, they can in nowise inherit the kingdom of God. (Mosiah 27:24, 25, 26.)

From the time of this experience to the end of their lives Alma and the sons of Mosiah not only refrained from their former evil activities, but never again could they remain passive toward the progress of the truth.

Alma near the close of his life, recounting this experience to his son Helaman, said,

But behold, my limbs did receive their strength again, and I stood upon my feet, and did manifest unto the people that I had been born of God.

Yea, and from that time even until now, I have labored without ceasing, that I might bring souls unto repentance; that I might bring them to taste of the exceeding joy of which I did taste; that they might also be born of God, and be filled with the Holy Ghost. (Alma 36:23-24.)

It was this being born again, as explained by Alma, which made them "brethren in the Lord."

The experience of each individual who is really born again is similar to this experience of Alma and the sons of Mosiah, although it may not be so dramatic. The effect upon each person's life is likewise similar. No person whose soul is illuminated by the burning Spirit of God can in this world of sin and dense darkness remain passive. He is driven by an irresistible urge to fit himself to be an active agent of God in furthering righteousness and in freeing the lives and minds of men from the bondage of sin.

CHANGE WROUGHT ON PETER BY THE HOLY GHOST

Consider for a moment the experience of Peter. On the night of the Master's trial, he denied thrice that he was one of the disciples of Jesus; and after the crucifixion, he with other disciples returned to his fishing. Then came the day of Pentecost, and Peter was born again. He never thereafter denied being a disciple of Jesus. Henceforth, his whole energy was devoted to the building of the kingdom. The change wrought in his heart is apparent when we contrast his words and actions on the night of the trial with his words and actions shortly thereafter when, through his and John's administration, the lame man had been healed and because of the interest aroused thereby, Peter and John were called before the Jewish High Priests "and commanded . . . not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus."

But Peter and John answered and said unto them, Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye.

For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard. (Acts 4:18-20.)

AN EXPRESSION BY PARLEY P. PRATT

Parley P. Pratt gives expression to the feelings of those who in our time have really been born again, in these words:

If I had been set to turn the world over, to dig down a mountain, to go to the ends of the earth, or traverse the deserts of Arabia, it would have been easier than to have undertaken to rest, while the priesthood was upon me. I have received the holy anointing, and I can never rest till the last enemy is conquered, death destroyed, and truth reigns triumphant.

From the teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, it is apparent that every member of the Church should have something of this same spirit, for he said, "Let the Saints remember that great things depend on their individual exertion, and that they are called to be co-workers with us and the Holy Spirit in accomplishing the great work of the last days."

One of the great tasks before us this day is to bring the unconverted within our ranks to a testimony and knowledge of the divinity of the work in which we are engaged. For to every individual, whether in the Church or out of the Church, this testimony must come if they are to become brethren and sisters in the Lord; if they are to be "born of God, changed from their carnal and fallen state to a state of righteousness, being redeemed of God, becoming His sons and daughters."

TRUE CONVERSION COMES THROUGH THE SPIRIT OF THE LORD

To the accomplishment of this conversion are directed all the activities of the Church. The great Welfare Program has within it the possibilities of reaching multitudes of men and women and of leading them to this rebirth. The spirit of the Welfare Program is to bring both the receiver and the giver to the common ground on which the Spirit of God can meet them. For after all a testimony is received and a rebirth is experienced only by the Spirit.

Now the way to obtain this rebirth, after all we can do, is to call upon the Father in the name of Jesus. Soon after burying our baby I once talked to a fellow workman on a construction job who had recently lost his wife. He said to me, in substance, "I would wade through the Great Salt Lake on my knees if I could have the assurance of meeting my wife again." That is not the way to obtain a witness from the Lord. Moroni gave the key when he said of the Book of Mormon,

And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost.

And by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things. (Moroni 10:4, 5.)

Alma's experience also points the way. Listen to him again:

And it came to pass that as I was racked with torment, while I was harrowed up by the memory of my many sins, behold, I remembered also to have heard my father prophesy unto the people concerning the coming of one Jesus Christ, a Son of God, to atone for the sins of the world.

Now, as my mind caught hold upon this thought, I cried within my heart: O Jesus, thou Son of God, have mercy on me, who am in the gall of bitterness, and am encircled about by the everlasting chains of death. (Alma 36:17, 18.)

The course Alma took, that is, to cry unto the Lord in sincere repentance—is the way for all men. And until this course is followed by men and nations, no rebirth will come to men, nor relief to nations.

STEADFASTNESS BRINGS GROWTH AND POWER

Not only must we all have the experience which first makes us brethren and sisters in the Lord, but having obtained this we must continue day by day through the years to maintain, and build upon it, as did Alma and the sons of Mosiah. They did it by studying the scriptures and by prayer and fasting. Of them it is written:

Now these sons of Mosiah were with Alma at the time the angel first appeared unto him; therefore Alma did rejoice exceedingly to see his brethren; and what added more to his joy, they were still his brethren in the Lord; yea, and they had waxed strong in the knowledge of the truth; for they were men of a sound understanding and they had searched the scriptures diligently, that they might know the word of God.

But this is not all; They had given themselves to much prayer, and fasting; therefore they had the spirit of prophecy, and the spirit of revelation, and when they taught, they taught with power and authority of God. (Alma 17:2, 3)

God help all honest men to be born again and come to be of sound understanding and to know the word of God and maintain the spirit thereof by study, fasting, prayer, and work, that we may be blessed with His power and authority, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My dear brethren and sisters, I seek your faith and prayers as I stand here to speak to you, for I desire to say nothing but that which the Spirit of the Lord would lead me to say. I have no set theme.

The theme of this Conference seems to be obedience. I know of nothing that is of greater importance to members of the Church, and if I may be so led I would like to add a few words in regard to this important topic.

THOSE WHO MAY BE BAPTIZED

A few months ago, when I was in one of the mission fields, meeting with a group of missionaries, one of them asked me this question:

Shall we baptize men into this Church when they say they believe that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and they believe that the Lord appeared to him, and that the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is indeed the Church of Christ upon the earth, and yet they have not forsaken all of their sins?

He stated that this question had been discussed among the Elders. Some took one view, some another. Some held that if we accepted a man who so expressed himself, that eventually he would repent of all his sins. I said in answer to him: "I shall read to you what the Lord Himself has said, and we will see if that will not answer your question." I am going to read those words here this afternoon:

And again, by way of commandment to the Church concerning the manner of baptism.—All those who humble themselves before God, and desire to be baptized, and come forth with broken hearts and contrite spirits, and witness before the Church that they have truly repented of all their sins, and are willing to take upon them the name of Jesus Christ, having a determination to serve Him to the end, and truly manifest by their works that they have received of the Spirit of Christ unto the remission of their sins, shall be received by baptism into His Church.

Then I asked if that did not answer the question. The missionaries concluded that it did. But yet this question arose: We keep the man out who has not forsaken all his sins and yet confesses that this is the Church of Christ; but think of the great many who are in the Church, the great number who violate the commandments of the Lord, and yet we do nothing about it.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP WILL NOT ESCAPE JUDGMENT

I answered: "True, unless it is a grievous sin we do not excommunicate people from the Church. We try to teach them their duty. We try to bring them to repentance. We try to make them understand the truth. But after they are in the Church, if they will not do these things and will not hearken to our counsels, you may be assured that they are going to be judged according to their works."

The fact that they are members of the Church will not save them. Every man and every woman will have to answer for the deeds done in the body.

Then again an ancient prophet said:

Wo unto him that has the law given, yea, that has all the commandments of God, like unto us, and that transgresseth them, and that wasteth the days of his probation, for awful is his state.

Now, when people come into this Church they should, by all means, subscribe to the regulations which the Lord Himself has laid down by commandment. But does that mean that after we are in the Church, after we have confessed our sins and have forsaken them, that we can return to them after membership has been secured? That would not be consistent. Woe unto all those who are disobedient after they have made the preparation which is expressed in this commandment which I have read to you—woe unto them. Mark you, the Lord says before a man comes into the Church he must have a desire; he must come with a broken heart and a contrite spirit.

What is a broken heart? One that is humble, one that is touched by the Spirit of the Lord, and which is willing to abide in all the covenants and the obligations which the Gospel entails.

BAPTISM A COVENANT TO CONTINUE FAITHFUL

Further we read that he must forsake all of his sins. Does that mean merely until he gets into the Church, and then he may return to them again? I call your attention to the words of Paul, speaking himself in regard to baptism and membership, and rather rebuking some of the members of the church when he said:

How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?

Every baptized person who has fully repented, who comes into the Church with a broken heart and a contrite spirit, has made a covenant to continue with that broken heart, with that contrite spirit, which means a repentant spirit. He makes a covenant that he will do that.

Then again we read here, in this admonition and commandment, that he is to endure to the end. It is essential that we endure to the end. In the revelation that was given to the Church, this same revelation, at the time the Church was organized, the Lord said this:

And we know that all men must repent and believe on the name of Jesus Christ, and worship the Father in His name, and endure in faith on His name to the end, or they cannot be saved in the kingdom of God.

Now, I believe the Lord meant what He said. I think this is true. Baptism is not merely a door into the kingdom, which entitles us to enter, bringing with us a trail of sins unrepented of. It is not that at all. We must not enter that door until our hearts are humble, our spirits contrite, and we give the assurance that we will serve the Lord in faithfulness and righteousness to the end.

Again:

And we know that justification through the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is just and true;

That is, if we come into this Church with a broken heart and a contrite spirit, with a determination to forsake all our sins and live faithfully to the end, then we are justified, and the sanctification of the blood of Jesus Christ is efficacious, and we receive the blessings.

We know also that sanctification through the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is just and true, to all those who love and serve God with all their mights, minds, and strength.

Again here we are involved: it is our duty, as members of the Church, to serve the Lord our God with all our mights, with all our minds, with all our strength, and as it is stated in another revelation, with all our hearts. That is our duty,—not to serve Him half-heartedly, not to accept a portion of the commandments only, not to receive only those things which appeal to us, and refuse to accept those principles which do not appeal to us. We should be converted in full to the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

"TAKE HEED AND PRAY ALWAYS"

But there is a possibility that man may fall from grace and depart from the living God;

Therefore let the Church take heed and pray always, lest they fall into temptation—

Not only the Church collectively, but you and me; let us take heed.

Never in the history of the world, that is, in the history of the Church, have there been so many temptations, so many pitfalls, so many dangers, to lure away the members of the Church from the path of duty and from righteousness, as we find today. Every day of our lives we come in contact with these temptations, these dangers. We should continue in the spirit of prayer and faith, remembering that there is this possibility that we may turn from the grace of the living God, and fall, unless we continue in that humility, in the exercise of faith and obedience to every principle of truth.

THE WORD OF THE LORD SHOULD BE REVERED

In another of these revelations the Lord says—I think I will read it, instead of attempting to quote it:

And I now give unto you a commandment to beware concerning yourselves, to give diligent heed to the words of eternal life.

For you shall live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God.

For the word of the Lord is truth, and whatsoever is truth is light, and whatsoever is light is Spirit, even the Spirit of Jesus Christ.

And the Spirit giveth light to every man that cometh into the world; and the Spirit enlighteneth every man through the world, that hearkeneth to the voice of the Spirit.

So we are commanded here to give heed concerning ourselves, each of us individually, as to the words of eternal life, how we hold them. We should hold them sacred. It is just as much my obligation, and yours, after baptism, to be humble, to have that contrite spirit, that broken heart, and the desire to forsake all sin, as it was before we came into this Church through the waters of baptism.

MORTALITY, THE FOUNDATION FOR PERFECTION

I often think, and I suppose you do, too, of that great and wonderful discourse—the greatest that was ever preached, so far as we know—which we call the Sermon on the Mount, in which instructions of various kinds were given by our Lord for the benefit of the members of the Church of all ages, by which, if we will only hearken to those teachings, we may come back again into the presence of God, the Father, and His Son Jesus Christ.

I often think of that which is really a summation:

Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.

I have heard many discourses upon that with which I could not agree, not fully, because I believe the Lord meant just what He said, that we should be perfect, as our Father in heaven is perfect. That will not come all at once, but line upon line and precept upon precept, example upon example, and even then not as long as we live in this mortal life, for we will have to go even beyond the grave before we reach that perfection and shall be like God.

But here we lay the foundation. Here is where we are taught these simple truths of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, in this probationary state, to prepare us for that perfection. It is my duty, it is yours, to be better today than I was yesterday, and for you to be better today than you were yesterday, and better tomorrow than you were today. Why? Because we are on that road, if we are keeping the commandments of the Lord, we are on that road to perfection, and that can only come through obedience and the desire in our hearts to overcome the world. That is all.

WEAKNESSES CONQUERED THROUGH CONCENTRATED EFFORT

There should be no sin in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. No man should attempt to excuse himself because he has this failing or that. If we have a failing, if we have a weakness, there is where we should concentrate, with a desire to overcome, until we master and conquer. If a man feels that it is hard for him to pay his tithing, then that is the thing he should do, until he learns to pay his tithing. If it is the Word of Wisdom, that is what he should do, until he learns to love that commandment.

May the Lord bless and guide the members of the Church, and protect us from evil. We know that the world is full of evil. It is a wicked world. The Lord has said that. We have come out of it. We don't belong to it, although we are in it. If we are keeping the commandments of the Lord we have no right and we should have no desire to partake of those things which belong to the world, which are contrary to the kingdom of God.

May the Lord bless us, and guide us in righteousness, I pray in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

The Choir sang "How Lovely Are The Messengers"—Mendelssohn. Elder James Brown, Jr., President of the Woodruff Stake, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until Sunday, October 5, at 10 a. m.

THIRD DAY

MORNING MEETING

Conference reconvened Sunday morning, October 5, at 10 o'clock.

Every seat and available space in the great Tabernacle auditorium and galleries was occupied far in advance of the time to commence this session of the Conference. In addition, the large Assembly Hall immediately south of the Tabernacle was crowded with people, amplifying equipment having been installed so that those who could not be accommodated in the Tabernacle could listen to the proceedings as they were broadcast by radio.

President David O. McKay, Second Counselor in the First Presidency, conducted the meeting.

The music for this session was furnished by the Tabernacle Choir, J. Spencer Cornwall conducting. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. MCKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

Due to the inclemency of the weather President Grant has considered it advisable not to come down to the session this morning, but in all probability he will be with us this afternoon.

There are on the stand the Counselors in the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles of the Church, the Assistants to the Twelve, six of the First Council of the Seventy, and all of the Presiding Bishopric.

The Tabernacle is crowded to capacity, people standing in the aisles, the galleries, and the doorways, and we are informed that the Assembly Hall is also filled with an overflow meeting.

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "For the Strength of the Hills"—Evan Stephens.

Elder Hervin Bunderson, President of the Box Elder Stake, offered the opening prayer.

ELDER GEORGE ALBERT SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I am very happy to be here today. A few weeks ago as I lay on a hospital bed, not knowing just when I would get out, I was looking forward to the opportunity I might have of meeting with you brethren and sisters again. I would like to take this occasion to thank those who sent flowers and messages of encouragement to me. I have no other way of reaching many of you, but with all my heart I thank you for your kindness.

ENCOURAGEMENT FOR WOMEN TO JOIN THE RELIEF SOCIETY

This Conference is usually preceded by the Conference of our National Woman's Relief Society, an organization of which I am proud and for which I am grateful. They set us a fine example in attendance and program. I wonder at times if some of the women of the Church really appreciate that wonderful organization, the first society for women in all the world that has persisted. I suggest today that you men encourage your wives and daughters to become members. It is the department in the Church that the Lord particularly provided for women. I think it would be fine to surprise the Relief Society by helping to increase their membership to 100,000, yes, and make it 200,000 while we are at it. I am sure it would prove a real blessing for all wives to attend the Relief Society meetings in the Wards and Branches in which they live.

THE AARONIC PRIESTHOOD DEMONSTRATION

The other night I saw here on the platform a group of your boys of the Aaronic Priesthood. I think that was a marvelous demonstration and I wonder if anybody ever heard any finer singing than they treated us to. It was lovely. I feel to commend the Presiding Bishopric for the splendid work that they are doing in supervising the Aaronic Priesthood. Let us all give them a hand in the Wards and Stakes in which we live.

THE GOSPEL OF JESUS CHRIST ABSORBS ALL TRUTH

Last night this house was filled with men who hold the Priesthood. They were standing all around the gallery and seated in the aisles. I might mention other groups that are all intended to develop character. Is it not wonderful to belong to a Church that absorbs everything that is praiseworthy? Every good thing is a part of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. This is His Church. He directed its organization; He gave it His name. Sometimes we carelessly refer to it as our Church but it is not ours. I feel grateful that I have the privilege of having my name enrolled on the records as a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

As we go to and fro in the world other church leaders think that we are trying to take their membership away from them to add to our numbers. That is not what we are trying to do. We are trying to add something to what they already have. They do not have anything that is important for exaltation in the Celestial Kingdom that is not a part of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. All the churches together do not have any more virtues or laws and regulations set up by the Lord than has this one little Church. All that they have that is desirable we have, and in addition, Divine Authority. We are a small organization, but we, if we do our duty, will be the leaven that will leaven the lump.

We have had wonderful weather up to this morning, and now we are reminded of the fact that while we are here in comfort, across the seas, perhaps at this very hour, millions of men are facing one another upon the battlefield destroying each other and in many cities lives are being wiped out by the thousands. Why? Because they have failed to adopt the Christian teachings that were given by our Lord. That is why. There could not be any war if the so-called Christian nations really lived according to the teachings that Jesus of Nazareth gave to them. Surely we ought to be grateful this morning that we have been permitted to receive the Gospel and partake of the blessings that result from honoring it.

I have no doubt that there are some here who were blinded and had difficulty to understand the Gospel, but when the light came how beautiful it must have been. How satisfying to understand that everything that is desirable in all the world may be enjoyed by the members of the Church of Jesus Christ.

OUR MISSIONARIES AND SOLDIERS NEED ENCOURAGEMENT

I am thinking this morning of our representatives in the missionary field, scattered throughout the different sections of this country and in some foreign lands. Pray for them, brethren and sisters. They need the help of the Lord and they need our faith and prayers. Write to them and encourage them, that when they get a letter from home they will know that they are remembered all the time.

Reference has been made to our men who have gone into the army of the United States. They need our encouragement and I hope that those of us who know any of these men will find time occasionally to send them a few lines and inspire in them a determination to live up to the ideals of their forebears and of the Church that they represent, because these men who have gone out from Zion do represent the Church.

THE TABERNACLE CHOIR RECEIVES PRAISE

This morning we have enjoyed this marvelous Tabernacle Choir. Do you realize what it is doing? I wonder if you know how many people appreciate the members of the Choir. These singers interest them in the Gospel of Jesus Christ in a way that none of the rest of us can because they have the facility of the great organ and the combination of their tuneful voices inspired with a desire to bless mankind.

Some time ago I received a request from a fine Catholic man in Northern California who was injured in the World War. He said, "I wish you would have the Tabernacle Choir sing something for me on a certain Sunday." He explained that he had to go on the operating table the next day to have his leg taken off and wanted to have the Tabernacle Choir sing for him. He mentioned the song he desired to have sung. I telephoned to the Choir leader and asked if it were possible. He said, "No, the program is already prepared, but say to that good man that if he will listen in we will sing something that will be pleasing to him."

I wrote him that they were going to sing and that it would be something he would enjoy. He asked the hospital attendant if he could have the privilege of bringing a radio into his room, but was told that radios were not allowed in that hospital. He was greatly disappointed. Then he sent for the Superintendent and finally convinced him that he was entitled to a radio. He told him he was going to lose his leg, that he was an ex-soldier in a government hospital and that the radio would not bother anybody else. And so he gained permission to have the radio in his room. Then he sent for his folks who lived sixty or seventy miles north. They came down and sat around his bed and enjoyed the music. When this great choir was singing he listened with genuine satisfaction, the result of which was that the next morning when the doctor examined him, he said: "There is no necessity of taking you into the operating room, man, your leg is getting all right. We will not take it off."

In a few days my friend wrote to me and said: "I wonder if other people would think what I think," inferring that he had been healed by hearing the hymns of praise that the Lord loves to hear.

I want to say to this Tabernacle Choir that is only one of the many blessings that we could trace to them if we had time, for others have come to my attention.

OBEDIENCE TO THE COMMANDMENTS BRINGS BLESSINGS

How blessed we are in this Church! We have these lovely flowers on the stand and can enjoy the comfort of this building while it is snowing outside. Here we are fed the bread of life and are promised every blessing we can desire if we will be faithful, but we will only receive these blessings and enjoy them if we keep the commandments of our Heavenly Father. He has told us in great plainness that the world will be in distress, that there will be warfare from one end of the world to the other, that the wicked shall slay the wicked and that peace shall be taken from the earth. And He has said, too, that the only place where there will be safety will be in Zion. Will we make this Zion? Will we keep it to be Zion, because Zion means the pure in heart?

When I look into the faces of you good people here, when I mingle with you in your homes, in the Wards and Stakes of the Church, I wonder if we really appreciate the opportunities that are ours to set an example to the world, that they too may desire to know what the Lord has given to us. Then, as I see some of the brethren and sisters a little careless in their attitude towards their blessings I wonder if they realize that these blessings may be lost.

The Gospel of Jesus Christ can only be a benefit and blessing to us if we keep the commandments of the Lord. We cannot live like the world and hope to have the favor of our Heavenly Father. We must live as the Lord indicates that we should live. It is true that He has said that if we will keep His commandments, if we will be worthy of His blessings He will exalt us; and when the final test comes when Satan and his cohorts will be trying in every way to destroy the world, the Lord says, "I will come down from heaven for the preservation of my people."

Are we going to be worthy of that preservation? Because only those who are worthy will be preserved. And after all He has given to us—and He has bestowed upon us everything that He has given anybody that ever lived in the world that is worthwhile—He has said that unless we keep His commandments we will forfeit our blessings and the calamities that are already abroad in the earth and are spreading day by day will find us.

Brethren and sisters, how grateful we ought to be for such information, to know that God is interested in us and to know He has provided a way for our safety not only here but for our eternal exaltation as well. How grateful we ought to be that we are considered worthy to have our names upon the records of His Church as members in good standing. How embarrassed we will be, when we check on ourselves, if we find that our names are not there and that we are not entitled to the blessings of eternal life in the Celestial Kingdom.

The Lord has told us very plainly that all our blessings are predicated upon obedience to His laws and His laws are so plain. Faith, repentance, baptism, the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost are the first principles. Then He offers other things, including Temple work, salvation for the dead and missionary work in all the world. In our great universities we have marvelous training, but I want to say that without the training of the Gospel of Jesus Christ those who graduate from the great universities of the world will be disappointed that they have not earned a place in the Celestial Kingdom.

A GOOD EXAMPLE IS EXPECTED OF MEMBERS OF THE CHURCH

This is the Lord's Church. This is His world. He has prepared it for us and given us the opportunity to dwell here under the most favorable circumstances of any people that has ever lived upon the earth. Are we grateful for it? Do we manifest by our conduct day by day, in our association with our fellows, that we do appreciate it?

The Lord has said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Are we thinking of that? Do you realize that every soul in the world is precious to Him, and that we have the key that may be turned to open the door of life and salvation to millions of God's children who do not understand? Are we appreciative of it? If we are, then let us put our own homes in order. Husbands and wives should live together in peace and happiness. The man who should be dearest of all in the world to the wife is her husband, and the woman who should be most precious in all the world to the husband is his wife, and not anything but death should separate them.

Let us be examples of righteousness to our children, have our family prayers and ask the blessing upon the food. Let our children see that as husbands and wives we are affectionate with one another. While there is yet time take the opportunity as husbands and wives to bless each other with your love, with your kindness and your helpfulness in every way. Take opportunity while there is yet time to teach your sons and daughters how to live to be happy. The Lord has said that it is our duty to do so and if we fail to teach them the Gospel—faith, repentance, baptism and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost when eight years of age—the sin be upon our heads. Let us not be found sinful in that regard. Let our homes be sanctuaries of peace and hope and love. Wherever we go let us radiate sunshine that will attract others and will make them desire to know what the Gospel of Jesus Christ really is.

As I stand here this morning and realize the blessings that have come to me through the faith and devotion of my forebears, my father, my grandfathers, my greatgrandfathers and their wives, all members of the Church, is it any wonder that I have pride in my ancestors? Oh, how proud we are to trace ourselves back to these great men and women who have lived and kept the commandments of God and have set examples in the world. How pleased we are to say, "These were my forebears." There is another thought that should be in our minds, and that is, when we join them in heaven, if we are permitted to do so, will they be proud of us? They will be proud only if we have kept the commandments of God and if we have been worthy of exaltation in the Celestial Kingdom.

Now brethren, the storm is on—not the snowstorm—but the storm of malice and hatefulness and disagreeable feeling, and bitterness in the hearts of the children of men. Let us not partake of it; no matter what group we may have belonged to in the past, let us come into the sanctuary of the House of the Lord and attune ourselves to the spirit that is always present when He is there. Then when we go out we can resist the temptations that sometimes threaten to destroy us, and in turn destroy our families.

TESTIMONY AND BLESSING

I know that God lives; I know that Jesus is the Christ; I know that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the living God; I know that this Church was organized by Him for the blessing of all mankind who would be worthy to accept it or who would prepare themselves to accept it. We need not hesitate to divide with our non-Mormon neighbor the truths of the Gospel of Jesus Christ if we have qualified to do so. If we will store our minds so that we know what it means and as opportunity offers drop the words of encouragement and help that they need they will bless us forever.

There are people living in this city and elsewhere, not members of the Church, who are probably listening in to this program this morning. They have not yet joined the Church, but they know that there is something comforting and uplifting that comes from this house when we have services here, and I have had some of them say to me, "It is a blessed privilege that we have to sit at home and listen over the radio to the program that you have down there at the Tabernacle."

Now, brethren and sisters, peace be with you. God bless you. Let us each here this morning renew our determination to be worthy of our membership in this Church and determine that as far as it is possible we will do what the Lord would have us do to bless His other children, for inasmuch as we do it unto these, His other children, He has said we are doing it unto Him.

Think what it will mean if, instead of having been selfish trying to save only our own little family, we can count by the dozens and by the hundreds men and women that we have influenced to accept the Gospel of our Lord. Then will we feel blessed indeed and enjoy their love and appreciation forever.

I pray that we may so live that He who knoweth all things will welcome us and say: "Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

That this glorious greeting may be for us and all that we may be able to influence in the world, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

TABERNACLE CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

During the period from 10:30 to 11:00 a. m., Mountain Standard Time, the regular weekly nation-wide broadcast of choral and organ music and brief spoken word was presented as part of the General Conference proceedings. This program was presented by the Tabernacle Choir and Organ, and broadcast through the courtesy and facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System's coast-to-coast network, throughout the United States and Canada, and by short wave transmission to many foreign lands. The broadcast originated with Radio Station KSL, Salt Lake City, and exclusive of routine introductory and closing announcements, was as follows:

Announcer, Richard L. Evans: With the passing of another week of life we pause, according to the custom of many years, to welcome you again within these hallowed walls, shadowed by the everlasting hills of the West. This is the 638th nationwide performance of this traditional broadcast from Temple Square, heard each week at this hour through the facilities of the Columbia network and its affiliated stations.

The audience that fills the Tabernacle this morning is gathered here from out of many lands.

* * *

We begin with one of the vigorous hymns of the restoration by William W. Phelps, as arranged by the conductor,—“Now Let Us Rejoice in the Day of Salvation.”

“Now Let us Rejoice,” by Wm. W. Phelps, arranged by Cornwall .....Choir
“Nocturne,” by Grieg .....Organ

Announcer, Richard L. Evans: As this traditional hour from Temple Square continues, we turn to the works of Franz Joseph Haydn, to present from "The Passion" the chorus known as "Lamb of God." It begins with words from St. Luke which are among the most unforgettable of all scripture—"Father forgive them, for they know not what they do." (Luke 23:34)

"Lamb of God," from "The Passion," by Haydn .....Choir

Announcer, Richard L. Evans: There seems to have come to dwell among us the spirit of escape. Perhaps it has always been present, but the tenseness of our times makes it more apparent. We seem to want to escape reality; to postpone the day of settlement; to prefer present pleasure to future happiness; to escape the consequences of our own mistakes. There are some who seek to escape by borrowing rather than face the restrictions of a sound economy. There are some who would rather mortgage the future than curtail their appetites. There are some who would like to escape from truth, because acceptance of it isn't convenient to their way of thinking or living. There are some who count heavily on mercy and the opportunities of the moment, rather than on justice and the certain reckoning of the future. Some have become materially and spiritually insolvent—bankrupt, both in the things of this world and in things of the realm beyond—and rather than facing the facts and paying the price and beginning again on humble but substantial foundations, they prefer continuing on borrowed time, always with the shadow of inevitable consequences hanging over them, but never looking at things quite squarely. No doubt there would be less of the spirit of escape if we could bring ourselves to the realization that there is no such thing as permanent postponement. Retribution cannot forever be outdistanced. The judgments of men may be slow, but they are sure, and yet more certain are the judgments of God. No one was ever able to cheat at anything permanently. No one has ever been able to postpone a time of reckoning forever—even though he may have departed this life before he faced the facts—for it is written in the record of scripture:

Verily the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape; and there is no eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear, neither heart that shall not be penetrated. And the rebellious shall be pierced with much sorrow; for their iniquities shall be spoken upon the housetops, and their secret acts shall be revealed." (D. and C. 1:2,3)

And since there is no way of permanent escape, to all who seek an easy way out it should be said: Face the issues as they come; pay the price, whatever it is; make your peace; put your house in order, and build on sure foundations for that future wherein no mistakes have yet been made.

"High on the Mountain Top" by Ebenezer Beesley.....Organ

Announcer, Richard L. Evans: For the hymn just concluded we are indebted to Ebenezer Beesley—"High on the Mountain Top a Banner is Unfurled," as arranged by the organist.

"To Thee O Lord," by Kalinnokoff .....Choir

Announcer, Richard L. Evans: We close now from Temple Square with a chorus from Mendelssohn's "Elijah," combining a scriptural text from Isaiah and the Psalms—"And then shall your light break forth as the light of morning breaketh—Lord, our Creator, how excellent thy name is in all the nations! Thou fillest heaven with thy glory!"

"And then shall your Light Break Forth," by Mendelssohn
.....Choir

The Tabernacle Choir was conducted by J. Spencer Cornwall. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ.

The Choir and congregation joined in singing the hymn, "O Say, What Is Truth?"—Jaques.

ELDER STEPHEN L RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I am convinced that we cannot afford to be so distracted by the exigencies which these perilous times have put upon us as to forget the fundamental institutions, principles and virtues upon which our national life and civilization are founded. We of the Church are constantly having our attention directed to these fundamentals and they have been and will be made the subject matter for addresses at this Conference. It is upon one of these fundamental institutions of society that I wish to speak today—the home. I am painfully aware of the fact that I can scarcely hope to add a single new thought to this old subject. I am hopeful, however, that I may be able to refresh your own thinking a little about this all-important institution.

THE FAMILY RELATIONSHIP THE FIRST FORM OF GOVERNMENT

To get anything like an adequate idea of the place of the home in our civilization and society, I think it necessary to look back upon its history.

It would not be possible to trace even the outline of its development in the time allotted to me. May I, however, merely call attention to a few well recognized facts concerning it. The government initiated in and growing out of the home was the first known form of human government. The head of the family came to be the chieftain of the tribe or clan and his lineal descendants were accorded the inherited right of sovereignty. The patriarchs were not only prophets, they were law-givers and their peoples were submissive to their will. In this respect earthly governments came to be prototypes of divine government, for the very genius of divine government is fatherhood and a recognition of the family relationship. God, the Creator, is the Father, the Proprietor, and the Ruler; men, the children, bound by the ties of filial obligation, are the subjects of government,—amenable in all respects to the will and dictates of the Father.

Then, too, throughout the history of civilization, blood ties and race have been the strongest cohesive factors in the grouping of society. Many of the greatest nations have been but enlarged families with blood strains of remarkable purity.

THE HOME THE FOUNDATION OF SOCIETY

The home has ever been the center of economic interest. It has undoubtedly produced a greater part of the wealth of the world and it has also spent it.

It is the primary educational institution. Important as schools have been they have never occupied a position more than complementary to the home, which is the nursery not only of all human beings but of all virtue.

Governments which have attained high place in the world's history and affairs have, I think without exception, been those which have given due recognition to the home as a fundamental institution of society. They have enacted laws for its protection and advancement, and crimes against the home and its sanctity have been regarded as among the most heinous offenses.

In this connection I recall the statement of an eminent man who at one time, speaking in the British House of Parliament against the imposition of a tax on the homes of the poor, said, in substance, "My home may be a poor and rude one; the roof may leak; the wind may enter; the rain may enter, but the King of England with all his army cannot enter. My home is my castle, sacred and inviolate to me and my family." Such a conception of home has lain at the very foundation of English and American law and government and that conception is in no small way responsible for the rights and liberties which we now enjoy.

VALUE OF OLD-FASHIONED HOME LIFE

What is its prospect in this dramatic evolution of persons, things and institutions which is now in process? I would not venture a sure prediction but I do agree with Dr. Henry Van Dyke who said that "If old-fashioned American family life vanishes nothing can take its place."

What was an old-fashioned American home, or rather I should say, what is it, because I am thankful to note that there are still some such homes left in the land? You know what it is. You know that it is not just a house, however grand and imposing the house may be and however embellished it may be with costly furniture, rich hangings and floor coverings woven of the toil of far-off Persia. You know that it is not a mansion wherein reside a man and a woman, fretting under the bonds of a marriage contract, a poodle dog and a retinue of servants whose chief function it is to see that the three chief occupants of the house, the man, the wife and the dog, enjoy equality of right and privilege. And you know that such an old-fashioned home is not ordinarily located among the costly residences of the rich. You know that it is usually to be found among the modest and humble, but not among the poor of the land for they are not truly poor who maintain a real home. You know that in an old-fashioned American home you will find a large family of happy boys and girls, for whom father and mother willingly, patiently and lovingly devote lives of toil and service; not for ostentation and pride and the gratification of selfish desires but to fulfill high conceptions of duty and the laws of God. Are such homes happy?

AN IDEAL HOME

I used to live in the heart of a city. My nearest neighbor lived in a real home. He had a yard in which his children might play. They had flowers and gardens, trees and welcome shade from the summer sun. His girls, educated, cultured and refined helped their mother with housework. His boys assisted in keeping up the place outside. They loved their home. It belonged to them all. The feeling of ownership and proprietorship was with them. It begat thrift, economy and industry. Their common interest stimulated mutual confidence and affection that cement and enrich the natural ties of family. They were happy and content and they were splendid citizens.

FAMILY LIFE IN APARTMENTS NOT IDEAL

Most of the other people who resided in my neighborhood lived in large apartment houses. Some few had children. These boys and girls had no yards, no gardens, no flowers, no places to play, no property to care for and no responsibility. They came to my lot and my neighbor's. I did not blame them. They had no place to go. They injured and destroyed the flowers, shrubs, and lawns and other property. I forgave them. They had had nothing of their own of similar kind consequently they had never learned how to care for property.

The girls who lived in these apartments did not do housework. There was not much to be done, and besides they had no time for it because it takes all the time of these girls to take care of themselves. It is a big job. Their first task of the day is to prepare themselves for public presentation. I have not time to describe the perplexities of that operation. Suffice it to say that it requires a very great deal of labor and material to produce the finished product. Then there are the daily movies, the teas, the auto rides, the dances and the cabarets all requiring constant re-arrangement of toilet and appearance and involving an immense expenditure of energy. These girls of the apartments are really hard-working girls. They have my sympathy, but like the boys they do not have real homes, and I fear they are not learning to be real women.

Yet this life of the apartment is the new home life; perhaps here depicted in the extreme. Its advocates say that it is more desirable than the old home life; that it has more conveniences, ease and luxury and less of work and responsibility. They clinch the argument by declaring that it costs less. It does, and it is worth less. The old-fashioned American family life costs more but it is worth more. It costs more in work, self-sacrifice, patience, sleepless nights, heart-aches, and loving service, but the smile of a babe, the kiss of a beautiful daughter, and the handclasp of a manly boy are worth more than all the cost.

REQUIREMENTS FOR THE MAKING OF GOOD HOMES

The cry of the world is for men and women. I know of no place where they can be found except in the homes of the people. The homes which produce real men and women must be presided over and maintained by men of strength and courage, of virtue and of vision, and by women of tenderness, unselfishness, and infinite patience and love—endowments of God for the motherhood of the race. Good living is the first requirement of every parent. God pity the unfortunate parent who comes to the realization, as some day all must surely do, that the sins of the child are chiefly attributable to his or her own bad example or neglect.

Criminologists tell us that most of our delinquencies originate in bad or neglected homes. Economists say that the training of the home is largely responsible for the thrift, industry, and prosperity of the nation. Doctors advise us that the health of the people depends on its care and teachings, and the eugenist assures us that the whole trend of human happiness, intelligence, goodness and endurance depends on it.

Do you know that statisticians have scientifically calculated that the United States will support a population of not to exceed two hundred million people, and that we are very rapidly approaching "this point of saturation"? The character of the nation and its destiny depend almost entirely on the families who shall make up the two hundred million. Will they be families descended from the old stocks of America who set up her great institutions and who have fought for and fostered her liberty, her equity and her justice, or will they be families in the stream of whose blood does not course the great impulses, the indomitable will, and idealism which have been and are the genius of our Democracy? Such questions must give pause and concern to every lover of America.

THE ESTABLISHMENT OF IDEAL HOMES A GREAT MISSION

To the members of our Church the home has an enlarged significance that is subordinate to nothing else in life, for it constitutes not only the source of our greatest happiness here in this life, but also the foundation of our exaltation and glory in the life to come. After all, it is essentially a religious institution. It has its origin in religious ceremony. It is the fulfillment of divine command. Its government is of a religious nature, and the finest of its products are spiritual.

So it is here in the humble and yet exalted institution of the home that I find the greatest opportunity and mission for men and women. I am sorry to say, however, that the record does not in all cases disclose a very creditable response to this big opportunity and obligation. Modern education has not always produced good home makers. Recently published data informs us that the average number of children in the families of the boot-blacks of America is slightly over four, while the average number of children in the families of school teachers is slightly under two. Now it may be that two school teachers exercise more and better influence than four boot-blacks, but how long will it take on the present respective rates of increase for the boot-blacks to crowd out the school teachers? I present this illustration from a popular scientist, not in derogation of people who follow humble vocations, but to emphasize the fact that the world supply of intelligence, goodness and beauty is largely a matter of propagation.

LATTER-DAY SAINT HOMES

There is, in this respect a traditional and rather well advertised distinction which our people enjoy. They have been noted for their large families and had they been better understood they would be famous for their good families. Children have been our best crop and in the good old homes there has been an abundance of them. Eight, ten and a dozen in a family were common numbers.

What families they have been! In days of privation and striving how they have stood together! The sacrifices which they have made, one for another; the love, the service, and nobility which have come from these great homes will probably never be known to many, but those who know of it and speak of the accomplishments of our Church in the first century of its existence, mention first the noble fathers and mothers who in log cabins of the frontier or mansions of luxury have served faithfully as priests and priestesses in the temple of the home.

Our Church calls to its members and to all people to maintain the integrity, the purity and the high purposes of this sacred institution. I trust that no one will ever so yield to the insidious appeals of selfishness, vanity, and the world, as to be swerved from so doing.

CHILDREN THE JOY OF THE HOME

To warn of a great danger I must speak of it more specifically. I do so most reverently. If it shall please the Lord to send to your home a goodly number of children, I hope, I pray, you will not deny them entrance. If you should, it would cause you infinite sorrow and remorse. One has said that he could wish his worst enemy no more hell than this, that in the life to come someone might approach him and say, "I might have come down into the land of America and done good beyond computation, but if I came at all I had to come through your home and you were not man enough or woman enough to receive me. You broke down the frail footway on which I must cross and then you thought you had done a clever thing."

ETERNITY OF THE MARRIAGE COVENANT

I said that for our Church the home had a great religious significance. We believe that the marriage compact is not for life only or "until death doth part" but for all eternity; that when the covenant is entered into in the proper manner and place and sealed by the power of the Holy Priesthood, which is the delegated authority of God to man, it becomes an everlasting union, an eternal institution into which there shall enter all children born in such wedlock, and that the ties of kinship so created are eternal ties recognized in heaven as on earth. Our heaven is little more than a projection of the sacred institutions of our homes into eternity.

The spirits of men, which are the literal children of the Father, are by Him permitted to take on mortality through a home, it being the chief purpose of the administrators of the home to guide the spirits so entrusted to their keeping back to the eternal presence whence they came.

So it is that we strive so diligently to maintain our children in the bond of this eternal covenant and union. We do not fear death because death does not break this bond. We must all go by way of it to find place in the eternal family circle. But we do fear sin that may deprive us of the presence of a loved one when we meet in our future homes.

We deplore divorce. It strikes at the very foundation of the home. The number of divorces among our people is relatively low.

Perhaps this mere glimpse into our philosophy of life and heaven and exaltation will serve to justify our undying interest in the homes of the people.

We rely on these institutions to produce the manhood and the womanhood for the Church and the nation. Respect for law, order and established institutions must come from good family life if it comes at all. Boys and girls who grow up to call father "the old man" and mother "the old woman" are not likely to be easily amenable to the necessary restrictions which society imposes. If they cannot respect and love home and parents, their affection and regard for any worthy cause and institution are doubtful.

RELIGION A SAFEGUARD

So, I do not question the dominant place of home in our civilization, but I am concerned about the kind of homes we shall maintain. I believe the nation would be infinitely more secure if the influence of pure religion could come to every home. I have confidence in family prayer. It would be far better if the Sabbath were observed as a holy day rather than a holiday. The enemies of society are not reverent, God-loving people.

We live in a Christian nation, founded on Christian principles. The only real hope for the world lies in the democracy and altruism of Christ. Christian homes are the answer.

Years ago it was a common thing to see in houses placards or framed mottos, worked in attractive designs and colors, hung over walls and mantels, bearing the inscription: "God bless our home." It is not fashionable to display these mottos now. One never sees them any more. I trust, however, that if they may not hereafter hang on the walls of our houses, they may be deeply inscribed in our hearts. God bless our homes!

ELDER HAROLD B. LEE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

The length of time that has elapsed since the April Conference has only served to impress upon me the sacredness of the position I am now called to occupy. I am therefore dependent upon the Spirit of our Heavenly Father today, and pray for an interest in your faith and prayers.

THE LORD CONCERNED IN THE WELFARE OF HIS CHILDREN

I trust the words that I shall speak to you this morning will be words of wisdom and words guided by the spirit of this great Conference.

During the last five and a half years my mind has been occupied largely in matters that pertain to the safety and welfare of this people. In my study of this subject and my attention to these matters, I have become impressed with the rich outpouring of the Spirit that has dictated counsel, wisdom, and revelation sufficient for our needs. That the Lord is concerned about the welfare of this people there can be no question, as is evidenced by a revelation given early in the history of this Church to the Prophet Joseph in these words:

And it is my purpose to provide for my Saints, for all things are mine.

But it must needs be done in mine own way. (D. & C. 104:15, 16.)

I received some time ago a letter from a friend that suggests the concern of our Father, and the way by which His concern will be manifest. I quote:

For over a century men have been preaching the gospel of salvation but have never lifted their eyes beyond the old sectarian concept of a salvation men have to die to get. When we become conscious of the fact that there is no time limit upon the saving principles and powers of the Gospel but that they may be drawn upon to meet the problems of today and tomorrow, as well as of the Hereafter, we will then become the people who will be the light of the world.

INSPIRED LEADERSHIP THE PRESENT NEED

The dispensation in which you and I live is intended to be a demonstration of the power and effectiveness of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to meet these everyday problems here and now. The Lord declared in 1838:

For thus shall my Church be called in the last days, even The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Verily I say unto you all: Arise and shine forth, that thy light may be a standard for the nations;

And that the gathering together upon the land of Zion, and upon her stakes, may be for a defense, and for a refuge from the storm, and from wrath when it shall be poured out without mixture upon the whole earth. (D. and C. 115:4-6.)

The uncertainty of the leadership of men of the world in this day is evidenced by the fact that we have many changing programs that over night, and day by day seem to fluctuate between poles of the greatest of uncertainty. We hear much about "the abundant life," and "social security," and there are some I fear who are believers in the thought that these goals will come from the working out of the philosophies of men. Enterprising newspaper writers have suggested as you gather to this Conference that you are coming here, perhaps, as you have never done before to hear words of direction and counsel from those who stand as your Church leaders, and well you might come in this day, for the Prophet has declared:

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets. (Amos 3:7.)

Last night as we left the Priesthood meeting you heard the thunder roar, you saw the lowering of clouds, and you said to yourselves: "Well, it looks like we are going to have storms tomorrow." And yesterday morning and the day before as the sun came up on a cloudless sky you said, "Well, it looks like we will have fair weather." And you who have thus been able to read most accurately the signs of the weather might well listen to what the Master said to those in His day as He used these expressions as a parable:

O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times? (Matthew 16:3.)

THE LORD'S PLAN

My purpose in the few minutes that I stand here will be to give you something of what the Lord has said pertaining to this day, and what might be the expectation of the Latter-day Saints concerning the way by which the Lord would guide us to safe shores. Not only has the Lord given us the plan to follow, but He has given us in the revelations one of the basic, if not the most basic reason for the ills that beset mankind. This is what the Lord said, and I suppose as you understand this you will recognize in it the reason for selfishness and for jealousies that develop into bitterness and hatred, and finally into war and bloodshed. Here is the simple statement of the Lord:

But it is not given that one man should possess that which is above another, wherefore the world lieth in sin. (D. and C. 49:20.)

While the world today is groping for a solution, (and I repeat that some of our people, I am afraid, have the mistaken notion that they must look to some development of the philosophies of men in this nation or copied from nations abroad, to solve present problems) the Latter-day Saints should never lose sight of the fact that for over one hundred years the Lord has given us the way, and the plan by which might come the ultimate solution of all the economic problems of this day. Listen to what the Lord said in a revelation:

For Zion must increase in beauty, and in holiness; her borders must be enlarged; her stakes must be strengthened; yea, verily I say unto you, Zion must arise and put on her beautiful garments.

Therefore, I give unto you this commandment, that ye bind yourselves by this covenant, and it shall be done according to the laws of the Lord.

Behold, here is wisdom also in me for your good.

And you are to be equal, or in other words, you are to have equal claims on the properties, for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships, every man according to his wants and his needs, inasmuch as his wants are just—

And all this for the benefit of the Church of the living God, that every man may improve upon his talent, that every man may gain other talents, yea, even an hundred fold, to be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the common property of the whole Church—

Every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God. (D. and C. 82:14-19.)

THE REVELATION PERTAINING TO THE UNITED ORDER

One year prior to the receiving of that revelation the Lord gave the details—the minutest of details—of the organization we have come to call the United Order. He told us how consecrations were to be made and were to be received; He told us how the residue or surpluses were to be handled and distributed; He told us something about the establishment of stewardships and private ownerships, and how those within such an organization should act. This is not the first time that such an organization has been given to this people. We read that shortly after the crucifixion of the Savior the followers of our Lord and Savior established an order where they had all things in common, and two hundred years after the Savior's coming we find a people on this continent of which it was said that they likewise were living in close bonds of fellowship and love, so much so that there was not to be found a happier people anywhere on the face of the earth.

BEGINNING OF THE CHURCH WELFARE PLAN

Five and a half years ago when I, under an assignment from the First Presidency, accompanied Brother Melvin J. Ballard throughout the Church to make the initial announcement of the present movement known as the Church Welfare Plan, he was asked everywhere: "Is this the beginning of the United Order?" And to all such questioners Brother Ballard's answer was the same: "No, it is not the beginning of the United Order, but it may be that in this movement the Lord may be giving His people an examination to see how far they have come toward a condition where they might live as one."

As I have thought about that question, and as I have thought about his answer, I have had difficulty understanding how a people who are not able to sacrifice to a point where they can pay a tenth of their interest annually and abstain from two meals on the first Sunday of the month and pay that as an offering for the care of the needy, I have difficulty in understanding how we can believe that many of our people are more than ten percent ready for the United Order.

Furthermore, I have difficulty understanding that they would be able to live in the United Order were it to be instituted in this day. I also have grave doubts that prosperous times will make possible that happy day spoken of. I fear we must yet see more difficult and trying times than any we have yet passed through before such a day can come.

There are some things of which I am sure, and that is that contrary to the belief and mistaken ideas of some of our people, the United Order will not be a Socialistic or Communistic set-up; it will be something distinctive and yet will be more capitalistic in its nature than either Socialism or Communism, in that private ownership and individual responsibility will be maintained. I am sure also that when it comes it will come from the leaders of this Church whom you sustain as prophets, seers, and revelators, and will not come from some man who does not occupy that position. It will not come as a political program, legislated by men not possessed of that authority. I am also convinced that the time is here when Zion must put on her beautiful garments preparatory for the second coming of the Savior, and I believe firmly that that preparation is in progress. I am likewise persuaded that the Church Welfare Plan is contributing mightily to that preparation.

It is more than just a coincidence that our Presidency, in 1936, from this stand announcing the beginning of this Welfare movement, made this significant statement:

No pains must be spared to wipe out all feeling of diffidence, shame, or embarrassment on the part of those receiving relief. The Ward must be one great family of equals.

THE PURPOSE OF THE PLAN TO HELP THE POOR

I have seen from a humble beginning an organization grow to where now there has been produced throughout the Church great quantities of foodstuffs. I have seen a system of equitable distribution of those foodstuffs grow up under the guidance of our leaders, so much so that the eighty-three storehouses we now have, or that are in course of construction, may each have an equitable supply of all these commodities, and as great a variety as though they were here in the center part of the Church. I remember also that no Bishop today who is faithful in bearing his responsibility may say that he cannot take care of faithful members of his Ward because he has insufficient funds. I know that in these years we have been striving to a great end, and we have been led by the hand of our Father.

We have come, yes, in a day when "The way of the Lord," as He described it, would be applied, when the poor would be exalted, or in other words stimulated to success and pride, and uplifted because the rich have been made low, or in other words, because the rich have been made humble and willing to give of their substance, their time, and their talent, and their wisdom, and their example that the poor might be thus guided and directed. I have seen team work and cooperation grow, and I have seen the Priesthood take its place in blessing this Church temporally and spiritually in a most glorious way.

PREPARATION NECESSARY BEFORE THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST

I am persuaded that the days of trial and tribulation, the time for testing the fidelity of the Latter-day Saints is here as has been foretold. I am also convinced that you and I will not be prepared for the living of the Celestial law in preparation for the Second Coming if we are not able to live the law of tithing, and pay our Fast offerings, and subscribe wholeheartedly to the workings of the Welfare Plan at the present time. In my mind there is grave doubt that any man can abide the day of the Second Coming who is not willing and able to follow the leadership of these men whom the Lord has set to counsel and guide us in this day.

I thank the Lord that we are not dependent alone upon the faith of those who lived centuries ago, or even a hundred years ago, for revelations that were given unto them in that day. In this day He has given us leaders who are possessed of the same spirit of revelation. This is what the Lord said, speaking to those who held Apostleship:

And this is the ensample unto them, that they shall speak as they are moved upon by the Holy Ghost.

And whatsoever they shall speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost shall be scripture, shall be the will of the Lord, shall be the mind of the Lord, shall be the word of the Lord, shall be the voice of the Lord, and the power of God unto salvation. (D. and C. 68:3, 4.)

INSPIRED WORDS OF PAST CHURCH LEADERS

It should not be necessary today for us to expect new written revelation on every point when we have these men thus possessed of that same spirit of revelation. A brief review of the past instruction of our leaders should only serve to warn the disobedient and to encourage the obedient to continue faithful. Today listen to the words of President Wilford Woodruff that he spoke more than forty years ago:

So far as temporal matters are concerned, we have got to go to work and provide for ourselves. The day will come when you will see the necessity for making your own shoes and clothing, raising your own food, and uniting together to carry out the purposes of the Lord. We will be preserved in the mountains of Israel in the day of God's judgment.

I therefore say to you, my brethren and sisters, prepare for that which is to come.

Have you made that preparation? Have you become a self-sustaining people? We were warned to be so by a man whom we sustained as the representative of our Heavenly Father here upon this earth. Today we are suffering from difficulties between capital and labor. Are you aware that our leader of nearly forty years ago told us something that if we would have heeded would have guided us safely past some of the ills of the present time.

Lorenzo Snow spoke these words:

Ye toiling millions who in the sweat of your faces earn your daily bread, the day of your redemption draweth nigh. Cease to waste your wages on that which helps to keep you in want. Regard not the wealth of your enemy and your employer as your oppressor. Seek for the union of capital and labor. Be provident when in prosperity. Do not become a prey to designing men who seek to stir up strife for their own selfish ends. Strive for your rights by all lawful means, and desist from violence and destruction. Dissipation and vice are the chains that bind you to slavery.

Men and women of wealth, use your riches to give employment to the laborer; take the idle from the crowded centers of population, and place them on the untilled areas that await the hand of industry. Unlock your vaults, unloose your purses, and invest in enterprises that will give work to the unemployed and relieve the wretchedness that poisons the moral atmosphere around you. Make others happy and you will be happy yourself.

We have heard much said in this Conference about keeping out of debt and avoiding speculation. From this stand just nine years ago now, from the inspired lips of our late President Anthony W. Ivins he spoke these words; (and they should be something of a condemnation to those who disregarded his words, and should be something of a blessing to those who listened to and kept that counsel.) This is what he said referring to and warning against borrowing and going into debt:

I fear that under existing conditions we are gradually drifting toward a paternal government, a government which will so entrench itself that the people will become powerless to disrupt it, in which the lives and liberties of the people at large may be jeopardized. They are pouring millions of dollars in this time of need into sources for the benefit of the people, and it is a great benefit and perhaps salvation, but it is going to result in this, I am going to make this statement, that if the present policy is continued it will not be long before the government will be in the banking business, it will be in the farming business, it will be in the cattle and sheep business, for many of these debts will never be paid. This will mean the appointment of innumerable agencies. The government now is overloaded with commissions and agencies, some of them administering the very laws that Congress itself has enacted. Someone else should be administering those laws. If you want to save yourselves from the bondage of debt and political influences which are not of your own choosing, I ask you to think of what I have said.

Now, my brethren and sisters, we have men today who have told us repeatedly and also warned against the evil and vice of liquor in our midst. We have been told that we must patronize and foster home industry, to avoid speculation, to make savings in foods and clothing for at least a year. We have had our leaders plead with us to pursue a course that would tend to keep us out of war. I admonish you in all sobriety and seriousness to listen and heed before it is too late.

Oh, may we not be those of whom the Lord complained:

In the day of their peace they esteemed lightly my counsel; but, in the day of their trouble, of necessity they feel after me. (D. and C. 101:8.)

Remember that the Lord said:

For if you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you. (D. and C. 78:7.)

SAFETY IN FOLLOWING COUNSEL OF CHURCH LEADERS

Today you and I are here because we listened to the counsel of President Brigham Young, and turned deaf ears to the pleadings of men like James J. Strang, Sidney Rigdon and others who would have led us from the path of truth and right. I bear you my witness in all humility that if your children and my children, our grandchildren, our great-grandchildren, remain faithful to this Church it will be because you and I remained steadfast in the testimony that these men are the prophets of the living God and that we must follow their counsel if we would be saved in the days of peril. Therefore, "stand ye in holy places and be not moved," that we might abide the day of the coming of the Son of Man and be caught up in the clouds of heaven to meet our Redeemer when He comes on earth to reign, and reign with Him a thousand years with our children and the redeemed of our Father's house, I pray humbly, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER RICHARD L. EVANS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I must confess that as disturbing as it is to stand before this congregation it is not so much so as the experience I have already been through this morning in presenting the nationwide broadcast. I never approach the microphone before a broadcast without fear and trembling, even though I have presented nationwide broadcasts from this pulpit every week, with rare exceptions, for nearly twelve years. I have a great deal of respect for five or ten minutes of time; I know what it is worth on the radio. I know that it is sufficient time for a man to get himself into a great deal of trouble. I know that multiplied by the number of people here, it is a great responsibility, and I know that a message can come forth in that time if the Lord so directs, and to this end I ask your faith and prayers.

A SURVEY RESULTING IN REARRANGEMENT OF THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

I am indebted to Dr. Carlton Culmsee of the Brigham Young University for inviting my attention to a survey recently conducted by a professor of psychology. The survey queried students and teachers in two of the major institutions of learning in America, one in the far west, and one in the middle west. The result announced in the press earlier in the year, was the rearrangement of the order of the Ten Commandments. The presumption of rearranging the order of the Ten Commandments is exceeded only by the manner in which they were rearranged. These many students and teachers were asked to list the Ten Commandments in what they considered to be the order of their importance, and the results indicate facts with which you and I are already familiar.

For example, the Fourth Commandment, referring to observance of the Sabbath day was moved to ninth place. I am sure that we see the evidences of this feeling all about us. I would hesitate to make the mistake that some in ancient Israel made in particularizing too much on what should and should not be done on the Sabbath day, but I am sure that most Latter-day Saints know when they are keeping the Sabbath day and when they are not keeping it, in spite of all the rationalizing that we do. I must confess I am still old-fashioned enough to be shocked to go among the Wards and Stakes and find Ward or Stake officers excused for deer hunting, or pheasant hunting, or for fishing—not fishers of men, by the way. I am not sure that this is not a day on which to catch up with all the odd jobs that have been neglected during the week. I am sure that it is not a day for public celebration or for athletic contests. I am disturbed in my thoughts when buses come into my neighborhood and take our young men and women off for a day of Sabbath skiing. I am sure in my own heart that it is not a day for patronizing places of commercial entertainment, and I am sure, to repeat, that we know in our hearts when we are and when we are not keeping this day of rest and worship and good works.

Another of the significant changes in this survey was the moving of the Third Commandment to tenth place. That has reference to profanity, to the taking of the name of the Lord in vain. The students so queried considered that of least importance. I am inclined to believe that it would have been eliminated entirely, except that there was the place to fill, and they had to include it somewhere. Our brother, Joseph Fielding Smith, has recently written two articles that have appeared in current issues of the Improvement Era on the proper use of the name of Deity, which I commend for your reading and re-reading. I am sure that this revolting practice of prevalent profanity is grievous in the sight of our Father in heaven, and an offense to every sensitive and thoughtful and reverent man or woman.

Another most significant change was this: The First Commandment was relegated to the seventh position, that one that has reference to the Lord God and our relationship to Him. In other words, it means that in the thinking of these university students, and I believe they are a barometer of thinking generally, the Lord has been relegated to a place of secondary importance in the scheme of religion, and religion in their minds has been reduced to a system of ethical standards, and when we reduce religion to a mere code of ethics we have stripped it of its life and power.

The complete order of rearrangement was as follows, with the original scriptural number in parenthesis:

1. Thou shalt not kill. (6)
2. Thou shalt not steal. (8)
3. Thou shalt not commit adultery. (7)
5. Honor thy father and thy mother. (5)
6. Thou shalt not covet. (10)

7. I am the Lord thy God, thou shalt have no other Gods before me. (1)
 8. Thou shalt not make unto me a graven image. (2)
 9. Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. (4)
 10. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord, thy God in vain. (3)

I am sure that the Lord knew what He was doing, that He is enough of a teacher, to state first things first, and I repeat, that the presumption of rearranging the order of the Ten Commandments according to their supposed current social importance is exceeded only by the significance of the order of this rearrangement. The fact is if we were to keep the First Commandment—and love the Lord our God with all our hearts, and have no other Gods before Him—all the others would follow in due course without any difficulty whatever.

TRUTH NEEDS NO EMBELLISHMENT

I am aware that we live in an age of great exaggeration, of unguarded statement, of propaganda, as has so frequently been spoken of in this conference—that shouting is sometimes thought to be a substitute for truth, that there are those, the type of which you know as well as I, who believe if they shout a thing long enough and loud enough some of it will be believed regardless of its inherent truth or falsity.

It was invited to my attention recently by a student of Scripture, not of our Church, that the Savior of the world seldom indulged in the use of modifiers or intensifiers, or adjectives. He simply stated plain truth without undue embellishment, and I think this is a thought to keep well in mind in this day when everything is represented as being “colossal” “stupendous” or “Gargantuan” or “ultra” or something of the kind—whatever it is the “greatest” of whatever it is. In the face of such statements I remind myself that a truth quietly spoken carries its own weight, and we must go about our business quietly and earnestly with “the warning voice, every man to his neighbor, in mildness and in meekness,” (Doctrine and Covenants, 38:41), proclaiming that which we know to be true, with tactfulness, with plainness, and with unceasing diligence on all occasions.

If you can imagine the Sermon on the Mount littered with extravagant adjectives, you know what I mean. “Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God”—“Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth.” What could add to such conclusive statements? So, without any adjectives, I wish to add my testimony to yours that I know that God lives; that Jesus is the Christ; that Joseph Smith and all of his successors have been the representatives of God our Father on the earth in this dispensation—and that all men may come to that knowledge, and that we who have it may walk in harmony with it, I ask in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

The Choir sang “Thy Word is a Lantern”—Purcell.

Elder Paul C. Child, President of the Pioneer Stake, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2 p. m.

THIRD DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

The concluding session of the Conference convened Sunday, October 5, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Once more the great Tabernacle was crowded to capacity. An overflow meeting was held in the Assembly Hall immediately south of the Tabernacle, and a great many other people assembled on the grounds, where, by means of amplifying equipment that had been installed, they were able to listen to the proceedings of the Conference as broadcast from the Tabernacle.

President Heber J. Grant was present and presided. President David O. McKay, Second Counselor in the First Presidency, conducted the services.

The Tabernacle Choir furnished the music for this session—J. Spencer Cornwall, director. Frank W. Asper was at the organ.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

The time has arrived for the opening of this the last session of this the 112th Semi-Annual Conference of the Church.

An overflow meeting is now being held in the Assembly Hall, two of the brethren are there presiding.

The exercises as rendered here and the sermons given will be given there over the radio.

Those who are standing and desire seats may find them in the Assembly Hall.

There are present on the stand this afternoon President Grant, his Counselors, the Twelve Apostles of the Church, the Assistants to the Twelve, six of the First Council of the Seventy, and all of the Presiding Bishopric.

---

The Choir sang, "Prayer of Thanksgiving."

Elder H. Clay Cummings, President of the Wasatch Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The Choir sang, "Lost in the Night"—Christiansen.

ELDER RUDGER CLAWSON

President of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren and sisters: I have been wonderfully thrilled by the spirit of this Conference. We have had a most excellent time. I feel personally as if I had been fed on the bread of life for three days here while this great congress of the Church has been in session. That is a good thought I take it—congress.

I feel that we have been greatly blessed in the Conference. We have been thrilled by the Tabernacle Choir. The more I have listened to their fine work the better pleased I have been.

THE VALUE OF GOOD LEADERSHIP

This thought has been in my mind while listening to the Choir: What would we do without this addition to our service? And what would we do without the help of the General Authorities of the Church? Leadership is what we need, and we have leadership in this dispensation of the Lord; there is leadership everywhere. It only remains to be sought out, and that too by the influence of the Spirit of God. There has been leadership in every dispensation of the Church, and the finest kind of leadership. Good leadership means effective work; poor leadership means poor work. That is a rule that will always be in force.

ENOCH CALLED TO A GREAT WORK

I take it, brethren and sisters, that the Church is well satisfied with its present leadership, including the addition of the new member of the First Council of the Seventy.

There was leadership in the days of the antediluvians from Adam down to Noah. It is not very much enlarged upon in the Scriptures, but there was good leadership there. The Lord spoke to Enoch and said to him: "Go unto this people and call upon them to repent from their sins, or they will be destroyed." The Spirit of the Lord fell upon Enoch, and he was called upon to do a great work, but he endeavored to get the Lord to excuse him because he was of a stammering tongue. The Lord commanded him to go and he would be prospered, and he did a great work.

I have a few items here in respect to Enoch. It says:

The fear of the Lord was upon all nations, so great was the glory of the Lord, which was upon the people. And the Lord blessed the land, and they were blessed upon the mountains, and upon the high places, and did flourish.

And the Lord called His people Zion, because they were of one heart and one mind, and dwelt in righteousness; and there were no poor among them.

It was an ideal condition. So great was their righteousness that they were finally caught up into heaven.

And Enoch continued his preaching in righteousness unto the people of God. And it came to pass in his days, that he built a city that was called the City of Holiness, even Zion.

And it came to pass that Enoch talked with the Lord; and he said unto the Lord: Surely Zion shall dwell in safety forever. But the Lord said unto Enoch: Zion have I blessed, but the residue of the people have I cursed.

And it came to pass that the Lord showed unto Enoch all the inhabitants of the earth; and he beheld, and lo, Zion, in process of time, was taken up into heaven. And the Lord said unto Enoch: Behold mine abode forever.

You can see by this that Enoch accomplished a great work. At one time the Lord said unto him: "Enoch, walk with me." An invitation from the Lord to His servant to walk with Him. Enoch must have felt very much complimented by this invitation.

THE LORD'S PROMISE TO ENOCH

And there is just a little more I would like to read to you if you are not getting tired. Perhaps it will rest you if I speak rapidly:

And Enoch beheld the Son of Man ascend up unto the Father; and he called unto the Lord, saying: Wilt thou not come again upon the earth? Forasmuch as thou art God, and I know thee, and thou hast sworn unto me, and commanded me that I should ask in the name of thine Only Begotten; thou hast made me, and given unto me a right to thy throne, and not of myself, but through thine own grace; wherefore I ask thee, if thou wilt not come again on the earth.

A very pertinent question.

And the Lord said unto Enoch: As I live, even so will I come in the last days, in the days of wickedness and vengeance, to fulfil the oath which I have made unto you concerning the children of Noah;

And the day shall come that the earth shall rest, but before that day the heavens shall be darkened, and a veil of darkness shall cover the earth; and the heavens shall shake, and also the earth; and great tribulations shall be among the children of men, but my people will I preserve.

* * *

And it came to pass that Enoch saw the day of the coming of the Son of Man, in the last days, to dwell on the earth in righteousness for the space of a thousand years;

But before that day he saw great tribulations among the wicked; he also saw the sea, that it was troubled, and men's hearts failing them, looking forth with fear for the judgments of the Almighty God, which should come upon the wicked.

And the Lord showed Enoch all things, even unto the end of the world; and he saw the day of the righteous, the hour of their redemption; and received a fulness of joy.

These wonderful words are found in the seventh chapter of the Book of Moses in the Pearl of Great Price. It gives us the wonderful truth of the consummation of the promises of the Savior to return to the earth in the latter days, and we can depend upon it because the announcement was made by the Lord Himself that He would return. So we have that assurance, and we have the further assurance of a millennium, a thousand years of peace and righteousness. So we can be sure that these prophecies will be fulfilled. Whenever the Lord speaks it is to our interest to give attention and to receive His words, for we know that His words never fail. If He makes a promise He keeps the promise, but it is not always so with man.

I rejoice in standing before you. I am thankful for my membership in the Church, for the opportunity to give service. From my heart and soul I pray that His peace and blessing may rest upon the members of the Church in every land and clime, in the worthy name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

BISHOP LEGRAND RICHARDSPresiding Bishop of the Church*

My brethren and sisters: My heart has been stirred with deep gratitude for the teaching and testimonies of my brethren during this Conference, and for my membership in this Church and my association with you Latter-day Saints.

THE EARTH BEING PREPARED FOR THE COMING OF CHRIST

It has been made plain to us today, as we have been taught all our lives, that judgment should befall the nations until men's hearts should fail them with fear, and as Brother Sonne pointed out yesterday, quoting the words of Brother Penrose, that the nations of this earth should be broken up like the potter's vessel. Notwithstanding these judgments, I take it there is little any of us can do about it because the Lord is to continue His judgments among the nations until they shall beat their swords into plough-shares and their spears into pruning-hooks, and learn war no more.

Inasmuch as we can do little about this, we should be more concerned with the opposite force that is operating in the earth. We are not unmindful of the message of Mormonism to the world, that He has sent His messenger to prepare the way of His coming, and He shall come quickly to His Temple, and He shall come cleansing and purifying as refiner's fire and fuller's soap. And so the thing that should concern us as Latter-day Saints, if we are in harmony with His great plan of preparation, is to prepare for His coming.

I desire to read a few words from the 50th Psalm, as I think David saw this relating to our day and the great work that should come forth among the children of men:

The mighty God, even the Lord, hath spoken, and called the earth from the rising of the sun unto the going down thereof."

Your missionary boys have been called into the earth from the rising of the sun unto the going down thereof, declaring that the mighty God hath spoken.

Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined.

And how has He shined out of Zion, the perfection of beauty? By sending forth His ambassadors of eternal truth to the nations of the earth to bear witness of the restoration of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence; a fire shall devour before Him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about Him.

He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that He may judge His people.

Gather my Saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.

SACRIFICE REQUIRED OF ALL THE LATTER-DAY SAINTS

Not only were our pioneer fathers and mothers required to sacrifice in order that they might prove themselves worthy to stand among the Saints of God who are to be gathered in these latter days, but we are required to make sacrifices also. We may not be required to forsake our homes and go into new lands; we may not be required to lay our loved ones away by the side of the road; we may not be driven out by friends and ridiculed and reviled, but the Lord nevertheless expects sacrifices at our hands. And I want to say to you that I think the Lord does not let such sacrifices go unrewarded.

FAITH SHOWN BY THE MOTHER OF JESSE KNIGHT

Some of you will have read with interest the book recently published by J. Will Knight on the Knight Family, and I find there an incident that appealed to me as a reward of sacrifice. If you have read it, you will recall that Brother Jesse Knight's mother had been married before she married Jesse's father, and after becoming a widow and burying two children, she gathered with the Saints in Kirtland; and as she arrived there, the brethren were around trying to gather contributions from the scanty means of the Saints in order to be able to liberate the Prophet Joseph. Sister Knight turned her purse upside down and gave them all she had; I think some fifty dollars. The Lord of Israel and the angels in heaven could not overlook a sacrifice of that kind. She later married Jesse's father, and raised a family. Then her husband died and she moved to St. George. When she came to visit Jesse on one occasion, she failed to say anything to him about becoming active in the Church. For many years Jesse had done very little, and finally, when she was about to return, he said:

"Mother, how is it you are not preaching to me as you usually do?"

She answered: "Jesse, I have prayed in the Temple for my children many times, and on one occasion the Lord made known to me that I was not to worry about you any more, that you would one day understand for yourself—and I never intend to argue again with you about religion."

And you know how literally this promise was fulfilled, for soon after Jesse did understand, and he rendered a great service to the Church.

MANIFESTATIONS OF FAITH AMONG THE SAINTS

There is hardly a family among the Saints but what could testify of the sacrifices that have been made for the Gospel in this last dispensation. I remember working with a young man before I went on my first mission. He had been driven from his home, and his young wife had deserted him because as he was passing a street corner one evening in an eastern city, on his way home from work, he stopped at a street meeting and listened to the testimonies of our missionaries, and their explanation of the doctrines of the Church, which he explained pierced his heart like a two-edge sword. He joined the Church and his people cast him out. I was with him when he received a telegram announcing the birth of his child. He did not have the spirit of hardness or retaliation. He said, with feelings of emotion and tears in his eyes: "The only desire I have in my soul is some day to stand on that same street corner and proclaim to the people of my own town the restoration of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ."

We may not have to make such sacrifices as have been made in years gone by, but as I travel through the Church and witness the marvelous manifestations of the faith of the Latter-day Saints, I feel impressed that the Lord truly has gathered His Saints who have made a covenant with Him by sacrifice. In all the Auxiliary organizations of the Church we see how people give of their time and their talents for the building up of the Kingdom. Right here, we witness the sacrifice of the Tabernacle Choir members to carry on their great work. We just presented the Aaronic Priesthood pageant, and in its preparation there were those, such as Sister Evelyn Wood and Brother Lee A. Palmer, who worked through two nights without any sleep; the boys came night after night to practice. We enjoy what is going on but we little realize the sacrifice back of it all. We sat here and listened to a wonderful quartette of our brethren from Southern California, and I am sure they paid their own transportation to come here and sing for us. The sacrifices made for missionary and Temple work are marvelous. There is a spirit of sacrifice in the heart of every true Latter-day Saint who has been touched with the testimony of the Holy Ghost, the power by which this work is moving onward in the world.

PROMISES OF THE LORD TO THOSE WHO SERVE HIM

We often have quoted to us the third chapter of Malachi, which I feel relates to this people in our day and time, when the Lord was to send His messenger and prepare the way for His coming. Then He indicates that from their fathers' days they had departed from Him, and they asked how, and he said: "In payment of your tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse, for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation," meaning the nation of Israel.

Then He promises to pour out the blessings of heaven upon them if they will return unto Him, and we usually stop at about that point. I desire to read the latter part of that chapter, commencing with the 13th verse:

Your words have been stout against me, saith the Lord. Yet ye say, What have we spoken so much against thee?
Ye have said, It is vain to serve God.

Have you ever heard such a conversation in the midst of the Latter-day Saints?

And what profit is it that we have kept His ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the Lord of hosts?

And now we call the proud happy; yea, they that work wickedness are set up; yea, they that tempt God are even delivered.

We often hear people remark that the wicked are blessed even above many of the faithful Saints, and that is what Malachi of old heard.

Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before Him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name.

And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day When I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him.

Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not.

Those of us who have labored in different parts of the Church and have faith in the promises of the prophets have, I am sure, deep down in our souls a desire that when the God of Israel fulfills this promise, when He makes up His book of remembrance, when He writes therein the names of His jewels, we wish to see recorded therein the names of those whom we loved and among whom we have labored.

EVIDENCES OF FAITH SEEN AMONG THE PEOPLE

I think back to the time when I labored as a missionary as a young man in Holland, to the kindness of those Dutch people, and their faithfulness in keeping the commandments of the Lord; I am sure that if it shall ever by my privilege to enter into His presence, where the book of remembrance shall be opened and His jewels shall be remembered, I would not be happy if my Dutch friends were not there. And I feel the same about the Saints among whom I have labored as a Bishop in three different Wards, and as a President of a Stake in California, and the good Southern Saints in the South where I had the privilege to preside.

As I travel through the Stakes of Zion and see the people come from great distances, to listen to the representatives of the General Authorities who are sent unto them, I feel to say, God bless the Latter-day Saints. They truly are evidencing their faith in God and in His great Latter-day work by the sacrifices they are willing to make.

Some years ago I heard President Grant from this pulpit in a Priesthood meeting promise the Latter-day Saints that if they would pay their tithes and their offerings, the Lord would bless them with increased power and leadership in their own families. I was in a Stake of Zion a few weeks ago where a Bishop was released after a service of twenty-three years, and when we called him to speak, he told the great joy he had had in witnessing the blessings of the Lord upon the members of his Ward because of their faithfulness. He told of one brother and sister who had paid their tithing conscientiously and regularly for all those years, and he said they have a posterity of some eighty-odd and there is not one but pays his tithing and keeps the Word of Wisdom.

INSTANCES RELATED OF FAITHFUL TITHE-PAYERS

When I was president of the Rotterdam Branch in Holland many years ago, a sister came to me after the meeting one Sunday morning, and said: "Brother Richards, I have only earned a quarter this week. (That is ten cents American money). Should I pay tithing on it?"

I looked at her for a minute, and then said: "Sister, if this were my Church, I would not take your tithing. But it is not my Church, it is the Lord's Church, and tithing is a principle upon which blessings of the Lord are predicated; and sister, if you have only earned twenty-five cents this week, I surely do think you need a blessing, so I would advise you to pay your tithing and be blessed." And I wrote her a receipt for two and a half cents. (We happened to have a coin of that denomination in Holland). She later emigrated to Utah and raised a fine family.

Many of those people lived under very meager circumstances, and could not save anything from week to week. And when we brought them the Gospel, they would say, "You would not expect us to pay tithing, would you?" And I would give them the same answer. I have seen family after family emigrate to this land, own their own homes, drive their own automobiles, educate their children, and send their boys and girls on missions. I want to tell you the spirit of sacrifice has not gone out of this Church.

I stood on the porch of a beautiful home in Idaho a few weeks ago with 160 acres of as fine irrigated land as I ever saw, surrounding that home, and the good brother, a convert to the Church, said to me: "My wife said, 'Father, if the Church asked for it, would you give it to them?'" And he straightened up and said, "I replied: 'Yes, mother, and there would not be a penny against it either.'" Surely the Lord has been gathering His Saints together unto Him, those who have made a covenant with Him by sacrifice.

CLOSING TESTIMONY AND BLESSING

God bless the Latter-day Saints. God bless you, my brethren and sisters. This is His work, and He is busy preparing the way for His coming. It is important that we harmonize our lives with His great program of preparation, and when the voice of the Lord comes unto us that we heed it and that we follow the leadership of those who are sent to guide us in the way of eternal truth. May the Lord bless every man and woman in this Church for their sacrifices for the building up of the Kingdom of God, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER JOSEPH F. MERRILL

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

ACKNOWLEDGING THE HAND OF THE LORD IN TRIALS

Many years ago, my brethren and sisters, I became acquainted with a teaching in the 59th section of the Doctrine and Covenants, that to avoid offending God we must be willing to acknowledge his hand in all things. That teaching came strongly to my mind when we followed the casket of the mother of our seven children to the hillside. It again came to my mind nearly two years later when the body of our oldest son, a fine, upstanding, clean young man was being lowered into the grave. There came over me at that time, as I witnessed that lowering, one of the most satisfying feelings I ever had, and these words: "The boy is absolutely secure."

I felt to thank the Lord that that was the case because I had that same feeling with respect to his mother. And more recently the same thought has come to me. I stood the test before. I want to tell you that with the Lord's help as I have received it in the past, I shall stand it again.

IMPORTANCE OF LIVING OUR RELIGION

When I heard two returned Mission Presidents speak Saturday afternoon, each appealing to the Latter-day Saints to live their religion, I felt that there is no advice that perhaps is more important than that. I felt then as I have felt many years during the past, that we are under an obligation to do that very thing.

When we go into the waters of baptism, when we partake of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and when we stand on our feet and bear testimony to the divinity of this work, we are thereby obligated as strongly as I know how it is possible to obligate a human soul to keep the commandments of the Lord. But it is not easy to do this. The influence of heredity, of environment and of evil power that is in the earth, personified or headed by Satan himself, are all opposed to our keeping the commandments of the Lord. To overcome all of these we must struggle, but may I say that my own belief is that the Lord gives every one of us the strength to keep His commandments if we will worthily and earnestly seek His help that we may do it.

We are faced, my brethren and sisters, those of us who stand here in the pulpit with a very heavy responsibility. You have come from far and wide; you have come to be spiritually fed; you have come up to be strengthened and instructed. Out of all the many timely questions and problems which face us, which shall we talk about? It has been my custom to think of this matter days before the Conference opens and try to get if I can some help in suggestion. I have done that same thing for this occasion, and I have committed to writing some notes that I will read in part, if not in all. The time is very short.

In the time allotted to me today I purpose speaking of a very live issue that is disturbing all liberty-loving Americans, none more than Latter-day Saints, but an issue that many fear to discuss publicly, especially the politicians.

PRACTICAL RELIGION THE NEED OF THE WORLD

It is trite to speak of the world-wide troublous times now existing and of the chaotic conditions that prevail everywhere. These matters furnish themes that are discussed in religious meetings perhaps more frequently than in other ordinary types of assemblies. This is true for the reason, probably, that more and more thoughtful people are coming to believe that a cure for the ills of this troubled world will be found, if it is found at all, in the teachings of Jesus.

In this view the Latter-day Saints are a unit. Their religion is a very practical religion—the one taught by the Master. In the 25th chapter of Matthew we find a beautiful parable, the closing words of which are as follows:

Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee and hungred, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? When saw we thee a stranger and took thee in? or naked and clothed thee? or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee?

And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

THE VALUE OF LIBERTY

A notable application of this doctrine of the Master is found in the Welfare Program of the Church. But the doctrine of service is not limited in its applications to the primary necessities of life—food, shelter and clothing. There are things of greater value than these and things for which men have given their lives all down through the ages. Liberty is one of these, national liberty and personal liberty, the liberty to talk, to work, to worship and to exercise our God-given free agencies, so long as we do not infringe upon similar rights of others.

We live in America, in a nation whose founders declared to all the world that “we hold these truths to be self-evident that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness;—That to secure these rights governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.” You recognize, of course, that these statements are quoted from the Declaration of Independence.

To secure these rights the colonists fought the War of Independence through 8 years of blood, tears and terrible sufferings. To them liberty was more precious than life. For when it was won they would bequeath to their descendants the priceless heritage of freedom.

A few years after winning the war the founders of this Republic published another epoch-making document from which I quote the following:

We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

The Constitution thus spoken of consisted of seven Articles and became the supreme law of the land in 1788. Soon a Bill of Rights in the form of ten Amendments to the Constitution was proposed by Congress in 1789 and became a part of this great document two years later.

The first of these ten amendments is as follows:

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

Thus by action of the people two history-making documents publicized to all the world the fact that in America was founded a nation, the purpose of which was to secure to every citizen the inalienable right to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." Hence our government exists for the individual rather than the individual for the government. To this concept of the purpose of government, totalitarianism is diametrically opposed, for it asserts that the individual exists for the State. Personal liberty is, therefore, non-existent in a totalitarian State.

But between principle and practice there is frequently a wide gulf. It was because of their religion that the Mormons suffered violent persecution, and were finally driven from the boundaries of civilization—from the settled areas of a land that guaranteed religious liberty. And this was in America, the only country in all the world in which, at the time, religious liberty was guaranteed by the fundamental law of the land. But the Mormons might have said as did Jesus of Nazareth "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do." The coming of the Mormons to the arid wilderness of the Rocky Mountains proved to be not only a great blessing for them but for the nation also.

I speak of these things only in passing. They presented problems that were successfully solved by the settlers of these arid regions. We are faced today with many other weighty problems, the solution of which prevailed then. There are many dangers that threaten our inherited liberties, both those of the country and those of the individual citizen. Indeed, as I see it, this country has never faced a darker situation. This is due to many factors, one of which I shall discuss briefly.

THE "CLOSED SHOP" A MENACE TO LIBERTY

The very foundations upon which this country has been builded to become great and mighty are gravely threatened and her basic principles of personal liberty are fast fading away. Time will permit of mentioning only one of these. But it is the most basic of all, the one emphasized in the Declaration of Independence—"The right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." When we deny an able-bodied man "the right to work" we rob him of his independence and destroy his happiness. It is this denial that faces myriads of willing workers in America today, because a new tyranny—one never dreamed of by the founders—has arisen, that of "the closed shop" including the check-off system.

PROFESSOR DOUGLAS JOHNSON'S VIEWS

Discussing this new tyranny Professor Douglas Johnson of Columbia University says—and I summarize a few of his paragraphs—that he was born when every American was a free man—free to work when, where, and how he pleased. Were he born in this age of bureaucratic control of industry and Union tyranny over labor, he would not be employed at the factory unless he joined the Union. He would not be admitted to the Union unless a shortage of labor appeared in prospect. But if admitted he would have to pay from $50 to $200 or more in initiation fees in addition to dues and special assessments. The money for these payments he would never see, for it would be deducted from his pay before he would receive it.

Once on the job he would likely be told to go slow "for we're not going to work our heads off." If a fellow workman should be discharged for negligence and laziness a strike would be called demanding his reinstatement on the spurious plea that he was let out for Union activities—a violation of the law. If a worker refused to strike, believing the discharge was merited and attempted to continue work, he would be in danger of being severely handled and beaten, his car wrecked, his home picketed, etc. No protection for him would come from the sheriff, and the governor of the State would not order out the militia to stop mass picketing for fear of bloodshed.

Prof. Johnson goes on to say (I have omitted many of the details) this is not a mad dream but a calm statement of what has been happening, day after day, some of it here, some there, to countless American citizens—happening to honest family-loving, God-fearing American laboring men.

He asserts that a vast majority of our laboring men are outside of Unions. A vast majority of those inside are decent, honest, law-abiding citizens. Most of those inside and outside of Unions are liberty-loving. But all of them are held under a tyranny utterly un-American both in its origins and in its effects. It is a tyranny which denies to American workers their most fundamental rights, limits their freedom, stifles their initiative, checks their energies and holds them down to the low level of their less competent and less diligent fellows. It is a tyranny which preserves the right to strike (which nobody opposes in normal times) while denying to the many the "right to work." It places moderately paid workers at the mercy of highly paid agitators. Most of all it saps the independence of the worker, dampens his ambition and shuts for him the door of hope of a better future, lock-stepping him with indolent, less-competent and less ambitious associates.

Thus while the American laborer has gained much from the Union movement, which no one would wish to see him lose, he has also lost much which Prof. Johnson indicates but which I shall not consider here.

In the foregoing I have summarized a part of Dr. Johnson's article. He illustrated his statements by a number of specific examples the mention of which I omit. We all know the situation, at least in a general way, and we know it is rapidly becoming worse, and that the "closed shop" system is rapidly spreading. This is a system of force that places plants and institutions employing labor in the hands of selfish, irresponsible labor leaders, agitators and organizers who force owners, managements, laborers, the public and even government officials to do their unrighteous bidding. Thus freedom is crushed and the guarantees of our inspired Constitution are thrown to the winds. Where the "closed shop" comes in freedom goes out, and the inalienable right to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness" vanishes.

Now of one thing I feel sure. The vast majority of the patriotic, liberty-loving people of America want the guarantees of our inspired Constitution maintained. They want this choice land still to be and to remain the "land of the free and the home of the brave."

I have presented briefly and inadequately only one aspect of the gravely threatening situation. I hasten to say that the "closed shop" did not arise from nothing. It is seemingly the natural end result of many contributing factors. Capital and management are far from blameless in their treatment of labor and the public. Iniquitous ambition, unrestrained selfishness, rank injustice, severe oppression and cruel wrong have characterized both sides of the relations of capital and labor. "The pot cannot call the kettle black." But many laws have been passed to control capital and management. None has yet been passed to control labor, strange to say. What then is needed if liberty and right are to be preserved? Action, and still more action. The Lord helps those engaged in a good cause.

THE RIGHTS OF CAPITAL AND LABOR CALL FOR UNITY

Obviously both capital and labor should be controlled in the interest of the public welfare and human freedom, which certainly includes the "right to work." To secure this right why not let every one opposed to the tyranny and evils of the "closed shop" join a right-to-work league which shall secure through suitable legislative action an opening of the gates of opportunity to every one who is able and willing to work, independent of membership in any labor union or other organization. In other words, let us unite without delay to secure the laws and regulations necessary to insure to every worker the "right to work" without which the noble declaration that each of us has the inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness becomes an idle mockery.

But a far better, much quicker, more desirable and vastly simpler plan is, under existing conditions, apparently in the realm of the ideal and therefore it must await the coming of better days. I refer to the Golden Rule plan.

There is a disagreement between employer and employee. In the light of Christ's teachings what is the right thing to do? Obviously these two parties should sit down and talk things over, each strongly motivated to treat the other as he would like to be treated, if all the circumstances were reversed. Let each one try hard to put himself in the other's shoes. To do this each one would have to recognize the other as a brother, and both should keep in mind their obligations to the public. Love and right, not hate and force must be the means employed to determine what is fair, honest, just and humane. Neither will ask for nor expect anything the Golden Rule could not award.

ECONOMIC PEACE THROUGH APPLICATION OF THE GOLDEN RULE

If a full sense of brotherhood, actuated by the real spirit of the Golden Rule, were in the mind and heart of every employer and of every employe in America, and of every one else who has any kind of relations with his fellow men, then industrial, social, and economic peace in America would be born in a day. But alas this ideal condition is not in the offing. Instead we are faced with reality and a condition so pregnant with evil that we can save ourselves only by immediate, unceasing, wise, and powerful efforts. The preservation of our inherited liberties and of our God-given free agencies is worth every thing necessary for us to give in order that we might re-possess and maintain them. Otherwise, will not the America of the future be devoid of the essentials that have made the America we inherited, a land of glorious promise?

Latter-day Saints, is not our beautiful doctrine of eternal progression absolutely opposed to that of the "closed shop"? Force is the weapon used to bring about the "closed shop." But force when used as a weapon is Satan's club and therefore destructive of human rights.

Let us act before it is too late. May love, diligence and divine wisdom characterize all our efforts to preserve our liberties and faithfully serve the Lord I pray in the Master's name. Amen.

ELDER MARVIN O. ASHTON

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

I do not think I ever appreciated the Gospel of Jesus Christ more in my life than I do at this time and have done during the past few days. There is a story told of a great king who built a big castle and stretched the wires from tower to tower. The only time the wires from tower to tower played a tune was when the tempest came up. I believe if there ever is a time when we appreciate the Gospel it is in time of storm, it is in time of tempest. That is when the Gospel plays its best tunes—when the storms rage the worst. May we always hear the music.

GRATITUDE EXPRESSED FOR KINDNESS

I would think myself and ourselves most thoughtless if we did not take this opportunity to thank the people of the Church for their kindness towards us. It is strange that Brother Merrill and I should be called upon, one right after the other. I certainly sympathize with him in the trial he is going through. From Hawaii, Canada, and Mexico, and every point of this Church has come kindness. Whatever has been our lot in the way of grief, if you folks had your way, from President Grant and his splendid Counselors down, you would take up this flood of sympathy to drive this trouble from our hands. We do feel to express thanks to you today.

LITTLE CHANGE IN HUMAN NATURE

I think it is just good sense that I should say very little on this occasion. I have been impressed with one thing particularly in this Conference and it is that we are emphasizing fundamentals. In a sense, I would not like to be considered old-fashioned, but remember there is nothing quite so important, quite so full of gold as real fundamentals. Your Ford has changed its model; your airplane has decidedly changed; steam engines change, but this human anatomy has not changed very much—it is pretty much the same model. I agree that for looks some of our models should be changed, but we are pretty much the same. Once in a while we ought to take a look on the compass and see where the storm is taking us. We must get back on the old track.

The other day a good society lady—I say that respectfully—called in a doctor. The baby had a terrible cold on its lungs. She, of course, expected him to give her some hifiluting brand new 1942 prescription. But he didn't. He said.

"My dear, if I were you, I would put a mustard plaster on that child just as quickly as you possibly can."

"But," she said, "doctor, isn't that old-fashioned?"

The sound answer came. "Yes, madam, and so is your baby."

RESTRAINT NECESSARY IN BUILDING OF CHARACTER

Just one story I want to leave with you folks today. Some good Bishop in Ogden told it to the Lesser Priesthood group a year ago, and I pass it on to you. This is something that President Clark and some of the other brethren continually hammer on—restraint. Some men who go on transgressing think they are the only men who have human appetites—I am using the words of President Clark to me the other day when a pitiful case came before us. He said: "That is the trouble with these men, they think they are the only ones in the world that have appetites." I am telling you that in my judgment, if something does not curb the appetites of America and American people, the Lord knows where we are going.

Here is the story: In Arabia to breed a thoroughbred horse they have him go through some particular definite education. They start him out when he is a few months old or a few weeks old, (we had better stay with months I think to be safe). They teach that colt that when he hears the bell ring he is to run to his master's tent and be ready for service. When the horse is about a year and a half old he is put through the "acid" test. They let him go without water for three or four days. Then he is so thirsty he will actually eat mud. They then put him in a corral next to a running brook. When they are all ready, they turn him loose. He makes a bee-line for the flowing water charging as hard as his fleet feet will take him. Then they ring the bell. If he stops and runs back to his master's tent he is a thoroughbred. If he runs for water he is a cull, and they don't use him for breeding purposes.

That is a good story. It applies to human beings. There is no civilization without restraint, and we do not want to forget it. Since I heard that story I have been reading about horses. I read about Napoleon's horse, Washington's horse, and some of those thoroughbreds that the army has picked out—horses that have gone down in history. There is no horse that has interested me more than the horse whose hide is stuffed this minute in Washington D. C. in one of the museums. Do not forget, with all your blooded horses in America, that really when put to the test, those that amount to something come from the Arabian blood. This horse I am talking about had a wonderful master. The cannon booms! He and his steed are twenty miles away. The rider leaps into the saddle. Thomas Buchanan Read made heroes of these two brave fellows in that famous poem. And So and So "was fifteen miles away"; the next verse ends "ten miles way"; the next verse and "he is five miles away." Then we come up to the battle front. The men are retreating in a riot. Here comes that valiant horse with that valiant man—Phil Sheridan; with his sword pointing toward heaven he thundered out. "Boys we are going back." I saw that play. I saw the horse come on the stage. He was lathered from head to foot, his grand old nostrils steaming out "fire." He was ready for game after going the twenty miles. He was a thoroughbred. The defeat was turned into victory because of that horse that day. Why did he have it in him? Because of a breed that came from Arabia, a breed that learned restraint, a breed that learned to take it on the chin. We have got to be the same. God bless you. Amen.

ELDER ALBERT E. BOWEN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

The question has frequently been mooted whether the ideals embodied in the teachings of Jesus can ever be reduced to practice in this stubborn world. He glorified the peacemaker and the pure in heart and him that hungers after righteousness and He said that the meek shall inherit the earth. In that brief summing up is embodied all the essentials for the perfect society. Stated in the skeptical, calculating language of the day, the question is, will these notions work, or must they forever remain beautifully conceived, fanciful abstractions isolated by an impassable interval from the realm of reality. Certainly the gap is wide between the beauties of association they envision and the ugliness of what actually is.

NEED FOR BETTER CONDITIONS AMONG MANKIND

In this arrogant, self-seeking, strife-ridden age there seems to be no place for the meek except in submission to indignity and in cringing servility. Humility is a virtue known by little else than its name. Hunger after righteousness is displaced by lust for power and greed for gain while the voice of the peacemaker is drowned out by the din of war. But these conditions do not bring mankind satisfaction, hence cannot be the permanent order of a desirable world. Rather they bring violent dissatisfactions. They rest upon force, cruelty, chicanery, and fraud; they result in resentment, contention, turmoil, anxiety, fear and unrest. The very turbulence of the unrest and the dissatisfaction is convincing evidence of men's feeling that they are entitled to a more serene and peaceful way of life than they are now experiencing. There can be no question about the desirability of the ideal. The issue raised is whether mankind can achieve it.

THE TEACHINGS OF JESUS INTENDED FOR ALL MANKIND

We can perhaps approach our question with a better understanding if we remember that Jesus was not primarily concerned with any temporary or localized condition. His outlook compassed the whole race, and its possible destiny; His vision swept over the whole range of time and existence. The practicability of His teachings must be tested from this long-range view. He came to a race proud of its heritage, vivid in its memory of a long independence and cherished greatness, galled by and resentful of its political eclipse as a subject province of the empire, and unyielding in its hope of return to national independence and former glory. To all this Jesus paid no attention at all. He and His followers had no voice in the existing political government. They exercised no influence in shaping its course. Apparently He never sought to influence it or to reform or correct it. Instead of trying to reform the State He was trying to reform men.

Many men in this world have worked out patterns for what they conceived to be the ideal State, but when they had finished they found they had no people fitted to live in such state. Jesus saw with unerring clearness that society can be nothing better than a reflection of the men and women who comprise it. The ideal state can come only when created and peopled by men and women who embody its ideals in their lives. His first business, therefore, was with individuals, to teach them how to live, individually and in relation to their fellowmen. Advancement in that purpose would assure a parallel betterment of the collective body.

The prescription for the kind of living He enjoined involves the control of self within, self-discipline, the supremacy of individual virtues over baser instincts, self-government which raises the individual to a plane where his conduct is above the compulsions of an overhanging law. This is only to say that there is involved the bringing of the finer spiritual qualities of human nature into mastery over its more carnal animal instincts. The fruition comes with a complete spiritual supremacy.

PERFECTION GAINED BY DEGREES

But this does not mean that the way to it is divorced from the daily routine of mortal life. It does not mean that the principles of living laid down by Jesus are inapplicable to the world in which mortal man lives. It signifies rather that in that degree in which men and women spiritualize their lives they may enjoy the kingdom of heaven on earth. Life as it is lived in this earth among men with their divergent interests, their conflicting purposes and their crusading antagonisms is the training ground for the cultivation and the development of the desired virtues. Wherever and in whatever degree any of His teachings are observed, to that extent they bear fruit in betterment of conditions of living, both individual and collective living. Politically viewed they state the conditions basic to a well ordered free government.

The whole perfected pattern, of course, cannot be realized at once. The imperfect will be mixed in with the perfect till the perfect win supremacy. In all human things progress is a process of growth; advancement is by degrees. It is accomplished by teaching and acceptance and conformance.

So in considering the practical workability of the ideals we must keep our attention fixed on end results and must not be confused or disconcerted by passing episodes or the deeds of immaturity which seem so entirely irreconcilable with the possibility of ever in this world bringing the ideal and the real into unison. Look, for instance, upon the state of the peacemaker and the meek. If all men were pure in heart and were disposed to peace and in humility of spirit desired only righteousness, the problem of life would be simple. But a distressing perplexity is introduced when one man wants to be at peace and his immediate associate wants strife, when one man wants to do the right while another desires unjust advantage, when one man in meekness of spirit desires to adjust with his contending neighbor, and that neighbor arrogantly demands unconditional surrender to his own unbending will. The unyielding offender must, until he learns better, be restrained. Compulsions must be invoked. But artificially imposed restraints, outward coercions can never be anything but temporary expedients. They afford no cure for the evil they are designed to repress. So long as wrong is held in suppression by force, the force will still have to be maintained.

THE WAY OF PEACE IS THROUGH RIGHTEOUSNESS

That is all basic in the teachings of Jesus. His ideal of government is self-government. His concern was for purging out of the human heart the ignoble desire supplanting it with worthy purpose. To this end He taught the principle of overcoming evil with good, of supplanting fear with confidence, of substituting love for hatred, of doing to others what we should like them to do to us, of being generous and unselfish and gentle and kind, instead of cruel and selfish and vengeful and insolent. We may withstand the invader of our homes, but so long as he has the will to invade we can know no contentment. A nation may repel the onslaught of a devastating foe but so long as the foe stands ready to strike, the nation may never lay down its arms. To maintain itself as a perpetual armed camp would be intolerable as well as impossible. Security and lasting peace of mind, the inescapable conditions of national peace and prosperity, can come only when the enemy has ceased to want to invade. This comes through teaching the better way, through soul-conversion that threat and force and compulsion bring no enduring rewards. In the end the way of the peace-maker and the meek must prevail.

In that respect the history of the world teaches but one lesson. No world conqueror has ever been able to perpetuate his empire. When the force that created it was no longer adequate to its maintenance, it has crumbled before the onslaught of the subject peoples who have nursed their grievances awaiting the day of retribution. The present attempt at swollen dominion is foredoomed to failure. It has within itself the seeds of its own destruction. It rests upon force and will be broken by force and in the end nothing but suffering will have resulted

From there the world will have to pick up again and begin piecing together its shattered fragments of faith and belief and start building anew on the spiritual principles inherent in the teachings of Christ.

In a vague generalized way men have been sensing the impossibility of preserving a free way of life unless it is kept on a spiritual foundation. Nearly a year before the outbreak of the present war a group of eminent and observant British leaders warned that the nation must make its choice between spiritual restoration and annihilation.

THE NEED FOR SPIRITUALITY FELT

A little more than a year ago now forty men of prominence in religious, scientific and philosophic circles called upon the American people to rouse themselves to the danger that lies in the undermining of religious belief and practice. Recognizing that so long as armed aggression is rampant in the world, peaceably inclined peoples must prepare themselves to repel it, they nevertheless issued the solemn caution that unless a spiritual and moral resuscitation is worked and respect for religious values built up, we shall arm in vain.

These are but illustrations of the cry that is going up from many quarters indicating an uneasiness of feeling that something basic upon which our security rested has been slipping away. But I have not found any of them telling us very clearly what these spiritual elements are, nor how to bring them back into our national life. Our original question recurs: Can the idealisms of Jesus be made to work?

CHRISTIAN IDEALS THE BASIC PRINCIPLES OF GOOD GOVERNMENT

Perhaps the best answer to that question is that despite imperfection discouraging failures and retrogressions they are, to a degree, already working in the world and for nearly two thousand years have been modifying and tempering and shaping the very thought processes of men and reflecting themselves in the best conceived principles of civil governments themselves.

Our own government is the leading example of this undeniable fact. It is the product of Christ's teachings. These have bedded themselves in its very framework. Its central doctrine assumes the Fatherhood of God, and the worth and dignity of man as a child of God. The declaration that all men are created equal and that they are God-endowed with certain rights which are inalienable and inviolable—the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness—derives out of 1800 years of persistent teaching about the reality of God and the immortality of the human soul.

The ideas that form our standards of behavior, by which our conduct is evaluated as being good or bad, by which our laws are shaped which control in our best concepts of good taste and neighborly proprieties come out of our long tradition in the precepts of the Man of Galilee.

When the politician or the orator condemns evils and promises cures and the institution of better ways, even though insincerely and for selfish ends, he rests his case, though perhaps unconsciously, upon the basis of Christian ideals, all of which demonstrates how deeply these have penetrated into the thought habits of our people.

THE TREND TOWARDS RELIGIOUS DISBELIEF

But today it seems fairly apparent that even among the most enlightened nations these ideas have been losing ground as guiding principles. Our own nation has strayed far. At the outset they were accepted as part of a firm religious belief. Christ taught a religion, not merely a code of ethics. It centered—as all religion must—in God, whom Jesus described as the Father whose will He had come to do, and whose Son He was, and whose promises formed the basis of our future hopes. We have been surrendering these convictions. The last century is generally characterized as an irreligious one. The discoveries of science were startling. Men grew in their assumption of self-sufficiency. They thought they would be able to explain everything upon the theory “of pure mechanism with mind, body and soul the result of chemical and physical actions.” Jesus ceased to be the Son of God, the Savior of men and became only one, perhaps the greatest, in a succession of great moralists. His teachings became not the Gospel of salvation of divine origin but a code of ethics, with religion flouted as mere formalism and the church the exponent of an archaic superstition. This is striking faith at its source. With its underpinning gone it has no anchorage. It was His claim to divinity that gave to the teachings of Jesus their authoritative sanction. Robbed of that sanction they had no binding force upon men. As mere ethical precepts they have proved themselves wholly insufficient as the present unhappy state of the world attests.

LOSS OF FAITH IN GOD SETS MANKIND ADRIFT

Robert Gordon Sproul, president of the University of California recently said:

There is a great need for some directive force to rally the recuperative powers of mankind and win the race with catastrophe. Education cannot provide such a force, important as it is, because it is not the minds but the souls of men that must be regenerated if catastrophe is not surely to come. Men must listen to God and obey, but they listen to Hitler and Stalin, and grovel. Our American heritage cannot long endure without a firmly grounded religious faith.”

With God denied there is none to whom man owes reverence. With reverence gone man is adrift. Each one's notions have equal status with every other one's notions, and no one knows what he ought to believe; respect for authority dies out because there is nothing authoritative left; veneration for parental authority breaks down and reverence for law ceases to command allegiance.

All these consequences are clearly revealed in the course of events, even in our own land. We of this generation received this great government of ours from the generations which had gone before sound in its principles. Its Constitution was everywhere held in reverence; Its laws were obeyed. No one doubted its superiority over every other form of government on earth. Every one had unshaken faith in its perpetuity. We pass it on with that faith terribly shaken. Its people are torn by dissension. They do not trust each other. They are not sure that after all our system of government is better than any other. They have grown cynical and doubt if good is to be found anywhere.

INTERNAL THREATS MENACE FREEDOM

Unbelief is the menacing evil of the world. Among professedly Christian peoples relatively few could be found, in all probability, who would not agree that the ideal of living depicted by the Master is highly to be desired. But they do not really believe His message. If Christians actually believed they would trust and if they trusted, envy and jealousy and greed and hatred would be subdued. Saying nothing about a foreign war, leaving that to one side, our internal disorders threaten the perpetuation of the principles on which the nation was founded. This manifests itself in the dividing of people up into classes, kept apart by mutual mistrust, with its consequent train of suspicions, envies, abuses and retaliations which blind them to their undeniable interdependence among themselves, their reciprocity of interests and their identity of goals. We set them off as the rich and the poor; the worker and the employer; the laborer and the capitalist, giving each its opposite as if their welfares were inherently antagonistic.

There is inescapable interdependence among all. Whether men ponder in the night the mysteries of the universe and seek to learn its secrets, whether they dig the metals out of the bowels of the earth, whether they spin them into steel or build that into the sky-scraper or the factory or the cottage, whether they have the white and supple fingers of the violinist or the grimed hands of the mechanic, whether their days are spent in the counting house or sitting beside the bed of the sick and dying, whether they tend to flocks and herds, or till the land, all have had to labor together to build the mighty giant which is America.

POWER IN PERSUASION

How stupid, then, that they should be separated into warring classes in hostile camps! How silly to suppose that one can be permanently bettered by the crippling of the other! How futile to hope that unity of purpose and cooperative endeavor can be legislated into being or compelled by punitive statutes administered with undefensible injustice and stupidity. It is placing a low estimate on the intelligence of all the groups to assume that the great majority of them under just and impartial guidance could not be led into peaceful and mutually beneficial understandings. The few recalcitrants could soon be effectively disciplined. The ways of persuasion and voluntary self-disciplining, of humility of spirit, of appealing to the instincts of righteousness, the ways of peace, are so infinitely more fruitful of enduring results.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE CHURCH

In the spread and perpetuation of the Christian principles that found expression in this cherished government of ours, the Church played the principal role. It has a great stake in freedom. It must be equally zealous to preserve and maintain it. It is its duty whenever that is threatened, either by direct assault or the insidious undermining of the principles on which it rests, to raise its voice in warning and in protest and to throw its whole influence into the scales to preserve that freedom under which men may live and grow toward the ideals taught by the Master.

May God speed the day of this happy consummation, I pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

Several months ago I stood at President Grant's bedside when he lay in the hospital in Los Angeles. When I think how far he has come since that time on the road to recovery, I am deeply grateful at this moment to be able to announce that he is here, and will give us instructions and blessings at the conclusion of this great Conference.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I would like to talk about forty minutes—I see there are only ten.

I am very grateful indeed to my Heavenly Father that instead of not being able to move a finger or an arm or my left leg, and being unable to see straight out of my left eye, that instead of my mouth being all puckered up in a corner, I am looking natural and feeling natural, and I expect that I feel a whole lot better than I really am.

I was requested to speak only twenty minutes at the opening session of this Conference, and I spoke forty; and then last night I spoke forty-seven minutes—so that I have been overdoing what was considered to be wise.

ENDORSEMENT OF PRECEDING SPEAKERS

I have thoroughly enjoyed the Conference. I listened to some of it at home, of course, over the radio. I endorse with all my heart everything said by the second counselor to the Presiding Bishop, and I endorse what Brother Merrill has said here today, and what our last speaker, Brother Bowen, has said. I noticed that Brother Bowen laid down several sheets of paper and did not read what was on them. I hope that when he turns in his manuscript for publication he will put it all in, because I endorse everything that he said and I endorse what he was going to say, without knowing what it was. (Laughter)

DECRIES CONDITIONS IN AMERICA

I am sure we all love America. I am sure there are no more patriotic people on the face of the earth than the Latter-day Saints; in fact, our belief is that the men who established this country were blessed of God, that they were inspired of God, and as we depart from those things we are not doing that which is pleasing to our Heavenly Father. I think that without doubt we are getting just about as far away as we can at the present time—shall I say, politically. I do not care how you put it. We are starting on the broad path that leads to destruction, and had we stayed in the straight and narrow path we would not need to be arranging to be in a war. The Lord points out the way, and if we walk in it all will be well.

Many of the Latter-day Saints have surrendered their independence; they have surrendered their free thought, politically, and we have got to get back to where we are not surrendering the right. We must stay with the right and if we do so God will bless us.

ADVICE TO LATTER-DAY SAINT BOYS IN THE ARMY

I understand there are a lot of our boys here today that are in the army. I hope and pray and plead that every boy will feel in his heart: "I want to know what is right and clean and pure and holy, and I want God to help me." I want every Latter-day Saint soldier to get down on his knees and pray God to help him to lead a clean life, and to preach the Gospel while he is in the army. The army, as a rule, is a demoralizer of the morals of men, to a very great extent. They think: "Oh, well; we are going to be killed anyway—let's have a h—l of a good time." Do not wish for any such good time; there is no good time anywhere for any human being except by doing good and doing right. There is a peace, a joy, and a happiness that come from doing the right that nothing else can compare with. There are no people in all the world that are as happy and as contented as the true Latter-day Saints, and there are no people that are much more miserable than those that finally apostatize. I have met them and I have not forgotten when one man laughed at me because I believed firmly in the Church, and its principles and doctrines. He said that anyone who believed in such things lacked intelligence. This man was an apostate. I was able even as a boy to say to him:

The life of the apostate is a greater testimony to me than anything else of the divinity of the work in which I am engaged, except the teaching of my beloved mother. I have seen good men change and become bad men and then apostatize, but I have never known a good man, a tithepayer, an observer of the Word of Wisdom, to ever apostatize. I have found men lying against the Church after they apostatized.

AN UNFRIENDLY NEWSPAPER

The gentleman said:

Do you mean to call me a liar?

I said:

No, I do not want to call you a liar; that would not be gentlemanly. But what is the difference between lying yourself and hiring somebody else to lie?

None.

I said:

There is a newspaper today, in this town, that was foreordained figuratively before it was born, to lie about the Mormons and it is fulfilling its foreordination. I am working in a bank and I see the list of patriotic apostates and anti-Mormons who put up the money to keep it alive, and your name was among them.

He said:

The paper does not lie.

I said:

My friend, I will make you acknowledge it lies, if you dare to challenge me.

I challenge you.

All right, I said, I went to a meeting in what is called the Liberal Institute. It ought to have been called Headquarters for lying about the Mormons, instead of Liberal Institute. You sat on the stand within ten feet of the speaker, and I sat on the front row within ten feet of the speaker. Now, I will tell you everything that happened in that meeting, which you heard and I heard, now I will tell you what was published, and now I will tell you that every word of it was a lie, and if you say it was not a lie you are a liar.

He said:

The paper lied that time.

I am going to take as long as I want, you know, and if anybody gets tired and wants to go out he or she has my permission. Being an insurance agent I am not easily offended. (Laughter)

The fact remains, my brethren and sisters, that we have had a glorious Conference, and I wish that I could have been here at all of the meetings, but wisdom suggested that I do not come. I think that probably I spoke too much last night, but everything I said I meant, and I do not take back a word that I said.

THE GOOD OF THE PEOPLE UPPERMOST DESIRE

People have come into my office and complained about editorials that were in the Church newspaper, and I have endorsed those editorials with all my heart, and I do not give the snap of my finger for the opinion of those who did not endorse them. I simply feel that they were for the best good of the people. I have no other desire, I have never had, and I never will, other than to try to find out what is for their best good.

I heard that one of the men sitting on this stand today was twitted—it may not be true—that he had surrendered his manhood and voted the way the Presidency of the Church wanted him to vote. He had voted the opposite ticket from what he was expected to vote. I heard that this good brother who sits here said, "The Presidency did not tell me how to vote." I heard that he got down on his knees and prayed to the Lord to help him to know how to vote, and he voted contrary to the way he had originally intended to vote. I wish more people would get down on their knees, and perhaps they would vote differently—that is my belief. He said to this man:

Don't go away with any idea that if the Presidency ever did ask me to vote a certain way that that is not the way I would vote. It is the way I will vote.

REFUSAL TO BECOME FIRST GOVERNOR

Now, brethren, I have said it here, and I will say again, that as a youngster I never wanted anything more than I wanted to be the first Governor of the State of Utah. I received a telegram saying:

Sixty per cent of the convention in Ogden has agreed to vote for you on the first ballot, you are sure to be nominated. We believe it will be unanimous before we get through voting.

I read the telegram to Heber M. Wells, my brother-in-law, who had been nominated for the position on the Republican ticket. He said:

Well, Heber, all that I have I owe to you. You took my note for an interest in your business, and the dividends paid the note; and I sold my interest and got a home to start with. When I was defeated the first time I ever ran for office you went around with a list headed by this statement: We subscribe for stock in the State Bank, Heber J. Grant to be President, and Heber M. Wells, Cashier, and as a result you gave me twice as good a job as I had in the City Hall. If you want to be the Governor I will resign although it will almost damn me with my party, and I will campaign for you.

I thanked him. I said:

I will let you know in an hour—maybe less.

I walked to the office of the President of the Church, Wilford Woodruff, a man nearly ninety years of age, and I handed him the telegram and I said:

President Woodruff, please tell me how to answer it.

Those of you that knew Brother Woodruff know that he was a terror to nearly all shorthand clerks—he talked so fast. And he talked just as fast as I ever heard him when he said to me:

What are you coming to me for? Why don't you answer your own telegrams? Haven't you, an Apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ, sufficient wisdom to answer a telegram without bothering me?

I said:

Thank you, Brother Woodruff; thank you. Had you thought that I could do any good as the Governor of the State—that young man as I am I could do any good for the people, you would have said, Heber, the Lord bless you. I hope you will be elected. I shall send a telegram that it will be a personal favor to me if my name never comes before the convention.

Ah, that is good, that is good, that is good.

And that is the telegram I sent; and today I thank the Lord from the bottom of my heart that I did not become the Governor, because I had never studied along that line; I was not qualified for the job, and I would not have made one-half as good a Governor as Governor Wells did, because he had a patriot, he had a diplomat, he had a great statesman as a father, one of the greatest. I understand that Brigham Young said:

Daniel Wells is my statesman, Heber Kimball is my prophet, and I am a business man looking after the best interests of the people.

Jesse N. Smith, according to Joseph F. Smith one of the best read and the best informed man in the Church, said to me that in his judgment there were two great, wonderful, outstanding men, politically, in the United States, and they were Daniel H. Wells and Abraham Lincoln, and in his judgment Daniel was the greater of the two.

So, I say, Heber was educated along the proper lines for that work, and he was a very good Governor. I had made money, and plenty of it, and Heber had not, and I would not have made as good a Governor and it would have been a mistake for me to have been elected. But I wanted it all right to start with.

I know as I know that I live that this Gospel is true, and I know that what Joseph F. Smith said to me—the last words that he uttered—is true: “The Lord makes no mistake. The Lord bless you, my boy!” The Lord has made no mistake, although I say it myself, because I have given my life, the best of it, to this Church, and shall do so as long as I live.

GOD’S GUIDANCE GIVEN TO THOSE WHO SEEK IT

Now, brethren, get down on your knees and pray to God to guide you in all you do. Do you think that there are a lot of people holding the highest offices in the Government of the United States that are praying for guidance, men who voted for the repeal of the liquor law? Do you mean that the men who drink their cocktails right along—and we are spending billions of dollars for whiskey—and some of them are now in high places—that those are the men whom God is directing? If you do, I do not. I tell you that no greater crime was ever committed than the repealing of the Prohibition law. Billions of dollars squandered, and poverty, and heartaches, and death and damnation to many men, have come because of liquor.

Now, I pray the Lord to bless our boys. I give them my blessing, and I have the right to bless them, and I promise them that if they will be prayerful God will give them joy even in the army, if they will live sweet and clean lives. I do hope and pray that they will be like the Lamanites who were converted and who when they went into war none of them lost their lives. A marvelous story that you will find in the Book of Mormon.

I pray the Lord to sanctify all that has been said here, from the start of this Conference to the close. I thank Him for the ease, the perfect ease, that I had in talking last night for forty-seven minutes. I want to say that I love the Latter-day Saints, and I love the word of God; and I want you to know that I thank God that the Gospel is one of forgiveness.

A STORY REGARDING FORGIVENESS

I shall tell you one incident in my life.

A man was cut off the Church for adultery, and asked to be restored. President John Taylor wrote a letter to the brethren that had taken action against the man, in which he said: "I want every man to vote his own convictions, and not to vote to make it unanimous unless it is unanimous."

When the matter was presented and voted upon, the vote stood half for and half against restoration.

Later he came up again, and a majority were in favor of his being baptized.

Finally, all of the men that were at the trial, except one, voted to let him be baptized. President John Taylor sent for me and told me I was the only man that stood in the way of this man's being baptized, and he said:

How will you feel when you meet the Lord, if this man is permitted to come up and say he repented although his sins were as scarlet, and you refused to let him be baptized?

HEEDS SACRED BOOK

I said:

I will look the Lord squarely in the eye, and I will tell Him that any man that can destroy the virtue of a girl and then lie and claim that she was maligning him and blackmailing him, will never get back into this Church with my vote. You said in your letter to vote our convictions, and I will vote them and stay with them unless you want me to change.

He said:

Stay with your convictions, my boy.

I walked to my home, only one block away. I picked up the Doctrine and Covenants. I was reading it prayerfully and humbly, and marking passages. Instead of its opening at the bookmark, it opened at the passage:

Wherefore, I say unto you, that ye ought to forgive one another; for he that forgiveth not his brother his trespasses standeth condemned before the Lord; for there remaineth in him the greater sin.

I the Lord, will forgive whom I will forgive, but of you it is required to forgive all men.

I shut up the book and rushed back to the President, and I said, "I give my consent."

Brother Taylor had a habit, when something pleased him, of shaking himself and laughing. He shook himself and laughed, and said: "My gracious, Heber, this is remarkable; what has happened?" And I told him. He said: "Heber, when you left here a few minutes ago did you not think: what if he had defiled my wife or daughter? And when you thought that did you not feel as if you would like to just knock the life out of that man?"

I said, "I certainly did."

"How do you feel now?"

"Well, really and truly Brother Taylor, I hope the poor old sinner can be forgiven."

"You feel a whole lot better, don't you?"

I said, "I certainly do."

He added: "I put that clause in that letter for you and my son. You have learned a lesson as a young man. You have learned a good lesson, that this Gospel is one of forgiveness of sin, of awful sin, if there is true repentance, and it brings peace into your heart when you forgive the sinner. It brings peace when you love the man that you hated, provided the man turns to doing right. You have learned a lesson in your youth. Never forget it." And I never have.

A CLOSING BLESSING

But there is one thing that is necessary—and I warn you all—and that is this: "By this ye may know if a man repenteth of his sins—behold, he will confess them and forsake them." If he has not truly repented President Taylor said his being baptized will do him no good.

Now, I pray the Lord to bless the Latter-day Saints. I pray the Lord to bless the people of the world. I pray with all my heart and soul that any man—I do not care who he is or how high his position,—that is doing anything to get us into war, that he may be confounded; and I pray that we will all pray for guidance with all our hearts and souls. I feel as though it might be well for the Latter-day Saints to set aside a day to pray and to fast and to ask the Lord to preserve us as a nation from getting into a war.

God bless you, one and all, and every honest soul—and every wicked soul that repents—I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, our Redeemer. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

Daily the Latter-day Saints pray that the Lord will bless and inspire and preserve the President of the Church. In the future when we thus pray let us also ask Him for power to follow President Grant's righteous life, for I testify to you that he is a righteous man and sets a worthy example to all Israel. Let us ask also that we might have power and ability to do what he has asked us to perform as officers and members of the Church. We will associate with our prayer that God will bless him, these two petitions—first, that we may be righteous as he in our daily lives, in our dealings with our fellowmen; secondly, that we might have increased power to perform our duties in the Church. Then I am sure that the spirit of this great Conference will be carried to our homes and will abide in our hearts and the prayer we offer for President Grant's preservation will be answered in blessings upon our own heads.

I am sure you would have me express at this time appreciation of the inspiring songs given by the Tabernacle Choir, also those rendered by combined choruses of the Relief Society Singing Mothers, and the quartet of High Priests from Pasadena Stake.

I think it highly fitting for us to express appreciation for the silent messages of appreciation and love that have come during this Conference from these beautiful flowers placed here by thoughtful hearts. We want the donors to know that we appreciate these gorgeous bouquets, "nature's jewels," depicting God's goodness and glory.

President Edward J. Wood of the Alberta Temple:

I believe that it would be with the consent of all here if we should stand and offer a silent prayer for thirty seconds to show President Grant our faith.

President David O. McKay:

President Grant suggests that we join with the one who offers the benediction whom we will have express the prayer that you now suggest. We will continue to pray vocally and silently in our homes. A silent prayer, a prayer of the heart, even that of a little child, will be heard of God.

The Tabernacle Choir will sing, "Worthy is the Lamb," from the "Messiah" by Handel, and after the benediction this Conference will stand adjourned for six months.

President Samuel G. Dye of the Ogden Stake will offer the benediction and will express our prayerful wishes for President Grant's health and restoration.

---

The Choir sang, "Worthy is the Lamb"—Handel (the "Messiah"). Elder Samuel G. Dye, President of the Ogden Stake, offered the benediction.

Conference adjourned for six months.

---

The musical exercises at the Friday sessions were furnished by the combined choruses of the Relief Society Singing Mothers of Bonneville, Cottonwood, Emigration, Ensign, Highland, and Wells Stakes; the Pasadena Stake Male Quartet, A. M. Gish, director, furnished numbers for the Saturday morning meeting; and at the Saturday afternoon and Sunday sessions the music was by the Tabernacle Choir, J. Spencer Cornwall, director.

The congregation singing was directed by J. Spencer Cornwall and Richard P. Condie, conductor and assistant conductor, respectively, of the Tabernacle Choir.

Accompaniments on the great organ were played by Alexander Schreiner and Frank W. Asper. Organ accompaniments and solo presentations for the Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast were played by Alexander Schreiner.

Stenographic notes of the Conference were taken by Frank W. Otterstrom and Joseph Anderson.

Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith

The Text Book for the Melchizedek Priesthood Quorums for 1942

Taken from his sermons and writings as they are found in the Documentary History and other publications of the Church and written or published in the days of the Prophet's ministry

Selected and arranged by the Historian, Joseph Fielding Smith, and his Assistants in the Historian's Office of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Many of these discourses and writings appear in the Documentary History of the Church, but others have not been included in these volumes, but are scattered through the early publications of the Church. It has been difficult even for the student to obtain these because the old publications are not accessible for general use.

FIRST DAY

MORNING MEETING

The first session of the Conference was held in the Assembly Hall on Temple Square, and commenced promptly at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, April 4, 1942.

All the brethren of the General Authorities of the Church were present and on the rostrum.

President Heber J. Grant presided. President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., First Counselor in the First Presidency conducted the services.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

President Grant has asked me to conduct the services this morning. I know I join with you in our heartfelt thanks that President Grant is with us again at our Annual Conference.

This is rather a change from the group that we see in the Tabernacle. I do not suppose I ought to say that I hope we make up at least in part in quality what we lack in quantity.

The singing this morning will be conducted by Brother Cornwall, Brother Asper is here at the organ.

The congregation sang the hymn, "High On the Mountain Top," (Hymn Book, page 134).

Elder Lorenzo H. Hatch, President of the Granite Stake, offered the invocation.

The congregation sang the hymn, "O Say, What Is Truth?" (Hymn Book, page 71).

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I SHALL not speak loud. In case you are not hearing me at the end of the room hold up your hands. I should like very much to deliver a long sermon, I can think of enough to talk to you people about for at least two hours, but it would not be wise to do so.

You all know that I have been very sick for more than two years. To start with I could not raise a finger on my left hand, neither could I touch my chin; my left eye was affected, also my left leg, necessitating me to go upstairs one step at a time, and then lift the other leg up with my right hand. I can now throw my left arm any way I want to, and can go up and down stairs without difficulty, I am feeling at least a hundred percent, if not several hundred percent better than I did at the time of my first trouble. The doctors said it was not a paralytic stroke, but it must have been a second cousin at least. When meeting my friends and they ask me as to how I feel, the answer is, "Better than I was yesterday." There has been a steady improvement all the time.

The night before last I slept three hours, then lay awake until morning, when I dropped off to sleep for a couple of hours more. Last night I had a very good night's sleep and slept until five o'clock this morning. I got up and decided to dictate a sermon for this occasion. I dictated two cylinders and then decided not to give you anything I had said, but to come here and trust to the Lord to speak as I was led. I desire more than I have language to tell that what I say may be for your good and that I shall have the benefit of your faith and prayers.

I recall what to me was the most satisfactory sermon of my life. I saw my brother, the late Brigham Frederick Grant, in the audience and knew that he was seeking a testimony of the gospel. I prayed earnestly to the Lord that I might be inspired to say that which would touch his heart. I had prepared a sermon in my own mind. I took a book out of my pocket entitled Ready References and marked a lot of passages that I wished to quote. I followed Brother Milton Bennion who had just made a trip around the world. He quit speaking at eighteen minutes to three o'clock, and I decided to stop at twelve minutes after three, so as to leave time for Brother George Q. Cannon who had come into the meeting late.

I started on time and quit on time, and upon sitting down I heard Brother Cannon say to himself—he was sitting behind me in a chair facing north—"Thank God for the power of that testimony." I had opened my Ready References book and put it on the Bible, and when I got up to speak I told the audience that never before in all my life had I so much desired their faith and prayers in my behalf, as also the inspiration of the Lord. I forgot all about that book and all about everything

I had in mind, and I preached a sermon on the divine mission of the Prophet Joseph Smith and the divinity of the mission of the Savior of the world.

When I heard Brother Cannon make that remark to himself—I could have touched him with my left hand as he sat behind me—I put my arms on my knees and covered my eyes with my hand and made a puddle on the floor, with tears of gratitude that filled my heart. And then, and not until then, did I remember the sermon that I had intended to preach.

THE very next morning my brother came into my office and told me that I had preached by the inspiration of God, that I was inspired. I asked him what my subject was.

He said: "You know what your subject was."

I said: "But I want you to name it."

He did so.

I asked him: "Are you seeking for a testimony of the gospel?"

He said: "Yes."

I said: "Well, what more do you need than to say that I spoke by inspiration—you have never heard me speak like that before—and that the Lord manifested His Spirit to me. You had better get your thinking cap on your head."

Before the week was out I had the pleasure of baptizing him.

Now, my dear brethren, this is a very wonderful gathering of men. There rests upon the General Authorities and you people who are here today the duty of leading the Latter-day Saints, now numbering over 800,000 strong. You have a great responsibility, and each and every one of you should determine, with the help of the Lord, to do the very best that you possibly can, and that you will set an example of intelligence and devotion to the work of the Lord that in all respects shall be worthy of imitation. I hope and pray that the Lord will bless each and every one of you abundantly.

I was intimately acquainted with Brigham Young from the time I was a little child until his death, and I came into the Quorum of the Twelve when I was a young man not quite twenty-six years of age. I was intimate of course with all the men who succeeded Brigham Young as president of the Church, and I want to bear witness to every one of you that all of those men, starting with John Taylor and coming down to President Joseph F. Smith, I know as I know that I live that they were inspired, wonderful men, that they had no ambition of any kind or description but to lead the Latter-day Saints in the paths of righteousness, to set examples worthy of imitation in all respects. They were in very deed men of God.

Perhaps the one man of all others who took the least interest in big business affairs of any kind was Brother Woodruff. He had been a farmer and a raiser of flowers and of fruits, and a man who I doubt ever engaged in any kind of business that amounted to $20,000 a year. But in the providences of the Lord, perhaps he was the greatest converter of men we have ever had in the Church. Through the inspiration of the living God, in opposition to the best judgment of some of the leading men of the Church, he insisted on building a sugar factory and establishing an institution for the benefit of the farmers. Notwithstanding myself and others during the panic of 1891 recommended the contract to build the factory be cancelled which could have been done by the Church forfeiting the $50,000 that it had already paid toward its erection, Brother Woodruff said: "We will build it. The farmers are entitled to that factory to get some of the products of the soil." In the providences of the Lord we did build it and many of us ruined ourselves by borrowing money to build it. We have been vindicated today.

Now on another occasion I personally was vindicated, by accomplishing something that I shall tell you about that to me is a marvel; it is a wonder, and it was through the inspiration of the living God in a promise made to me by President Woodruff that the thing was accomplished.

I went East. Men had subscribed for hundreds of thousands of dollars in our sugar business and many of them had failed to put up the money. Banks were failing all over the United States and money was lending on the New York Stock Exchange at one-half of one percent a day, which would be one hundred eighty-two and one-half percent a year. The bank of which I had been the president for less than a year lost about one-half of all its deposits, and to look at things naturally it would fail. I prayed about the matter and I felt impressed that with the blessings of the Lord I could raise the money necessary to save the bank. Brother Woodruff knew all about it, and he said: "Heber, sit down in this chair." And he gave me a most wonderful blessing. He told me that I should go to New York and other cities in the East, that I should return, and that I should get all the money that I went after, and more if needed.

So I started with an absolute assurance in my heart, having no doubt whatever that I would succeed. I shall now give you a brief account of my experience.

I first stopped at Omaha, and the president of the bank there with whom we did business laughed at the idea of buying from our bank a note of $12,000, signed by Zion's Cooperative Merchantile Institution.

He said, "I will give you some good advice. You go home, call a meeting of all your bankers and discuss the situation, and decide that these are perilous times and that you must lend a little more money than is considered safe and sound, and it will circulate around and come back into your bank and you will be safe."

I said: "Mr. President, I have not come to you for advice, I have come East for money, and if you will not buy one of these notes for $12,000 of Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution I will go farther East and get the money."

He said: "Well, my friend, you are making a mistake."

I went to Chicago. I doubled my ante, as the gambler would say. I asked the president of the bank in Chicago to lend me $24,000 and take two of these notes.

He laughed and said: "Mr. Grant, how old is your bank?"

I said: "Not quite a year yet."

"How long have you been in the banking business?"

"This is the first time I have been connected with a bank of this kind."

He said: "Well, I have been a banker all my life, and my father before me. You go home and call a meeting of your bankers and discuss the matter, and all of you loan a little bit more than is considered safe, because we are having to take care of our customers and are in as bad a fix, if not worse, than you are, and the money will go around and around and get back to your bank and you will be all right."

I said: "I did not need to come here to get your advice, sir; I had the same advice from the president of the Omaha National Bank. I told him I would stop off as I came home and tell him where I got the money."

He laughed and said: "Young man, have you read the morning paper?"

I said, "I have."

He said: "Have you read the financial news?"

"I have."

"What is money lending at in New York?"

I said: "One-half of one percent a day, and the way I learned mental arithmetic that is one hundred and eighty-two and a half percent a year."

"What do you expect to pay for money?"

"Six percent, the regular rate to customers."

"Well, my dear young man, it will be a long time before you come back. You say you will stop and tell me where you got the money. It will be a long while before I see you again."

I thanked him and told him I hoped it would not be so long as he thought.

I had no doubt that I would get the money.

I WENT to New York and I doubled again. I went to the bank that we were doing business with in New York and I asked for $48,000. The man with whom I talked said: "The idea of your coming here the very first time we ever saw you and asking for such a loan in the midst of a panic."

(I would like you to remember that I had never talked with a banker before in Omaha, New York, or Chicago about loans of any kind or any description.)

He said: "The idea of your coming in here almost a stranger and asking for $48,000. Why, we would not think of such a thing as giving you the money."

I said: "Would you kindly give me a sheet of paper?"

Saturday, April 4

"Certainly."

He gave me the paper and I wrote my name on it the size of the whole sheet of paper; and I hit my signature and said: "Do you know that signature?"

"Of course I do."

"Well, I did not come in here as a gold brick man, I came here as your customer from whom you solicited a bank account. I did not come here to be insulted."

He said: "I beg your humble pardon. I had no right to say we did not know you when we knew your signature."

I said: "Well, my friend, I am just a young man from the West. I am just thirty-five, and this is my first experience in borrowing money for our bank. I can give you some pointers as to how we do things in the wild and woolly West. When a man tries to borrow money from us and we are not sure of his security, we ask him for some more security, and we talk it over; and if he finally has sufficient security, we let him have the money."

He said: "Excuse me, sir, but we do not allow any customer to meet with our committee to discuss questions of that kind. We take a written application for the money, then we discuss it and make the loan or turn it down."

I said: "Will you kindly give me another piece of paper? I will make a written application. When is your committee going to meet?"

"In twenty minutes," as I remember it.

The letter I wrote (I wish I had kept a copy) was as near as I can remember, as follows: "I am asking you to purchase four notes of Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution. Being one of the directors of the institution I know it is able to pay these notes as they fall due, and I am giving you these notes with the endorsement of the directors. We bought them without any endorsement. The directors were perfectly willing to put their names on the back of these notes because they know that they will be paid. Now if you do not wish to take the notes of an institution that is as old if not older than your bank, that has never yet failed to meet its obligations, that now offers you its note with the endorsement of a half-million dollar bank, the endorsement of the directors (the endorsement was not on the note originally when we bought it), you take my advice and quit doing business so far away from home."

First Day

When the committee met, I noticed that the president of the bank was quite excited. I could not hear what he said, but he was very animated. I remained until after the meeting and spent my time praying to the Lord to soften their hearts so that they would give me the money.

I afterwards learned that he said: "Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution, with the all-seeing eye in the corner, and 'Holiness to the Lord!' Why, it is good for sore eyes; I haven't seen one of those notes for ten years. When I was the third assistant cashier of this bank my duty was to investigate commercial paper, and I was instructed by the former president, who is dead and gone, never to fail to buy every Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution note that was offered. I bought them time and time again as third assistant cashier, but there were no names on the back of them. The idea of a note which on the back is covered with the signatures of influential men and has the endorsement of a $500,000 bank, not being accepted. If there is any one bank that we ought to take care of it is this identical bank. Take the notes and take them quick."

And I got the money.

I then went to H. B. Claflin and Company, and I asked Mr. John Claflin, the president, to buy five Z. C. M. I. notes of $5000.00 each. He said: "The institution is so solid and so fine that I am happy to buy them from you."

I then went to Kunz Brothers Bank and asked them to buy $25,000 worth of the notes.

They said: "We do not do business with you at all, and you have never had any business with us."

I said: "Yes, but Mr. Hills of the Deseret Bank does business with you and he authorized me to say that these notes are absolutely perfect and will be paid and he knows it, and he hoped that you would let me have this money."

He said: "Well, I will let you have $12,500; that is all I can do, that is more than our share as we are not doing business with you."

I said: "I haven't any notes of odd amounts, just make it $15,000."

He said: "All right, I will take three of them."

I handed him the three notes and got the money.

Then I sent a telegram to the president of the Chicago bank, telling him I was to be there a long long time getting the money, that I had been there forty-eight hours and that I had got $88,000; that I got $15,000 at Kunz Brothers; $25,000 at Claflin and Company and $48,000 at the National Park Bank. "Kindly wire and ask for their confirmation of having made these loans to me at six percent, and when you get the answers I hope you will wire that I can send you the other $12,000 note for which I need the money."

I thought he would answer "No," and that I would change my bank account as I was coming West, but he answered: "Send the note," and I sent it.

I WILL not go into further detail except to mention one more sale. I went into the National Bank of Hartford. The president had been here in Salt Lake with a letter of introduction to me from the president of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company. I had spent the day with him. I had taken him into the Z. C. M. I. store, and I had let him walk all over the store from cellar to garret, and he was delighted with the institution and the way the goods looked. When I told him I wanted him to buy some Z. C. M. I. notes, he said: "Mr. Grant, I will have pleasure in buying a couple of them; I have a meeting of our committee, I will see you in a few minutes."

He spoke to a clerk and told him to buy two five thousand dollar notes, and immediately after he got through with the committee meeting he said: "Come with me," and we went into the First National Bank.

He said: "Mr. Grant is here trying to sell notes of the Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution. I have been all through the store from cellar to garret; they show quick assets of four to one. They are absolutely sound, and I want you to buy two of the notes."

The man said: "Why, we are not buying any notes. Money is half of one percent a day."

"Neither am I, but I am taking care of my friends. This is my friend, Mr. Grant, and I expect you to buy a couple of these notes."

He said: "Oh, give me one; one is enough."

My friend said: "We took two."

The other gentleman said: "If you took two, we will take two."

To cut a long story short, I stayed there not quite a month, and I borrowed $336,000 at six percent. To my personal knowledge George Romney, one of the truest friends I ever had and a man who had been

Saturday, April 4

First Day

on my note for many thousand dollars without sufficient security when I was in distress, thought it was ridiculous, and so did others of my friends, for me to go East and try to borrow money at six percent. They laughed at the idea and, I understand, talked about it in a meeting, the idea of my attempting to do this; but I not only went and got all I went for, but as Brother Woodruff promised that I should, I arranged for more if needed. (I had a perfect assurance that I would get it, and he said, "You can get a little more if you need it.") Just before leaving for the train in New York I received a telegram asking for $48,000 more money. I felt sure that it was not needed. I wrote to Hartford asking for $48,000, and the answer came to me at Chicago that I could have it.

I returned home and found that the extra money was not needed.

This was one of the greatest promises that was ever made, and I was able to fulfil that promise. Not for one moment did I have any fear that I would fail to get the money, because of the promise of that humble, inspired, wonderful man, Wilford Woodruff.

When I returned to Chicago, I stopped to see the president of the bank there, and explained what I had done, and secured the money for the $12,000 note that he had agreed to purchase. When I called on him on my way East, he did not invite me into the office, but stood behind the counter and talked to me and gave me his advice. When I met him on my way back, he invited me in and was very friendly.

When I got to Omaha I called on the president of the Omaha National Bank as I had promised to do, and told him where I got the money. He immediately telephoned to the president of the Union Pacific System telling him to come down to the bank. He said: "I want you to meet a young man who has borrowed $336,000 in New York during the panic and got it at six percent. The Union Pacific Railroad ought to get acquainted with this young man, he is the kind of man the Union Pacific are dealing with."

I am grateful today that I am honored by being a director of that road.

Now, my dear brethren, I could go on talking to you by the hour of things that have come to me that have demonstrated to me beyond the peradventure of doubt the inspiration of the men who have preceded me as the presidents of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. On the day that Brother Joseph F. Smith bade me good-bye, and he died that very night, he told me that the Lord never makes a mistake. He said: "You have a great responsibility resting upon you. The Lord knows whom He wants to preside over His Church and He never makes a mistake." I can testify to you that He has not made a mistake in my case any more than He did with each and all of my predecessors.

I shall take the time to relate one more incident. Never did Brother Taylor direct the course of the apostles without inspiration, neither did Brother Woodruff, nor Brother Snow, nor Brother Joseph F. Smith. God to my knowledge inspired those men and directed them.

Brothers Francis M. Lyman and John Henry Smith were told by President John Taylor to go to some town—I shall not mention where it is—and to have a man sustained as the president of the stake. Undoubtedly there are some of you men who know where it was, I won't give the name—I won't tell that.

Brother Lyman said: "Why, Brother Taylor, I know this brother, and I know that the people will not sustain him."

Brother Taylor said: "You and Brother John Henry Smith are called upon a mission to have him voted for and sustained as president."

Brother Lyman later in the day said: "Suppose these people won't sustain that man, what are we to do?"

Brother Taylor said: "But you are called upon a mission to have him sustained; that is what you are to do."

Brother Lyman brought it up again a third time and Brother Taylor said: "Do you understand English? Don't you know what mission I have placed upon you two men? It is to have him sustained."

Later in the day Brother John Henry thought the president had not thoroughly considered the matter, and he brought it up.

Brother Taylor said: "Didn't you hear what I said to Lyman? You two men are called to go to that place and have the people sustain this man."

Brother Lyman gave me the credit of feeding him more meals and giving him more opportunity to sleep in my house than all the rest of his relatives in Salt Lake City combined. He made my home his home during the two years that I presided in Tooele, and after I became an apostle he made my home his home whenever he came in to Salt Lake from Tooele.

As we came past the president's office after our meeting in the Endowment House, he said: "Heber, President Taylor does not understand the condition; those people have rebelled and they will not sustain this man. He was busy with our regular meeting, and he did not get it into his head that it cannot be done. I will step in here. You tell your wife I will be a little late, but don't delay your dinner until I get there. Go home and eat it, and I will come along later."

I said: "I will wait for you." I thought it wouldn't be long.

He came out in a moment and said: "I wish I had not gone to see the president. Heber, fast and pray for us; I do not see how under heaven we can change this condition. All the bishops and their counselors, the high council, the patriarchs, and the presidency of the high priests quorum have requested that this good brother be dropped and that they have another president. Brother John and I will have to pray all the way from Milford until we get to the place."

WHEN they arrived, Brother Lyman brought all these people together who had signed the petition and said "Now, brethren, we do not want a great number of you men to confess the president's mistakes, but we will step out of the room, and you appoint one man to do the talking. You tell him everything you can think of against the president. If he has forgotten anything, give him a chance to speak again, and then we will come back and hear it all. We have come here to fix up things, and we are going to do just what you people want us to do."

When they got into the other room John Henry said: "For heaven's sake, Lyman, did you lose your head? They want a new president, they have signed their names for a new president."

Brother Lyman said: "Well, it must have been a slip of the tongue. We will have to pray just that much harder."

When the man who had been selected to be their spokesman got through with his talk of nearly an hour, Brother Lyman said: "Has he forgotten anything?"

Saturday, April 4

They said: "No, he has told the truth."

Brother Lyman said: "Well, that is marvelous. We had never dreamed that this man had so many faults and failings. Really, if there is somebody who would like to tell something good about him we would like to hear it."

A man got up and said: "I can say something good about him, about his generosity, his liberality." Then he commenced weeping, and said: "Brother Lyman, will you scratch my name off that list and let me vote for him."

Brother Lyman said: "All right. Does anybody else feel that way?" About one-third of them got up.

He said: "Well, you may go home, it is rather late, and the others of us will discuss this matter further."

He then said to the spokesman: "Get up and tell that story again, because it is news to us; we never dreamed this brother had so many failings."

So the man got up and told it over again.

Another man jumped up and said: "Brother Lyman, please take my name off that list. Let me vote for him."

Brother Lyman said: "All right. Does anybody else feel that way?"

About half of them stood up.

He said: "All right. Your folks are wondering why you are out so late; we will excuse you."

Then he said to this man again: "Now get up and tell us that story again."

The man got up and told the story once more.

Brother Lyman said: "Two men have tried to tell something good about this man and failed, but have asked permission to vote for him tomorrow. Is there anybody else here who feels to sustain him?" And they all stood up.

He said: "All right. Good night, brethren." And he turned to John Henry and said: "John, will you sustain him?"

John laughed and said: "I will."

By this time I think it was after half past twelve or one o'clock in the morning. The next morning Brother Lyman was able to say to the people: "All of the bishops and their counselors, the high council, the patriarch, the presidency of the high priests quorum, every one of them has asked permission to vote for Brother So and So as the president of your stake, and we have agreed to let them do so. If any of you want to vote the other way there will be no condemnation." They got a unanimous vote to sustain that man as president of the stake.

When Brothers Lyman and Smith returned they made their report of what had happened. Brother Taylor, when something pleased him immensely, used to shake his body and laugh; and he said: "Twins, twins, twins, (he nearly always called those two men twins) it wasn't such a hard job after all, was it? Now, this brother is a big-hearted, fine man, but he makes mistakes. He is sick abed now, and he never would have recovered, he would have died a broken-hearted man if he had not been sustained. He will be well in three months and feeling fine. Go down there and put your arm around him and say: 'Now that the people are loving you and have unanimously sustained you, don't you think it would be well to resign?' and he will jump at the chance and you assume the authority to accept his resignation."

And that is how it worked out.

THERE are things that I could go on by the hour telling you regarding advice given by President Taylor. You have all seen in The Improvement Era the account of my nearest and dearest friend's staying in the army—Richard W. Young—under the advice of President Taylor, and how it worked out. It was marvelous.

I want to tell you that starting with Brigham Young and coming down to your humble servant, the Lord has been with us and has directed this Church. May the Lord help us so to live that you will sustain us, and may I never live long enough that when I am in favor of a thing and all the brethren are in favor of it, such as was the case when we were opposed to bringing whisky back, that Utah and the Mormons will be in opposition to us. I would almost have staked my life, knowing that the people know that we did not want to have whisky again, that the people would not have voted to bring it back. If we would pay our tithing to God, and if we and all the people of this nation would stop using tobacco and drinking tea, coffee, and liquor, I do not care if this war cost $110,000,000,000—we could pay it all.

God bless us by His Spirit always, I ask it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

We who work with President Grant know that he is a prophet of God, that God does direct him and give him His inspiration, just as he has testified to us about his predecessors.

PRESIDENT RUDGER CLAWSON

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

BRETHREN, it is a pleasure to be here in this meeting at the General Conference.

We are highly blessed in having with us this morning President Grant, and to see that he is holding up splendidly and that he speaks with power and authority. We rejoice to sit under the sound of his voice, and I am sure it will be a pleasure also to the brethren who are assembled to hear from the counselors in the Presidency, the Twelve, and other Authorities in the order in which they will be called. These men are clothed upon with power—the power of the Priesthood. I take it that every man in this room this morning holds the Priesthood because the Priesthood has been vested with great power and authority and that is shown by the printed word, by the revelations of God unto His Church.

If a man would ascend to exaltation and glory he must have the Priesthood. Without the Priesthood we are helpless. With the Priesthood we can accomplish much.

I take very great pleasure, my brethren, in referring you to the eighty-fourth section of the Doctrine and Covenants, which is a revelation from God and refers to the work in which we are engaged. Of necessity I must speak very briefly. I will read a few words from this revelation, commencing with verse 32:

And the sons of Moses and of Aaron shall be filled with the glory of the Lord, upon Mount Zion in the Lord's house, whose sons are ye; and also many whom I have

Saturday, April 4

First Day

called and sent forth to build up my church.

For whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods of which I have spoken, and the magnifying their calling, are sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies.

They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham, and the church and kingdom, and the elect of God.

And also all they who receive this priesthood receiveth me, saith the Lord;

For he that receiveth my servants receiveth me;

And he that receiveth me receiveth my Father;

And he that receiveth my Father receiveth my Father's kingdom; therefore all that my Father hath shall be given unto him.

And this is according to the oath and covenant which belongeth to the priesthood.

Therefore, all those who receive the priesthood, receive this oath and covenant of my Father, which he cannot break, neither can it be moved.

But whoso breaketh this covenant after he hath received it, and altogether turneth therefrom, shall not have forgiveness of sins in this world nor in the world to come.

And wo unto all those who come not unto this priesthood which ye have received, which I now confirm upon you who are present this day, by mine own voice out of the heavens; and even I have given the heavenly hosts and mine angels charge concerning you.

And I now give unto you a commandment to beware concerning yourselves, to give diligent heed to the words of eternal life.

For you shall live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God. (D. & C. 84:32-44)

There is much more, but you can see from that which you have heard that the Priesthood truly has great power, and unless we make up our minds to magnify the Priesthood, it would have been better that we had never had it. It is like a two-edged sword that cuts both ways, cuts to the right and cuts to the left. It also condemns those who receive the Priesthood but fail to magnify it. It is made very plain here and that is one of the characteristics of the revelations of God; they are adapted to our understanding by simple language, without scientific phrasing. So that the young, even the young men of the Aaronic Priesthood can comprehend much of the foregoing revelation because of the simplicity of the language in which it was given.

I wish to bear to you, my brethren and sisters, my testimony. I know that this is the Church of Jesus Christ our Lord and that He is in communication with the Church. The spirit of revelation is with us, and that is why we should seek the word that is given.

I know that Joseph Smith was a true prophet of God, a mighty messenger of truth, and a great builder of faith, and that his successors have worked under the influence of the Holy Spirit continually to strengthen the Church. I can assure you, brethren, that this people will carry on the kingdom of God by their faithfulness and devotion to the work. I am happy to be in the harness. I feel that I am in absolute harmony with the First Presidency, my file leaders, and with my brethren of the Twelve with whom I am intimately associated. I testify to you that it is the truth that the Presidency and the Twelve and the Assistants to the Twelve, the First Council of Seventy, the Presiding Bishopric, the Acting Patriarch, and many others are following along the path of rectitude and faithfulness, and in the end, brethren, the Lord will triumph, His Church will flourish and His faithful people, the members of the Church, will be saved and exalted in His presence.

Now I feel to ask the Lord to bless us and to guide us continually, that we may not be overcome by temptation and lose the spirit and power that is upon us, I humbly pray in the worthy name of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

The congregation sang three verses of the hymn, "I Know That My Redeemer Lives" (Hymn Book, page 158).

ELDER GEORGE ALBERT SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

THIS seems like old times. When I was a new member of the Quorum of the Twelve a group like this used to assemble in this building after every General Conference, and we listened to the instructions of the General Authorities of the Church. The presidents of stakes and associates went back to their fields of labor feeling that they had indeed waited upon the Lord, and not in vain.

I trust that this morning I may be led to say something that will be helpful, because it seems to me that some kind of encouragement is most desirable just now.

There are in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints today 892,080 members. They have been gathering from the nations of the world during one hundred twelve years, in the face of almost constant opposition and often during bitter persecution. We are representatives of those faithful souls who had the courage to face the wilderness and endure privation that they might worship God according to the dictates of their consciences. In 1846, when the Pioneers left Nauvoo, Illinois, and vicinity, they had been stripped of nearly all their possessions. They had been robbed and plundered by so-called Christians. In 1847 they came into this Indian country to find peace, believing that God would overrule their distresses for good, which He did, most wonderfully. In a few weeks the leaders went back to Winter Quarters for the main body of the Saints, and they left Patriarch John Smith, the uncle of the Prophet Joseph Smith, to preside over this section of the country, designated as "The Salt Lake Stake." He was not a strong man; he was rather frail, albeit a man of great faith.

Today, with the world in the condition it is, it seems a wonderful privilege to be called together here, you men who are presiding as the leaders in the stakes of Zion, you men who have been set apart to represent God in the districts in which you labor, and to follow the leaders of the Church who preside over you.

These are perilous times, brethren, I have no doubt that many of you here have seen your sons depart to join the armed forces of the United States and have mourned that it was necessary for them to go. When they return, if they have kept the commandments of God, they will have witnessed His power and His strength in their preservation. This is not the Church of Joseph Smith or Brigham Young. It is not the Church of any man. This is the Church of Jesus Christ, our Lord. He has given rules to govern it and made them so plain that a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err in following His teachings; yet there have been those in the Church who have failed, who have fallen by the wayside, who have come under the power of the adversary and surrendered to evil. But those who have kept the commandments of God, those who have stood in the places to which they have been called, those who have been the leaders in Israel from the beginning, who have kept the faith, have been magnified, honored, and sustained by our Heavenly Father until the time came for them to return to their Maker.

I say to you brethren this morning, I say to all of us, because we are all responsible, that here in this room today is the leadership of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. This group is the one that has been chosen by the Lord to carry on His work and to preside over the organized stakes and missions of Zion. We are permitted to assemble in peace and quiet notwithstanding the terrible conditions in the world. We have been chosen and set apart by those who have the authority to call us to serve. We are in this house that was erected many years ago by faithful Saints. We are here to worship God and to honor Him and to be instructed by Him through His faithful servants.

Saturday, April 4First Day

AFTER these conference meetings are over, you brethren will go back to the stakes of Zion over which you preside. If we have sought the Lord we shall be strengthened, our faith will be increased, our power to direct will be increased, and we will not feel the weakness that possesses men when they are left alone. Rather we will feel the strength and power of our Heavenly Father, for He helps us.

The responsibility that comes to all of us when these honors have been bestowed upon us is tremendous. I hope that none of the members of the Church who have been called to preside in its various departments will feel that they can make it secondary in their lives. You who are here today must know that it is your duty first of all to learn what the Lord wants and then by the power and strength of His holy Priesthood to magnify your calling in the presence of your fellows in such a way that the people will be glad to follow you.

This is a day of proving ourselves, a day of trial. This is a day when men's hearts are failing them with fear. When the multitudes in the world are asking themselves what the end will be. A few inspired men know what the end will be. The Lord has told us what would occur, in these books that are upon this stand, this wonderful library that I hold in my hand. He has given us the information that we need to adjust our lives and to prepare ourselves that no matter what may transpire we will be on the Lord's side of the line.

When Moses led Israel from Egypt through the wilderness and into the promised land, Amalek attacked Israel at Rephidim. Moses directed Joshua to choose fighting men to protect Israel. Moses, Aaron, and Hur went to the top of a hill overlooking the battlefield. While Moses held the rod of God above his head, Israel prevailed, but when he let his hands down because of weakness, Amalek prevailed. A stone seat was provided and Aaron and Hur held up his hands in order that the blessings of God could flow to Israel that their warriors might prevail and the battle was won. The power of God was upon Moses and remained with him until he had finished his work. When he had the support of his people they too were blessed, and so it has been with every servant of the Lord who has presided over Israel.

How grateful we must all be to see the President of the Church stand here this morning, in spite of physical infirmities and advancing years, and yet with that testimony burning in his heart that God gave to him when he was a youth. He has here testified to us of the power of God which has been made manifest unto him. President Grant has been an example of devotion and a tower of strength in this Church. He has been a friend-maker among the gentiles of the world because the Lord has made him so.

We sit here this morning under the inspiration of his voice, and just as long as the Lord holds up his hands, just as long as he presides over this Church, it matters not how many years it will be, our Heavenly Father will give him strength, power, wisdom, judgment, and inspiration to talk to Israel as they need to be talked to. We, in following his leadership, must be like Aaron and Hur of ancient times; we must uphold his hands, that through him the Lord will let the blessings of heaven descend on us and this people.

His counselors will likewise be blessed, and they will be united together and they will carry on, and when they are united in the things pertaining to the gospel of Jesus Christ, they will be our leaders and our directors, and we will do well to listen to their voices and follow the example that they set us in all righteousness.

This morning hundreds of thousands of your associate members of the Church would like to be here. Yet out of our entire Church membership we are permitted to be present. But with this group rests the leadership of the Church, and if we wait upon the Lord as we should, if we have come here with the spirit of worship, if we have set aside our personal affairs to make first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, we will go from here renewed in strength and power; the assurance will increase in us that this is God's work, and we will have strength in the communities in which we reside and preside, to say, "This is the way of the Lord; walk in it," and the people will know by the spirit that we possess that we are really His leaders.

Brethren, it is no trifling affair. You cannot neglect the business of the Church, as the presiding officers of the stakes of Zion, and expect the Lord to carry on. He desires to do it through you. You have been given divine authority. It comes through only one source, and that is our Heavenly Father. He will expect each of us wherever we go, when this conference is completed, to hold the banner of righteousness aloft and teach by example as well as precept those to whom we minister, the gospel of Jesus Christ our Lord.

The world is in a serious condition, but we need have no fear if we do what the Lord has asked us to do. This is His world. All men and women are subject to Him. All the powers of evil will be controlled for the sake of His people, if they will honor Him and keep His commandments; He has told us that in the latter days conditions would be such that people will be in fear and doubt. He has told us that the time would come when the elements would not only threaten but also that men would hate one another and seek to destroy one another and that the wicked should slay the wicked. When we see the condition that is in the world today, how grateful we ought to be that our forebears were called from the midst of the nations and guided into the gathering place of the Saints in the tops of these everlasting hills. We should prepare to send forth sons and daughters, keeping the commandments of God, to preside in the various departments of the Church, not only in the organized stakes, but as missionaries in many parts of the world where stakes are not yet organized.

The missionaries of this Church should be as a light set upon a hill wherever they go, and they will be if they keep the commandments of the Lord. They will be able to teach the truth if they are worthy of the companionship of that sweet spirit that comes from our Heavenly Father.

Upon us who remain at home, those that are holding positions among the organized stakes of Zion, who have been called to teach and guide not only by precept but by example, upon us devolves a responsibility that our Heavenly Father will hold us accountable for, and if we will but do our best, He will bless us in it.

No matter whether the clouds may gather, no matter how the war drums may beat, no matter what conditions may arise in the world, here in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, wherever we are honoring and keeping the commandments of God, there will be protection from the powers of evil, and men and women will be permitted to live upon the earth until their lives are finished in honor and glory if they will keep the commandments of our Heavenly Father.

When you return home from this conference, remember the things that have been said here by those who have been called to speak. Remember the testimonies of truth that have been borne in your hearing, and in addition, know that God has given to you a great library of scripture and instruction for your guidance that has accumulated during the ages and He will add to it in the future just as rapidly as we fulfill His desires in the things that are already revealed.

God lives. Jesus is the Christ. The Church of the Lamb of God is upon the earth. The power of the holy Priesthood is here, and no evil power can stay its progress. It remains for us to demonstrate whether or not we will do our part and merit exaltation.

As I stand here in humility before you, I realize the blessings that the Lord has bestowed upon me, one of the weakest of your number, frail in physical strength. When I recall the many blessings that have come to me through my forebears who have been faithful, I realize what they are expecting of me, honored as I have been, I feel my limitations and the necessity of drawing near to the Lord, I desire the fellowship of my brethren and sisters in this Church.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

There are none of us but will make mistakes, not any of us but will fail to interpret some things properly; but if we will do our best, if we determine in ourselves to be what God would have us to be, if we will set our own homes in order, and then go forth to set in order the departments of the Church in which we are called to minister, our Heavenly Father will be with us to guard us, and the strength that we need will be with us, but without His guidance we will not succeed.

I pray that the Spirit that directs those who keep the commandments of our Heavenly Father may be with us always, that we may have power to understand, that we may have the strength to resist the temptations of the adversary, for we will all be tempted, that we may be able whatever the circumstances may be to place our all upon the altar, as many of our forebears have done, and say to our Heavenly Father, "Whithersoever thou desirest me to go, I will go."

In the stakes and wards in this Church, you men must be towers of strength among the people all the time. You must be what God intended you to be when He gave you the authority that has been conferred upon you. You must be willing to make the sacrifices; and when I say you, I mean all of us. That will be required of us in order that we may be worthy to hold our places among the children of men, and if we will do that, men and women everywhere seeing our good works will be constrained to glorify the name of our Heavenly Father. It is not the position that we occupy that gives us power; it is righteousness that gives us power; it is keeping the commandments of God that will give us understanding. Having been set apart for some particular duty, will not be sufficient; but having been set apart, if we are worthy, the Spirit of God will dwell in us, and we will be among the people as a light to guide their footsteps, and they will know that the leadership that is with us is of our Heavenly Father.

I DESIRE with all my heart to be worthy of the position to which I have been called. I desire to be worthy of the companionship of my associates in the leadership of the Church. I here desire to thank my brethren, President Grant and his counselors, the members of the Quorum of the Twelve, the First Council of the Seventy, the Presiding Bishopric, and those who have been called to associate with these men. In these men I have seen the power of God made manifest, and I thank them for the privilege I have had of working with them—not to work out my own desires and ambitions, but to unite with them in carrying forth the program that God has given to the children of men, without which this world is condemned already. If this body of men cannot rise to the majesty of the power that God has given to them and build upon the foundation of faith and righteousness, there is little hope for the world; but if we do our part, if we will keep the commandments of God, if we will love one another and observe the commandment of the Savior that we love our neighbor as ourself, then will we have strength, and power, and wisdom, and might, among the children of men, and the people of the world will love us, and they will not hate us because they will see in us the riches of righteousness and the blessings which come from the power of our Heavenly Father.

I know that God lives. I know that Jesus is the Christ. I know that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the living God, and that the Church with which we are identified, was organized through him by our Heavenly Father and His Beloved Son, Jesus Christ. I know these things, and there is no other way under heaven whereby men may gain a place in the celestial kingdom but through the plan that God has given the children of men, of which we are made partakers. I know this as I know that I live, and knowing it, I desire that we may prove worthy. With all my heart I pray that we may be content to live in the lowly brackets of life; not with all the riches that the world desires and clamors after, but that there may be in our lives a richness of love and hope and charity wherever we go.

I pray that our homes may be the abiding place of prayer, and that our sons and daughters may be worthy exemplars of the cause and represent us favorably wherever they may go.

Brethren, let us not think that this Church will go on just as well if we fail. The Church as a whole will, but I want to say to you that the department we are expected to direct will not go forward as long as we stand in the way, so let us adjust ourselves if necessary. Let us live so that every night when we kneel to pray and every morning when we bow before the Lord in thanksgiving, there will be in us the power to open the heavens so that God will hear and answer our prayers that we will know that we are approved of Him. We can do that, brethren, better than we have ever done before. If there ever was a time when it was needed, it is this particular period in which we are living.

I humbly pray that God may give us power and strength to resist evil and temptation and to put aside from us the selfish motives that characterize so many of His sons and daughters, that we may let our light so shine every day that others observing our good works will see in us righteous leaders that they will be glad to follow. I pray that these men who preside over us, this Presidency, may have the joy of always being united in their leadership and that we may be united in our membership when they shall speak in the name of the Lord to the Church.

Again I say I know that this is God's work. I may not be with you very long, my brethren. I have passed the years of some of my forebears a long way, and I am amazed that I have been permitted to stand among you as long as I have with my many illnesses, but I desire that as long as I live that I may enjoy the Spirit of God, the spirit of fellowship, and brotherly love. When I think of your homes, I would like to know that there is love in every heart for one another; then I will know that there will be love in God's heart for us, and there will be an assurance that He will bless us as we need blessing.

That this conference may be notable for the spirit that will be distilled upon us, even as the dew from heaven, and when it is over that we may go to our various departments renewed and invigorated, and determined more than ever to be worthy of the high calling that has been made of us and conferred upon us, I humbly ask in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen.

ELDER MARION G. ROMNEY

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I DESIRE to call your attention to the principle of loyalty, loyalty to the truth and loyalty to the men whom God has chosen to lead the cause of truth. I speak of "the truth" and these "men" jointly, because it is impossible fully to accept the one and partly reject the other.

I raise my voice on this matter to warn and counsel you to be on your guard against criticism. I have heard some myself and have been told about more. It comes, in part, from those who hold, or have held, prominent positions. Ostensibly, they are in good standing in the Church. In expressing their feelings, they frequently say, "We are members of the Church, too, you know, and our feelings should be considered."

They assume that one can be in full harmony with the spirit of the gospel, enjoy full fellowship in the Church, and at the same time be out of harmony with the leaders of the Church and the counsel and directions they give. Such a position is wholly inconsistent, because the guidance of this Church comes, not alone from the written word, but also from continuous revelation, and the Lord gives that revelation to the Church through His chosen leaders and none else. It follows, therefore, that those who profess to accept the gospel and who at the same time criticize and refuse to follow the counsel of the leaders, are assuming an indefensible position.

First Day

Such a spirit leads to apostasy. It is not new. It was prevalent in the days of Jesus. Some who boasted of being Abraham's children, said of the Son of God: "Behold a man gluttonous, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners." (Matt. 11:19) But those who stood by Him enjoying the spirit of truth knew Him, as did Peter, who said "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

In the days of the Prophet Joseph, there was criticism against him and the counsel he gave. Some of the leading brethren of the Church charged him with being a fallen prophet. They did not deny the gospel, but they contended that the Prophet had fallen.

Those were critical times for the Church. They have now long since passed into history, but the records remain. The issues are now clear. Joseph Smith was the Lord's prophet, and so continued, notwithstanding all the abuse directed at him. He now sits enthroned in yonder heavens, and those who criticized him apostatized and left the Church. Thomas B. Marsh, who left the Church in 1839 because he became jealous of the Prophet, found his way in 1857 to Salt Lake City, and in addressing the Saints, said:

If there are any among this people who should ever apostatize and do as I have done, prepare your backs for a good whipping if you are such as the Lord loves. But if you will take my advice, you will stand by the authorities.

As we look back upon these important events, it seems that the issues were always so clearly drawn that anyone could have seen the truth. And yet, there seem always to have been great intellects on the side of error. This is one of life's tragedies. Surely there can be nothing of more importance than to be always and everlastingly on the side with truth as we meet the complex problems of our lives. It is comforting to know that that is where we may be if we will but hearken to the spirit of truth. For the Lord has said that "the Spirit giveth light to every man that cometh into the world; and the Spirit enlighteneth every man through the world, that hearkeneth to the voice of the Spirit." (D. & C. 84:46) That this is no idle promise is shown by the fact that on nearly all occasions there have stood with God's spokesmen those who were loyal to the truth and to the men whom God had chosen to lead the cause of truth. At the time of the attack on the Prophet in Kirtland, Brigham Young was present, and when the criticism was expressed he arose and in plain and forceful language said that Joseph was a Prophet and he knew it, "and that they might rail and slander him as much as they pleased, they could but destroy their own authority and cut the thread that bound them to the Prophet of God and sink themselves to hell." Later he said:

Some of the leading men at Kirtland were much opposed to the Prophet meddling with temporal affairs, thinking that his duty embraced spiritual things alone and that the people should be left to attend to their temporal affairs without any interference whatever from prophets and apostles. In a public meeting, I said: "Ye elders of Israel: Now; will some of you draw the line of demarcation between the spiritual and temporal within the Kingdom of God, so that I may understand it!" Not one of them could do it. When I saw a man standing in the path before the Prophet,

I felt like hurling him out of the way and branding him as a fool.

Here was loyalty, loyalty both to the truth and to the man whom God had called to represent it.

Why was it that the vision of Brigham Young was clear and that of Thomas B. Marsh was cloudy; that Brigham Young remained true to the Prophet, and that Thomas B. Marsh criticized him? It was because Brigham Young always hearkened to the spirit of truth, and Thomas B. Marsh did not.

LAST October, I attended an outlying stake's conference. A number of the speakers had just attended for the first time a general conference. Their reports were soul stirring. One bishop wished that every member of his ward might attend just one conference in the tabernacle. Another, when he stood with the vast congregation for the first time, was so moved that tears ran down his cheeks, and his voice so choked that he could not join in the singing. A third was impressed with President Grant's closing remarks. He said as he finished his talk: "Three times the President said 'I bless you, I bless you, I bless you.'"

In another outlying stake, an ex-bishop said to me that the conference was nothing but a political convention. In another a man said that whether he would follow the counsel of the leaders depended upon what subject they discussed.

How are these different responses accounted for? I will tell you. The members of the one group were observing and keeping the commandments of God, and the others were not; one group was walking in the light of truth, and the other was in the dark; one group enjoyed the Spirit of the Lord, and the others did not.

If we are to be on the side of truth, we must have the Spirit of the Lord. To the obtaining of that spirit, prayer is an indispensable prerequisite. Praying will keep one's vision clear on this question of loyalty as on all other questions. By praying I do not mean, however, just saying prayers. Prayers may be said in a perfunctory manner. Access to the Spirit of God, which is a directing power, cannot be so obtained. The divine injunction to pray is not to be satisfied in a casual manner nor by an effort to obtain divine approval of a predetermined course. A firm resolve to comply with the will of God must accompany the petition for knowledge as to what His will is. When one brings himself to the position that he will pursue the truth wherever it may lead, even though it may require a reversal of his former position, he can, without hypocrisy, go before the Lord in prayer. Then, when he prays with all the energy of his soul, he is entitled to and he will receive guidance. The mind and will of the Lord as to the course he should take will be made known unto him.

I assure you, however, that the spirit of the Lord will never direct a person to take a position in opposition to the counsel of the Presidency of His Church. Such could not be, and I'll tell you why. The Spirit of the Lord is "truth." The Prophet Joseph Smith says that "The glory of God is intelligence, or, in other words, light and truth."

The Presidency, in directing the Church and its affairs and in counseling the people, do so under the directing power of this "light and truth." When a man and the Presidency are both directed on the same subject by "light and truth," there can be no conflict. And so, my brethren, all who are out of harmony in any degree with the Presidency have need to repent and to seek the Lord for forgiveness and to put themselves in full harmony.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

In response to a contention that to follow such a course is tantamount to surrendering one's "moral agency," suppose a person were in a forest with his vision limited by the denseness of the growth about him. Would he be surrendering his agency in following the directions of one who stands on a lookout tower, commanding an unobstructed view? To me, our leaders are true watchmen on the towers of Zion, and those who follow their counsel are exercising their agency just as freely as would be the man in the forest. For I accept as a fact, without any reservation, that this Church is headed by the Lord Jesus Christ, and that He, through the men whom he chooses and appoints to lead His people, gives it active direction. I believe that He communicates to them His will, and that they, enjoying His spirit, counsel us.

The Savior Himself gave us the great example on this point. As He labored and suffered under the weight of the sins of this world in the accomplishment of the great atonement, He cried out in the agony of His soul, "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: Nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." (Matt. 26:39) And so saying, He subjected Himself to the will of His Father in the consummation of His supreme mission. Who will say that in so doing He surrendered His free agency?

That we may all have the vision and the courage to be loyal to the truth and loyal to the men whom God has chosen to lead in the cause of truth, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER THOMAS E. MCKAY

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

It is a very great privilege for me to be associated with such fine, outstanding men as are here present, and I express my thanks humbly and before you brethren, to my Father in heaven for this privilege. I am very thankful also to be able to report the conditions in the missions included in the European group as very favorable. All those missions are functioning, and most of them are making progress. Some of them are handicapped in the holding of their meetings; especially has that been the case during this past winter because of the lack of fuel and light. They are continuing, however, to hold all meetings, including their district conferences, but they must all be held during the daytime. Generally the sacrament meetings convene immediately following the Sunday school, and the Priesthood, Relief Society, and M. I. A. gatherings are held at the same time.

We continue to get letters; but, of course, as you know, they are all censored. A report just received yesterday from the Danish Mission was sent by regular mail on the eleventh of October. It had been censored by both the German and the English authorities, but it came through in its original form. On one end of the envelope was stamped Geoffnet, the German word for opened, and on the other end Opened by Examiner, the words used by the English censor.

In that report it stated that thirteen members had been baptized for the ten months ending October 27, 1941.

The letters and reports from the British, South African, Swedish, and Swiss Missions and the French, Swiss, and Syrian Districts come through quite regularly, while those from the other missions since the United States entered the war are very irregular; some of my letters are being returned, with the words "Service Suspended. Return to Sender," stamped on them.

The yearly report from the Swedish Mission shows an increase of twenty-two percent in tithing over last year, and twenty baptisms.

The British Mission also is doing exceptionally well. They have home missionaries. It is their aim to have such missionaries in every branch. They report for the year 1941 sixty baptisms and a very substantial increase in tithes and fast offerings. From a letter received day before yesterday, the following paragraph is taken:

I regret to inform you that we have been advised by the Air Ministry in London that Pilot Officer Hugh Card Brown is posted as missing. A telegram, we learn from the same source, has been sent to his parents. The news is a very great shock to us. We saw him two days ago, smiling and bright, full of life and joy. We spent an evening with him in town. He was in London for a couple of days to undergo medical examination, which he told us was A-1. We all feel very keenly the sad news. We are fasting today with hope and prayer that he is safe. We are awaiting further news from the Air Ministry in London. This information was received last night, that is, March 17, 1942.

I am sure that hundreds of us here have also united our prayers with members of the British Mission that our young pilot officer, Brother Hugh Card Brown, is still safe.

Many families are afflicted as are President Hugh B. Brown and his family, and thousands of others, I fear, will be before this war is ended. As you know, President Brown and his good wife, Sister Zina Card Brown, were presiding over the British Mission when war was declared; they evacuated all missionaries in the British Mission at that time.

In speaking of our soldiers may I presume to recommend that it be a Priesthood project to write at least once a month to the members of the Priesthood quorums who are in the service. The personal welfare committee, presided over by the president of the quorum, should follow this up. We cannot estimate the good that will come from these letters, especially to members of the quorum, who have been, perchance, inactive at home. There are many very interesting events that can be told that will be very beneficial to these members of the quorum. May I suggest also that others be instructed to write? These soldiers should receive a letter weekly at least. I am sure, and I testify, good will come from this method if it is followed up.

I desire also to express before sitting down my great appreciation for the opportunity I have had of visiting so many of the stakes and one mission. I did enjoy my visit to the Eastern States Mission. President Gustave A. Iverson and his good wife are doing a splendid work, working too hard, but they certainly have the love and respect of all the missionaries. Two groups there are doing especially good work with their singing: The Mormon Missionary Male Quartet of Philadelphia, and also the Ensign Chorus, comprised of mixed voices. They seem to have no difficulty in getting permission to sing over the radio, and at the same time announce their conferences and other meetings.

I appreciate also the opportunity I have had of meeting and getting better acquainted with you presidents of stakes. My faith in the inspiration of the leaders of the Church has been encouraged and strengthened since meeting you men. I testify that these men—these leaders—are called of God and they are inspired in their leadership. May God continue to bless them, and bless you, and bless our boys in the service, and also our members in the war-torn countries, I pray earnestly in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

As a closing number, the congregation sang the hymn, "Redeemer Of Israel" (Hymn Book, page 212).

Elder Arnold D. Miller, President of the North Davis Stake, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2 p. m.

FIRST DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The second session of the Conference was held in the Assembly Hall Saturday afternoon, April 4, at 2 o'clock.

President Heber J. Grant was present and presided. President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., First Counselor in the First Presidency, conducted the meeting.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Come, Come, Ye Saints" (Hymn Book, page 58).

Elder David Smith, President of the North Idaho Falls Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Now Let Us Rejoice" (Hymn Book, page 198).

ELDER GEORGE F. RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

BEFORE the Savior took leave of His disciples in Jerusalem He promised them that He would send the Holy Ghost after He had gone. That promise was fulfilled, as you know. The brethren and people had a wonderful pentecost.

The first temple built in this gospel dispensation was dedicated on the 27th of March, 1836, in Kirtland, Ohio. The Sunday following, on the 3rd of April, while the Prophet Joseph and Oliver Cowdery were in the temple they had a wonderful manifestation. The Lord appeared to them; the veil was taken from their eyes; they saw Him and heard Him. Among other things, He accepted of the dedication of that house and the sacrifices made by the people who in their poverty had in a very short time erected the building and had it ready for dedication.

After this vision closed, Moses the prophet appeared to Joseph and Oliver, and conferred upon them the keys of the gathering of scattered Israel from the four quarters of the earth, and the return of the lost tribes from the north.

And when this vision closed, Elias, who lived in the days of Abraham, appeared and conferred upon them the keys of the Abrahamic dispensation, saying that "in us and our seed will all the nations of the earth be blessed."

And then appeared Elijah, the prophet, who said he had come in fulfillment of the prediction of Malachi, saying that before the great and dreadful day of the Lord should come He would send Elijah the prophet to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to the fathers, lest the whole world be smitten with a curse. Said he: "Therefore I commit unto you these keys, and by this ye may know that the great and dreadful day of the Lord is nigh, even at your doors."

This was a wonderful pentecostal occasion in this dispensation.

This conference is peculiar, and I suppose before it is over it will be a veritable pentecost. Not such as those had in the primitive Church and those in the early rise of this Church, perhaps. I sincerely hope, however, that the Spirit of God will be poured out upon us, and its power be made manifest, that we will all be satisfied and feel that it has surely enriched our souls to be in attendance at this conference.

In the time allotted to me to speak on this occasion, I have thought to speak upon a subject, the most glorious of all gospel subjects, in which is involved one of the greatest, if not the greatest, responsibilities that God has placed upon us as a people, that of looking after our kindred dead.

I call your attention to the statements of the Prophet Joseph to the Saints, recorded in the Doctrine and Covenants, and known as the 128th section. In the 17th verse of that section He speaks of baptism for the dead, and says: "This most glorious of all subjects belonging to the everlasting gospel, namely, the baptism for the dead." And as you know, brethren, baptism and confirmation are necessary to man's salvation—the door into the kingdom. There are other sacred, saving ordinances of the gospel that we might say are on a par in necessity for men's salvation; they are for the living and for the dead. We are not called upon as members of the Church to do genealogical research and temple ordinance work—as we are called to go out into the world to preach the gospel, but we have the responsibility pertaining to our kindred dead, and we are urged to do our duty to them, as we are urged by those in authority, to attend to our other religious duties—the payment of our tithes and the keeping of the Word of Wisdom, the attending of our sacrament meetings, our quorum meetings, to our prayers, etc. This responsibility is one that the Lord has placed upon us. The Prophet Joseph has left on record this statement among his gems, Compendium, page 284:

The greatest responsibility in this world which the Lord has laid upon us is to seek after our dead.

To seek after our dead means to find them out by genealogical research, to obtain the information regarding them that will identify them from all other people bearing the same name. A perfect identification is to have the individual's full name, also the day, month, and year of his birth; the town, county, and state where he was born; the date of his death; the name of his father and mother; and, if it is a married man, his wife's name; and, if it is a married woman, her husband's name. We regard this as complete identification.

However, we do work for people where we are not able to obtain complete information. As you know, brethren, this information must be had concerning our dead before we can go into the temple and do the work for them. It places the principle of genealogical research, so far as our dead are concerned, on a par in importance with the temple work which we do for them. And when the Prophet says, "The greatest responsibility in this world that God has placed upon us is to seek after our dead," it means the responsibility of finding them out by genealogical research and then going into the temple and receiving for them those saving ordinances.

You will notice that the 110th section of the Doctrine and Covenants, from which I have quoted, is an account of what we call the pentecost of this dispensation. An account is there given of Elijah's appearing and committing to Joseph and Oliver the keys of turning the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to the fathers. About the time of this manifestation—which was on the 3rd of April, 1836—the spirit of Elijah seemed to be abroad among the people of this world. I am told that the Parliament of Great Britain in that very year made provision for the keeping of certain records throughout the empire. Those records were to have the information that would identify the various individuals, just such information as we need in our temple work and in our genealogical research work—records of birth, of baptisms, of marriages, death, and burials. From about that time there has been among the people of the world a spirit and desire to know more about their ancestors than ever before. Men and women of intelligence and means are spending their means and time in genealogical research, and those family histories find their way into the genealogical libraries which have grown up all over the land in this and other countries, and are accessible to the Latter-day Saints.

The Genealogical Society of Utah has for years been gathering copies of

Saturday, April 4

First Day

records that are kept in other countries and they are accessible also to the Latter-day Saints here in the Genealogical Library of Utah in Salt Lake City.

So if the Lord has moved upon the minds and hearts of men and women not of the Church to gather this needed genealogical information, it is important that we do our part, and make use of that information. It is the work and the glory of God the Eternal Father to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man, living and dead. He is dependent upon His living children here to assist Him, and particularly the Latter-day Saints.

I could tell you an experience of my own family, showing how the Lord moves upon the hearts of men and women in this Church to obtain the information that is necessary in order to do our duty to our kindred dead. And be it known, brethren, that not only has God laid this responsibility upon us, but it is one that is inherited. We will have to account to Him for the way we have done or neglected to do this important work in this Church. We will meet our kindred dead, and we will have to account to them also.

I often remark that we are indebted to our parents for our life, for our existence here upon the earth, for the good name that we have inherited. The Bible tells us a good name is more to be desired than great riches. It certainly is a valuable asset in a man's life. If we are indebted to our parents for all that we have inherited—good name and attributes and qualities of high degree and our life of existence here—we are indebted to our grandparents who gave us those parents; to our great-grandparents who gave us grandparents, and so you may go back as far as you can trace. We are indebted to our ancestors, not just our parents, for that which we have inherited, and among them no doubt are thousands of God's noble sons and daughters who have lived their lives here upon the earth the best they knew how, perhaps, and served the Lord according to their understanding of what is right and proper and have gone to the other side. They will hear the gospel taught while they are in the spirit; the gospel is for all men, the living and the dead. The scriptures tell us that "until the law sin was in the world; but sin is not imputed when there is no law, and where there is no law there is no judgment; where there is no judgment there is no condemnation." And in justice every man must be taught the gospel here or hereafter and the Lord has graciously made provision to that end.

Now when we go on to the other side what kind of accounting will we have to make to our kindred ancestry to whom we are so much indebted? Suppose we have not gone out of our way to obtain knowledge of them—will it be sufficient justification on our part if we have to say that we did not know them? I am sure it would bring a reproach from them, and they might very properly say that "if you did not think enough of us to make a search to find us out and do this work for our salvation and progress, on whom may we depend? Have you sons and daughters or brothers and sisters who are going to look after us? Where are our hopes? How long will we have to be in this condition?"

I wonder, brethren, leaders in Israel, shepherds of the flock, if we have thought this thing over seriously, and if we have taught it to the people and are continuing to teach it and to set an example before them?

I want you to know the attitude of our present President upon this important subject. This I take from The Improvement Era of November, 1941. President Grant said:

To my mind one of the greatest and grandest and the most glorious of all the labors that anyone can be engaged in is laboring for the salvation of the souls of their loved ones, their ancestors who have gone before, who had not the privilege of listening to the gospel and embracing it.

President Grant believes that we should be doers of the word and not hearers of it only, deceiving ourselves. He has set us a wonderful example himself going through the temple for the dead, and employing others to assist him, and it is perfectly legitimate if we cannot go ourselves—you men are busy men, it may be that you cannot go to the temple as frequently as you would like—there are poor men in this Church who are perfectly willing to represent you in doing this endowment work, and be it known that all the other temple work will be done for you gratuitously by the workers at the temples if you desire them to do so. After you obtain the genealogical information and present it at the temple, just the endowment work is exacted from you. Of course if you can do all the other work, it will be so much better; we cannot expect poor people to do the endowment work for us for nothing. For fifty cents we can employ a poor man—I say poor, one whose finances are such that he is willing to do that work for us, provide his own temple clothing and keep it clean and for the price named.

Some person has put into the mouth of the Savior these words:

Not what we give, but what we share,
For the gift without the giver is bare.
Who gives himself with his alms feeds three,
Himself, his hungering neighbor and Me.

In other words, we kill three birds with one stone. Here is an opportunity to kill four birds with one stone: I employ a man to do this work for me, I benefit myself. I am helping one who is needing help—the living—and redeeming my dead. By redeeming the dead I am helping my Father in heaven and His Son Jesus Christ—a glorious work.

Because of the greatness of the responsibility of it, brethren, the blessing is correspondingly great, if we discharge ourselves faithfully of the responsibility; and I can say the consequences of entire neglect of this responsibility are correspondingly great.

You know how it was with the rich man, according to the parable by the Savior, who neglected to feed the poor man Lazarus. When the rich man died, he was consigned to hell and torment. I want to tell you we are rich in the things of eternal life; we know the way, we have received the saving ordinances. Our dead kindred are there in abject poverty. If we do not minister unto their needs, what may we hope for when we come to judgment before the Lord? I have said we will have to account to him. We have accepted this responsibility, and we will have to account to our kindred dead. I would have you and myself so to live and to labor and discharge ourselves of these responsibilities that there will be no disappointment on our part, and no disappointment on the part of our kindred dead. May the Lord help us to this end, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

SINCE the beginning of this Conference I have had a number of thoughts and I would like to add a few words along the line that was presented by Brother Richards this afternoon.

In His justice the Lord grants every man an opportunity of salvation. If he does not get that opportunity here, provision is made for him to hear and accept, if he will, the gospel in the spirit world. We are not going to save—perhaps I ought to say exalt, because usually when we use that term salvation we mean exaltation—we are not going to exalt all the inhabitants of this earth, and they are not all going to find a place in the celestial kingdom of God—very few in fact of the great mass of humanity will reach exaltation. We reach that conclusion based upon the words of the prophets and the words of our Savior himself:

Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat:

Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it. (Matthew 7:13-14)

Saturday, April 4First Day

Now destruction means, as I understand it, banishment, or to be shut out of the kingdom of God and have to dwell somewhere else.

It is our opportunity in this dispensation, and our privilege and duty to spend our time in searching out our dead. We are of the house of Israel. We learn that through revelation, and that being true, then we reach the conclusion unless we have been adopted through the gospel and were gentiles, that our ancestors were also of the house of Israel. In other words, the promise made to Abraham that through the scattering of his seed all nations would be blessed, has been fulfilled, and our lineage has come down generation after generation through the loins of Abraham and the loins of Israel. Therefore our fathers are more likely to receive the gospel if they did not hear it in this life, to receive it in the spirit world than are those whose descendants are not in the Church, and who refused to receive the gospel here. It seems to me this is a logical conclusion.

Now, some members of the Church have wondered just what was meant by the words of the Prophet, that we without our dead could not be made perfect. Will not a man who keeps the commandments of the Lord, who is faithful and true so far as he himself is concerned, receive perfection? Yes, provided his worthy dead also receive the same privileges, because there must be a family organization, a family unit, and each generation must be linked to the chain that goes before in order to bring perfection in family organization. Thus eventually we will be one large family with Adam at the head, Michael, the archangel, presiding over his posterity, according to that which is written in the Scriptures. This he will do under the direction of the Holy One of Israel, for so it is revealed in the Scriptures:

That you may come up unto the crown prepared for you and be made rulers over many kingdoms, saith the Lord God, the Holy One of Zion, who hath established the foundations of Adam-on-di-Ahman; who hath appointed Michael your prince, and established his feet, and set him upon high, and given unto him the keys of salvation under the counsel and direction of the Holy One, who is without beginning of days or end of life.

I think we ought to get that clearly in our minds because there are those who are trying to stir up trouble among the Latter-day Saints today by teaching doctrines that are not in accordance with the revelations of the Lord, and maintaining that Authorities of the Church who have gone before taught doctrines which they did not teach. So we must have it understood clearly that while Adam will preside over his posterity as Michael, the prince, and as he will hold the keys of salvation, as he does, all of that will be under the direction of Jesus Christ, the Holy One of Israel, for Christ is greater than Adam.

We are taught in the gospel of Jesus Christ that the family organization will be, so far as celestial exaltation is concerned, one that is complete, an organization linked from father and mother and children of one generation to the father and mother and children of the next generation, and thus expanding and spreading out down to the end of time. If we fail to do the work, therefore, in the temples for our dead, you see our links in this chain—genealogical chain—will be broken, we will have to stand aside at least until that is remedied. We could not be made perfect in this organization unless we are brought in by this selective or sealing power, and if we have failed to do the work for those of our line, who have gone before, we will stand aside until somebody comes along who will do it for us; and if we have had the opportunity and have failed to do it, then naturally we would be under condemnation, and I think all through eternity we would regret the fact that we had failed to do the thing that was placed before us to do and which was our duty to accomplish in the salvation of the children of men.

Another thing that I would like to say: Some of us get so enthusiastic over this temple work that we are not willing to abide by the rules and the regulations, and to confine ourselves to our own line, but we want to spread out into the other fellow's line, and we want to do the work because we readily find names that belong to somebody else, and that method of work for the dead is not permissible. It is all right to help others do their work, if we do that with proper consent, but each family group is entitled to do the work for their particular line.

One more thought in regard to this work of salvation: A great many people are very anxious to do work for friends, and this thing has been carried to an extreme. We do not need to worry ourselves very much about friends. A man came to me a few days ago and presented two lists and said he wanted to do the work for these people because they were his friends. The oldest man of the group was born in 1710, and his children were born between 1730 and 1740, yet he called them his friends. Now we should confine our activities to our own line. If there is a good reason for doing the work for somebody who had befriended us, somebody who would have accepted the gospel but did not have the opportunity and who has no relatives in the Church that is a different matter, and we may be privileged to do the work, but we need not be over-anxious to work for those not of our own lineage whom we list as friends.

THE Lord has explained to us very clearly in the revelations what salvation means. He has pointed out in one of these revelations—section 76, which is known to us as The Vision—very clearly who shall enter the celestial kingdom. He has pointed out who shall enter the terrestrial kingdom, and who shall enter the telestial kingdom. These are three great kingdoms into which mankind will go; there will be some few exceptions. The sons of perdition are those who have had a knowledge of the truth, have known that Jesus Christ was the Son of God, have had the testimony of the Spirit of the Lord, the Holy Ghost, and these things have all been revealed so that they know they are true; and then they turn against them and fight them knowingly. Sons of Perdition are to be cast out with the devil and his angels into outer darkness. Into the telestial kingdom will go, according to that which is written here in this revelation, the vicious, the unclean, the ungodly.

These are they who say they are some of one and some of another—some of Christ and some of John, and some of Moses, and some of Elias, and some of Esaias, and some of Isaiah, and some of Enoch;

But received not the gospel, neither the testimony of Jesus, neither the prophets, neither the everlasting covenant.

Last of all, these all are they who will not be gathered with the saints, to be caught up into the church of the Firstborn, and received into the cloud.

These are they who are liars, and sorcerers, the adulterers, and whoremongers, and whosoever loves and makes a lie.

These are they who suffer the wrath of God on earth.

These are they who suffer the vengeance of eternal fire.

These are they who are cast down to hell and suffer the wrath of Almighty God, until the fulness of times, when Christ shall have subdued all enemies under his feet, and shall have perfected his work. . . . (D. & C. 76:100-106)

The Lord says even of this class, the liars, and the unclean, they shall be judged according to their works, and every man shall receive according to his own works, his own dominion, in the mansions which are prepared; and they shall be servants of the Most High, but where God and Christ dwell they cannot come, worlds without end." Of course the Lord is going to make them His servants in the world to which they go; in that telestial world they will become servants.

They who enter into the terrestrial kingdom, the one higher than the telestial, are the honorable men—the honest, the virtuous, those who have been clean, and yet would not receive the gospel. There will be some others also who will go into that kingdom, but in a general sense these people will be the honest and honorable, who could not or would not see or receive the gospel of Jesus Christ, therefore they are assigned to the terrestrial kingdom.

Into the celestial kingdom will go

Saturday, April 4

those who have overcome by faith and are

Sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, which the Father sheds forth upon all those who are just and true.

They are they who are the church of the Firstborn.

They are they into whose hands the Father has given all things—

They are they who are priests and kings, who have received of his fulness, and of his glory;

And are priests of the Most High, after the order of Melchizedek, which was after the order of Enoch, which was after the order of the Only Begotten Son.

Wherefore, as it is written, they are gods, even the sons of God—

Wherefore, all things are theirs, whether life or death, or things present, or things to come, all are theirs and they are Christ's, and Christ is God's. (D. & C. 76:53-59)

What a wonderful thing it is to have the opportunity through the gospel of Jesus Christ of receiving all that the Father has, to become sons of God!

Now they who enter into the terrestrial kingdom, and they who enter into the telestial kingdom will not be sons of God in the sense in which this term is used here. Of course we are all the children of God, every soul on the earth; we are His offspring, but in the great kingdom that shall be established in exaltation, all who receive exaltation will become sons of God, joint heirs with Jesus Christ and entitled to all the privileges and all the blessings of the Father's kingdom. What a wonderful privilege that is! This blessing will not come to the inhabitants of the telestial and the terrestrial worlds.

Now the question often arises, Is this earth upon which we dwell going to be one-third celestialized, one-third terrestrialized, one-third telestialized? Are all the inhabitants of the earth going to dwell upon the earth? No. This earth is going to become a celestial body and is going to be a fit abode for celestial beings only; the others will have to go somewhere else, where they belong. This earth will be reserved for those who are entitled to exaltation, and they are the meek, spoken of by our Savior, who shall inherit the earth. When the Lord said the meek shall inherit the earth, He had reference to those who are willing to keep the commandments of the Lord in righteousness and thus receive exaltation.

May the Lord bless us, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy

A NOTED American historian has recently written: "I wish that people, particularly the American people, would have more respect for ancient truths, the lessons of history, and the Word of God." What America needs besides fifty thousand planes is a spiritual awakening, and one deep enough to remove the notion from society that a man is doing well spiritually when he manages to listen to a sermon once a month over the radio. We need a return to the old-time standards of character that make it easy for a man to become indignant over corruption, come to a boil over injustice, and get fighting mad over a wrong. We need a reconstruction of moral fiber and a greater faith in the purposes of the Almighty.

We are living in a troubled and anxious world, and no time in all history have men watched more anxiously over their liberties than they are doing today. Days are dark for millions of the inhabitants of the earth. They will be darker still. But we have the will of the Lord, and consoling are the words we find in the gospel of St. John:

Then said Jesus . . . If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free. (John 8:31, 32)

Having been absent for many months in the New England Mission, I feel happy in renewing my work with the First Council of the Seventy. As I have come in contact with many of you stake presidents during the past few days, I feel that we are going to establish a stronger unity between you and the quorums of seventy throughout the Church. We are grateful to you stake presidents for your cooperation in the past, and for the renewed hope and faith that the gospel will be preached to all the people of the earth. Amid the sorrows of this war-torn world, it must be remembered that there are men walking the earth beckoning us on—not abreast of us, but ahead of us. Religion explains them as men blessed of heaven; men spiritually endowed who are able to respond to the inspiration of the infinite power of God. They are good men, and wonderful is the vitality of goodness. They know that God has not separated Himself from the world, nor does He lightly regard anyone's need. There is a true Light "which lighteth every one who comes into the world," a saying rich in promise.

God has again spoken from heaven, and the Priesthood of God has again been restored to the earth. Prophets, seers, and revelators walk the earth. It is our firm conviction that the work of the Lord will grow in the hearts of men. We have faith in people, faith in the coming of God's kingdom upon the earth. Right does make might, and right will prevail some day in all the world.

I want to call your attention to what Thomas Masaryk once wrote while he was teaching. You recall that Dr. Masaryk was the president of Czechoslovakia. He taught that a good leader does not need to be master, but a good leader is one who knows how to serve and feels he himself is guided and needs to be guided. He believed in living a clean, good life, and he was tolerant, and believed that all religions should work together to make a friendly world. These are some of the things he taught:

Search for truth.

Nothing is great if it is not true.

Everything in a democracy depends upon the people.

They must think and work together.

We need people united by an ideal. It is humanity that is important.

I know that you presidents of the stakes of Zion and we seventies with you are united by a great ideal. With that ideal, we will work with larger purpose for the cause of God. May God bless us all from day to day. May we have the light of His kingdom upon the earth. This we ask in His Name. Amen.

The congregation sang the hymn, "God Moves In A Mysterious Way" (Hymn Book, page 28).

ELDER RICHARD R. LYMAN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

IN these days it is pretty difficult to think of anything besides war, and the great question is, Who is going to win the war? I have here a clipping from The Deseret News of February 5, 1942. The heading is, "The most healthy will win the war." Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur expresses these views:

The people with the most health, the people with the most vigor, and the people with the most fitness and sobriety, training, and devotion to the common cause are the people who are going to win this war. America must throw off its night-clubbish habits, its loose thinking and health-destroying tendencies if America is to be on the winning side.

We educators know that the easiest way in the world to lose a football game is to have a team that breaks training rules and only half prepares for the contest. If we the Americans are to be the winners in this great contest, we must begin training, and we must begin that training now. There is no way to escape the fact that health will win this war for some people. God grant that that people may be the people of our own country.

Of the first two million men to go through draft examination, 900,000—think of it, 900,000, nearly half—were found to be unfit for military service because of physical, mental or moral defects.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

WHICH? BEER OR THE BIBLE

I CREATED a real sensation in Ogden some years ago. I had seen in the morning paper a picture of the members of the American Legion marching down Woodward Avenue in the City of Detroit where I marched in my boyhood with my classmates and shouted vigorously for the football team of the University of Michigan. The paper said members of the American Legion were marching down Woodward Avenue swinging their bottles and shouting for beer. And so I said to the congregation in the Tabernacle, "Where are the people of the United States going, and what are they doing? Are they following the lead of those who are swinging their bottles and shouting for beer, or are they following the example of the Pilgrim fathers who remembered the Sabbath day to keep it holy, and with bowed heads, Bible in hand, wended their way to their places of worship."

HAVE WE FORGOTTEN GOD?

ABRAHAM Lincoln set apart the 6th of September, 1863, as a day of fasting and a day of prayer. He said:

I do this with the hope that the people of our nation will assemble in their various places of worship and that they will go down upon their knees around their own hearthstones and appeal to our Heavenly Father for our now war-torn country to be restored to its former condition of happiness and peace. . . . Our nation has had a growth and a development the like of which no other nation has known in all the history of the world, but the difficulty with us is we have forgotten God.

Does that condition prevail throughout the United States of America today? The motto of our country is: "In God We Trust." Do we do it or not? Everywhere we sing,

Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light,
Protect us by thy might,
Great God, our King.

FAMILY PRAYERS DAILY

ROGER W. BABSON says that we have in our country today men who are empire builders, men who are standing at the head of great business institutions, and, he says, that some of these men ridicule religion. Then he adds, "These very men are indebted for all that they possess to the family prayers which were once held daily in the homes of their fathers."

Have the people of our country forgotten God? Benjamin Franklin arose in our Constitutional Convention and said, "Mr. President," and he looked into the face of the chairman, George Washington:

Mr. President, our blood is hot. I see we are not going to be able to agree. It looks as if we may not be able to devise a satisfactory Constitution. I move you, therefore, Mr. President, that we do now adjourn for a period of five days, and that when we reconvene we appoint a chaplain, and I am astonished, Mr. President, that no one has thought of this before. When we were in our mighty conflict with Great Britain we met in this very hall daily, and daily we made our appeals to Almighty God, and you all realize that our appeals were heard, our prayers were graciously answered. Is it possible that in these few short years we have forgotten God, our powerful Friend? Is it possible that a nation can be born, that a constitution can be drawn up without the help of divine Providence, when not even a sparrow can fall to the ground without His notice?

THE GREATEST DEMOCRACY IN THE WORLD

NO man can accomplish much if he has only one pair of hands with which to work. No man, as the president of a stake or the bishop of a ward, or at the head of any other institution, can accomplish very much if he tries to do all the work himself.

I have said a good many times to many great thinkers, great readers, wise men and scholars that we have in the Church of Jesus Christ the greatest and most perfect democratic organization in the world. And I have met no man yet who did not concede that this statement is correct.

Now, brethren, you who are in the presidencies of the stakes, your first and most important duty is to call together regularly and frequently those who belong to your organizations and assign definitely to every man and to every woman his or her duty, and to check up carefully and frequently to see that the work assigned is done. I say again no human being can accomplish much if he works only by himself, if he has but one pair of hands with which to toil. Your accomplishments will be great if you bring together often all those in your organizations and have them do real team work.

MEET, PLAN, AND PRAY

You are to meet with your fellow workers to do two things—plan and pray. The arm of flesh is weak; the amount of strength in any human being is limited, but when a human being, however weak, however small, however little, comes into real communion and cooperation with God, the Eternal Father, then great things may be accomplished.

And so, as a servant of the Lord Jesus Christ, I appeal to you to come together frequently with your fellow-workers, and do these two important things—plan and pray. Have we forgotten God, we who are officers in the Church of Jesus Christ? Are our people daily having their family prayers, or have we forgotten that powerful Friend of our country, that powerful Friend of our Church?

This revelation from which I am going to read was not given to the ancients, it was given to you and me; it applies here and now.

... Behold, a marvelous work is about to come forth among the children of men. (D. & C. 4:1)

A MARVELOUS WORK AND A WONDER

Since the gospel is to be preached to every nation, every kindred, every tongue, every people, everywhere in the world, and since its purpose is to bring peace on earth and good will to men, that great blessing for which all good people everywhere are praying this very Sabbath day, are not those words of the Prophet prophetic when he said:

Now behold, a marvelous work and a wonder is about to come forth among the children of men.

And that marvelous work, that wonder, is the preaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ to all the people in all the world. I wonder at times if all who have held the divine authority to preach had done their very best during the hundred years since the Lord Himself restored this power and authority to the earth—I say if every man with all the physical and mental powers at his command had done his utmost to bring peace on earth and good will to men; if he in every moment of his life had had in his soul unceasingly a burning testimony of the divinity of the gospel of Jesus Christ, a testimony of the divinity of the mission of the Prophet Joseph Smith, if every man had put his all upon the altar, I wonder if this world war could have been averted.

Carrying our gospel message to all the people in the world is a tremendous work.

Now behold, a marvelous work and a wonder is about to come forth among the children of men.

Therefore, O ye that embark in the service of God—

Do you brethren hear these words of a revelation from God the Eternal Father through the Prophet Joseph Smith to you, to me, to us who are assembled here this afternoon!

Therefore, O ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart, might, mind and strength, that ye may stand blameless before God at the last day. (D. & C. 4:2)

For behold the field is white already to harvest. (D. & C. 4:4)

If ever a field was white, if ever there was a time to labor, if ever the servants of God were in demand it is now.

FIELD WHITE AND READY FOR HARVEST

Behold the field is white already to harvest; and lo, he that thrusteth in his sickle with his might, the same layeth up in store that he perisheth not, but bringeth salvation to his soul. (D. & C. 4:4)

Brethren, God bless you. Let us dedicate ourselves with all we have and all we are to the preaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ and to living in accordance with the high ideals of the Church and to the winning of the gigantic conflict on the battlefield of which our nation has been compelled to enter. May I say again, let us dedicate ourselves to the winning of this great fight for liberty and freedom.

DEDICATING EVEN LIFE TO A GREAT CAUSE

IN a high priests' meeting in the Ensign Stake during World War I, Richard W. Young, brigadier general, said, "I told my son good-bye last night and sent him into this war. I may never see his face again. Going into this mighty conflict may cost him his life. But if it does, he could not possibly give his life to a more glorious cause than to give it for the freedom and liberty not only of the people of our own nation but of all mankind."

And so let us in real humility appeal to God the Eternal Father to enable us to discharge well our duty, to preach the gospel effectively, and to do our utmost to make the people of our nation worthy of victory. God grant that we may be worthy and that we may win the war.

ELDER JOHN A. WIDTSOE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

THE present unhappy infernal conditions of the world are daily before us and our people. We cannot forget them. The incomprehensible folly of humanity bewilders us. All Israel are anxious and troubled. Some face the day in fear. Many are filled with premonitions and forebodings. To cure this condition; to steady the pulse of our people; to teach the ultimate conquest of right over wrong, may be our immediate problem. Of all people in the world we should and can see most clearly in this dark, man-made chaos. We have the light. We must see the happy destined end, from a dark and corrupt beginning. The Lord has spoken, and foretold the calamities of the last days; but He has also declared that He is the Master and that He and His righteous people will triumph over all evil. The Lord is never defeated.

Questions, conjectures, and speculations are rife among the people. Some ask, "Is this Armageddon?" Others, "Will the Savior come when this war is over?" Yet others are busily engaged in proving that present events, countries, men, and even dates, may be read into the prophecies of thousands of years ago. To all such questions there is but one answer: We only know that this is the dispensation of the fulness of times, the Saturday evening of the earth's temporal existence. These are the "last days," days of much commotion, to be followed by the millennium and the presence on earth of the Lord Jesus Christ who will "put all enemies under his feet." We know that the coming of the Lord is nigh, but He has warned us that "the hour and the day no man knoweth, neither the angels in heaven, nor shall they know until he comes." (D. & C. 49:7) All that has been set forth in great clearness in the revelations to the Prophet Joseph Smith and his successors. There is no benefit in prying beyond the revealed word of the Lord.

A passage in the Doctrine and Covenants foretells and explains the sorrows of the "last days," and it summarizes the message of the Lord to His latter-day people concerning these times of sadness. (D. & C. 63:32-34)

I, the Lord, am angry with the wicked;

I am holding my Spirit from the inhabitants of the earth. I have sworn in my wrath, and decreed wars upon the face of the earth, and the wicked shall slay the wicked, and fear shall come upon every man; and the saints also shall hardly escape; nevertheless, I, the Lord, am with them, and will come down in heaven from the presence of my Father and consume the wicked with unquenchable fire.

Fear, which "shall come upon every man," is the natural consequence of a sense of weakness, also of sin. Fear is a chief weapon of Satan in making mankind unhappy. He who fears loses strength for the combat of life, for the fight against evil. Therefore, the power of evil ever seeks to engender fear in human hearts. In this day of sorrow, fear walks with humanity. It directs, measurably, the course of every battle. It remains as a gnawing poison in the hearts of victors as of the vanquished.

As leaders in Israel, we must seek to dispel fear from among our people. A timid, fearing people cannot do their work well. The Latter-day Saints have a divinely assigned world-mission so great that they cannot afford to dissipate their strength in fear. The Lord has repeatedly warned His people against fear. Many a blessing is withheld because of our fears. He has expressly declared that men cannot stop his work on earth, therefore, they who are engaged in the Lord's latter-day cause and who fear, really trust man more than God, and thereby are robbed of their power to serve.

THE key to the conquest of fear has been given through the Prophet Joseph Smith. "If ye are prepared ye shall not fear." (D. & C. 38:30) That divine message needs repeating today in every stake and ward. Are we prepared in surrender to God's commandments? In victory over our appetites? In obedience to righteous law? If we can honestly answer yes, we can bid fear depart. And the degree of fear in our hearts may well be measured by our preparation by righteous living, such as should characterize Latter-day Saints. To the handful of believers at the opening of this dispensation, the Lord gave this glorious promise:

Fear not, little flock; do good; let earth and hell combine against you, for if ye are built upon my rock, they cannot prevail. (D. & C. 6:34)

Speaking to the Church about the events of the last days, the Lord said, "The wicked shall flee unto Zion for safety." Since Zion is wherever the pure in heart are, I like to read into that inspired saying, that there is safety wherever the people of the Lord live so worthily as to claim the sacred title of citizens of the Zion of our Lord. Otherwise the name Zion is but an empty sound. The only safety that we can expect in this or any other calamitous time lies in our conformity to gospel requirements.

Every individual may carry the blessings of Zion with him wherever he goes. Our boys who have been called into our country's service, if they keep themselves clean and undefiled, carry Zion with them. It is my faith that they will be protected by divine power. Should they fall in action or from disease it will be with the consent of our Father in heaven. Besides, to all Latter-day Saints, time and eternity are closely associated. Our sons who live righteously, yet who may lose their lives in this devil-engendered war (and may they be few in number, I pray) will enter into the glory prepared for the righteous. The Lord has so declared. "Therefore, whosoever belongeth to my church need not fear, for such shall inherit the kingdom of heaven." (D. & C. 10:55) And also, "fear not even unto death; for in this world your joy is not full, but in me your joy is full." (D. & C. 101:36)

In this world upheaval, in this day of wanton destruction, we, as a people must look upward. There must be trust and faith in our hearts. Hope must walk by our side. We must remember charity also. We must treasure the warm words of the Father to His Church, "Be of good cheer, and do not fear, for I the Lord am with you, and will stand by you." (D. & C. 68:6) We who have been called to leadership in the Church of Christ must lead our people from anxiety and fear and doubt, to trust and faith in the Lord, and certainty in the outcome of the Lord's plan of salvation. We must repeat with gladness the words of the Lord, "Fear not, let your hearts be comforted; yea, rejoice evermore, and in everything give thanks." (D. & C. 98:1)

Above the roar of cannon and airplane, the maneuvers and plans of men, the Lord always determines the tide of battle. So far and no farther does He permit the evil one to go in his career to create human misery.

First Day

The Lord is ever victorious; He is the Master to whose will Satan is subject. Though all hell may rage, and men may follow evil, the purposes of the Lord will not fail. The God of Israel, "He slumbers not nor sleeps." It is well to remember the admonition of old: "Be still and know that I am God."

It is our destiny as a people to purify the world; to lead men from evil to good; to win the nations to the realm of everlasting truth; to prepare the earth for the coming of the Lord. We are called to establish the kingdom of God on earth. If we accept our mission with faith and the courage born of faith, the Lord will make us victorious in our labors in his cause. Happiness will wait upon us. The protection of heaven will be about us. At this time in our history, let us teach as never before. "If ye are prepared, ye shall not fear."

May the Lord qualify us for the heavy duties of this day I pray in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

BISHOP LEGRAND RICHARDS

Presiding Bishop of the Church

BRETHREN: It is a great privilege to associate with you in the leadership of the Church, and I feel very grateful for the kindness that has been extended to me, as I have had the privilege of visiting in your various stakes. It seems that the Church is dearer as we become better acquainted with the men upon whom such responsibility rests.

The Church has always placed a high value upon leadership, righteous leadership. When the Lord was talking to Abraham, He told him of the spirits He had created, and He stood in the midst of them, and He said: "These I will make my rulers upon the earth." Then He said to Abraham,

"Abraham, thou art one of them; thou wast chosen before thou wast born."

It seems to me that probably there has never been a time in the history of the world when there were as many of those spirits among whom the Father stood as there are upon the earth at the present time. Now, perchance, if we are among those spirits of whom the Father spoke, then great responsibility rests upon our shoulders. It is not enough to be called, to be given talents, to be given an opportunity, but the Master indicated that those who are faithful and true to the talents that were placed in their hands, they it was who should receive His blessing. He said unto them: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

So if we expect to continue our positions of leadership it will be because we are faithful over the few things that the Lord has entrusted into our care.

Now we feel very grateful to the members of the stake presidencies and bishoprics throughout the Church for the fine support we have had in the Aaronic Priesthood work in the past three years since we came into office. I would like to call your attention to the fact that in 1939 we had two hundred fifty-eight standard quorum awards in the quorums of the Aaronic Priesthood. In 1940 we had five hundred four, or an increase of ninety-five percent. In 1941 we had nine hundred twelve, and requests are still coming in, which is an additional increase of eighty-one percent over the ninety-five percent of the year before. Now for 1942, according to the promises we are receiving as we go about in the stakes of Zion, we ought to have nearly two thousand.

If it were only reports, brethren, that we were working for, that would not be so much, but when these standard quorum awards are interpreted in terms of the influence they have upon the lives of the Aaronic Priesthood of the Church, it tells quite a remarkable story.

I have some other statistics that may interest you: The three highest stakes in the Church show an average attendance last year of sixty-five percent of their boys—that is an average attendance! The three lowest stakes have an average of nineteen percent—nineteen percent against sixty-five percent. I want you to think about that for a few minutes. I wonder if it is the fault of the boys; I wonder if it is the fault of the Church; I wonder if the Priesthood is any different in these other stakes. In some stakes we find one bishop who is outstanding, and qualifies every quorum in his ward, and then we turn to the other wards, and there are no standard quorum awards there. We had in our office yesterday a chairman of the Aaronic Priesthood in one of the stakes of Zion where every quorum earned a standard quorum award for 1941. I congratulated him, and said: "How do you do it?" He said: "We have an up-and-coming stake presidency, and when we have that, it is easy to do the job." He said: "We tear the Progress of the Church apart and we mimeograph it and send it out to our wards." It was not hard to determine why all the quorums of that stake were standard award quorums, they had "an up-and-coming stake presidency." We have "up-and-coming" bishops in some wards that in the midst of no awards they are able to furnish them.

I would like to give you some statistics here on what standard quorum awards have really done. This is a percentage of the two highest stakes in the Church where each quorum has earned a standard quorum award, and the two lowest where they have no standard quorum awards:

Attendance at quorum meetings for the highest was an average of sixty-six percent; the lowest twenty-eight percent.

This is the average observing the Word of Wisdom; ninety-four percent as against eighty-five percent.

We are very happy that the Word of Wisdom is being that well observed, regardless of the standard quorum awards.

The payment of tithing in the highest stakes, seventy-five percent; in the lowest stakes, thirty-eight percent.

The percent of Adult Aaronic Priesthood in these stakes, in the highest, forty-two percent; in the lowest seventy-five percent.

So you see it tells its own story. Where there are no standard quorum awards, where the work is not being done among the Aaronic Priesthood, they are moving into what we call the Adult Aaronic Priesthood group.

BRETHREN, I believe it is a fine thing to be in positions of responsibility in the Church, but the Lord expects more of us than to be good men. I think that comes first, but He wants us to be active men.

There is one stake of Zion in this Church in which I have been very much interested for many years. I have watched its progress, and I have kept track of its record on the bulletin. Three years ago there was a change made in the stake presidency. The man who was released is a fine Latter-day Saint, a real man, but he did not seem to have the vision of things, and according to the report in the last three years, since the change, that stake has increased its record sixty-six percent in all items, total and average, that are shown in the bulletin. Now that shows leadership. When that stake presidency was appointed, they came in and said: "Bishop, have you any suggestions to make?"

Saturday, April 4

I said: "I would have at least one. I would go out and inventory every man and woman in that stake of Zion who have leadership ability, no matter where they are serving. It is my observation as I travel in the Church that we have many fine men, capable men, who are not active in the Church, hundreds and possibly thousands of men who have had training in the mission field, and they come home and we lose their services, but they may be engaged in other activities."

According to the newspaper accounts, all that was being accomplished, from month to month in the community was being done by the service clubs—Kiwanis Club, Rotary Club, Exchange Club, Lion's Club, etc., on down the line—the Daughters of the Pioneers, the Mothers of the Democrats, the Mothers of the Republicans, etc.; so I said to the president of the stake: "Sometimes I wonder where the kingdom of God is in this stake of Zion. I never felt more than I do today the meaning of the words of the Master when He said: 'Every plant that my Father hath not planted shall be rooted up,' and I believe that with all my heart." I have nothing against these other organizations, but I believe that men in Israel owe their first allegiance to the Church and kingdom of God, and I want to admonish you brethren to put your arms around men and put them to work, and when they are released from positions, do not feel that there is no place for them.

I had a letter from a bishop the other day and he said: "Since they released me I have taken over the Adult Aaronic Priesthood in the ward. We have forty-two enrolled and we are having an average attendance of fifteen to twenty-five in my home every Monday night." There is work for everybody if we are going to discharge the responsibilities that are ours in this great day of the fulness of times.

As I close my remarks, I refer you to the words of Nephi when he saw the coming forth of the gospel in our day, and he said: Blessed are they who shall seek to bring forth my Zion in that day, for they shall be lifted up and be filled with the Holy Ghost and be exalted in the everlasting kingdom of my Father. How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of them that publish glad tidings! (1 Nephi 13:37)

God help us to see our responsibilities and to do them, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

Brethren: We are one day short in our full Conference time. I want to run over a little now, and we will probably have to run over a little tonight. I am going to ask Brother Sonne to take enough time to bear his testimony. He has recovered, apparently fully, from a very serious operation and likewise from a serious sorrow. So we will take enough time now to hear Brother Sonne bear his testimony.

ELDER ALMA SONNE

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY brethren: I appreciate more now than ever before my membership in the Church. I am thankful beyond my power to express for my faith in the gospel of Jesus Christ. I am happy that I was born a member of this Church and that I have a testimony of its divinity and its truthfulness. The Lord has been good to me; He has heard my prayers, and He has come to my rescue.

Men and women need a vindication against the tyranny of death and time, and that vindication is supplied best of all in the restoration of the everlasting gospel in these the last days.

May we be true to our covenants.

May our testimonies grow. May our knowledge of the truth increase, so that when calamities and disturbances come we may say in the words of the scriptures: "The judgments of the Almighty are righteous altogether."

I know God's work is upon the earth, and I know that He has established His Church among men.

May we be true to our responsibilities; may we carry forward in our duties, that when our work is done we may receive the plaudit, "Well and faithfully done; enter into the joys of thy Lord," I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

We will close by singing, "O My Father."

The closing prayer after the song will be offered by President George E. Jorgensen of Carbon Stake.

After the prayer we shall stand adjourned until seven o'clock this evening in this place.

I should like to say to the brethren farther back there, that both this morning and this afternoon there were quite a number of seats in front here where probably you would be enabled to hear better. If the brethren in front would come closer this evening I am sure quite a number who are back there under the gallery could come here where they can hear. I may say that the loud speaking equipment is as good as we can furnish you. You can see that it is not the best, but we will try to make still further adjustments in the hope that we can make you hear better this evening than you have heard today.

The congregation sang the hymn, "O My Father" (Hymn Book, page 143).

Elder George E. Jorgensen, President of the Carbon Stake, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 7:00 p. m.

FIRST DAY

EVENING MEETING

The third session of the Conference convened in the Assembly Hall, Saturday evening, April 4, and commenced promptly at 7 o'clock p. m.

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., presided and conducted the services.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.First Counselor in the First Presidency*

President Grant wishes me to express his regrets that he felt it would be unwise in view of the long meeting tomorrow, for him to come out this evening. He wanted me to express to you his joy at the Conference thus far and to tell you that he looks forward to seeing you in the morning.

The congregation sang the hymn, "How Firm A Foundation," (Hymn Book, page 260).

Elder Joseph B. Harris, President of the San Juan Stake, offered the invocation.

The hymn, "O Ye Mountains High" (Hymn Book, page 376), was then sung by the congregation.

ELDER JOSEPH F. MERRILLOf the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

IN a very real sense, brethren, this is a remarkable gathering. There is assembled here what I think we in truth may say is the most favored group of men in all the world. In a body of this size no other similar assembly could be had anywhere on the face of the earth. There are here the leaders of the Church and of the stakes of the Church, God's Church. We all know that not one of us has a particle of doubt about that. Because we have been privileged to come to the positions that we occupy and to function therein, I think we are wonderfully favored of our Father in heaven.

Bishop Richards this afternoon spoke about the Aaronic Priesthood. If I may, I would like to speak a few minutes about the Melchizedek Priesthood. It is the Priesthood, of course, that, in a sense, makes the Church. To preside over, to guide and direct the Priesthood, is the chief responsibility of us who are assembled here; and particularly do the presidencies of stakes have the responsibility of presiding over and directing the labors of the Melchizedek Priesthood in their stakes.

It was nearly five years ago, in answer to a question, that President Grant reminded the Council of Twelve that they constitute the General Priesthood Board of the Church; and President Clawson, I remember, said President Smith gave the same answer once during his administration. The Council of Twelve began to think, after that remark of President Grant's, a little more intently of their responsibility for the welfare of the Priesthood of the Church, particularly the Melchizedek Priesthood quorums thereof, and so they began to work. And there was announced, in the issue of The Improvement Era four years ago last December, what was, according to the headlines of the article, a new Priesthood plan. Well, there was nothing new in principle about it; however, its title was intriguing, and I presume that all in the stakes who had any responsibility for the Melchizedek Priesthood read the article.

Now, in response to a petition of the general Sunday school board, and in accordance with what had been the expressed wishes of some members of the Council of the Twelve the Priesthood classes, Melchizedek and Aaronic, were taken out of the Sunday schools. I think this was a good move. The Priesthood classes of the Church, particularly the Melchizedek Priesthood classes, had grown to believe that to be active in the Priesthood quorums was to attend the weekly or the monthly meetings of the quorum; and if that was done one was considered to be wholly active. We seemed to have forgotten the fact that in this Church we get joy through activity. When we attend our class, sit quietly, and listen to somebody conduct the lesson, then get up and go away, the amount of activity in which we engage is extremely small.

In taking the classes of the Priesthood groups and quorums out of the Sunday school, it was not designed, at all, to say the class work was not important, but it was designed to emphasize another feature that had become more or less quiescent—the feature of activity; and so since that time the Council of Twelve, together with the other general Priesthood authorities of the Church, as they have gone out through the stakes, have been very insistent in urging the presidencies of stakes—because they are the responsible officers in the stakes—to look carefully to the supervision and guidance of the work of the Priesthood. No more responsible work, no greater obligation exists in the stakes than that of properly supervising the Priesthood quorums.

There has been a great deal of effort spent, in the last four years, in trying to improve the activity of Priesthood quorums, particularly of the Melchizedek Priesthood quorums, but the progress has been rather slow. Though I think that if we compare the results today and judge our reports with the reports that were obtainable at that time, we will see that there has been improvement; and yet it is rather disappointing, when we come to realize what the Priesthood means and what it is, that improvement has not been more rapid.

Of course, we realize this fact, that all of this work is wholly voluntary. There is no such thing as force in the Church. There is no desire to use force, even if it could be used. It is love that is the dominating factor in the Church, and it is through love that we have been trying to get our brothers to feel, to a greater degree than they did in the past, their responsibilities as holders of the Priesthood. To be ordained to the Priesthood, in itself, may bring no blessing; it may bring condemnation. It gives an opportunity, a wonderful opportunity, in the light of the real truth in the circumstance, for personal growth and development.

So an individual who is privileged to receive the Priesthood has been honored with a very great opportunity.

Now, what we have been trying to do, brethren, as you know, is to emphasize the need of improving that opportunity, in order that we might live more acceptably to our Father in heaven. As a means of stimulating that activity, a committee was set up in every stake—the stake Melchizedek Priesthood committee—and it was advised that a member of the stake presidency should be chairman of that committee, the thought being to emphasize to the stake presidencies that it was their responsibility to supervise the work of the Melchizedek Priesthood quorums in their stakes.

The chief duty of that committee is to train the quorum officers in their duties and responsibilities, and so it was advised that a monthly meeting be held with all the Priesthood quorum officers and group leaders. A program for these meetings was discussed in several subsequent issues of The Improvement Era.

Well, brethren, progress has been made, we think, in an understanding by this stake committee of its responsibilities, and we believe those committees are growing in efficiency in discharging the responsibility of training the officers, but there is still much to be accomplished.

Now, may I say that, among other things, we instituted a quarterly report and asked that every quorum and every quorum group fill out a quarterly report form in triplicate, keep one and send two to the chairman of the stake committee, who keeps one and sends one on to the Melchizedek Priesthood committee of the Council of Twelve. Those reports have been coming in. They indicate, as I said a moment ago, some advancement and progress, but not as much as we hoped for. There are still some things that are lacking.

We know that a number of years ago there was advised to be set up in every quorum four standing committees. They were named. Their duties were specified. Generally the committees were appointed, but even today some of them, according to reports, are not functioning well. Do we remember two things must be done if a standing committee continues to function well? Frequent assignments must be made and frequent reports required. Don't give a blanket assignment, turn the committee loose, and expect it to operate. Make those assignments frequently, and then ask for a report on every assignment. The report, of course, may be oral, it may be written, but a report should be required on every assignment. When the assignment is made, the assigning authority—of course that is the presidency of the quorum—should keep in touch with those who receive the assignment and see that they are functioning.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

In the February number of The Improvement Era an article that was written by Elder Joseph Fielding Smith indicated in very clear terms what the duties of these committees are. But in order that these committees should function, and in order that the presidency of the quorum should feel it is their responsibility to see that they function, it was advised that the presidency of the quorum divide themselves among these committees, each one of the presidency being chairman of a committee. Now since there are four standing committees, the chairman of one of them will have to be chosen from the membership. The particular committees of which the presidents should be the chairmen were indicated in the article.

Well, brethren, I want to repeat that in order to get your committees at work and keep them at work, it is necessary to make frequent, specific assignments, and then to make a demand for reports on those assignments.

Now, there is another thing that we feel ought to be done, in order that the presidencies of quorums may meet their responsibilities to a greater degree than they did in the past. What do we advise? We advise that the presidencies of these quorums, who are held responsible for their quorums, should see that the requirements, as indicated by the questions on the report forms, are definitely assigned, and that they are met. That is going to be some considerable responsibility. But in order that this may be done, we feel that the presidencies of quorums should meet more frequently than they have been doing—more frequently than once a month. No presidency of a stake can function unless they have regular weekly meetings. As a rule, no bishopric can function unless they have regular weekly meetings. We feel that presidencies of quorums should meet weekly, wherever it is feasible to do so, and that would be in the great majority of cases. Meet weekly. Let them meet with the idea of getting on their knees, brethren, and pray devotedly and wholeheartedly and honestly to the Lord for wisdom and guidance, and then get up and put their wits to work and try to plan how to make their assignments, how to meet their responsibilities, how to increase the activities of their committees and of their members.

IN every report there are some things even though the report, on the whole, is excellent—some things in which the quorum is weak. Do the presidency feel it is their responsibility to call attention to that, and to try to encourage their committees, to encourage their members, whoever have the responsibility of improving in the particular respects where weakness is indicated? Do they feel that they should keep near to them in that respect?

I want to call your attention to two or three activities, among others, that we have been very earnestly recommending and urging to be done.

You know since the beginning of our country's participation in war activities more and more of our brethren have been leaving home, entering defense industries, military forces, and so forth. We have been urging, in accordance with the recommendation that was made here by President Thomas E. McKay this morning, that every quorum feel that it is its responsibility to keep in close touch with absent brethren. A quorum is a group of brethren bound together by love, by feelings of fraternity, and sympathy and fellowship and mutual interest. Does it not seem, from the standpoint of what is reasonable in the matter, that it is unthinkable that a member from a quorum can go away and be away for three months or longer, and the quorum make no effort whatsoever to get in touch with and hear from that absent member?

Now, it is recommended that he be written to at least monthly, wherever this is feasible. Certainly, brethren, all those that are away from the quorum, not only in the armed forces, but away from home in defense work anywhere, should be communicated with at least once a month. It should be somebody's business in the quorum to do this. Whether the president wants his welfare committee or others to have this special assignment is a matter that is apart from the fact that it ought to be somebody's business in behalf of the quorum, to write friendly, encouraging, helpful letters frequently to those that are away.

Now, our boys that are going into the armed forces meet tremendous difficulties and temptations and they need all the encouragement, all the help they can get. So we have asked—and I am going to ask now, brethren,—will you presidencies of stakes see that in your stake every quorum is instructed to keep in touch with these absentees?

Now, time admits only a reference to one thing more. It was five years ago this month that the Presidency of the Church wrote to the Council of the Twelve, they put it in writing—not by oral instruction only, but they put it in writing—and directed that there should be instituted in the Church a campaign for the non-use of liquor and tobacco. They directed it should be a Priesthood project. All quorums of the Priesthood, Melchizedek and Aaronic, should be held responsible for cleaning up their own membership from the use of these narcotics, liquor and tobacco. In the quorum quarterly report forms are questions relative to this liquor-tobacco campaign. Among the questions are these: How many abstain from the use of liquor and tobacco? That number is very generally given. How many of the addicts are being labored with? The majority of the quorums in the Church today are saying: "None."

Now, brethren, I am speaking very plainly on the matter. It seems to me that it is unthinkable that an assignment to the Priesthood quorums direct from the First Presidency should go unheeded. I have never known of any project being assigned more directly than that. And yet some of the quorums are not doing anything, apparently, with their addict members. Oh, yes, they sponsor public lectures, perhaps have somebody come into the classes and talk, and so on. That isn't the way, brethren, the effective missionary work of this Church is carried on. That isn't the way the stake or foreign missionaries are mainly functioning. It is mainly by personal contact that missionaries work. That has been the method from the beginning that has won people.

The first phases of this campaign, may I say, were devoted to what we called the campaign of information. We have sent out more than a million pieces of literature, which have been spread all over the Church and very generally read, in all the Priesthood quorums.

Then we reached what President Clawson called the campaign of persuasion. "Know this, that every soul is free to choose his life and what he'll be. For this eternal truth is given, God will force no man to heaven. He'll call, persuade, direct aright, in numerous ways be good and kind, but never force the human mind."

The campaign of persuasion, brethren, uses the method of personal contact. Will you presidencies of stakes see that this direct assignment from the First Presidency is carried out in your stakes and that the method of personal contact is employed among the addicts? That is the most effective way. It is going to be by personal contacts that quorums can win their addicts to abstinence. Brethren, it can be done.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

My observation and my testimony is that the Lord never required us to do anything that we cannot do with His help if we will exert ourselves. A wonderful testimony of that was given by our great President this morning, when he recited his first trip to the East to get some money. He was sent by proper authority and went in full confidence that the Lord was guiding him, and he relied upon the Lord and upon the promise that had been given him, and he succeeded marvelously well.

Yes, personal contact is the method and, wisely used, it can succeed. I refer you to a report that was published in the December number of The Improvement Era under the headline, "Ogden's Fine Work." The high priests quorum of Ogden Stake had thirty-two addicts, nearly all of them elderly men. Most of them had been using tobacco all their lives. They haven't any more than a half dozen left today. They are working with them and are going to make that quorum one hundred percent total abstainers. Will you do the same in your stakes?

Now, brethren, there is a need for this. Our people are spending millions for liquor and tobacco and those things are faith-killing. If we want to develop faith, we need to get rid of those factors that handicap us in the exercise of faith. We must set the right example to you.

Keep your quorums active, brethren. That is the call of the hour. A number of ways of doing this have been indicated to you. The Lord bless you and help you to this end, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER CHARLES A. CALLIS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Still stands Thine ancient sacrifice, an humble and a contrite heart.

AMONG the cardinal virtues of the gospel is the praiseworthy virtue of humility. To a certain king of Israel, whose power was waning before the "pride that goeth before a fall," the prophet Samuel said: "When thou wert little in thine own sight, the Lord blessed thee." I interpret humility as being strength. Humility expresses itself in lowly service, in volunteering for any service which will ameliorate the conditions, particularly the spiritual conditions of mankind. Humility does not mean to grovel, to be a sycophant. Humility is inward strength outwardly expressed in good works. Great souls attain to humility.

The Apostle Peter said:

Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time:

Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you.

Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour. . . . (1 Peter 5:6-8)

Are the American people great enough to be humble? If this nation and all mankind had humbled themselves beneath the mighty hand of God, there would have been no war. Humility would have found beautiful expression in noble deeds.

Charles Evan Hughes gave this definition of Christian character: "Faith without credulity, conviction without bigotry, charity without condescension, courage without pugnacity, self-respect without vanity, humility without obsequiousness, love of humanity without sentimentality, and meekness with power." When Chief Justice Charles Evan Hughes retired from his exalted position, the Supreme Court was weakened, and this republic was made poorer.

Consider the example of Moses. He was the great lawgiver of Israel, filled with courage and faith. The miraculous, the statesmanlike work that he accomplished, the deeds that he performed, stamp him as the foremost statesman of any age of the world, excepting always, of course, the Lord Jesus Christ. Of a people steeped in slavish bondage he made a nation. He breathed into them, as someone has said, the immortality that made them a great nation. And yet he was a meek man; nevertheless he was strong.

One time the children of Israel committed sin, and Moses said to them: "I am going up in the mount to talk with God and make atonement for your sins." Oh, I love that word, "atonement." The atonement of the Savior—without that there would have been no vitality, no purpose in any of the principles of the gospel, for it gives life to every doctrine of the everlasting gospel. Listen to this:

And Moses returned unto the Lord, and said, Oh, this people have sinned a great sin, and have made them gods of gold.

Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin—; and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written. (Exodus 32:31, 32)

Unparalleled love, the spirit of the holy Priesthood, humility, meekness with power, exemplifying the love of the Lord Jesus Christ! He didn't even want to survive the people. If they were eliminated, if the punishment of God destroyed them, he, too, was willing that his name, yea, his life, be blotted out with the people he loved and made, for he carried them as a father carries his child. He smote the rock out of which gushed the water. With miraculous power he divided the waters of the Red Sea; but as he stood upon the mount, pleading with God for the Israelites, he reached sublime heights; he touched divinity!

That is the spirit that should characterize the holy Priesthood. If we work in humility, become little in our own sight, more than we are now, and seek the good of others I testify to you that there will be added power to our labors, and sinners will be brought unto Him. The Savior said:

... Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister;

And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant. . . . (Matt. 20: 26, 27)

Christ was called the suffering servant:

For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. (John 3:16)

The man who communed with Jehovah, Joseph Smith, was meek but had great power. Enshrined in that power was love for his people and for the gospel of Jesus Christ. When the West was opened unto him, when he saw there a refuge for himself and his people, yet for fear of drawing down upon the people he loved (who would be temporarily left in Nauvoo) bitter persecution, mobocracy, and cruel punishment, he voluntarily relinquished the means of escape and said: "I go as a lamb to the slaughter. If my life"—note that, brethren—"if my life is of no value to my friends, it is of no value to myself."

That is the yardstick by which we should measure our lives: How much are we worth to our fellow citizens, to the people of the Church, to our country? That is the true measure, for the best of life is expressed in service to others.

God grant that the American people—that includes us—may rise to higher eminence by clothing ourselves with humility, and humbling ourselves under the mighty hand of God. I testify to you that if this nation and all the world would repent, as Ninevah did, from the greatest to the least, and serve God, the horrors of war would soon disappear. This is my testimony, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

Elder Sylvester Q. Cannon has been away for a little while recuperating. He comes back feeling very much better, and we should like to hear from him. We hope he may at least bear his testimony and add such other words as he may care to give to us.

ELDER SYLVESTER Q. CANNONOf the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

IT is a great pleasure to me, my brethren, to be here this evening, to enjoy the spirit of these meetings in this conference today. I am impressed with that spirit. I rejoice with you for the information that is given to us and the testimony that we have received regarding the work of the Lord, in which I have great joy and satisfaction.

As some of you may know I have been "under the weather" and have suffered trouble with high blood pressure. My doctor advised me some time ago to observe certain rules to enable me to enjoy greater health and strength. The Presidency were very kind and considerate. They allowed me to leave and go to California. I have been there for about six weeks recently, and I have greatly improved in my condition. I feel greatly improved now. I think I ought to take up my part of the work that devolves upon me and measure up to my responsibility.

I know the gospel is true. I have a testimony of the divinity of this cause. I am as sure of the divinity of this work as I am that I live. I desire so to live every day that I will be worthy to enjoy the blessings of the Lord. I realize the fact that I have received many blessings. The First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve have been very kind. Many things have happened in which I have received many blessings, and advantages. I can assure you that in every way I rejoice in these things, and I am very happy to be in a position to go forward and do the work that I expect to do. Of course, I will have to exercise care for the time-being till I regain my strength, so as to be able to carry forward the work devolving upon me.

I rejoice in the blessings that have come to each one of us Latter-day Saints. We have a testimony of the truth of this work. The work is going forward. I realize, of course, there are many people in the world who cannot see as we see, and do not appreciate the things that we know. But I want to say to you that while we are sustaining the government of the United States, and sustaining all the nations who are endeavoring to live in righteousness, I am sure that we have every reason to rejoice in the fact that there has come to us a knowledge and understanding of these things. The divinity of this work is beyond comprehension, if we live for it. So I desire to testify to you again, that I am very grateful for the blessings the Lord has given me, and the love that my brethren have shown me.

I testify to you that it is of great concern to every Latter-day Saint that he or she should live in such a way as to be worthy to receive the blessings of the Lord. I testify of these things to you, and express my gratitude to the Latter-day Saints, and desire to work with them to promote righteousness and truth in the earth. I do it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

The congregation then sang the first two verses of the hymn, "Come, O Thou King of Kings," (Hymn Book, page 209).

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.First Counselor in the First Presidency*

Brethren: Our meeting tomorrow is planned out, part of it, by radio time, which you may know is pretty exact. The afternoon meeting tomorrow is to be your meeting. The meeting Monday morning is filled, so that we have no alternative tonight but to ask the brethren who are left (there are nine of them) to be good enough to let us hear from them. We want to hear from all of them, and that I take it will give them about six minutes apiece. I am sorry, but I do not know what else to do about it.

ELDER MARVIN O. ASHTON

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

PRESIDENT CLARK's concern in the short time left and the number of us yet to be heard from, reminds us we must be brief. A minister in his efforts to impress his good people with the miraculous in nature observed in his talk this particular Sunday that in every blade of grass there was a sermon. The following Saturday one of the boys of the parish found the minister cutting his lawn. In greeting his spiritual adviser the boy exclaimed, "Reverend, I am sure glad to see you cutting your sermons short." I shall make you happy in making my sermon short.

Will you please have your thinking machinery shift gears into the realm of temporal affairs? The temporal problems are the responsibilities of the Presiding Bishopric, and to be frank with you we don't blush in reminding you of them from time to time. In quoting Joseph Smith, I was interested in what Brother Marion Romney had to say about the temporal and the spiritual things of the Church. The Prophet observed that the man who could make an intelligent demarkation would be a very wise man. Brethren, in living our religion, we just can't get away from the temporal things. They "smack us in the eye," so to speak, everywhere we go, and if we hope to have our thinking on terra firma, we've got to meet fairly and squarely our stewardship. We brethren assembled here tonight are the directors of this great Church corporation, of course, keeping in mind that the bishops working with us are influenced and guided, if you please, by our attitude and instructions. Some people are so constituted that even common sense must be reinforced with chapter and verse. For their benefit, here we go: "And even the bishop, who is a judge, and his counselors, if they are not faithful in their stewardship shall be condemned, and others shall be planted in their stead." (D. & C. 64:40)

Please keep in mind that you have fifteen hundred buildings in this Church. If you put an average value of twenty thousand dollars on each, the minimum value of Church property is at least thirty million dollars. I dare say your cost of replacement would be nearer one hundred million dollars. Now don't forget this depreciation business. Still using the minimum figure: one percent depreciation is three hundred thousand dollars per year; two percent or the figure used by the government in the most substantial construction will be six hundred thousand dollars per year. If you depreciate those buildings five percent, as the neglect some buildings get will indicate, (and that isn't fiction) your depreciation per year would be one million five hundred thousand dollars.

I ask you who is the "watch dog" of the treasury? Is he only that fellow who writes out the checks? Is he only the one who watches the gates of the Church vaults? In a big sense the "watch dogs" are those who are the custodians of our Church buildings. Don't forget it. "A stitch in time saves nine." "Trifles make perfection, but perfection is no trifle."

I brought over with me today a board panel with some evidences of mistakes wired thereon. Like other sins, here are displayed evidences of sins of omission and sins of commission. Don't forget, one spark will burn up a million dollars of the hardest earned money in the world. When you take a fuse plug and insert a penny therein, or twist the brass so it laps over the contact in the center, that is a sin of commission. Yes, only a little thing, but the spark may send smoke to the skies of our people's hard earned savings. Our people take the skin off their hands in the sacrifices they make, and plain carelessness burns up in a minute the results of such sacrifices. That fuse plug is so constructed as to make for you a night watchman to guard your property when you are asleep. He makes your absence from home safe from fire. Yet in some of these sins of commission you take a six shooter, as it were, and pick him off. Yes, you kill the guard that protects your home.

We have asked you to install at a cost of twenty-one dollars a low water cut-off in your boiler. Some of you won't. We ask you to test the water in your boilers to save corroding, but you won't. Right while we talk, the good people of a little ward who can't dig down any more will have to raise nine hundred dollars to replace a boiler because some one blundered in a detail we are talking about—a little sin of commission. In this boiler was inserted a leadlike substance as a plug which, when subjected to extra heat, would melt and automatically shut off the furnace. What did he do? He plugged the hole with a hickory stick—a sin of commission here. In some chapels we have found the controls and safety appliances wired down, and maybe two hundred little children on the floor just over this danger of explosion, they and their devoted teachers in oblivion of the "dynamite" they are hovering over. If you want to get some faith-promoting stories, just follow us around to some of the Church buildings and see how the Lord has His arm around us. Keeping in mind our carelessness, if the Lord didn't have His arms around us, we'd have a hundred fires a year.

We are still talking about the temporal things. The lives of our people are at stake. I don't care whether you place the Church property at thirty million dollars or one hundred million dollars, we are reminded in a big way that we are the watch dogs of the treasury. A custodian is either too lazy or he doesn't know how to clean the ashes out of his stoker, and a sacrificing handful of people have to dig down in their pockets for three hundred dollars for a new stoker.

Another ward has to meet a bill of six hundred dollars for a new boiler because the custodian failed to go to the expense of ten cents worth of labor and five cents for a postage stamp in the examination of the water in his boiler.

A keeper of a ward's property won't clean out the old rags from the basement and thirty thousand dollars honest-to-goodness toil and sacrifice goes up in smoke.

The skies of the most beautiful hamlet in our country are darkened by the smoke of a fifty thousand dollar beautiful edifice and contents because the bishop would not take counsel as to how easily fires are started by defective wiring.

It is like the Irishman who cut off one of his fingers in the rip saw and was showing his friends how he did it. While demonstrating, he had to exclaim, "Gee, there goes another one." Yes, brethren, while we are talking, there goes another meetinghouse up in smoke.

Now you stake presidents, we have asked you to appoint a member of your high council to be the point of contact between our office and the wards of your stake. If you haven't done so, please appoint him now and give us his name and address.

I do want to say this before I sit down: We compliment most of you men on the way you are teaming with us. There are some of you who don't. We don't know why; when we visit your places, we just don't understand; we can't understand it. As Bishop Richards said today, climate doesn't determine what your stake is going to be. It is initiative. We keep crying and crying to have some of these things taken care of, and they are not.

May the Lord bless us in our responsibilities, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER ANTOINE R. IVINS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

BRETHREN, I believe this is the first time I ever stood before a congregation of this many men that didn't have a good number of seventies in it to give it color. You have seven of us on the stand, but we feel perfectly inadequate.

I wish to send, through you stake presidents, to all those seventies out there, our regrets that they are not here with us, and our good wishes. We are just a bit worried about them. Brother Merrill has told us what he expects them to do in a quorum capacity. They have been told that they can't drive their automobiles to get together. They are scattered all over from Dan to Beersheba. There are only about twenty-six quorums out of one hundred which are confined to but one ward. Those twenty-six will be able to hold their council meetings and their quorum meetings without much difficulty. The other seventy-four are scattered over from two to eight or ten wards.

Now, we hope that you brethren will remember that when they divide up into groups and go into their various wards, that they are still a quorum, under stake jurisdiction conjointly with that of the First Council of the Seventy that you will try to retain your interest in those seventies, and provide ways that they may occasionally get together in full quorums.

I imagine your high priests will have the same difficulty that the seventies will experience. In many of the stakes where I have visited I fear that the monthly quorum meeting is going to be next to impossible. The leadership meeting does not provide the opportunity for more than a quorum council meeting. I hope that some time, at least, in the quarter, that we can get all of our seventies together, so that they will still remember that they are a quorum, and that they have a responsibility to the stake organization, as well as to the First Council.

Brethren, if you will help us I am sure that you can open up the way for them so that they can retain their interest in their quorum, and function in a quorum capacity.

Now, we have another thing that bothers us. We have already noticed, in the report for January of this year, that there has been a very definite and distinct let-down in the missionary work of the stakes. We hope that in view of this recent instruction that missionary work may be reorganized so that it can carry on without too much hindrance and too much obstruction. To you, brethren, you stake presidents, we give that responsibility to see that your stake missions and your seventies' quorums function naturally.

We have faith in you. We believe in you. We know that many of you, if not most of you, have passed through our organization, and we hope that you will be able to retain an interest in the seventies, that you will help them, and in doing that help us.

I am happy for this opportunity to bear my testimony. I feel that we are in the hands of the Lord, and I feel that regardless of the obstacles that may come our way, this great work will go forward. I believe there is nothing under heaven that can interrupt its progress, although we may meet serious difficulties at times.

God bless you. Amen.

ELDER CLIFFORD E. YOUNG

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

A GREAT deal has been said in this conference about our interest in the boys who are in the service, and I am sure it is opportune. There are two things, however, my brethren, that I would like to suggest here. I can only suggest them, because of the lack of time.

Heretofore we have taken a pride in our rural, peaceful communities, and

Saturday, April 4

* First Day

with justification we have talked of our culture and refinement—a culture developed through faith in God and a devotion to high purposes. The Church has had a refining influence on all who have lived up to its teachings and participated in the strength of its organization.

Now a great transition is taking place. Our boys are having to leave the influences of their youth, and are being transplanted into a life that has for its goal, not peace, but war; not the refining influences of the gospel, but the hatreds, and coarseness that can only come from the cruellest war of all time. Then, too, we are witnessing an industrial transition that is fast changing our heretofore pastoral communities into active humming commercial centers. These new enterprises are also bringing an altogether different influence into the lives of our youth.

These changes should give all of us great concern for we have never had to meet these influences before, but this is only part of the problem. We cannot picture what the transaction will be when the war is over, and our boys return from the army, and from the mills and factories, back to the farms, where returns for their labor may not be very remunerative—and where many of them will find no work at all.

Lack of time will only permit the suggesting of the problems. We, who have the responsibility of the directing of Priesthood activities of the Church, need to be thinking of this. It will require all of the ingenuity and organization at our command to meet these problems. May we keep in touch with our boys and help them in their thinking and in the adjustments that are to come.

One other thing, and that is this: We are already beginning to feel the animosities and the hatreds that are being engendered because of the war. President Clark warned us of this a long time ago, and we are beginning now to see and feel it, and we are feeling it with our own people. We have in our midst people who belong to the Church, who have come from foreign lands, people who have sacrificed, and whose faith is just as firm as those of us who were born and reared in this land, and yet they are becoming the victims of these hatreds. May we be cautious about this, and may we use all the influence we have to preserve the love of the gospel in the hearts of the people, and to caution them that the feelings of our Saints, who are the victims of these unfortunate circumstances, are tender, and that they should be safeguarded against these hatreds.

May we always remember that there is a difference between sin and the sinner. If we can do that, it will help a lot. There isn't a stake of Zion that isn't feeling this thing, and as this war continues, and the casualties begin to come in, this spirit is going to become intensified, and the problem is going to become acute.

May God help us, that we may not fail in our responsibilities, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER JOSEPH L. WIRTHLIN

Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

As I looked into your faces today, brethren, the question occurred to me, "I wonder what it is that motivates these men to render such a generous, splendid service?"

I noted that some of you have come as far as two thousand five hundred miles to attend this conference, leaving your families and businesses. The spirit that has motivated you to attend this conference and to carry on in the work of the Lord that has been assigned to you, is the same spirit which has built up the Church in these, the last days—the spirit of testimony.

In considering our achievements in the valleys of these mountains, I always think of our pioneer fathers and the pioneer leadership who were willing to sacrifice life itself and all they possessed for the gospel's sake. And why were they willing to do it? Because in the heart of each and every one of them a testimony burned that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, and that Joseph Smith is a prophet of God and all of those who succeeded Joseph Smith are prophets and apostles of the Lord Jesus Christ. The great spirit of testimony is the power that stimulates all of us to serve in this great cause.

Some few months ago I had the privilege of reading a diary of one of our pioneer brethren, and he tells how he first heard the gospel in Canada, and of the great desire that burned in his heart to meet the leadership of the Church and of the long trip made from Canada to Nauvoo.

After being among the leaders of the Church and becoming acquainted with the people, as he was taking leave of them to return to Canada, he said: "I turned and looked back and wept, for my heart was with the Saints; and I said, 'I'll soon see you again.'" As he crossed the wide prairie, very thinly settled, he would sit down and rest, singing the hymn "Hail to the Prophet Ascending to Heaven." "I would then get up and go on my way, rejoicing."

He was convinced that the leadership of the Church was in the hands of inspired men and those who embraced the gospel were indeed His Saints. He then returned to Canada, gathering up his few belongings, and with his family, made the long trek back to Nauvoo, just in time to suffer many of the tribulations and hardships of the Saints as they were driven across the Mississippi River on the ice and onto the bleak plains of Iowa.

Arriving in the valleys of the mountains, he immediately erected a log home for his family. With his brothers, he built saw mills and grist mills, cultivated some land, indicating in his diary that he felt rather prosperous.

But "soldiers of the cross" in his day were minute men, and in 1857 he was called by the First Presidency to return to the Eastern States Mission with a handcart company of missionaries. He spent one year in the missionary service when word came that Johnston's army was on its way to Utah. Shortly thereafter, the First Presidency called the missionaries home.

The army had preceded the arrival of the missionaries, and their families had moved to the south. This good brother found that his farm had gone to weeds, and his mill was in need of repair.

His family returned from the south; and, again in the words of this pioneer:

I went to work again in good spirits to make home pleasant. I had plenty of house room and had all my family under one roof. We ate at one table and had plenty to eat. This was the happiest time of my life, for all was peace and good feeling.

After three years of hard work, this brother found himself in good circumstances financially, saying that he calculated he was worth about $10,000. But another call came from the First Presidency—this time to dispose of his property and surplus livestock, being requested to take a few head of livestock, some furniture, and with his family make the long trek to the land of Dixie and assist in establishing communities there.

He said, "I scratched my head; . . . thought; and said, 'All right.'" Something in the heart of this man bore witness to the fact that the men who had called him to make the long, arduous journey to southern Utah were servants of God; and with that testimony burning in his heart, he could not refuse the call.

To make the story short, this grand character went to southern Utah. He assisted in the erection of the St. George Temple. He ran mills in the mountains and filled every assignment given to him, with willingness. The remainder of his life was spent in hardship. He passed through the trial of burying several of his children in the sands of southern Utah. But not once in his diary did I discover any feeling or word of complaint, only expressions of gratitude for the privilege of serving in the cause of the Master, grateful for the testimony that burned in his heart.

I am sure, brethren, that the same

Saturday, April 4

First Day

spirit of testimony exists throughout the Church today. This is the spirit that is in your hearts. As long as that spirit endures within us, God will bless us, He will sustain us, and this work will roll on to its final destiny and objective, which is to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ to all people, that the world will be prepared for the second coming of the King of Kings, which event I pray will soon come to pass that we again shall know peace, harmony, and good will among men, which I pray for in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER RICHARD L. EVANS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I AM almost tempted to say that the short talks are better than the long ones. I don't know whether I dare say it or not.

I was interested this morning in hearing Brother Thomas E. McKay report conditions in the European Missions, and particularly was I interested in hearing that the local missionaries in Great Britain had reported sixty baptisms. You presidents of stakes each has a mission in your stake. In spite of the intensive activity of this day, and some shortage of personnel, I am sure that if the missionaries of England, in the conditions in which they find themselves after this length of time, can do this kind of work, we can ably man and conduct our stake missions. Scattered throughout the length and breadth of the British Mission there are not to be found as many members of the Church as there are in many of our stakes, and their resources and opportunities cannot compare with ours—and yet they are going forward. We do appreciate the cooperation we have received from you stake presidents and we ask you for a continuance of this cooperation in this highly important obligation which the Lord has placed upon us, and which should have yet greater emphasis and attention.

The radio mail brings in a good deal of interesting comment from many thousands of people. One listener sent in a clipping from The Christian Advocate, three or four days ago. The Christian Advocate, according to its own masthead, is the official magazine of Methodism. This is the opening sentence of the clipping:

If the prophets had kept out of politics, they would never have gotten into the Old Testament.

It struck me rather forcibly, and also the thought struck me that if this had appeared in our own publications someone would have criticized it as "politics," but since it appeared in a Methodist publication I suppose it is all right to present it here without hearing it derided as "politics." (Laughter) Seriously, I believe the time is opportune to leave just this thought, since we are not now in the midst of any political campaign, since we face no immediate election, and since the heat of such things is not with us at the moment:

As I looked back to those prophets who would never have gotten into the Old Testament if they had kept out of "politics," I suddenly became aware that the Philistines certainly didn't like the "politics" of the Israelites; I am sure that the Pharaohs didn't like the "politics" of Moses when he led the children of Israel out of bondage. I am equally sure that Saul didn't like the "politics" of Samuel when, at the Lord's command, he anointed David king; and I am sure that the captains and kings didn't like the "politics" of Jeremiah, or any of the other prophets of God.

But this fact is fundamental: The principles of religion enter into every activity of life. Should the activities of politics extend themselves into every activity of life, we must be increasingly careful to weigh every issue of politics according to principle, and not according to politics, if you please. I am sure that politics were attributed to the President of this Church, by many, when he took his stand, courageous and outspoken, on the prohibition question, for example. Call it politics if you wish. The principle is there and always will be, and some day his stand will be vindicated. It has been already in the minds of thinking and honest men.

I have been reading recently the last twenty sermons of Pastor Martin Niemöller, whose unfortunate country could no longer tolerate his preaching. In his note to last sermon is this comment:

We are being accosted on all sides by statesmen, by the man on the street, who tells us: "Do not speak so loudly or you will land in prison. Pray do not speak so plainly; surely you can say all that in a more obscure fashion." But, brothers and sisters, we are not allowed to put our bushel under a basket.

One more sermon after that, and Martin Niemöller no more ascended to his pulpit, and I think he has never been heard from since.

A quotation from Jeremiah will be of interest to all who have the sacred trust of leadership in the wards and stakes and missions of this Church:

Thus saith the Lord; Stand in the court of the Lord's house, and speak unto all the cities of Judah. . . . all the words that I command thee to speak unto them; diminish not a word. (Jeremiah 26:2)

As we face the issues of the future, my brethren, may we, in the leadership of our people here at headquarters, and you in your stakes, weigh all the issues according to principle. There comes a time in the career of every man when he must speak according to the truth or break the trust of his office, and when the Presidency of the Church, and their associates in the general councils of the Church, unitedly take a stand on any principle, let us remember the prophets of the Old Testament, and meet the issues according to their merit as principles, and on no other consideration.

I leave you my testimony of my gratitude to my Father in heaven for the Presidency of this Church, and those who are associated with them; for the restoration of the gospel, and all that it means. This is the work of the Lord, and it will go forward to the accomplishment of His purposes, regardless of the schemes of men and the confused issues of the day. God be with you. Amen.

ELDER RUFUS K. HARDY

Of the First Council of the Seventy

MY brethren, I rejoice greatly at this opportunity of saying a few words and being in your midst.

I sense and understand somehow—I think I am correct—that there are just about one hundred forty-one spiritual gardens which we here tonight have to take care of after we leave this meeting, and I am sure that we all feel that we can go back to these places, having drawn from that great reservoir which has been given to us here, and give that heavenly and spiritual food to those people who live and who abide in the vicinity in which we operate.

You know, I have been struck with this thought, that in all of the history of religion, in all of the Bible stories and all the stories of the Book of Mormon, God's advent among men commenced with small beginnings. As we have been chatting here tonight, talking about this great and marvelous and wonderful man Moses, just for a moment let your mind dwell on that man, if you like—the cradle; then the leaving of his country because of what he had done; then, as I remember it, the Bible says that Moses, watching the flocks of Jethro, at the back of the desert near Mount Sinai, saw this peculiar burning bush, which was not consumed, and the voice said to him, as he drew near it: "Moses, Moses," and he said: "Here am I, God." And then think of the length of time it took the Lord God Almighty to prevail on him to do the thing that he should do; his excuses of his speech, of his tongue; and finally, I think, as it occurs to me, more in desperation than anything else. God said to him: "What have you got in your hand?" "A staff."

Saturday, April 4

"Throw it down," and it turned into a serpent, and Moses turned to flee. God said to him: "Pick it up by the tail," and he did.

Even after that he said: "I can't do it. I can't tell these people. They won't believe me." And God said to him: "Go; but I want to say to you, Moses, that Pharaoh will not let your people go, not by a—" I was going to say a joyful, but God said, "Not by a great handful." But he did, and he accomplished the purposes which God gave him to do. Why? Because within him dwelt that which dwells within us, this marvelous Melchizedek Priesthood. That is the reason.

Now, I do not pray for that Priesthood, but I do pray that we may function and operate under the great call and the noble assignment which have been given to us, in such a way that we may ever honor the Priesthood, be proud of our acts, and God may smile upon that which we do, and I do that in the name of Jesus, Amen.

ELDER JOHN H. TAYLOR

Of the First Council of the Seventy

LAST week I received a letter from a man in Washington who wanted to know something about the gospel, or at least receive some tracts. His card was a very ordinary card. It only had his initials on it, and it wasn't worded very courteously, and so my first impression was that the man was perhaps ashamed to have mail come to him which had the Mormon Church stamp on it. Perhaps he was only fooling, trying to see what kind of literature or what kind of letter we would write to him. So because of all these circumstances I was rather inclined to write the way I felt at that moment, then I thought of two instances which helped me decide just what I ought to do in regard to the matter, because it is always what we have learned in the past that helps us in the present.

I remember being in a missionary group in one of the missions where I was laboring. A very humble missionary was there, and not understanding a very fundamental, easy question that had to do with the Church, he got up and asked the meaning of this Church doctrine. The brother who was presiding thought it was so ordinary that even the most dumb should know the answer, and he answered him rather sharply. From that time on the missionary did not ask another question, and he went his way alone.

Last week I heard the story of a man who walked into the Bureau of Information, and speaking to one of the guides, said, in a friendly way: "Well, here I am again." The guide, not recognizing him, the man made the following explanation:

About a year and a half ago I came to the Bureau of Information, and was taken through the grounds. The guide was very courteous and kind. You were that guide and because you wouldn't take any tips or any remuneration for the kind way that you treated us, I decided that the least thing I could do was to buy a Book of Mormon. So I bought one and took it home with me. I put it into my library, and one day my son came to me and said: "Father, I notice you have a Book of Mormon in the library. Would you mind if I read it?" I answered, "Why, no, go ahead."

So the boy took it down and read the Book of Mormon and the father said:

He not only read the Book of Mormon, but he read a lot of other books that he had found concerning your Church. Later he joined your Church and then found a young lady whom he loved and wanted to marry. She wasn't in the Church, so he preached the gospel to her, and after a while she came into the Church. This was a year and a half ago. Do you know what I am doing today? I am just staying inside of this Bureau of Information because that son of mine, and the young girl whom he had met down in California, are over in the temple getting married. I can't go there because I don't belong to the Church. That is what you did to my family.

As I thought of these things, I knew how the letter should be answered.

Every once in a while we get rather discouraged because we can't see that people are reacting in a way that will result in good, and we think our efforts are all lost; but I presume it is just like the word that goes out on the air. Before we had receiving sets, we were insensible to radio impulses, and they passed us by. I suppose when we do an act of kindness, when we do something for somebody else, which seems to be lost, that all those fine, good things—the kindness and the mercy and the good will and the forgiveness and all the rest of the things that help men and women to be better—keep going until some day they reach somebody who has the proper receiving set, and all the truths and all the worthwhile things that have been said by you, or by anyone else, reach somebody's heart, just as the words of the guide's message reached the son's heart, although the father did not quite understand.

May the Lord bless us and guide us as we live our lives. May we be kind and thoughtful of other men and women, and even though things do not seem to come back to us, or we cannot see the results of them, may we be assured that in some place, somewhere, they are being registered on somebody's heart, either in our wards or our stakes or out in the world, and then shall we find joy and happiness because of the good things which we have done.

May the Lord bless us, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, our Redeemer. Amen.

ELDER NICHOLAS G. SMITH

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren, I am grateful to my heavenly Father for this Church, and for the opportunity that has been mine to visit in distant parts of the world, to meet different races and peoples, to learn that the gospel of Jesus Christ affects them all exactly the same way.

I know the gospel is true. I realize that each and every one of you, who are watchmen on the tower, know that fact.

I pray that our Heavenly Father will bless us all, that in our lives we may evidence to Him that we know this truth.

May peace be in our hearts and homes and amongst the people over whom we preside, is my prayer, in Jesus' name. Amen.

ELDER SAMUEL O. BENNION

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My brethren, I am very happy to be in your midst tonight, and during the day, and to partake of the spirit of the Lord that I find so abundantly among us.

I hope none of us overlooked the fine testimony that we heard from President Grant this morning, one of the most wonderful that I have listened to in some time.

I haven't thought of anything to say, except this, brethren: I trust that when we return to our homes again, that we will remember our Father's work, that we will be about our Father's business, that we will encourage the leadership of the quorums of the Priesthood to meet together and to appoint members of the quorums to visit the inactive of the members of the Priesthood who do not attend to their Church obligations. They are good men, and if only we can just get them to become active in their work we would be doing a fine and good service. Those men are in our midst and many are fine characters and are at work in some position or another. Many hold positions of trust that are worth while, so far as our civic and business life are concerned. If we could just get these men to participate with us I think it would be a marvelous thing.

I am happy to bear my testimony that I know, without a doubt, that this is the work of God; that we are engaged in the building up of the Church and kingdom of God on earth; that the people in this Church are the ones who hold the confirmed gift and power of the

First Day

Holy Ghost, and that you men, as leaders, all of us here, have the rights and gifts of the Holy Priesthood which cannot be found elsewhere in this world, only in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. I am happy and thankful to be numbered among you.

I pray the Lord to bless us, in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

Our next and concluding speaker will be President Oscar A. Kirkham, of the First Council of the Seventy. This, I believe, is his first Conference, and we will give him ten minutes.

ELDER OSCAR A. KIRKHAM

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I HUMBLY pray that the Lord will bless me as I attempt to express my appreciation for the high and holy calling which He has brought into my life. It may be surprising to you at this moment that I see my father's face and my mother's face. May God help me to be humble and worthy of the joy which might be theirs.

I rejoice greatly in the more intimate association with the choicest group of men that I have ever known in my life; and in this country, in most of its states, and in many countries of Europe, through the kindness of the Lord, I have had conferences and association with our national and international great men. I was deeply impressed when I came to this calling. The word of it came to me in New York. I was in East Orange, attending service. I came back to New York, to the hotel, opened a telegram from my wife, which said: "Unanimously sustained as one of the General Authorities today. I wish you were home." I confess to you—it may have been my weariness—but the idea didn't strike me that it was myself. I didn't quite get it clear. I went and got a copy of the New York Times, went upstairs to my bed, turned on the night lamp and started to read. I said: "I believe I will read that telegram again." I read it again, and this time I realized what had happened. Then I did not read, nor did I sleep.

When the First Presidency of the Church set me apart, I asked President Grant if he had any official word for me, any instruction. He said: "Yes, Oscar. Express yourself freely in council. Say what you have to say, freely, but when a decision is made, line up." I will tell you that those are words of wisdom. In my opinion that is democracy in its very essence.

The First Presidency have asked me to keep my connections with the Boy Scout program. I shall attempt to do that. My special calling in the Church is with the Council of Seventy. I have learned to love these brethren already, and appreciate greatly their intimate association. I humbly pray that God will help me to be a good Scout, a good missionary.

Before you again I express my humble appreciation. May God magnify me for the task. May I ever enjoy your sympathy and your blessing, as I am called to labor with you, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I want to thank the brethren for their kindly cooperation in getting through as we have.

Brother Kirkham's talk brought home to me what I think in some respects is one of the most significant things that I have noticed since I came into a position of responsibility in the Church. I have been present when we have called men in and told them that we would like to have them go and preside over a mission. I have seen them color and pallor and swallow and say, "I will go." The loyalty and devotion of the people of this Church is beyond all calculation.

The principle which Brother Grant expressed to Brother Kirkham is fundamental in all our dealings, and we must never lose sight of it, brethren: Express ourselves freely in the council chamber while matters are under discussion, and then when they are decided, line up and carry on. If we ever get, in this Church, to a place where our loyalty is merely lip service, then we shall be in a serious condition. I know that the Lord will move the lip-servers out of their places.

Tomorrow morning, brethren, as we have already told you, we are to meet in the temple. We ask you to come fasting. You will enter the temple enclosure in the regular way as if you were going into the temple, through that little gate by the little house over on Main Street. The brethren will be there in the morning to welcome you at 9:20, when the gate will be opened. You will enter the temple itself by the southwest door. There will be brethren there who will show you how to get to the upper floor.

I do not speak of this very often, I do not like to, but I am getting to the age where stairs are a bit troublesome. Now there may be some of you also to whom climbing stairs is a little difficult and you would not do it just out of choice. To those of you who are like myself, I would say when you get inside the west door of the Temple if you will turn immediately to your left you will come to an elevator. A man will be on the elevator who will take you up to the fifth floor. I would like to urge those of you who do want to take the elevator to come early, because the elevator is small, carries only a few at a time, and it will therefore not be possible to move a great group of you with any considerable expedition.

Remember as you enter the temple, and I am sure you will remember, that you are entering a holy place. We would like you to go immediately to the top floor where we will have one of the brethren at the organ playing soft music for us while we wait for the time to come to commence the meeting. We ought to be in our seats by 9:50 because they will begin broadcasting from the Temple at 10 o'clock sharp. The broadcast will be the usual one on Easter Sunday morning. It will consist of a short service by us in the Temple, then the controls will go to the Tabernacle where the Tabernacle Choir will give its regular Sunday morning broadcast; then Elder Stephen L Richards will give the Church of the Air Easter sermon, which will likewise be broadcast from the Tabernacle. We shall hear it in the Temple so that that will be part of our service. When that is over the controls will come back to us, and we shall go forward with the rest of our service, until 12 o'clock, when we shall go off the air. We then count on recessing for thirty minutes, that we may rest and go to the lavatories. We will explain about them to you tomorrow.

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

Please, brethren, come fasting, and with a fast-day spirit.

After the recess tomorrow we shall re-assemble at 12:30 when we shall have a Fast meeting. The quorum of the Twelve will administer the sacrament to us; then we shall have testimony meeting. You brethren will be asked to take up the time in bearing your testimonies, rather than, may I say, in preaching sermons. There are a lot of you and you cannot all be heard under the best circumstances, but we hope that the spirit of testimony will rest upon you, so that no time will be wasted. We know that we shall have a glorious time. That meeting will end when it seems right to end it.

We will now close by singing, "God Be With You."

Now, brethren, it will be necessary that all of you have with you in the morning your tickets of admission. You will understand that we cannot run the risk of anybody going who should not be there.

Let me go over it again if I have made a mistake: The gates into the Temple will be opened at 9:20. Those who wish to use the elevator ought to get there at that time or as soon thereafter as possible. You all ought to be in your seats by 9:50. Our broadcast from the Temple will begin at 10 and run until 10:30, when it will be taken over by the Tabernacle Choir, which will hold it for thirty minutes, until eleven; then another thirty minutes will be used for the Church of the Air; then the broadcast will come back to us in the Temple at 11:30, and we will go on there until 12. Then we will be off the air. After that we will have a recess for thirty minutes until 12:30. We will re-assemble at 12:30 and have our testimony meeting, where you brethren, I repeat, will be the ones to bear your testimonies. The sacrament will be administered by the Twelve, and Brother Clawson will arrange for that in the morning.

Have I made it clear, brethren? Is there anything else?

The congregation sang the hymn, "God Be With You" (L. D. S. Hymns, page 132), words by J. E. Rankin, music by W. G. Tomer.

Elder Horace A. Hess, President of the Yellowstone Stake, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until Sunday, April 5, at 10:00 a. m.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

The fourth session of the Conference was held in the assembly room on the fifth floor of the Salt Lake Temple, and the meeting convened at 10 o'clock a. m.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

This is the morning session of the second day of the One Hundred and Twelfth Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are meeting in the upper room of the Salt Lake Temple.

President Heber J. Grant is presiding, President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., is conducting the meeting. There are present on the stand all of the First Presidency, all of the Council of the Twelve, five Assistants to the Twelve, the First Council of the Seventy and the Presiding Bishopric. The congregation is made up of the Presidencies of Stakes and the President of the High Priests Quorum in each Stake. Almost every Stake in the Church is represented.

Elder Richard P. Condie will direct the music, and Elder Alexander Schreiner will be at the organ.

We will open the meeting by the congregation singing, "We Thank Thee, O God for a Prophet" (Hymn Book, page 166; No. 13 of the Pamphlet).

The congregation sang the hymn, "We Thank Thee, O God, For A Prophet" (Hymn Book, page 166).

Elder Hyrum T. Moss, President of the Rigby Stake, offered the opening prayer.

ELDER ALBERT E. BOWEN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

OUR meeting here this morning seems hopelessly discordant in its purpose with current, all-enveloping happenings. We gather to worship the God of love in the name of His Son, the Prince of Peace. And even as we speak, the whole world is ablaze with the devouring flames of war. At this instant, in far-away places men are locked in a death grapple.

Both in its scope and portent the present conflict dwarfs what we heretofore, out of tribute to its magnitude, have styled the World War, as that eclipsed the wars which had gone before. Scarcely is there a land some of whose citizens have not forfeited their lives. In all the earth, as it was in Ramah, there is heard the voice of lamentation: "Rachel weeping for her children refused to be comforted for her children, because they were not."

But we are not met here for mourning, nor to commiserate with ourselves. We are not even convened to call down fire from heaven to consume the adversaries of our country. We are come together, both within these walls and beyond them so far as the spreading ether waves reach out and bring us into communion, to refresh ourselves in the faith that God lives and directs the destinies of this world and of men and of nations; to remind ourselves again and to draw sustaining power from the assurance that in this world there are such simple elementary principles as right and wrong and that in their unending struggle for supremacy right will always triumph.

We should accordingly be composed in our feelings. Though none of us can penetrate the gloom and see what lies beyond, we know that this war, like others that have gone before, will come to an end. Then we shall want our farms and our businesses and our trades the same as before. We should hold on to them, and, so far as may be under the limitations and restrictions imposed by the times, keep everything productive. We cannot give way to despair.

We must likewise sustain our country to the full measure of the requirements of loyalty and patriotic devotion. The nation is now at war. We dare not lose that war, for its loss would mean the end of liberty as we have come to esteem it. It could mean loss of the right to meet and worship as we are doing now. We may have a major task to preserve freedom as we have known it even with the war won. With the war lost we should have no chance at all. We of this Church have a particular regard for freedom under the protection of law. With us it is a religious tenet. We have vivid and unhappy memories of the misery and the suffering that follow when men in blind fury defy the restraints of law and act on their own caprice. We recognize the right of men in the exercise of their freedom of choice to reject the very commandments of God. Only a free soul is fit to enter His kingdom. Men must learn here to live as free men and to apply the restraints which true freedom imposes to be fit for the heavenly realm. Hence we are unalterably opposed to the attempt of any nation or man or group of men, foreign or domestic, to take away or destroy or abrogate the freedoms guaranteed under the law of our land.

Sunday, April 5Second Day

SEATED behind and around me are the men who hold the principal offices in this Church. I doubt if there is one of them who has not now in the armed forces sons or grandsons or brothers or other near kindred. Some of these have already made the supreme sacrifice. They, with the membership at large, sustain the government, purchase its bonds, contribute to it their substance and give it their fealty.

We abhor war with all its savagery, its human wastage and its moral degradation. But war is here and since the principles of liberty are at stake, challenging the very purposes of God, my faith is that they will be rescued, though at what cost of blood and treasure I know not.

Abraham Lincoln fully believed that the Civil War was the price this nation had to pay for the sin of human slavery. We had proclaimed to the world as a foundation principle of our political faith the inalienable rights of all men to be free, but we practiced human bondage. That was a base denial of our loud-toned profession. We refused to repent. War came. In a dark day of reverses Lincoln expressed concern lest it prove to be God's will that the chastisement of the nation might continue "until all the wealth piled up by the bondsman's two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil shall sink, and until every drop of blood drawn by the lash shall be paid by another drawn by the sword."

What may now be our national sins and what may be exacted in expiation I leave to your conclusions. Among them I do not hesitate to name arrogance, godlessness and the decay of a living Christian faith.

During the troubled years of his presidency, Lincoln many times by proclamation set apart days for prayer and supplication for divine favor. He never omitted from those proclamations the admonition to pray for forgiveness of our national sins as a condition to the reception of God's help.

There are numerous ways besides those I have already mentioned in which we may contribute strength to the nation. But I am persuaded that the service the Church can best render—and it is a transcendently important service—is to keep alive as the foundation of our country's future the true spirit of religion, which involves the establishment and preservation of a living faith in a living God. Experience should have taught that "except God build the house, they labor in vain who build it!"

You recall an occasion when Jesus asked his disciples, "Whom do men say that I am?" They gave him the various conflicting conjectures they had heard expressed, whereupon he put it to them direct, "But whom say ye that I am?" The reply came from Peter with equal directness: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Christ approved that answer and declared that the basis of the knowledge implicit in it was the rock upon which he would build His Church. He said more than that. He said that being so foundationed the gates of hell should not prevail against it. That is a very important assurance. It promises solidity and perpetuity. That is the essence of the message which His disciples bore to the world. As Paul phrased it, they determined to know nothing save Jesus Christ and Him crucified.

I WANT here to quote some very penetrating observations of an eminent editorial writer, Thomas F. Woodlock. After some remarks about the lack of real substance in the lip service we pay to Christian precepts he continues,

How many of us would with a whole heart and clear conviction echo Peter's confession of faith when challenged by his Master? And what are we teaching in our schools, grammar and high, and colleges and universities concerning that confession?

Now the answer to the question put to Peter is of the all-or-none order. The Christianity which built the western civilization was built upon Peter's answer. It was that Christianity which brought democracy into the world because it was the first to bring to man the revelation of human personality, and that is the rock upon which the democracy in which we profess . . . a faith . . . rests and alone can rest. It was that Christianity upon which the declared principles of our civil order rest, and there is no other resting place for them. A belief in democracy without a belief in that Christianity is no better than a code deprived of its creed or a flower cut from its parent stem: it must ultimately wither and die. When it dies freedom dies, even if democratic forms survive. Hitler rules today under the "forms" of the Weimar constitution and Stalin under the "forms" of a constitution as "democratic" sounding as anyone could wish! The same thing could happen here under our own "forms" if we, too, should lose faith in the soul that alone can give them life.

I am not predicting dire catastrophe for our country. But I do say that the warning sounded is no idle one. The arraignment made by Mr. Woodlock is, I am forced reluctantly to admit, justified by the facts. Since sometime before the war started in Europe thoughtful men, there and here, scholars, scientists, publicists, statesmen, religionists, have been calling for a spiritual and religious recovery; they have solemnly warned that our nation cannot endure "except upon a solid religious foundation," but I very much doubt if any of them would give the answer Peter gave to the same question as was addressed to him. Men profess a deep attachment to what they call the ethical quality of Christ's teachings, but they deny Him. The nineteenth century is described as the one in which man substituted belief in himself for belief in God. "Glory to man in the highest" was Swinburne's impious exultation. Now the things of which man thought himself master have turned on him with a terrible vengeance. We have seen the decline of religious faith followed by the rise of tyranny. I believe it is a safe generalization that despotism is always at enmity with the Christian religion. They rest upon inherently and irreconcilably antagonistic conceptions about man, his worth and dignity and destiny and place in the order of things; the one debases him, the other exalts; the one denies God, the other acknowledges His supreme power and bows before His majesty. The teaching of the Christian religion irritates the despot because it is a constant denial of his assumed supremacy and a rebuke to his tyrannies. Hence the despot always seeks to put religion down. The rise of Hitler in Germany heralded assaults upon the church. His Minister of Religion said, "Adolph Hitler is the true Holy Ghost," and the Minister of Culture declared, "We must proclaim a German Christ, not a lamb of God." In Russia the line was the same, "What is worrying us is not that Christianity is dying in Russia, but that it is still surviving," said the Commissioner of Justice. "The natural transition," said another, "is to bring about the death of all religion."

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

APPARENTLY they have found it impossible to root out of their people their ingrained instincts for religious worship. And so the effort is now to divert them to a new religion. Dr. Alfred Rosenberg has come forward with the blue print for a "new national church." It does not require that citizens adhere to it but it outlaws all other churches, confiscates their property, forbids any of the teachings and practices of Christianity, banishes the Bible and substitutes for it Mein Kampf, which is never to be added to nor taken from and the exposition of which by state designated orators is to be the substance of all religious service. As one reads the prescriptions one wonders if it is of today or whether by some magic he has been shuttled back into primitive paganism.

But you may say what has all that to do with us. Just this. Germany is not the only land in which there is an ambition to set up a new order, nor to recast religion to fit into that order. Incredible as it may seem there is at work in our own country today a body of men and women, highly intellectual, trained and lettered, apparently earnest and sincere who have issued a manifesto which they call "A Declaration on World Democracy." They propose the creation of a World State of which the United States of America is to be the hub and its framework of government to furnish the pattern, of course with plenty of circumscriptions and modernizations. This model state is to have the modest name, "City of Man," and the indwellers are to have their ideas of freedom redefined so as to bring them within very certain limitations. But we pass all that to observe that this world state is to have provided for it a religion which is to be a "religion of democracy." A committee of experts is to examine all the various existing religions and determine what there is in them "of greater or lesser value for the preservation and growth of the democratic principle," what "elements in them are more apt to cooperate with the democratic community and consequently more deserving of protection by it." Our notions of religious freedom are to be re-examined for we "must know what limits are set by the religion of freedom, which is democracy to freedom of worship." The implication is clear that it will be just too bad for any religion which the committee of experts finds not to be in the best interests of democracy for "the universal religion of democracy shall underlie each and all of them." Perhaps I ought to say that the authors expressly disclaim the intention of setting up a state religion though they have provided all the framework for it including a body of inquisitors. It has always been our assumption that democracy was born of the teachings of religion, but now democracy is to determine the uses and value and content of religion.

WHAT place, I ask you, is there for God in that "religion for democracy" set up by a committee of experts? How would the projectors of the scheme answer the question which was directed to Peter? And if God is excluded how can you have a religion at all? Where are we getting to in our cry for the recovery of religion if God has no place in it except to supply a convenient name which people are accustomed to associate with worship? Why do the authors desire or think it important to have in the model state a religion at all? What they would provide is a sham, a hollow shell wholly devoid of the spirit that gives life. The proposal is near blasphemy. It dethrones God and deifies man, which is one of the principal reasons for our present confusion and turmoil and impotence. I don't mean to imply that these men are of a kind with Hitler at all, but I still ask what essential difference there is in principle between their "religion for democracy" and Hitler's "new order" or Rosenberg's "new religion."

The advocates of the new religion are powerful writers, capable of expressing their ideas with force. They command wide attention. They present America with the issue, clearly drawn, whether religion is a plan and a way of life for mortals emanating from Deity or whether religion shall be taken over by the intellectuals, formulated on their design and made the mere creature and servant of the political state.

For the future safety of the world, for the welfare of the souls of men, for the preservation and salvation of our beloved country we can never make that surrender.

In that matchless prayer, in which he pleaded with the Father for the disciples whom He was about to leave, just before He crossed over the brook into the Garden, Jesus used these words:

And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent.

That is our belief and our message. That is the message which won the western world to acceptance of the Christian faith. Never did men more need the sustaining power of that firm conviction than in this confused, bewildering, and muddled time. Never were those words freighted with a deeper meaning for the needs of the hour. They are simple, direct, and clear as distinguished from the tangled skein of mystifying phrases which men are driven to use when they try to expound a God of philosophy who is not the Lord God omnipotent.

God grant us the power to stand true to our trust, I pray, in the name of Jesus, Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

Elder Albert E. Bowen has just spoken to us. We will now transfer this broadcast to the Salt Lake Tabernacle. The Tabernacle Choir will give its Sunday morning broadcast. After that broadcast Elder Stephen L Richards of the Council of the Twelve will deliver the address on the Church of the Air program.

TABERNACLE CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

During the period from 10:30 to 11:00 a. m., the regular weekly nationwide broadcast of choral and organ music and brief spoken comment was presented as part of the General Conference proceedings. This program, which will have completed its thirteenth year of continuous nationwide broadcasting in July of this year, was presented by the Tabernacle choir and organ, and broadcast through the courtesy and facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System's coast-to-coast network, throughout the United States and by short wave transmission to foreign lands. The broadcast, written and announced by Elder Richard L. Evans, originated with radio station KSL, Salt Lake City, and, exclusive of routine introductory and closing announcements, was as follows:

Announcer: With the passing of another seven days, we pause once more within the shadows of the everlasting hills, as music and the spoken word are heard again. This is the 654th nation-wide performance of this traditional broadcast, presented each week at this hour as Columbia brings you the Tabernacle choir and organ from Temple Square in Salt Lake City.

The choir is conducted by J. Spencer Cornwall. Dr. Frank W. Asper is at the organ. The spoken word by Richard Evans.

(Pause)

Announcer: On this Sabbath of the resurrection, we open with an Easter anthem, with words by Charles Wesley and music by David Hugh Jones. "Hallelujah, Christ the Lord is Risen Today."

Choir presents "Alleluia"—Jones.

Organ presents Chorale Prelude—"Christ Lay in Death's Embrace"—Bach.

Announcer: "We'll Sing All Hail to Jesus' Name." This hymn of death and resurrection, with words by Richard Alldridge and music by Joseph Coslett, is heard now as this traditional hour from Temple Square continues.

Choir presents "We'll Sing All Hail to Jesus' Name"—Coslett.

Announcer: A symbol of the season with its message of the re-birth of all things is heard now from Temple Square as the Tabernacle organ recalls the phrases of Kinder's "In Springtime."

Organ presents "In Springtime"—Kinder.

Announcer: We turn the years back now to recall from a seventeenth century Dutch setting, "This Joyful Eastertide."

Choir presents "This Joyful Eastertide."

Announcer: Another traditional Easter melody is taken from its old world setting as we hear the Tabernacle choir singing—"Theodulph's Hymn."

Choir presents "Theodulph's Hymn"—Techner.

Announcer: The coming of another Easter stirs our thoughts anew to the issues of life, and death, and immortality. We think much at this season of those whom we cherish who have already departed from us—where are they, and when shall we again behold them? For answer there are many who cry out from the depths of their hearts. There are some who feel they have the answer. Others steadfastly deny all possibility of immortality, and there are still others who accept it with many qualifications. Those who profess the greatest doubts are often most inclined to talk about the subject. Those who have a quiet assurance of their own personal continuance seem little disposed to raise the issue. Thoughtful men are not given to much talk about things they know so well. We don't quibble as to whether or not spring will come again, and yet that we shall come forth from death to life is more certain than spring's return. "If it were not so, I would have told you," is the assurance that came from the Savior of the world, and for Him, and for His followers—and for all men—the question was settled there. "If it were not so, I would have told you." The fact that we may not understand the process by which all this will be brought about, does not cast doubt upon its reality. Truth, fortunately, is not limited by the present understanding of men. In the years that brought his more mature convictions, Ralph Waldo Emerson said simply: "All I have seen teaches me to trust the Creator for all I have not seen." That so many other great minds have spoken in this same vein is comforting and reassuring, but no matter who chooses to believe or disbelieve it, the facts remain, as the Lord, Himself, has spoken directly and through His servants, the prophets, one of whom said: "Behold, there is a time appointed that all shall come forth from the dead. Now, when this time cometh, no man knoweth—but God knoweth . . . that all shall rise from the dead." (Book of Mormon, Alma 4:4, 5) This glorious certainty rises above all the uncertainties of our troubled generation. And so, while those who disbelieve still quibble, those who believe find abiding peace in the assurance that we and all those we love and all men of all time shall continue beyond the present, beyond death, unto life everlasting. Of such is the message of Easter. If there be those who doubt it, let them doubt no more. If there be those who mourn, let them take comfort. If there be those who love life, let them prepare to live it, forever.

CHURCH OF THE AIR BROADCAST

Immediately after the conclusion of the traditional Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast, an additional thirty minute period, regularly known as the Columbia Broadcasting System's Church of the Air, was presented from 11:00 to 11:30 a. m., as a part of the proceedings of this session of the conference, and was also released over nationwide and international network facilities. Music was by the Tabernacle Choir and Organ, with J. Spencer Cornwall directing and Dr. Frank W. Asper at the Organ, and Elder Stephen L. Richards of the Council of the Twelve delivered the address. The program was conducted by Richard L. Evans, who introduced it as follows:

Theme: "Sweet Is the Work"—McClellan—organ and humming voices.

Announcer: A decade ago the Church of the Air was brought into being by the Columbia Broadcasting System to give opportunity to representatives of the major faiths to bring their messages to a nationwide congregation of worshippers. Since that time these religious services have been heard twice each Sunday. Today, in the eleventh year of the Church of the Air, the network Mormon service comes to you as part of the proceedings of the one hundred twelfth Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, through Station KSL in Salt Lake City. The service originates in the Mormon Tabernacle while leaders of the Church listen in session, in the upper rooms of the Salt Lake Temple. We will give the service into the hands of Stephen L. Richards of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, whose subject will be, "Had We Listened to the Prophets."

ELDER STEPHEN L. RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

The morning breaks, the shadows flee;
Lo! Zion's standard is unfurled.
The dawning of a brighter day
Majestic rises on the world.

THESE lines from a poet were not penned to herald Easter morn, although they might well have been. They were written to announce the advent of a new gospel dispensation. They also appropriately symbolize the resurrection of the Christ. When His bruised and wounded body arose from the sepulcher and put on the radiant garb of immortality, it was in truth the dawning of a new and brighter day for all the world.

That event was the central fact in the life of the Savior. For it He was born; to prepare for it He lived His matchless life; to substantiate its efficacy for all men, He endured more sorrow than any other, a crueler death, carried a heavier burden—all to demonstrate the supreme happiness and the most transcendently beautiful and desirable thing within the attainment of humankind—eternal life.

The Easter we celebrate this day in the Christian world, together with substantially all other aspects of the life and ministry of the Redeemer was foretold by the prophets. I have counted two hundred twenty-two verses of scripture from the Bible alone which deal in a prophetic way with our Lord Jesus Christ. Surely there is significance in this voluminous foretelling of the greatest thing in history. I look upon it as the supreme vindication of prophecy and the prophets. The Savior might have lived, died, and done His work without prediction of His coming, but it is evident that that was not the plan. Being the author of faith, He caused that sacred principle to be introduced as the premise for His appearance in the flesh, and He left it with men as the cornerstone in the foundation of His gospel. From it I draw the meaning of this hour.

To the followers of Christ everywhere I pose this question: Has anyone truly Christian faith who does not believe the prophets? I suspect that some may not care to answer the question, even to themselves, but I know of no better way of testing our real allegiance to Christian principles.

The prophets have had vital messages for us in days that are gone, as they have in the critical days that are here. Had we understood and believed their words, many of our difficulties might have been averted. They have given us counsel on every phase of our living. They have told us the things that would make for happiness and success, and they have pointed out the courses which lead to misery and failure. We should be deeply interested in their words now, as we are searching for causes and remedies, and when we are so urgently in need of formulas to unite and solidify our people and our efforts in the Herculean task before us. Painful as it may be, we must admit our mistakes before we can rectify them.

Most of our people recognize the necessity for spiritual support in this war. I believe there is no higher spirituality than that which is manifested in prophecy and also in its acceptance. God speaks through His chosen servants. If we do not listen to them, it is likely we do not really hear God at all, although I do not mean in any degree to deprecate individual communion with our Father through prayer. I have in mind divine pronouncement of principles and laws for the guidance of men and nations.

This war began among Christian nations. It is true that China and Japan were involved before its outbreak, but its foundations were laid among peoples who had the Bible and, professedly at least, the churches of Christ. Had they listened to inspired prophets, it and many preceding wars would never have been begun. In the first place, they would have been convinced of the necessity of adopting principles governing international relations which would have averted conflict, and in the second place they would have known from the beginning the futility of war. Wars have been fought before to end war, and mankind should have learned long ago that the war serum injected anywhere in the body of the universe is wholly ineffective as an antitoxin for the malady of human conflict. Surely it is time for investigation to be directed along other lines to isolate the bacteria of this disease and provide a cure.

Now as I see it, those engaged in such investigations have become so engrossed in the use of microscopic technological methods that there has developed an adversity to the simple, obvious formulas which, whenever actually tried, have proved effective. Not long ago I heard a prominent scientist declare that science would end war. He said that scientific genius would devise such terrible killing devices that men would be afraid to go to war. This I doubt, first, because the defense can call to its aid the same science as the offense, and secondly, because I believe that fear will never be an adequate deterrent. We have record of wars resulting in the complete extermination of the opposing hosts, but I don't know that anybody looks forward to such a process of ending war.

SOMEHOW there has developed a certain modern education which seems to have disdain for the obvious, proceeding on the assumption that if it's simple and old, it can't be true. Such an attitude, which fortunately is by no means universal, has served greatly to retard the solution of many of our most important problems, chief among which is the question how men may live together comfortably and in peace. All of us rejoice in the contribution science has made to the convenience and pleasure of our living. We are deeply grateful for the discoveries of patient, hard-working research men who have contributed so much to freedom from disease, organic efficiency and longevity of life. I noted a number of years ago that a poll of students placed Louis Pasteur at the head of a list of great men, excluding religious leaders, who had made contributions to mankind.

What a pity it is that in the face of all these remarkable advances in health, sanitation, comfort, and beauty that we have made so little progress in human relations. Someone has pointed out that the greatest tragedy of the modern age was the tercentenary of Harvard University in 1936, where scholars from all over the world met to appraise the progress of the world for the past three hundred years and reached the solemn conclusion that, while man had made most unusual and commendable progress in solving the mysteries of the universe, bringing under control the forces of nature, that in all this long period of time he had made no appreciable advance in the control of himself, his greed and his passions, and that he was even more prone to fight with other men than he had been centuries before. So it is evident that the social studies carried forward by many conspicuously brilliant people have not helped us very much in our greatest difficulty.

Now that we are in a crisis we find ourselves groping for every straw that might indicate the proper direction of our national effort. We have tried and we are still trying experiments by the score. We know that we need unity, loyalty, self-sacrifice, efficiency, and faith. We plead and cry for these high qualities so essential to success, but they don't come in sufficient measure. Dissension, costly disputes, selfish interest, inefficiency, skepticism, and doubt continue to retard our preparation to meet a peril that is so imminent as to make the best things of life tremble in the balance. This is the situation. Is there a day or an hour nearer and better than now—right now—to meet the challenge? I believe there is not.

Where can we look for the essential virtues our people need with greater hope and assurance than to religion and the prophets? It is there that we find not only the outstanding examples but the most potent factors for cohesion, solidarity, and unity. It is there that loyal devotion and self-sacrifice for a cause have been developed and shown their richest fruit. It is there that we have been given the gospel of work, industry, frugality, and thrift. It is there that we have been taught the virtue of honesty and integrity; and it is there, and there alone, where we have learned the meaning and vitality of faith. Did you ever stop to think where we would be if all the learning, all the concepts, all the morality, all the idealism, and virtue that have come to us from the prophets should be swept away and annihilated? It seems to me a moment's contemplation on such an awful state should immediately renew and enhance our appreciation of the inestimable contributions which have come to us through divinely inspired men.

Now I hope you will bear with me as I project a few specific applications of the great principles and doctrines which have been our heritage to our present situation. We named as our first need: Unity. How is it to come? We thought that the terrific shock of Pearl Harbor had brought it. As the weeks passed and the force of the sudden impact subsided, we found that we were mistaken. A hundred incidents which you know, and I have not time to mention, bear that out. Selfish interests still dominate much of our internal negotiations and activities. It is vainly pointed out with irrefutable logic that these militate against our efficiency and success. What is the answer? Brotherhood—the fraternity of men taught to us by the prophets. I know that some may say it is Utopian and unattainable, yet it is the very thing we are announcing in carefully worded charters as the panacea for the ills of the world. Why not try it at home and demonstrate its efficacy before we attempt to spread it abroad? All that it entails is mutual consideration and the recognition of humankind as the family of God. The latter is especially important. There are few, if any, stronger cohesive factors than kinship. We do not establish kinship without parentage. We cannot estimate the value of the acceptance of God as a universal Father.

WE are continually told that self-sacrifice is necessary to our success. Self-sacrifice is of the very essence of the Christian religion. Its history is filled with instances of it. The early Christians, the monastical life of the Middle Ages carried to excess in asceticism, the exploring missionaries, and our own Puritan fathers are but a few. This very day is in commemoration of One who gave His life to teach self-sacrifice and altruistic service. Sacrifice in its finer aspect is a spiritual concept. It elevates spiritual growth above material gain. It looks for its reward in things only of enduring worth. This concept, firmly implanted in the hearts of the people, is all we need to help us endure cheerfully whatever deprivation may be necessary to aid our country.

We need efficiency in all our endeavor. No one doubts it. Everyone is clamoring for it. Now efficiency, in the last analysis, has reference to man power. We speak of efficient machines and efficient organizations and efficient methods, but it is men who make all these. Someone has well said, "It is not the guns that win decisive battles; it is the men behind the guns." Another has said about this crisis, "It is self discipline or slavery." I don't intend to take the time to present facts revealed by the physical examinations of our selectees. All of you have read some of these reports, and you have general knowledge of the vast number rejected for unfitness.

One caustic critic has said, "America is drunk. How could she be otherwise after having smoked or chewed three hundred forty-three million pounds of tobacco and swallowed more than one billion, six hundred fifty-four million gallons of malted liquor and one hundred twenty-four million gallons of spirituous liquor, nearly two billion gallons of beer and whiskey annually?" The same article concludes by the assertion, "America is burning up its energy in pipes, cigars, and cigarettes, drowning it in beer, wine, whiskey, and rum, and smothering it with luxurious living. . . . The Fifth Columnists who are doing America the most harm are the promoters of these . . . great evils to the damaging effects of which our military leaders are not yet awake."

If these statements in any substantial degree represent the truth, what a deplorable calamity has befallen us! Our war enemy himself could scarcely strike more terribly and effectively against our man power than these arch enemies of the race have already struck. With all the expedients we can devise, it will take years to undo the damage. Never has a more deadly fallacy crept into any society than that more narcotics, more tobacco, more whiskey, and more licentiousness will make better armies. This sophistry and diabolical propaganda is not the work of religion and the prophets. It emanates from the enemies of religion and the enemies of men and the nation. Thank the Lord for the courage of Gene Tunney and a few others like him who see the far-reaching and disastrous effects of these narcotics, and are brave enough to speak out against them and those who perpetrate them on our youth! I believe that the great majority of all the homes in America from which the army boys have come would thank our Commander-in-Chief from the bottom of their hearts if he would make an order forbidding the use of such poisons in our military establishments.

What a difference it would have made, and would still make to our efficiency, if men would but accept the concepts of the human body given to us by the prophets:—if they would look upon the body as the tabernacle of the spirit which dwells within it, and protect and preserve it from abuses and deleterious substances which militate against its organic efficiency. If they would remember that it is an affront to God to violate the purity of these earthly temples of the spirit, I am sure they would be more thoughtful in their care. How precious to the nation, not to mention homes and loved ones, are the bodies of our youth! The revelations through the prophets have told us long ago what is good for them and what is hurtful. Science has confirmed divinely inspired formulas. The laws of health are inexorable. They cannot be violated with impunity.

So, in the interest of our boys, in the interest of our country's cause, I humbly appeal to all who love them and to all who are the beneficiaries of their noble service, not to send them cigarettes and intoxicating liquors. In the end they will know that you were kind if you help them to conserve their strength and vitality in wholesome, righteous living. Try to help them realize that in the face of danger there is one thing they cannot hazard and that is their souls.

PROPHETCY and religion supply the one most indispensable element in all our colossal endeavor, and that is faith—faith in the destiny of our democracy, faith in the triumph of righteousness over evil, and faith in the worth, the integrity, and the majesty of man.

We live in a world of irreverence. Oh, I know that it is true that we have preserved forms of worship. Millions are invested in churches and cathedrals, and we in America, as in other Christian countries, maintain at great expense much of the formalism and pageantry of religion. I know, too, that there are thousands of good men and women who love God and seek to order their lives in conformity with His teachings, but accounting for all these, there are relatively few—so very few—who have the simple, honest, humble faith to accept the Word of God as revealed to and spoken through His chosen prophets.

It is a great pity that it is so, because out of the words of the prophets we have received not only our most profound understanding of man and the universe, but also the assurances and predictions that bring comfort, hope, confidence, joy, and a peace "which passeth all understanding." It is from the prophets that we learn of the glorious place and distinction given to man among all God's creations, that he was created in the image of God and that he is not menial, nor low, nor of servile nature, but that he is of high estate, of the noblest lineage, endowed with the God-given gift of intelligence, the sublime and supreme investiture of both God and man. It is from the prophets that we learn that he is to be free, with the voluntary power of choice, and that this free agency is essential to his development and progression. And it is from the greatest of all the prophets, Jesus Himself, that we learn how man is to retain his freedom, for He said, "... Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

What a difference it would make in the world today if only the people believed the prophets and knew these truths! Had we accepted their spiritual reality and the verity of their messages, the tragedy that envelops the world today would never have been. But we thought it was childish to believe in them. We looked upon them as visionary men whose words had no import for our day. We didn't believe in a higher power that could look through the vista of time and foresee the tragic things that would come to men out of their perversity, their egotism, and their sin. We ignored all the warnings, and we laughed in the faces of these solemn messengers from On High, because we wanted fun and light-heartedness and vanity and hundreds of other things to distract us from the serious things of life.

How unfortunate it is that we did not recognize that there is no lasting happiness and peace except in goodness, and that the ways of God, the ways in which the prophets tried to lead us, are the only ways to joy and safety.

If we had but followed the prophecies, we would have known from the very beginning of our nation that one of old had said that "... this is a choice land, and whatsoever nation shall possess it shall be free from bondage, and from captivity, and from all other nations under heaven, if they will but serve the God of the land, who is Jesus Christ." Had we had that knowledge and believed it, we should have known all along where to have put our trust and what the course of our lives should be. There would have been no anxiety or misgivings concerning the future of our beloved America, and there would be none now, could we but quickly come to the truth and accept the divine word.

I need not argue that it is the province of religion to bring to pass an acceptance of the prophecies. They are the constitution of the kingdom of God. No man truly enters into the kingdom who does not believe and follow the prophets.

It is fortunate indeed that so many admire the teachings of Christ—kindness, mercy, tolerance, forgiveness, and the doctrine of the good neighbor, and altruistic service—but I fear that there are many who worship at the shrine of His teachings and attributes but deny the sovereignty of the King. True religion teaches us that the most acceptable homage we can render to the Savior is to acknowledge Him as God and pay Him the tribute of a good life. No praise, no adoration can be substituted for this. One gift only is adequate, and that is the giving of one's self.

Now it would seem that we have a long way to go to reach the goals the prophets have set for us. We truly have. But there will never be a more propitious time to start the journey than now. We need not be discouraged because the road seems long and hard. It will never be easier. We ought to feel happy that the promises which were given so long ago are still held out to us, and happy too that in spite of our mistakes of the past, through mercy, there is yet time to turn from mistaken and unprofitable ways and direct the course of our lives, both individual and national, into the straight ways that lead to truth and peace and security.

My friends, I would not willingly give offense to a single soul this Easter day. I recognize the right of every man to his own views and opinions. What I have said has been prompted by love of country and my fellow men. More than anything else I desire the blessings of God to attend our beloved America and the lofty causes for which she stands. I am sure that it is the burden of every prayer which is offered that our nation shall come to victory and glorious triumph. My convictions, however, constrain me to say to you that it is the prayers of the righteous which will be heard. Our Father exacts a contrite heart and a pure life for the bestowal of His blessings. It is for these I plead. If these are given, He will cause all the rest to follow. Oh, God, grant that it may be so!

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

WITH a number of young men from each of many wards in the Church serving somewhere in the terrible conflict now raging, it is easily understood why our minds are turned toward the deprecation of war, and to the hope for peace. Thoughts of loved ones are pretty closely linked with their soldier boys in army encampments. There are many, too, who should like to know what the attitude of the Church is toward the present war. This is a fitting day and occasion on which to consider this subject.

Easter, as you know, is an ancient spring festival with which Christendom has long since associated the resurrection of Jesus Christ. The Savior's resurrection is the most glorious event in the history of mankind. It proclaims the victory of the soul over death, and the existence and progression of the individual personality beyond the grave.

The resurrected Lord's first greeting to His disciples, in the evening of that memorable day, was "Peace be unto you."

And when he had so said, he shewed unto them his hands and his side. Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord.

Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you. (John 20:20-21)

That was His message, too, at the last meeting He had with them before his crucifixion. Said He: "These words I have spoken unto you that in me ye might have peace."

The peace of Christ abides in the heart. It is an individual blessing. But it is a condition to be enjoyed also by groups of individuals, and to that end His disciples were to declare peace to the world.

On this Easter Day, the Risen Christ beholds in the world not peace, but war.

In the face of the tragic condition among mankind, honest thinking men and women ask how is it possible to reconcile the teachings of Jesus with the participation of the Church in armed conflict.

War is basically selfish. Its roots feed in the soil of envy, hatred, desire for domination. Its fruit, therefore, is always bitter. They who cultivate and propagate it spread death and destruction, and are enemies of the human race.

War originates in the hearts of men who seek to despoil, to conquer, or to destroy other individuals or groups of individuals. Self exaltation is a motivating factor; force, the means of attainment. War is rebellious action against moral order.

The present war had its beginning in militarism, a false philosophy which believes that "war is a biological necessity for the purification and progress of nations." It proclaims that Might determines Right, and that only the strongest nations should survive and rule. It says, "the grandeur of history lies in the perpetual conflict of nations, and it is simply foolish to desire the suppression of their rivalry."

War impels you to hate your enemies.

The Prince of Peace says, Love your enemies.

War says, Curse them that curse you.

The Prince of Peace says, Pray for them that curse you.

War says, Injure and kill them that hate you.

The Risen Lord says, Do good to them that hate you.

WAR INCOMPATIBLE WITH THE TEACHINGS OF THE SAVIOR

Thus we see that war is incompatible with Christ's teachings. The gospel of Jesus Christ is the gospel of peace. War is its antithesis, and produces hate. It is vain to attempt to reconcile war with true Christianity.

IN the face of all this, I shall seem inconsistent when I declare that I uphold our country in the gigantic task it has assumed in the present world conflict, and sustain the Church in its loyal support of the government in its fight against dictatorship.

In justification of this seeming inconsistency, I shall not attempt to prove that there are occasions when Jesus would approve of a nation's starting a war. That He used force to drive from the temple the money changers, and other desecrators of the House of God, is a fact; but only a misapplication of the text can make that incident a justification for one Christian nation's going to war against another. On that occasion, as on all occasions, Jesus opposed and denounced wrong. With the strength of fiery indignation and of his own moral force, and not merely with a whip of small cords, Jesus drove the self-convicted desecrators from the temple.

Neither shall I attempt to prove that He favored war when He said: "Think not that I come to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace but a sword." (Matt. 10:34) They who would quote this saying as indicating that Jesus approves of war surely put a strained interpretation on its true meaning, which refers most clearly to the incompatibility between truth and error. It clearly refers to the necessity of a choice, which has been made by thousands, between accepting the gospel or continuing in ease and comfort with relatives. There is not in that quotation any justification for one Christian nation's declaring war upon another.

Nor, again, would I try to justify my seeming inconsistency by referring to what He said on another occasion as follows:

But now, he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip; and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment and buy one. . . .

And they said, Lord, behold here are two swords, And he said unto them, it is enough. (Luke 22:36 and 38)

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

Without reading into the text something which is not intended or even implied, the most that one can get from this admonition is that henceforth the disciples going forth into an antagonistic world might supply themselves with necessary support and the usual means of defense.

None of these sayings of the Savior's can be taken to prove that He justifies war.

Tolstoy, in his Christianity and Patriotism, says:

A Christian state, to be consistent, ought, on entering upon a war, not merely to remove the crosses from the churches, to turn the churches themselves into buildings for other purposes, to give the clergy other duties, and above all, to prohibit the gospel—but ought to renounce every precept of morality which follows from the Christian law.

Notwithstanding all this, I still say that there are conditions when entrance into war is justifiable, and when a Christian nation may, without violation of principles, take up arms against an opposing force.

Such a condition, however, is not a real or fancied insult given by one nation to another. When this occurs proper reparation may be made by mutual understanding, apology, or by arbitration.

Neither is there justifiable cause found in a desire or even a need for territorial expansion. The taking of territory implies the subjugation of the weak by the strong—the application of the jungle law.

Nor is war justified in an attempt to enforce a new order of government, or even to impel others to a particular form of worship, however better the government or eternally true the principles of the enforced religion may be.

There are, however, two conditions which may justify a truly Christian man to enter—mind you, I say enter, not begin—a war: (1) An attempt to dominate and to deprive another of his free agency, and, (2) Loyalty to his country. Possibly there is a third, viz., Defense of a weak nation that is being unjustly crushed by a strong, ruthless one.

MAN'S FREE AGENCY FUNDAMENTAL TO PROGRESS

PARAMOUNT among these reasons, of course, is the defense of man's freedom. An attempt to rob man of his free agency caused dissension even in heaven. Scriptures tell us:

Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels,

And prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven.

And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.

In that rebellion Lucifer said in substance: "By the law of force I will compel the human family to subscribe to the eternal plan, but give me thine honor and power."

To deprive an intelligent human being of his free agency is to commit the crime of the ages.

Impelling motives of this arch-enemy to liberty were pride, ambition, a sense of superiority, a will to dominate his fellows, and to be exalted above them, and a determination to deprive human beings of their freedom to speak and to act as their reason and judgment would dictate. Applicable to him are the words of Isaiah:

How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! . . .

For thou hast said in thine heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north:

I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the most High.

Yet thou shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit. (Isaiah 14:12-15)

Thus in the beginning was designed the great crime against manhood, to thwart

The wish, which ages have not yet subdued, in man, to have no master save his food.

So fundamental in man's eternal progress is his inherent right to choose, that the Lord would defend it even at the price of war. Without freedom of thought, freedom of choice, freedom of action within lawful bounds, man cannot progress. The Lord recognized this, and also the fact that it would take man thousands of years to make the earth habitable for self-governing individuals. Throughout the ages advanced souls have yearned for a society in which liberty and justice prevail. Men have sought for it, fought for it, have died for it. Ancient freemen prized it, slaves longed for it, the Magna Charta demanded it, the Constitution of the United States declared it.

"This love of liberty which God has planted in us," said Abraham Lincoln, "constitutes the bulwark of our liberty and independence. It is not our frowning battlements, our bristling seacoasts, our army, and our navy. Our defense is in the spirit which prizes liberty as the heritage of all men, in all lands, everywhere. Destroy this spirit, and we have planted the seeds of despotism at our very doors."

OUR OBLIGATION TO THE STATE

A SECOND obligation that impels us to become participants in this world war is loyalty to government.

We believe that governments were instituted of God for the benefit of man; and that He holds men accountable for their acts in relation to them, both in making laws and administering them, for the good and safety of society.

We believe that no government can exist in peace, except such laws are framed and held inviolate as will secure to each individual the free exercise of conscience, the right and control of property, and the protection of life.

The greatest responsibility of the state is to guard the lives, and to protect the property and rights of its citizens; and if the state is obligated to protect its citizens from lawlessness within its boundaries, it is equally obligated to protect them from lawless encroachments from without—whether the attacking criminals be individuals or nations.

We are informed by competent authority that twenty years ago the government of the United States entered into an agreement with Japan to maintain peace in the Pacific Ocean, and "keep honorable hands off China." "Before the year was over," writes Mark J. Gayn, in an article Prelude to Treachery, "the ablest men on the Japanese naval general staff went to work blue-printing war on the United States and Britain."

From such treachery the state is in duty bound to protect itself, and its only effective means of doing so under present world conditions is by armed force. As a Church:

We believe that all men are justified in defending themselves, their friends, and property, and the government from the unlawful assaults and encroachments of all persons in times of exigency, where immediate appeal cannot be made to laws, and relief afforded. (D. & C. 134:11)

Even though we sense the hellish origin of war, even though we feel confident that war will never end war, yet under existing conditions we find ourselves as a body committed to combat this evil thing. With other loyal citizens we serve our country as bearers of arms, rather than to stand aloof to enjoy a freedom for which others have fought and died.

One purpose of emphasizing this theme is to give encouragement to young men now engaged in armed conflict and to reassure them that they are fighting for an eternal principle fundamental to the peace and progress of mankind.

CONCLUSION

GOD bless them and others now registered awaiting the call to duty, and those serving in defense! To each of you we send a message of confidence and trust. Many of you before entering upon your military duties were authorized messengers of peace. Others of you also hold the Priesthood. To all we say, in your personal habits let the same ideals guide you as soldiers in the army as guided you as missionaries. What the Lord said to you then is applicable to you now—

Wherefore, gird up your loins, and take upon you my whole armor, that ye may be able to withstand the evil day, having done all, that ye may be able to stand.

Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, having on the breastplate of righteousness, and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. (D. & C. 27:15, 16)

Keep yourselves morally clean. Being soldiers or sailors is not justification for indulgence in vulgarity, intemperance, or immorality. Others may be impelled to do these things because of the beastliness of war, but you who hold the Priesthood cannot so indulge with impunity. For your own sweet lives, and for others who trust you, keep yourselves unpoluted. Your loved ones believe in you, your comrades will respect you, your officers will admire you.

Today as we celebrate the resurrection of our Lord and Savior, there is a cloud of spiritual heaviness hanging over the world, as there was darkness at the time of the crucifixion. Let us hope that when this mad orgy shall have ended, that the honest in heart will experience a spiritual resurrection and will associate with one another in a newness of life. As seeds of future wars are often sown around the peace table, may the spirit of the gospel of Jesus Christ and not the spirit of retaliation and revenge actuate those who meet to determine peace terms. When that blessed occasion comes, may the representatives of the nations recognize the inalienable rights of peoples everywhere to govern themselves. It would be appropriate if there were emblazoned in golden letters on the walls in which they meet, and especially cherished as motives in the hearts of those who determine the conditions of peace, the words of Christ our Lord: "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you; That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven."

O Brother Man
Follow with reverent steps the great example
Of Him whose holy work was "doing good";
So shall the wide earth seem our Father's temple,
Each loving life a psalm of gratitude.

Then shall all shackles fall; the stormy clangor
Of wild music o'er the earth shall cease;
Love shall tread out the baleful fire of anger,
And in its ashes plant the tree of peace!

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

The congregation will now sing, "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow" (Hymn Book, page 149; No. 17 in the Pamphlet).

The closing prayer will be offered by President J. Frank Killian of Emery Stake.

This will close the broadcast of the Conference today.

The closing session of the Conference will begin tomorrow morning—Monday—at 10 a. m. That session will be broadcast over KSL.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow" (Hymn Book, page 149).

The closing prayer was offered by Elder J. Frank Killian, President of the Emery Stake.

TESTIMONY MEETING

Between the hours of 12:30 and 4:00 p. m. a testimony meeting was held in the assembly room, fifth floor of the Temple, at which all of the General Authorities of the Church were present. Presidents of Stakes and their Counselors and Presidents of High Priests Quorums from the various Stakes of the Church were also in attendance. There was a rich outpouring of the Spirit at this meeting. Forty-three testimonies were borne, and very many of those present were disappointed that there was not sufficient time and opportunity for them to participate.

THIRD DAY

MORNING MEETING

The concluding session of the Conference was held in the Assembly Hall, on Temple Square, Monday morning, April 6, at 10 o'clock.

President Grant was present and presided. President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., First Counselor in the First Presidency, conducted the services.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

Singing by the congregation, "Do What Is Right" (Hymn Book, page 165).

Opening prayer by Elder Wilford G. Edling, President of the Los Angeles Stake.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Praise To The Man" (Hymn Book, page 325).

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.First Counselor in the First Presidency*

Elder Orval W. Adams will now give the report of the Church Auditing Committee.

ELDER ORVAL W. ADAMSOf the Church Auditing Committee*

"President Heber J. Grant and Counselors
47 East South Temple Street
City

Dear Brethren:

We have examined the Financial Report of the Church for the year 1941. The accounting system is modern, the records are complete and accurate. The many activities have been handled at a minimum of expense. The budget is in balance. The properties of the Church are clear of encumbrance, and the Church is free of debt.

Respectfully submitted,

ORVAL W. ADAMS
ALBERT E. BOWEN
GEORGE S. SPENCER

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

THESE are days of so much confusion and misunderstanding, that we think it well to give some statistics covering matters not directly touched in the regular annual report. In considering what follows it should be remembered that the Church—in its wards and stakes—has only some 736,000 members, including men, women, and children.<sup>1</sup>

The Church is trying to do its full share in supporting quasi-governmental charitable and semi-charitable institutions. For example, the Church is one of the largest if not the largest single contributor to the Community Chest in the Salt Lake area and has been for years. It has on occasion taken a similar position in other areas.

We are the largest single contributor in this area to the Red Cross. In addition to our Red Cross local contributions, we have given to the national Red Cross in Washington very large sums, and expect to add to these from time to time.

In so far as contributions towards foreign sufferers in war-ridden countries is concerned, we have sent considerable sums (running into thousands of dollars) to those countries to help our needy Church membership there and have made available for charitable purposes considerable local funds in those countries.

We were arranging to bear the expense of bringing here refugee children from Europe, and of caring for them after their arrival, but the hazards of war stopped the movement of children to this country.

We have made a sizable contribution in furtherance of the effort to stamp out social diseases in and around our army camps.

We have made contributions (also running into thousands of dollars) direct to foreign governmental agencies to assist them in caring for the war-distressed.

Our women are aiding, through our Relief Society, in sewing and other activities, in behalf of our soldiers and our poor and needy.

So far as looking after the poor and needy of the Church, a problem that promises to become increasingly difficult because we must face the possibility soon of adding many to that unfortunate class, the record and achievement of our Welfare plan speak with no uncertain voice. These reports have just been read and it is unnecessary to repeat them here, more than to say that for these welfare purposes—many of which are usually called charitable by others—we expended during 1941 a total of almost $2,000,000, of which sum $290,828 was raised by purely welfare projects, that is, by gratuitous service to welfare agencies. This does not include the really large amount furnished in neighbor to neighbor help, nor the aid given through the Priesthood quorums to their members.

In the matter of public—that is national—financing, the Church is doing at least its full, even to a bounteous, share.

The Church itself and the three banks and one insurance company which it controls, own outright more than $17,500,000 worth of government bonds, long and short term, which is more than $23.77 for every man, woman, and child in the wards and stakes of the Church. This takes no account of the private holdings of the people which will run into considerable figures, though as the bulk of our people are moderately circumstanced, their private holdings will likewise be moderate. We feel this is a very large contribution, but we anticipate it will be somewhat increased later. In saying this, we wish to emphasize that the Church is not only not enormously wealthy but is, on the contrary, as moderately circumstanced as its members. It has no holdings of railroad bonds or stocks, nor of national industrial stocks. Its bond and stock investments, moderate as they are, are almost exclusively confined to local industries which it helped to establish, and which are almost wholly owned by local people.

The Church membership has furnished at least its full quota to the armed service of the United States, if the newspaper estimates of the present size of our army are even approximately accurate.

A survey just now completing shows that out of a total Church membership of 531,626, concerning which we have complete returns,* there have been 3,847 inducted into the service through local boards; 5,335 have volunteered into the United States army and navy, and 395 into the armed forces of other countries, 2,161 have entered our own armed service as members of national guard units; 488 have entered the service as reserve officers; while 13,578 are employed in defense industries. This gives a total of 12,226 Church members for the armed service, and for both armed service and defense work a total of 25,804 Church members.<sup>1</sup>

A disturbing factor in our returns is this—they seem to show that a disproportionate number are being taken from rural communities for the fighting service. A survey of certain rural wards shows that out of a Church population of 389,178 some 9,131 were taken into the army and navy. Out of an urban population of 113,280, there were 2,278 who went into the armed forces.

This disparity between rural and urban participation will probably be eliminated as time goes on.

There appears to be a like disparity between the numbers engaged in defense works, the cities contributing more than the country. It may be assumed that this difference will also disappear.

From any point of view, it may be confidently stated that the members of the Church and the Church itself are making their full proportionate contribution in the present emergency.

<sup>2</sup>Note: It should be emphasized that these figures do not represent the entire Church contribution to these activities but only a partial return based on 531,626 members.

<sup>3</sup>Note: On the basis of this statistical sample, complete returns for the total 736,544 membership in the wards and stakes of the Church would approximate 5,329 inducted into the service through local boards; 7,391 who have volunteered into the U. S. army and navy; 547 into the armed forces of other countries; 2,993 who have entered our own armed service as members of national guard units; 676 who have entered the service as reserve officers; 18,810 employed in defense industries. This gives a total of 16,936 from the wards and stakes in the armed service, and for both armed service and defense industries a total of 35,746 Church members.

Likewise, these figures would also indicate that complete returns for the entire Church membership of wards, stakes, and missions would approximate 6,455 inducted into service through local boards; 8,952 who have volunteered into the U. S. army and navy; 662 into the armed forces of other countries; 3,626 who have entered our own armed service as members of national guard units; 818 who have entered service as reserve officers; 22,783 men employed in defense industries. This gives a total of 20,513 Church members for the armed service, and for both armed service and defense work, a total of 43,296 Church members.

The impressiveness of this contribution on the part of fewer than nine hundred thousand people will be appreciated by those who take time to compare these figures with the per capita contribution of the nation as a whole.—Ed.

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

THIS has been a gathering that might accurately have been described as a Church leadership conference. President Grant, at the opening session of this conference, bore testimony to the divine calling of those who have presided over the Church in this dispensation. In his testimony he has given us the key by which we may be safely guided in our own presidency and leadership responsibility, and he sounded the key-note that has carried through this entire conference. I am persuaded that any presiding officer who does not have such a testimony is not qualified to preside as an officer in the Church.

From the beginning of time, as recorded in sacred scripture, the prophets of the Lord have sounded the warning note to the world and to the membership of the Church. There have always been those with apostate leanings who have ridiculed, and have stood on the side-lines and made light of the efforts of those who sought to follow that counsel. It was so in the days of Noah, and that history is repeating itself at the present time.

In 1831, the Lord gave a revelation to this Church, in which He declared that "the time was not yet, but soon, when peace should be taken from the earth." That time, we all recognize, is here. In that same revelation the Lord declared:

Monday, April 6

Wherefore, I, the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments. (D. & C. 1:17)

Again He has declared, "whether by mine own voice, or by the voice of my servants, it is the same." (D. & C. 1:38) Not all of His commandments have been given to the Church in the writings of the scriptures.

This conference has convened on the sixth anniversary of the launching of what we have styled the Church Welfare plan which was given to the Church by our leaders as they were inspired by the Lord. The activities of the Welfare plan have provided the greatest opportunities for spiritualizing this Church that perhaps have ever been given this people in our generation and as we have watched it unfold and its purposes be more fully revealed, we have come to see therein a building for not only the temporal salvation but also the spiritual salvation of the Church as well. Priesthood quorums everywhere who have rallied to that call, and have joined together as a group, have bound themselves in love and unity that has blessed this Church beyond our fondest expectations.

We have come to understand, and it is my firm conviction that the thing most needed in the Church today is a membership stimulated to action by a fervent conversion to the divinity of the calling of the brethren who preside as leaders of this Church. We have been a most blessed people above all other peoples. We have been given the power of the Priesthood. We have been blessed with a divine leadership and an inspired organization, and a great pioneering heritage and experience. The Lord will hold us responsible for the blessings that He has given us, and if the calamities that have been foretold come upon this people, they will come because we have not done our full duty, and we have not made the most of our opportunities, nor have we discharged the responsibilities we bear before our Heavenly Father.

WE have had many evidences of the power manifesting itself from the united team work of Priesthood quorums. We have witnessed that wherever stake welfare groups have followed the counsel of the leaders, and have banded together as regional organizations, when there was a disaster or an emergency as was the case in southern Arizona during a serious flood situation, we have discovered to our delight that the way was provided by which true brotherhood was fostered. We have noted how Priesthood quorums have made large contributions, with but very little effort when they worked unitedly together. We have seen how great amounts of produce have come from those who saw in their assignment not merely an out and out contribution, but a chance to work together and to develop together, on a permanent foundation, some project of which their community was capable.

We have been delighted to observe throughout the Church an attempt to study the basic reasons for our economic difficulties, and in farming communities we have noticed that farmers have set their goals to two prime objectives, namely, first to produce all they can on their own farms, for their own living; and second, to make an all-out war on debt. The analysis of how that work should be done has been something that I am sure would provide intelligent and profitable reading for those who are struggling with these problems.

The general Church Welfare committee would have me say to you, that from the standpoint of organization there is no other way to carry forward this work except by the Ward Welfare committees, properly supervised by the stake Welfare committees. It can't be done without an intelligent analysis of problems as revealed in the survey that you have been asked to make. The only ones who are objecting to the carrying forward of that survey, or to the organization as now set up, are those who have never organized or who have never made the survey.

We are pleased that in the Salt Lake region we have received the report that at least seventy-five percent of the wards are functioning according to program.

We have been asked today to be patriotic. This Church, as has been read by President McKay, has a record of accomplishment that is a delight to all of us, and a testimony to the world of the patriotism of this people. We have been sending our boys into the army, and will continue to do so. We will buy war bonds and stamps. We will pay inordinate taxes, for the carrying on of the work for the buying of planes and munitions of war. We will produce and conserve foodstuffs, that there may be sufficient of the necessities to carry on, as we have been requested by our government.

But beyond all that, the Latter-day Saints have a responsibility, that may be better understood when we recall the prophecy of Joseph Smith who declared that "the time would come when (the destiny and) the Constitution of these United States would hang as it were by a thread, and that this people, the sons of Zion, would rise up and save it from threatened destruction." (J. of D., Vol. 7:15)

I WANT to ask you to consider the meaning of that prophecy, in the light of the declaration of the prophets of the Book of Mormon times, who declared that this land was a choice land above all other lands, and would be free from bondage and from captivity, and from all other nations under heaven, if they will but serve the God of this land, even our Savior, Jesus Christ. (Ether 2:12)

This is a people whom the Lord has chosen to preach the gospel of righteousness. We talk of security in this day, and yet we fail to understand that here on this Temple Block we have standing the holy temple wherein we may find the symbols by which power might be generated that will save this nation from destruction. Therein may be found the fulness of the blessings of the Priesthood. Yesterday morning, as we assembled and heard the broadcast from that place, broadcasting to the world a message, it to me was significant of the prophecy that from this place "the law shall go forth to the world, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." The spires on the eastern towers of the temple are to represent the presidency of the Melchizedek Priesthood; the spires to the west, the presidency of the Aaronic Priesthood; the gilded figure of the angel Moroni symbolizes the preaching of the gospel to the world. The gospel must be preached as a witness under the direction of the holy Priesthood: "Fear God and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come." (Rev. 14:7) Therein lies the responsibility of this Church in sanctifying this people and this nation, that they might be spared the judgments that otherwise might come upon them, were it not for the preaching of the humble elders of this Church.

The Prophet Isaiah comforted his struggling people with these words:

Peace, peace to him that is far off, and to him that is near, saith the Lord; and I will heal him.

But the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt.

There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked. (Isaiah 57:19-21)

May we return home and teach our people the way of peace—peace because they are willing to live the commandments of the Lord Jesus Christ, I humbly pray, in His name. Amen.

MESSAGE OF THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr.: It is now my privilege and honor to read to you a rather long message from the First Presidency of the Church.

IN these days of trial and sorrow, when Satan is "seeking to destroy the souls of men" (D. & C. 10: 27) we send to the righteous everywhere our greetings with prayers for their blessing; to the Saints in all lands and on the islands of the seas, we renew our testimonies and pledge our unselfish service, exhorting them to lives obedient to the gospel and the commandments of the Lord; we extend to them the hand of true and faithful fellowship, with deep and abiding love and blessing.

OUR TESTIMONIES

WE bear witness to all the world that God lives, and still rules, that His righteous ways and His truth will finally prevail.

We bear testimony that Jesus is the Christ, the Only Begotten of the Father, the First Fruits of the Resurrection, the Redeemer of the World, and that "there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:12)

We solemnly declare that in these the latter-days, God has again spoken from the heavens through His chosen Prophet, Joseph Smith; that the Lord has, through that same Prophet, again revealed in its fulness His gospel,—the plan of life and salvation; that through that Prophet and his associates He has restored His holy Priesthood to the earth, from which it had been taken because of the wickedness of men; and that all the rights, powers, keys, and functions appertaining to that Priesthood as so restored are now vested in and exercised by the chosen and inspired leadership of His Church,—The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, even as that Priesthood has been exercised on the earth from the Beginning until this day, whenever His Church was here or His work had place among the children of men.

These testimonies we bear in all soberness, before God and men, aware that we are answerable to God for the truthfulness thereof. We admonish all men to give ear to these testimonies and to bring their lives into harmony with the gospel of Christ, that on the day "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him," they may stand with those on His right hand, to whom He will say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." (Matt. 25:31, 34)

We shall now speak first of some vital practical matters which should be uppermost in the minds of all Latter-day Saints.

MESSAGE TO PARENTS

IT is becoming increasingly clear that very many of our physicians and surgeons will be taken by the government for service with the armed forces. This is well, for we want our soldiers and sailors to have every care which it is possible to give them. But this will leave the civilians with curtailed and probably inadequate medical help. In some areas we shall be left with little more trained assistance than was available to our pioneer fathers. Yet it is our patriotic duty to be as fully effective in production at home as our boys are effective in combat in the field. Those in the front lines cannot be strong unless those behind the lines are strong also. To meet this patriotic duty and to prepare for this threatening condition, we urge all parents to guard with zealous care the health of their children. Feed them simple, good, wholesome food that will nourish and make them strong. See that they are warmly clad. Keep them from exposure. Have them avoid unnecessary crowds in close, poorly ventilated, overheated rooms and halls. See that they have plenty of rest and sleep. Avoid late hours. Keep them home in the evenings and remain home to enjoy them. Teach them strictly to observe the Word of Wisdom which is God's law of health. You parents observe these rules yourselves, and keep the other commandments of the Lord. You bishops and presidents of stakes, first lead your people by example and then they will follow your precepts. Parents, prepare yourselves and your children for the times to come. So live, day by day, that you may with confidence, ask the blessings of health with which the Lord clothes those whom, living righteously, He delights to succor.

MESSAGE TO THE YOUTH

To the youth of the Church we repeat all the foregoing advice, but above all we plead with you to live clean, for the unclean life leads only to suffering, misery, and woe physically,—and spiritually it is the path to destruction. How glorious and near to the angels is youth that is clean; this youth has joy unspeakable here and eternal happiness hereafter. Sexual purity is youth's most precious possession; it is the foundation of all righteousness. Better dead, clean, than alive, unclean.

Times approach when we shall need all the health, strength, and spiritual power we can get to bear the afflictions that will come upon us.

WELFARE WORK

WE renew the counsel given to the Saints from the days of Brigham Young until now,—be honest, truthful, industrious, frugal, thrifty. In the day of plenty, prepare for the day of scarcity. The principle of the fat and lean kine, is as applicable today as it was in the days when, on the banks of the Nile, Joseph interpreted Pharaoh's dream. Officials now warn us, and warn again, that scant days are coming.

We renew our counsel, and repeat our instructions. Let every Latter-day Saint that has land, produce some valuable, essential foodstuff thereon and then preserve it; or if he cannot produce an essential foodstuff, let him produce some other kind and exchange it for an essential foodstuff; let them who have no land of their own, and who have knowledge of farming and gardening, try to rent some, either by themselves or with others, and produce foodstuff thereon, and preserve it. Let those who have land produce enough extra to help their less fortunate brethren.

The Welfare plan should be carried forward with redoubled energy that we may care for the worthy, needy poor and unfortunate, and many of us may hereafter enter that class who now feel we are secure from want.

As the Church has always urged since we came to the Valleys, so now we urge every Church householder to have a year's supply of essential foodstuffs ahead. This should, so far as possible, be produced by each householder and preserved by him. This course will not only relieve from any impending distress those households who so provide themselves, but will release just that much food to the general national stores of foodstuffs from which the public at large must be fed.

Monday, April 6

Third Day

The utmost care should be taken to see that foodstuffs so produced and preserved by the householder, do not spoil, for that would be waste, and the Lord looks with disfavor upon waste. He has blessed His people with abundant crops; the promise for this year is most hopeful. The Lord is doing His part; He expects us to do ours.

FALSE POLITICAL Isms

WE again warn our people in America of the constantly increasing threat against our inspired Constitution and our free institutions set up under it. The same political tenets and philosophies that have brought war and terror in other parts of the world are at work amongst us in America. The proponents thereof are seeking to undermine our own form of government and to set up instead one of the forms of dictatorships now flourishing in other lands. These revolutionists are using a technique that is as old as the human race,—a fervid but false solicitude for the unfortunate over whom they thus gain mastery, and then enslave them.

They suit their approaches to the particular group they seek to deceive. Among the Latter-day Saints they speak of their philosophy and their plans under it, as an ushering in of the United Order. Communism and all other similar isms bear no relationship whatever to the United Order. They are merely the clumsy counterfeits which Satan always devises of the gospel plan. Communism debases the individual and makes him the enslaved tool of the state to whom he must look for sustenance and religion; the United Order exalts the individual, leaves him his property, "according to his family, according to his circumstances and his wants and needs,"

(D. & C. 51:3) and provides a system by which he helps care for his less fortunate brethren; the United Order leaves every man free to choose his own religion as his conscience directs. Communism destroys man's God-given free agency; the United Order glorifies it. Latter-day Saints cannot be true to their faith and lend aid, encouragement, or sympathy to any of these false philosophies. They will prove snares to their feet.

GOSPEL OF LOVE

THE gospel of Christ is a gospel of love and peace, of patience and long suffering, of forbearance and forgiveness, of kindness and good deeds, of charity and brotherly love. Greed, avarice, base ambition, thirst for power, and unrighteous dominion over our fellow men, can have no place in the hearts of Latter-day Saints nor of God-fearing men everywhere. We of the Church must lead the life prescribed in the saying of the ancient prophet-warrior:

I seek not for power, but to pull it down. I seek not for honor of the world, but for the glory of my God, and the freedom and welfare of my country. (Alma 60:36)

HATE MUST BE ABOLISHED

HATE can have no place in the souls of the righteous. We must follow the commands of Christ Himself which declare the true life:

Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you;

That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven. (Matt. 5:44-45)

These principles must be instilled into the hearts of our children, taught to our youth, given by way of instruction to our vigorous manhood and womanhood, lived in very fact and deed by the aged, ripened in experience and wisdom. These are the principles which God enjoins upon all who teach, in whatever capacity or in whatever place. The Lord has declared that those who teach not their 'children light and truth, according to the commandments' shall be afflicted, the wicked one shall have power over them (D. & C. 93:42), and the sin shall be upon their heads (D. & C. 68:25). Woe will be the part of those who plant hate in the hearts of the youth, and of the people, for God will not hold them guiltless; they are sowing the wind, their victims will reap the whirlwinds. Hate is born of Satan; love is the offspring of God. We must drive out hate from our hearts, every one of us, and permit it not again to enter.

MISSION OF THE CHURCH

THE Lord has established His Church in these latter-days that men might be called to repentance, to the salvation and exaltation of their souls. Time and time again He told the Prophet Joseph and those with him that "the field is white already to harvest." (D. & C. 4:4; 6:3; 11:3; 12:3; 14:3; 33:3, 7) Over and over again He commanded them to preach nothing but repentance to this generation (D. & C. 6:9; 11:9, 14:8) finally declaring:

And thou shalt declare glad tidings, yea, publish it upon the mountains, and upon every high place, and among every people that thou shalt be permitted to see.

And thou shalt do it with all humility, trusting in me, reviling not against revilers.

And of tenets thou shalt not talk, but thou shalt declare repentance and faith on the Savior, and remission of sins by baptism and by fire, yea, even the Holy Ghost.

Behold, this is a great and the last commandment which I shall give unto you concerning this matter; for this shall suffice for thy daily walk, even unto the end of thy life.

And misery thou shalt receive if thou wilt slight these counsels, yea, even the destruction of thyself and property. (D. & C. 19:29-33)

These commands we must obey that men shall come to know God and Jesus Christ whom He sent, for "this is life eternal." (John 17:3)

For this cause was the Church organized, the gospel again revealed in its fulness, the Priesthood of God again restored, with all its rights, powers, keys and functions. This is the mission of the Church. The divine commission given to the apostles of old (Matt. 28:18 ff.; Mark 16:15 ff.) has been repeated in this day, that the gospel shall be carried to all nations (D. & C. 38:33), unto the Jew and the Gentile (D. & C. 18:26); it shall be declared with rejoicing (D. & C. 28:16); it shall roll to the ends of the earth (D. & C. 65:2); and it must be preached by us to whom the kingdom has been given. (D. & C. 84:76) No act of ours or of the Church must interfere with this God-given mandate. The Lord will hold us to this high commission and exalted duty, imposed by His commandment to us, when He said:

And in nothing doth man offend God, or against none is his wrath kindled, save those who confess not his hand in all things, and obey not his commandments. (D. & C. 59:21)

We shall be excused from this divine commission, individually and as a Church, only if some power beyond our control shall prevent our obedience to God's commands, then they who hinder must bear the penalty. (D. & C. 124:49) But to that point of hindrance, it is our bounden duty to carry on.

SENDING OF MISSIONARIES

IT is our duty, divinely imposed, to continue urgently and militantly to carry forward our missionary work. We must continue to call missionaries and send them out to preach the gospel, which was never more needed than now, which is the only remedy for the tragic ills that now afflict the world, and which alone can bring peace and brotherly love back amongst the peoples of the earth. We must continue to call to missionary work those who seem best able to perform it in these troublous and difficult days. Our duty under divine command imperatively demands this. We shall not knowingly call anyone for the purpose of having him evade military service, nor for the purpose of interfering with or hampering that service in any way, nor of putting any impediment in the way of government. These would be unworthy motives for a missionary life. Our people have furnished and we expect them to continue to furnish their full quota for those purposes, but we see no alternative, until new rules are made by the government, but to continue to call the best and most effective men into missionary work, if they are available therefor.

Monday, April 6

Having in mind that the worldwide disaster in material and spiritual matters has brought vital and difficult problems to the nation and to the Church,—the nation because of need of manpower for the armed forces and defense works, and to the Church because of the imperative need it brings to us to employ in our missionary work the experience, testimony and faith possessed by our more mature brethren, we have instructed our bishops, presidents of branches, and presidents of missions, to confine until further notice, their recommendations of brethren for missionary service in the field, to those who on March 23, 1942, were seventies or high priests. Furthermore, in recommending these brethren, none but those who are and have been living worthily, should be chosen; and as to these, they should choose those only who have not received their notice of induction, who are not likely to receive it within a short time, and who have a real desire to do missionary work.

To preach the gospel, under ordination from the Priesthood of God, is a great privilege, to be enjoyed by those only who are thoroughly qualified and who are and have been strictly living the commandments and attending to their Church duties. Every bishop will carefully examine everyone whom he considers for a mission, to be sure he meets these requirements. No lukewarm or unworthy person should be recommended. The bishop must not in any way play favorites, thus avoiding giving just ground among the people of his ward for that unworthy, unrighteous thought, sometimes voiced by those whose sons have gone into the service, that because their sons have gone into the army, every other parent's son should go into the army, and that none should be sent on missions. This feeling has behind it thoughts that do not comport with the teachings of our Heavenly Father. Moreover, those going on missions are amenable to selection for army service so soon as they return. A mission exempts from army service only for the term of the mission.

CHURCH AND STATE

THE Church stands for the separation of church and state. The church has no civil political functions. As the church may not assume the functions of the state, so the state may not assume the functions of the church. The church is responsible for and must carry on the work of the Lord, directing the conduct of its members, one towards the other, as followers of the lowly Christ, not forgetting the humble, the poor and needy, and those in distress, leading them all to righteous living and a spiritual life that shall bring them to salvation, exaltation, and eternal progression in wisdom, knowledge, understanding, and power.

Today, more than ever before in the history of the Church, we must bring the full force of the righteous living of our people and the full influence of the spiritual power and responsibility of the holy Priesthood, to combat the evil forces which Satan has let loose among the peoples of the earth. We are in the midst of a desperate struggle between Truth and Error, and Truth will finally prevail.

The state is responsible for the civil control of its citizens or subjects, for their political welfare, and for the carrying forward of political policies, domestic and foreign, of the body politic. For these policies, their success or failure, the state is alone responsible, and it must carry its burdens. All these matters involve and directly affect Church members because they are part of the body politic, and members must give allegiance to their sovereign and render it loyal service when called thereto. But the Church, itself, as such, has no responsibility for these policies, as to which it has no means of doing more than urging its members fully to render that loyalty to their country and to free institutions which the loftiest patriotism calls for.

Nevertheless, as a correlative of the principle of separation of the church and the State, themselves, there is an obligation running from every citizen or subject to the state. This obligation is voiced in that Article of Faith which declares:

We believe in being subject to kings, presidents, rulers, and magistrates, in obeying, honoring, and sustaining the law.

For one hundred years, the Church has been guided by the following principles:

We believe that governments were instituted of God for the benefit of man; and that he holds men accountable for their acts in relation to them, both in making laws and administering them, for the good and safety of society.

We believe that no government can exist in peace, except such laws are framed and held inviolate as will secure to each individual the free exercise of conscience, the right and control of property, and the protection of life.

We believe that all governments necessarily require civil officers and magistrates to enforce the laws of the same; and that such as will administer the law in equity and justice should be sought for and upheld by the voice of the people if a republic, or the will of the sovereign.

We believe that religion is instituted of God; and that men are amenable to him, and to him only, for the exercise of it, unless their religious opinions prompt them to infringe upon the rights and liberties of others; but we do not believe that human law has a right to interfere in prescribing rules of worship to bind the consciences of men, nor dictate forms for public or private devotion; that the civil magistrate should restrain crime, but never control conscience; should punish guilt, but never suppress the freedom of the soul.

We believe that all men are bound to sustain and uphold the respective governments in which they reside, while protected in their inherent and inalienable rights by the laws of such governments; and that sedition and rebellion are unbecoming every citizen thus protected, and should be punished accordingly; and that all governments have a right to enact such laws as in their own judgments are best calculated to secure the public interest; at the same time, however, holding sacred the freedom of conscience.

We believe that every man should be honored in his station, rulers and magistrates as such, being placed for the protection of the innocent and the punishment of the guilty; and that to the laws all men owe respect and deference, as without them peace and harmony would be supplanted by anarchy and terror; human laws being instituted for the express purpose of regulating our interests as individuals and nations, between man and man; and divine laws given of heaven, prescribing rules on spiritual concerns, for faith and worship, both to be answered by man to his Maker. . .

We believe . . . that murder, treason, robbery, theft, and the breach of the general peace, in all respects, should be punished according to their criminality and their tendency to evil among men, by the laws of that government in which the offense is committed. . . . (D. & C. 134:1-6, 8)

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP AND ARMY SERVICE

OBEDIENT to these principles, the members of the Church have always felt under obligation to come to the defense of their country when a call to arms was made; on occasion the Church has prepared to defend its own members.

In the days of Nauvoo, the Nauvoo Legion was formed, having in view the possible armed defense of the Saints against mob violence. Following our expulsion from Nauvoo, the Mormon Battalion was recruited by the national government for service in the war with Mexico. When Johnston's army was sent to Utah in 1857 as the result of malicious misrepresentations as to the actions and attitude of the territorial officers and the people, we prepared and used measures of force to prevent the entry of the army into the valleys. During the early years in Utah, forces were raised and used to fight the Indians. In the war with Spain, members of the Church served with the armed forces of the United States, with distinction and honor. In the World War, the Saints of America and of European countries served loyally their respective governments, on both sides of the conflict. Likewise in the present war, righteous men of the Church in both camps have died, some with great heroism, for their own country's sake. In all this our people have but served loyally the country of which they were citizens or subjects under the principles we have already stated. We have felt honored that our brethren have died nobly for their country; the Church has been benefited by their service and sacrifice.

Nevertheless, we have not forgotten that on Sinai, God commanded "Thou shalt not kill"; nor that in this dispensation the Lord has repeatedly reiterated that command. He has said:

And now, behold, I speak unto the church. Thou shalt not kill; and he that kills shall not have forgiveness in this world, nor in the world to come.

And again, I say, thou shalt not kill; but he that killeth shall die. (D. & C. 42:18-19; and see 59:6)

At another time the Lord commanded that murderers should "be delivered up and dealt with according to the laws of the land; for remember that he hath no forgiveness." (ibid 79) So also when land was to be obtained in Zion, the Lord said:

Wherefore, the land of Zion shall not be obtained but by purchase or by blood, otherwise there is none inheritance for you.

And if by purchase, behold you are blessed;

And if by blood, as you are forbidden to shed blood, lo, your enemies are upon you, and ye shall be scourged from city to city, and from synagogue to synagogue, and but few shall stand to receive an inheritance. (D. & C. 63:29-31)

But all these commands, from Sinai down, run in very terms against individuals as members of society, as well as members of the Church, for one man must not kill another as Cain killed Abel; they also run against the Church as in the case of securing land in Zion, because Christ's Church should not make war, for the Lord is a Lord of peace. He has said to us in this dispensation:

Therefore, renounce war and proclaim peace. . . . (D. & C. 98:16)

Third Day

Thus the Church is and must be against war. The Church itself cannot wage war, unless and until the Lord shall issue new commands. It cannot regard war as a righteous means of settling international disputes; these should and could be settled—the nations agreeing—by peaceful negotiation and adjustment.

But the Church membership are citizens or subjects of sovereignties over which the Church has no control. The Lord Himself has told us to "befriend that law which is the constitutional law of the land":

And now, verily I say unto you concerning the laws of the land, it is my will that my people should observe to do all things whatsoever I command them.

And that law of the land which is constitutional, supporting that principle of freedom in maintaining rights and privileges, belongs to all mankind, and is justifiable before me.

Therefore, I, the Lord, justify you, and your brethren of my church, in befriending that law which is the constitutional law of the land;

And as pertaining to law of man, whatsoever is more or less than this cometh of evil. (D. & C. 98:4-7)

While by its terms this revealed word related more especially to this land of America, nevertheless the principles announced are worldwide in their application, and they are specifically addressed to "you" (Joseph Smith), "and your brethren of my church." When, therefore, constitutional law, obedient to these principles, calls the manhood of the Church into the armed service of any country to which they owe allegiance, their highest civic duty requires that they meet that call. If, harkening to that call and obeying those in command over them, they shall take the lives of those who fight against them, that will not make of them murderers, nor subject them to the penalty that God has prescribed for those who kill, beyond the principle to be mentioned shortly. For it would be a cruel God that would punish His children as moral sinners for acts done by them as the innocent instrumentalities of a sovereign whom He had told them to obey and whose will they were powerless to resist.

GOD IS AT THE HELM

THE whole world is in the midst of a war that seems the worst of all time. This Church is a worldwide Church. Its devoted members are in both camps. They are the innocent war instrumentalities of their warring sovereignties. On each side they believe they are fighting for home, and country, and freedom. On each side, our brethren pray to the same God, in the same name, for victory. Both sides cannot be wholly right; perhaps neither is without wrong. God will work out in His own due time and in His own sovereign way the justice and right of the conflict, but He will not hold the innocent instrumentalities of the war, our brethren in arms, responsible for the conflict. This is a major crisis in the world-life of man. God is at the helm.

RIGHTEOUS SUFFER WITH WICKED

BUT there is an eternal law that rules war and those who engage in it. It was given when, Peter having struck off the ear of Malchus, the servant of the High Priest, Jesus reproved him, saying:

Put up again thy sword into his place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword. (Matt. 26:52)

The Savior thus laid down a general principle upon which He placed no limitations as to time, place, cause, or people involved. He repeated it in this dispensation when He told the people if they tried to secure the land of Zion by blood, then "lo, your enemies are upon you." This is a universal law, for force always begets force; it is the law of 'an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth' (Ex. 21:24; Lev. 24:20); it is the law of the unrighteous and wicked, but it operates against the righteous who may be involved.

Mormon, recording the war of revenge by the Nephites, against the Lamanites, pronounced another great law:

But, behold, the judgments of God will overtake the wicked; and it is by the wicked that the wicked are punished; for it is the wicked that stir up the hearts of the children of men unto bloodshed. (Mormon 4:5)

But, we repeat, in this war of the wicked, the righteous suffer also. Moroni, mistakenly reproving Pahoran 'for sitting upon his throne in a state of thoughtless stupor, while his enemies were spreading the work of death around him, yea, while they were murdering thousands of his brethren,' said to Pahoran:

Do ye suppose that, because so many of your brethren have been killed it is because of their wickedness? I say unto you, if ye have supposed this ye have supposed in vain; for I say unto you, there are many who have fallen by the sword; and behold it is to your condemnation;

For the Lord suffereth the righteous to be slain that his justice and judgment may come upon the wicked; therefore ye need not suppose that the righteous are lost because they are slain; but behold, they do enter into the rest of the Lord their God. (Alma 60:7, 12-13)

In this terrible war now waging, thousands of our righteous young men in all parts of the world and in many countries are subject to a call into the military service of their own countries. Some of these, so serving, have already been called back to their heavenly home; others will almost surely be called to follow. But 'behold,' as Moroni said, the righteous of them who serve and are slain 'do enter into the rest of the Lord their God,' and of them the Lord has said "those that die in me shall not taste of death, for it shall be sweet unto them." (D. & C. 42:46) Their salvation and exaltation in the world to come will be secure. That in their work of destruction they will be striking at their brethren will not be held against them. That sin, as Moroni of old said, is to the condemnation of those who 'sit in their places of power in a state of thoughtless stupor, those rulers in the world who in a frenzy of hate and lust for unrighteous power and dominion over their fellow men, have put into motion eternal forces they do not comprehend and cannot control.

Monday, April 6

God, in His own due time, will pass sentence upon them.

Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. (Romans 12:19)

MESSAGE TO MEN IN SERVICE

TO our young men who go into service, no matter whom they serve or where, we say live clean, keep the commandments of the Lord, pray to Him constantly to preserve you in truth and righteousness, live as you pray, and then whatever betides you the Lord will be with you and nothing will happen to you that will not be to the honor and glory of God and to your salvation and exaltation. There will come into your hearts from the living of the pure life you pray for, a joy that will pass your powers of expression or understanding. The Lord will be always near you; He will comfort you; you will feel His presence in the hour of your greatest tribulation; He will guard and protect you to the full extent that accords with His all-wise purpose. Then, when the conflict is over and you return to your homes, having lived the righteous life, how great will be your happiness—whether you be of the victors or of the vanquished—that you have lived as the Lord commanded. You will return so disciplined in righteousness that thereafter all Satan's wiles and stratagems will leave you untouched. Your faith and testimony will be strong beyond breaking. You will be looked up to and revered as having passed through the fiery furnace of trial and temptation and come forth unharmed. Your brethren will look to you for counsel, support, and guidance. You will be the anchors to which thereafter the youth of Zion will moor their faith in man.

To you brethren and sisters who make up the body of the Church we send again our greetings and our blessings. We are grateful to our Heavenly Father for your loyalty, your devotion, and your righteousness. We love and bless you. We are grateful for your faithfulness in your tithes and offerings, the greatest in the last year in the whole history of the Church.

We remind you that as the Lord said to ancient Israel, so He says to us, in an eternal principle:

Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts.

And all nations shall call you blessed: for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the Lord of hosts. (Malachi 3:10-12)

We give thanks and praise to our Heavenly Father for the unselfish and righteous service of the officers of the stakes, of the wards, of the auxiliaries, of the Priesthood, of the missionaries, and of every man and woman who is helping to advance the cause of Truth. We give our blessing and love to all of you. We claim all of you as fellow servants of the Lord. To our brethren of the General Authorities,—the Twelve and their Assistants, the Acting Presiding Patriarch, the First Council of the Seventy, and the Presiding Bishopric—we give our love and trust. We thank them and our Heavenly Father for their loyal support, their faith, their righteous works, which they carry on with an eye single to the glory of God and to the progress of His work, so magnifying in righteousness their callings.

We exhort all the Saints to remember the great commandment which Jesus gave:

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

This is the first and great commandment.

And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets. (Matt. 22:37-40)

And as King Benjamin, the Nephite prophet-king, said to his people:

... Learn that when ye are in the service of your fellow beings ye are only in the service of your God. (Mosiah 2:17)

May the Lord preserve the officers and the body of the Church in health and strength, increase our faith and our testimonies, endow us all with wisdom and understanding beyond measure, that we may all so live that when we are called home we may be saved and exalted in the celestial kingdom.

Our Heavenly Father: Hear us in our petitions before Thee: Let nothing stand betwixt us and Thee and Thy blessings; work out Thy purposes speedily; drive hate from the souls of men, that peace and brotherly love may again come to the earth and rule the hearts of Thy children, that nations may again live together in amity. Watch tenderly over Thy children in all lands; bless therein the sick and afflicted, care for those in distress; help us, their brethren bearing Thy Priesthood, to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, give shelter to those who have no homes; comfort, our Heavenly Father, with the full sweetness of Thy Holy Spirit, those who mourn, we humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

You have heard the message of the First Presidency. I think that it is unnecessary for me to add anything further.

As I said yesterday at the marvelous meeting that we had in the temple, I feel that it is not wisdom for me to stay longer on account of my ill health. I appreciate the fact that you all know as I have said so often I know that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God, the Redeemer of the world, and that Joseph Smith was His Prophet.

I can say nothing more than is said in this message from the presidency of the Church. I can only hope that the people of the world may realize the fact that we are in very deed the Church of Jesus Christ and not the Church of any man, and that there is no ambition in our hearts for personal power or prestige in the world. All that we desire is the salvation of mankind. May God help us.

I never forget one little statement, I think it is in the eighteenth section of the Doctrine and Covenants: "And if it so be that you should labor all your days in crying repentance unto this people, and bring, save it be one soul unto me, how great shall be your joy with him in the kingdom of my Father!"

God bless you all. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

For the information of the brethren from Canada I am requested to say that as the number of missionaries now sent from the United States to Canada will be fewer than heretofore, and as there is no Selective Draft in that Dominion missionaries in Canada may be recommended as heretofore. They will remain in Canada in the Canadian missions.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

The congregation will now sing, "Come, Let Us Anew" (No. 21 in your Pamphlet; Hymn Book, page 51).

The closing prayer will be offered by President T. George Wood of Taylor Stake, after which this Conference will stand adjourned sine die.

Monday, April 6Third Day

The congregation sang the hymn, "Come, Let Us Anew" (Hymn Book, page 51).

Elder T. George Wood, President of the Taylor Stake, offered the benediction.

Conference adjourned sine die.

The congregational singing was directed by J. Spencer Cornwall and Richard P. Condie, Conductor and Assistant Conductor, respectively, of the Tabernacle Choir. Organ accompaniments were played by Frank W. Asper, Alexander Schreiner, and Wade N. Stephens, Tabernacle Organists.

The music of the Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast, and also of the Church of the Air Broadcast, was directed by J. Spencer Cornwall. Organ accompaniments and solo presentations for these broadcasts were played by Frank W. Asper.

Stenographic notes of the Conference were taken by Frank W. Otterstrom and Joseph Anderson.

JOSEPH ANDERSON,
Clerk of the Conference.

Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith

The Text Book for the Melchizedek Quorums for 1942

Taken from his sermons and writings as they are found in the Documentary History and other publications of the Church and written or published in the days of the Prophet's ministry

Selected and arranged by the Historian, Joseph Fielding Smith, and his Assistants in the Historian's Office of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

Many of these discourses and writings appear in the Documentary History of the Church, but others have not been included in these volumes, but are scattered through the early publications of the Church. It has been difficult even for the students to obtain these because the old publications are not accessible for general use.

FIRST DAY

MORNING MEETING

The first session of the Conference was held in the Tabernacle, Saturday morning at 10 o'clock a.m., October 3, 1942.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. MCKAY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

In behalf of the First Presidency and other General Authorities of the Church, I welcome the representatives of the Priesthood of the Church assembled in this opening session of the 113th Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. It is to be regretted that the exigencies of war make it necessary again to limit the attendance at this gathering. However, if a general invitation had been given there would be hundreds, perhaps thousands, who would be compelled to attend overflow meetings, as every seat in the tabernacle will be filled by those who have been invited to this Conference.

I am sure I express the feelings of all present when I say we are gratified to have with us President Heber J. Grant; and all will be thankful and happy to know that he is even stronger in every way than he was six months ago. It is at his request that I conduct this meeting.

Others of the General Authorities present are the two Counselors in the First Presidency, members of the Council of the Twelve, the Assistants to the Twelve, the Presidents of the First Council of Seventy, and the Presiding Bishopric.

Through the courtesy of Radio Station KSL, the meetings of this conference are being broadcast. It will be necessary therefore for the information of the radio audience to make some announcements which to you here assembled may seem unnecessary.

The singing this morning will be conducted by J. Spencer Cornwall, director of the Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir. Elder Alexander Schreiner is at the organ.

The congregation sang the hymn, "I Know That My Redeemer Lives."

Elder Alfred W. Chambers, President of the Smithfield Stake, offered the invocation.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Come, O Thou King of Kings."

CHANGES IN CHURCH OFFICERS

At the request of President McKay, Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference, presented for the information of the Conference the following report:

Special Appointments:

J. Leonard Love, Bishop of the Yalecrest Ward, Bonneville Stake, appointed chairman of the new Church clothing committee of the Church Welfare program.

A. Hamer Reiser, Secretary of the Deseret Sunday School Union general board, appointed manager of the Deseret Book Company.

Wendell J. Ashton, member of the general board, was appointed to succeed A. Hamer Reiser as Secretary of the Deseret Sunday School Union board.

Mrs. Helena W. Larson appointed as secretary of the Y. W. M. I. A. general board.

New Mission Presidents:

Eldred L. Waldron appointed to succeed Roscoe C. Cox as president of the Hawaiian Mission.

James L. Barker appointed to succeed Frederick S. Williams as president of the Argentine Mission.

Elijah Allen appointed to succeed Henry H. Blood, deceased, as president of the California Mission.

Bishop Arwell Lee Pierce, El Paso Ward, Mt. Graham Stake, appointed to succeed A. Lorenzo Anderson as president of the Mexican Mission.

New Stakes Organized:

Humboldt Stake was organized May 31, 1942, from wards and branches in the Reno, Nevada, and Mt. Ogden stakes, and consists of the Winnemucca Ward, Reno Stake; Carlin, Elko, Metropolis, and Wells wards, Nevada Stake; and the Montello Independent Branch, Mt. Ogden Stake.

Mt. Jordan Stake was organized May 3, 1942, by a division of the East Jordan Stake, and consists of the Crescent, Draper First, Draper Second, Granite, Sandy First, Sandy Second, and Sandy Third wards.

Stake Presidents Chosen:

MESSAGE OF THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., First Counselor in the First Presidency, presented the following Message of the First Presidency:

To the Saints in every land and clime we send our love and greetings and say unto you: May the Peace of Christ which passeth human understanding enter your souls and be and abide with you always. During the coming winter, may the Lord in His wisdom, give food to the hungry, raiment to the unclothed, heat and shelter to those who are cold; may His Spirit bring comfort to the broken hearts, bind up the aching wounds, heal those who are sick, preserve from plague and pestilence those who are victims of this worldwide holocaust.

OUR TESTIMONIES

WE again bear you our testimony: that God lives and that He loves those who keep His commandments and walk in His ways; that Christ, His Only Begotten, came to earth and lived His mission through, that He was crucified, died, the Lamb of God sacrificed for the sins of the world, and after three days came forth from the tomb, a resurrected being, thereby making the Atonement which brings the blessing of a resurrection to all God's children; that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, raised up to usher in this the last dispensation of the fulness of times, and to bring about the restoration of the fulness of the everlasting gospel and the Holy Priesthood of God, lost to earth through the wickedness of men.

We bear witness that this is the one true Church of the Christ, and that except through it and the following of the teachings and commandments it proclaims, men may not reach the highest exaltation in the eternities to come.

We say unto you that in the darkest hours of these days of dread, tumult, and woe, the Lord is near to us, that He mourns over the iniquities and the sorrows of His children, that He would lead us into paths of peace if we would but follow Him; that He holds in His loving hands, nurtured by His boundless mercy, every one who lives righteously, and who seeks His protection; that He listens and hearkens to those who, having pure hearts and contrite spirits, come to Him with prayers of unshaking faith. He stands today ready as always to gather us in, "even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings," would we but yield our lives in righteous service to Him.

DRINK AND THE WORD OF WISDOM

THE world is smitten, nigh unto death, with great and grievous tribulations, following the commission of cardinal sins.

Over the earth, and it seems particularly in America, the demon drink is in control. Drunken with strong drink, men have lost their reason; their counsel has been destroyed; their judgment and vision are fled; they reel forward to destruction.

Drink brings cruelty into the home; it walks arm in arm with poverty; its companions are disease and plague; it puts chastity to flight; it knows neither honesty nor fair dealing; it is a total stranger to truth; it drowns conscience; it is the bodyguard of evil; it curses all who touch it.

Drink has brought more woe and misery, broken more hearts, wrecked more homes, committed more crimes, filled more coffins, than all the wars the world has suffered.

Therefore, we thank the faithful Saints for their observance of the Word of Wisdom, for their putting aside of drink. The Lord is pleased with you. You have been a bulwark of strength to this people and to the world. Your influence has been for righteousness. The Lord will not forget your good works when you stand before Him in judgment. He has blessed and will continue to bless you with the blessings He promised to those who obey this divine law of health. We invoke the mercies of the Lord upon you that you may continue strong in spirit, to cast off temptation and continue teachers to the youth of Zion by word and deed.

But so great is the curse of drink that we should not be held guiltless did we not call upon all offending Saints to forsake it and banish it from their lives forever.

God has spoken against drink in our day, and has given to this, the Lord's own Church, a specific revelation concerning it, as a word of wisdom by revelation—

That inasmuch as any man drinketh wine or strong drink among you, behold it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father . . .

And, again, strong drinks are not for the belly, but for the washing of your bodies.—
(D. & C. 89:5, 7)

This declares the divine wisdom. It is God's law of health, and is binding upon each and every one of us. We cannot escape its operation, for it is based upon eternal truth. Men may agree or disagree about this word of the Lord; if they agree, it adds nothing; if they disagree, it means nothing. Beyond His word we cannot reach, and it is enough for every Latter-day Saint, willing and trying to follow divine guidance.

For more than half a century President Grant has on every appropriate occasion admonished the Saints touching their obligation to keep the Word of Wisdom. He has told them what it means to them in matters of health, quoting the words of the Lord thereon. He has pointed out that treasures of knowledge, even hidden knowledge, would come to those who lived the law. He has, over and over again, shown what it would mean financially to every member who would keep the law, what it would mean financially to our people, and what it would mean financially to a nation. He has told us what it would mean in ending human woes, misery, sorrow, disease, crime, and death. But his admonitions have not found a resting place in all our hearts.

We, the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, now solemnly renew all these counsels, we repeat all these admonitions, we reinvoked obedience to God's law of health given us by God Himself.

We repeat here the directions heretofore given by President Grant: We ask that every General Authority, every stake and ward officer, every officer of Priesthood quorums, every auxiliary officer in ward, stake, or general board, every president of mission, every regular or stake missionary, in short, every officer in every Church organization, strictly to keep the Word of Wisdom from this moment forward. If any feels too weak to do this, we must ask him to step aside for some one who is willing and able so to do, for there are thousands of Latter-day Saints who are willing to obey the commandments and who are able to carry on the work of the Lord.

We ask all Church presiding officers immediately to set their official houses in order.

The Lord will not otherwise fully prosper us in our service in His cause, wherefore we shall stand accused before Him that we walked not in the lead of His flock in the full stature of worthy, righteous example. Furthermore, we make a like call upon all these officers to keep also the law of tithing, to live the law of strictest chastity, and to observe and do the commandments of the Lord.

That in these dire days, we may, each in his own place, enjoy the abundant physical blessings of the righteous life, we call upon all true Latter-day Saints, in or out of office, to keep this law of health,—completely to give up drink, to quit using tobacco, which all too often leads to drink, to abandon hot drinks and the use of harmful drugs, and otherwise to observe the Word of Wisdom. We urge the Saints to quit trifling with this law and so to live it that we may claim its promises.

Upon you parents, laden with the divinely imposed responsibility of guiding pure, eternal spirits through the early years of their earth existence, we urge a faithful performance of your sacred duty, to teach this law of health to your children both by precept and example. Of a surety the Lord will not hold us guiltless if we fail one whit in guarding, protecting, and guiding these innocent and precious souls on their way to exaltation.

Parents, these are not the times for weak attempts and half measures, but for the full strength of righteous, prayerful, God-fearing effort to walk ourselves, and to lead our children, along the paths of sobriety and chastity.

How great are the blessings promised to those who observe the law:

And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their navel and marrow to their bones;

And shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures;

And shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint.

And I, the Lord, give unto them a promise, that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them. (D. & C. 89:18-21)

When, as the Lord Himself has declared, plague, pestilence, famine, and death shall be poured out upon the nations for their wickedness, and when these shall break over our heads and our loved ones are smitten nigh to death, when hearts are torn and the anguish of grief almost overwhelms us, who can fathom the joy or measure the blessing of that father and mother who can stand before the Lord and say: "We have kept Thy commandments. We and ours have lived Thy law. Vouchsafe Thy promised blessings unto us. We remember Thy word, 'I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say.' Let Thy healing power rest upon our afflicted ones that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them."

As with a person, as with a people, so it is with a nation. A drunken nation cannot expect that God will withhold His judgments, nor ward off the ravages of the destroyer. A drunken nation is a seedbed for disaster—political, physical, moral, and spiritual. A drunken nation may not, even in its hours of direst distress, pray to God for help, with that simple assurance and unpolled faith which bring aid and comfort to those who abide the law of sobriety and keep His commandments.

Rulers of nations may not suppose that their peoples will be less drunken than are they themselves. We call upon the rulers of all nations to show their peoples by their examples how to live the sober and virtuous life. We call upon them to bring into their counsels, the reenthroned reason of undrunken minds. Then will wisdom and vision return, and peace will leave her hiding place to bless the world. We exhort men and rulers the world over to learn the blessings which come to those who live God's full law of health, that they may, under His hands and by His power, help to bring salvation, temporal and spiritual, to the whole human race.

CHASTITY

UPON the heels of the demon drink, tread the demons of unchastity—harlotry, fornication, adultery, while murder itself lurks not far behind. From Adam until now, God has commanded that His children be sexually clean.

Here again we extend gratitude to our Heavenly Father for the great body of the Saints who have kept the moral law. To the Corinthians, Paul said:

Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?

If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy: for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are.—(I Cor. 3:16-17; II Cor. 6:16)

And again:

What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?—(I Cor. 6:19)

You who have observed the law of chastity have kept the temples of God undefiled. You can stand unabashed before the Lord. He loves you. He will bestow honor and reward upon you. Every overcoming of temptation brings strength and glory to the soul. May the Lord continue to bless and prosper you in all your works of righteousness.

But some of us have forgotten what the Lord has said about these sins. Some of us have failed to teach our children the need for sexual purity. Some teachers have tried to lay bare to our youth the mysteries of life, and so have robbed the creative act of all the sanctity with which from the beginning God has enshrouded it. These have given no restraining righteous principle in its place. So, with too many, modesty has become a derided virtue, and the sex desire has been degraded to the level of hunger and thirst. From Sodom and Gomorrah until now, sex immorality, with its attendant evils of drink and corruption, has brought low the mightiest of nations, has destroyed powerful peoples, has reduced erring man almost to the level of the beasts of the field.

That we may be reminded of the enormity of the sin of unchastity, it is well that we recall some of the things which the Lord and His prophets have said concerning it.

One of the ten basic principles of Christian society, and accepted by all worshipers of the true God, came to men at Sinai when God wrote with His own finger: "Thou shalt not commit adultery."

By the laws of Moses, adulterers were stoned to death. (Deut. 22:24) God said to Israel: "There shall be no whore of the daughters of Israel, nor a sodomite of the sons of Israel." (Deut. 23:17) When God, through Jeremiah, chastened Israel for apostasy, He pictured her loathsomeness by calling her a harlot. (Jeremiah 3) Paul declared to the Ephesians:

For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean person . . . hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God. (Eph. 5:5)

The Revelator declared that whoremongers "shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death." (Rev. 21:8) And when he wished to condemn the great false church and its iniquities that had led the world into apostasy and wickedness, the Revelator called her "Mystery, Babylon the Great, the Mother of Harlots and Abominations of the Earth." (Rev. 17:5) Jacob, teaching the Nephites, declared:

Wo unto them who commit whoredoms, for they shall be thrust down to hell.—(2 Nephi 9:36)

To us of this Church, the Lord has declared that adulterers should not be admitted to membership (D. & C. 42:76); that adulterers in the Church, if unrepentant, should be cast out (D. & C. 42:75), but if repentant should be permitted to remain (D. & C. 42:74, 42:25) and, He said, "By this ye may know if a man repenteth of his sins—behold, he will confess them and forsake them."—(D. & C. 58:43)

In the great revelation on the three heavenly glories, the Lord said, speaking of those who will inherit the lowest of these, or the telestial glory:

These are they who are liars, and sorcerers, and adulterers, and whoremongers, and whosoever loves and makes a lie.—(D. & C. 76:103)

The doctrine of this Church is that sexual sin—the illicit sexual relations of men and women—stands, in its enormity, next to murder.

The Lord has drawn no essential distinctions between fornication, adultery, and harlotry or prostitution. Each has fallen under His solemn and awful condemnation.

You youths of Zion, you cannot associate in non-marital, illicit sex relationships, which is fornication, and escape the punishments and the judgments which the Lord has declared against this sin. The day of reckoning will come just as certainly as night follows day. They who would palliate this crime and say that such indulgence is but a sinless gratification of a normal desire, like appeasing hunger and thirst, speak filthiness with their lips. Their counsel leads to destruction; their wisdom comes from the Father of Lies.

You husbands and wives who have taken on solemn obligations of chastity in the holy temples of the Lord and who violate those sacred vows by illicit sexual relations with others, you not only commit the vile and loathsome sin of adultery, but you break the oath you yourselves made with the Lord Himself before you went to the altar for your sealing. You become subject to the penalties which the Lord has prescribed for those who breach their covenants with Him.

Of the harlots and those who visit them, God speaks in terms of divine contempt. They are they who have bargained away an eternity of bliss for the momentary pleasures of the flesh.

The Lord will have only a clean people. He has said, "I, the Lord, will contend with Zion, and plead with her strong ones, and chasten her until she overcomes and is clean before me." (D. & C. 90:36)

But they who sin may repent, and, they repenting, God will forgive them, for the Lord has said, "Behold, he who has repented of his sins, the same is forgiven, and I, the Lord, remember them no more." (D. & C. 58:42)

By virtue of the authority in us vested as the First Presidency of the Church, we warn our people who are offending, of the degradation, the wickedness, the punishment that attend upon unchastity; we urge you to remember the blessings which flow from the living of the clean life; we call upon you to keep, day in and day out, the way of strictest chastity, through which only can God's choice gifts come to you and His Spirit abide with you.

Saturday, October 3

How glorious is he who lives the chaste life. He walks unafraid in the full glare of the noonday sun, for he is without moral infirmity. He can be reached by no shafts of base calumny, for his armor is without flaw. His virtue cannot be challenged by any just accuser, for he lives above reproach. His cheek is never blotted with shame, for he is without hidden sin. He is honored and respected by all mankind, for he is beyond their censure. He is loved by the Lord, for he stands without blemish. The exaltations of eternities await his coming.

PARENTHOOD

AMONGST His earliest commands to Adam and Eve, the Lord said: "Multiply and replenish the earth." He has repeated that command in our day. He has again revealed in this, the last dispensation, the principle of the eternity of the marriage covenant. He has restored to earth the authority for entering into that covenant, and has declared that it is the only due and proper way of joining husband and wife, and the only means by which the sacred family relationship may be carried beyond the grave and through eternity. He has declared that this eternal relationship may be created only by the ordinances which are administered in the holy temples of the Lord, and therefore that His people should marry only in His temple in accordance with such ordinances.

The Lord has told us that it is the duty of every husband and wife to obey the command given to Adam to multiply and replenish the earth, so that the legions of choice spirits waiting for their tabernacles of flesh may come here and move forward under God's great design to become perfect souls, for without these fleshly tabernacles they cannot progress to their God-planned destiny. Thus, every husband and wife should become a father and mother in Israel to children born under the holy, eternal covenant.

By bringing these choice spirits to earth, each father and each mother assume towards the tabernacled spirit and towards the Lord Himself by having taken advantage of the opportunity He offered, an obligation of the most sacred kind, because the fate of that spirit in the eternities to come, the blessings or punishments which shall await it in the hereafter, depend, in great part, upon the care, the teachings, the training which the parents shall give to that spirit.

No parent can escape that obligation and that responsibility, and for the proper meeting thereof, the Lord will hold us to a strict accountability. No loftier duty than this can be assumed by mortals.

Motherhood thus becomes a holy calling, a sacred dedication for carrying out the Lord's plans, a consecration of devotion to the uprearing and fostering, the nurturing in body, mind, and spirit, of those who kept their first estate and who come to this earth for their second estate "to see if they will do all things whatsoever the Lord their God shall command them." (Abraham 3:25) To lead them to keep their second estate is the work of motherhood, and "they who keep their second estate shall have glory added upon their heads for ever and ever." (op. cit.)

This divine service of motherhood can be rendered only by mothers. It may not be passed to others. Nurses cannot do it; public nurseries cannot do it; hired help cannot do it—only mother, aided as much as may be by the loving hands of father, brothers, and sisters, can give the full needed measure of watchful care.

The mother who entrusts her child to the care of others, that she may do non-motherly work, whether for gold, for fame, or for civic service, should remember that "a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame." (Prov. 29:15) In our day the Lord has said that unless parents teach their children the doctrines of the Church "the sin be upon the heads of the parents." (D. & C. 68:25)

Motherhood is near to divinity. It is the highest, holiest service to be assumed by mankind. It places her who honors its holy calling and service next to the angels. To you mothers in Israel we say God bless and protect you, and give you the strength and courage, the faith and knowledge, the holy love and consecration to duty, that shall enable you to fill to the fullest measure the sacred calling which is yours. To you mothers and mothers-to-be we say: Be chaste, keep pure, live righteously, that your posterity to the last generation may call you blessed.

UNITY

THE Lord has said to His Saints in these days:
